A trans-identified male Antifa leader is organizing a counter-protest and fundraising to buy weapons to shut down a women's rights event scheduled to take place in Portland on Oct 25. The event is held by British women's rights campaigner Kellie-Jay Keen.

Post Millennial editor-at-large Andy Ngo tweeted that Isabel R. Araujo, a trans Antifa leader in Portland, is organizing a direct action to try and shut down Keen on her speaking visit in Oregon, and that Araujo is currently raising money for weapons.

Araujo, whose Twitter account is currently set to private mode, responded to a call to action for trans people and allies to counter Keen's "anti-trans propaganda."

Local LA TERFs including Gaye Chapman, Belissa Cohen, GiGi LaRue & Amie Ichikawa attended Keen's anti-trans rally. Jairo Rodriguez, a right-wing anti-vaxxer & the main organizer of the anti-trans Wi Spa protests, also spoke. Transphobes spoke for over 2 hours unopposed.

I'm still on twitter break but logged back on to share this information in hopes that trans people & their allies who live in cities where Keen is planning to stage her rallies can use it to counter her bullshit. Don't let her & her followers spread anti-trans propaganda.

Araujo calls on people to disrupt the "TERF rally." TERF, which stands for Trans Exclusionary Radical Feminist, is a derogatory term used by trans activists to describe any woman who rejects the idea that men can become women simply by self-declaration or who opposes the medical transition of minors.

Ngo also shared an archived thread in which the Antifa leader makes a "direct aid request" asking for $161 for everything Araujo needs to "fight fash and TERFs" because bloc gear, batons, and mace don't "grow on trees."

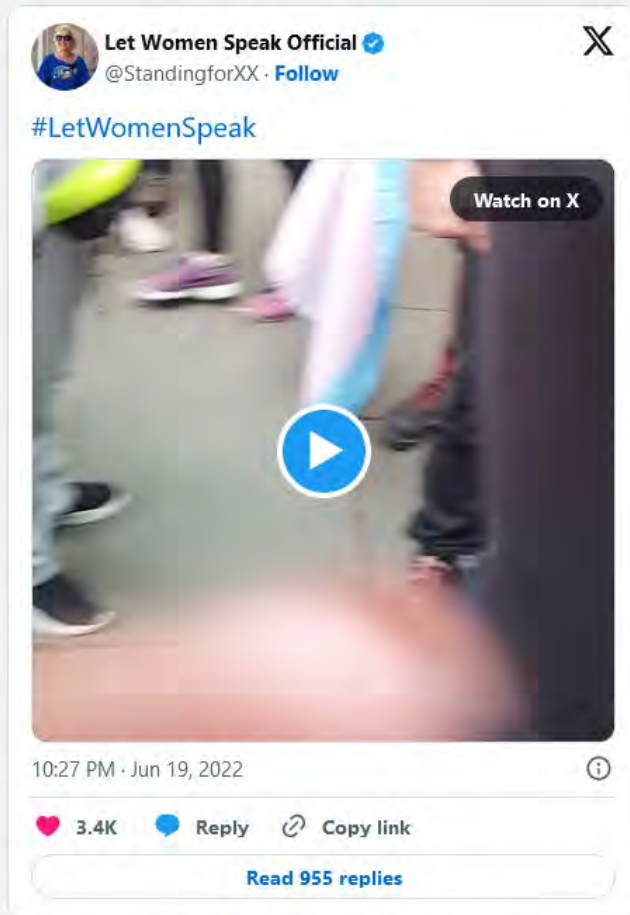

A short list of what the individual needs then follows and includes a collapsible baton and a Bowie knife, which they say is for the tearing down of "fash propaganda" and self-defence. Keen is not violent.

It is then stated that the Antifa leader will take care of the rest upon receipt of a disability check in two weeks' time.

Keen is currently on a month-long tour of the United States during which she will be holding Let Women Speak events in cities across the nation. During these events, ordinary women are given the opportunity to speak about their experiences and voice their concerns about the impact of gender identity ideology on women and children.

Keen has put on numerous events of this type in England and is no stranger to trans activists showing up to try to prevent women from speaking. In fact, aggressive men clad all in black chanting slogans has become a regular feature of such events.

"Let Women Speak is here to facilitate women's voices in the public square. We are not afraid," reads the Eventbrite page for the Portland event.

Antifa threats force women's rights activist to cancel speaking event in Portland

"Portland is not completely off limits, but Portland is off limits if I don't have a huge budget for security, or certainly to do something that would minimize the risk to myself and other women," said Keen.

On Monday, British women's rights campaigner Kellie-Jay Keen announced that the Portland, Oregon stop on her Speakers Corner Tour is canceled following threats of violence from Antifa groups.

Speaking in a YouTube live stream on Monday afternoon, Keen said, "Portland is not completely off limits, but Portland is off limits if I don't have a huge budget for security, or certainly to do something that would minimize the risk to myself and other women."

In a statement to The Post Millennial, Keen said, "I was alerted to multiple threats of violence against me as well as a local principal lying and saying I had links to the far right. I am relatively well known by name and sight to these violent, unhinged ideologues. The police have confirmed that they are too short staffed to be reliable."

"I cannot in good conscience put women at risk just to sound alarm to the wider public," she continued. "No one is coming to save us. If they are not remotely moved by teenage girls having their breasts sliced off

"I have four children and a husband I adore, therefore my life is not just mine to risk," she added. "This is not the end of my focus on Portland, I intend to raise funds to get the message out one way or another."

"There are some women that have been complaining that, you know, this documentary, how is it anything without Portland?" Keen said on YouTube announcing the cancellation. "Well, it's also nothing if it turns into the death of Kellie-Jay, or, 'remember that time that women in Portland got killed?'"

"I don't think that is the gotcha moment that women would like to see either. I don't think women getting beaten up in the street is also a gotcha moment."

She continued on to state that if, by now, "lawmakers and policymakers are not persuaded that women's rights are at risk, or that it's wrong to mutilate children's bodies, I don't think women being beaten in the street is actually going to convince them."

The event was scheduled to take place on October 25.

Leading up to the event, Isabel R. Araujo, a transgender Antifa leader in Portland, made posts to social media organizing a direct action to try and shut down Keen on her speaking visit in Oregon, with Araujo raising money for weapons.

Efforts from the group also resulted in Eventbrite canceling tickets for the tour, which is making stops nationwide.

Sherrilynn Rawson, a Woodburn School District principal, falsely claimed on social media that Keen is linked to David Duke and Richard Spencer.

Breaking: Women's rights activist Kellie-Jay Keen has canceled her scheduled tour stop in Portland, Ore on Oct. 25 following threats of serious violence by #Antifa & trans militants. Full video: youtu.be/RbqHEll--mU

"Friends. We don't know exactly where yet but we know that Kellie-Jay Keen, a UK TERF activist w/ties to fine folk like Richard Spencer & David Duke, will peak in PDX at 11:30 on Tuesday 10/25. Let's show up for our trans friends to let them know that hate is not welcome here," Rawson wrote.

Keen said in her YouTube video though that she is still looking at an "effective and impactful" way to send a message to the city that "a woman is an adult human female."

"I've done it before, I believe I can do it again. There are, you know, there are ways and means of delivering this message, but me being injured is not one of those ways," she said.

Keen later said that "So I don't feel like I'm abandoning my first role of Kellie-Jay which is I always win," but that the situation is not "ideal."

"I thought it would be fun to go into Portland, but there aren't middle-class bratty students that will come out. These are really, really violent and psychopathic men that just don't mind hurting people," she said.

Keen also noted that "I've also got communication from the police that basically says, you're not permitted to have an event, and the gist of it... is, whilst you have the right to free speech, we won't protect your right to free speech."

Richard Bailey, Demonstration Liaison Officer with the Portland Police Bureau told The Post Millennial, "PPB is experiencing a staffing crisis and all precincts are at-or-below minimum staffing."

Baily noted that the speaker's corner event "is not permitted, and no additional city resources have been activated to facilitate this event."

"Due to resource and legal limitations, our public order posture is complex and often not what the public may or may not expect," Bailey added, stating that "police response is prioritized based on unforeseeable events in the city, and are often delayed for less significant events."

"While the First Amendment provides broad protections for the expression of speech, it does not protect criminal acts. The expectation is that event participants will obey all laws and ordinances, including traffic-related laws," said Bailey.

Bailey stated that "failure to obey all laws may result in citation or arrest on the date of the event, or in the future upon further investigation," and added, "Please ensure the attendees are aware there are no permits obtained for Tuesday's event."
