Ms Keen, a self-described transphobe, had turned up to Melbourne after spending the past week visiting Sydney, Brisbane and Adelaide on her 'Let Women Speak' tour.

Controversial former Liberal candidate Katherine Deves was among the guest speakers as the protest spiralled into chaos.

Officers arrested at least two people, discharged pepper spray, and dragged away protestors by the arms.

One video showed a transgender rights activist rush onto the steps of Parliament House and snatch the microphone from a guest speaker, interrupting their speech.

Far-right group European Australia Movement founder Thomas Sewell was also spotted among the crowd.

Police officers were forced to create a line to separate the transgender rights activists from clashing with members of the alt-right group.

In one video the masked men can be seen marching around the street as trans rights activists shout over the wall of officers.

'F you, Nazis,' one woman screamed. 'F you!'

The pro-trans group held signs that included messages such as 'women aren't defined by their bodies'.

One activist screamed as she was pulled along the ground by her arms by two officers.

Another pair of officers were forced to intervene as an anti-trans activist and protestor fought over an Australian flag.

Spring Street remained blocked to traffic in both directions.

Campaign Against Racism and Fascism posted a callout on Facebook urging activists to turn up and protest the appearance by Ms Keen.

'Let's make it clear that Melbourne is an anti-fascist, anti-sexist and pro-LGBTI town,' the post read.

'The growing confidence of the far-right internationally, and their use of transphobia and sexism to recruit to their ranks and as crucial issues they fight for must be opposed.

'Posie Parker is actively trying to build links between these far-right forces and broader anti-trans activists around the world.

Ms Keen, a self-described transphobe, has been touring around the country visiting Perth, Brisbane and Sydney

A group of protestors hold up an offensive sign as they clashed with trans rights activists on Saturday

Police discharged pepper spray into the crowd as scenes escalated in Melbourne

'This is unacceptable. If we want to counter these politics, and the confidence of the right to build around them, then we need to take to the streets.'

Ms Keen, who also goes by the name Posie Parker, has been touring around the country visiting Perth, Brisbane and Sydney.

She believes it's impossible to change gender and campaigns to exclude trans women from female-only spaces.

She also argues that trans people should be dead named and not have the right to chose their own pronouns.

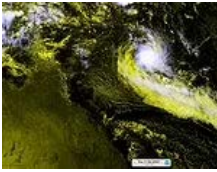

Ms Keen has sparked backlash during her tour with transgender rights activists turning up in force in Sydney last Saturday.

Chants of 'bigots gone and anti-queer TERFS are not welcome here' were shouted by LGBTQI+ groups while Ms Keen spoke to crowds.

TERF is an acronym for trans-exclusionary radical feminist and describes those feminists who reject the claim that transgender women are women.

Ms Keen has come under fierce criticism from many groups in the past, including for allegedly posing with a campaigner who celebrated Winnie Mandela's death and called the anti-apartheid fighter 'a whore' and 'white farmer murdering c'.

She has also been slammed by a British MP for saying access to abortion and contraceptives need to be rolled back for children and teenagers.

Ms Keen raised eyebrows recently after she criticised British MP Jess Phillips for reading out the name of a teenage trans murder victim Brianna Ghey in the House of Commons during an International Women's Day speech.

She has also spoken alongside a number of figures in far-right groups, including Christopher Barcenas, a member of the Proud Boys, who was deposed by the US government due to his presence at the January 6 Capitol riots.
