NOTICE OF FILING

Details of Filing

| | |
|---|---|
| Document Lodged: | Affidavit - Form 59 - Rule 29.02(1) |
| Court of Filing | FEDERAL COURT OF AUSTRALIA (FCA) |
| Date of Lodgment: | 19/09/2025 12:06:00 PM AEST |
| Date Accepted for Filing: | 19/09/2025 12:10:14 PM AEST |
| File Number: | NSD950/2025 |
| File Title: | JOSEPH TOLTZ & ORS v NICK RIEMER & ANOR |
| Registry: | NEW SOUTH WALES REGISTRY - FEDERAL COURT OF AUSTRALIA |

Registrar

Important Information

This Notice has been inserted as the first page of the document which has been accepted for electronic filing. It is now taken to be part of that document for the purposes of the proceeding in the Court and contains important information for all parties to that proceeding. It must be included in the document served on each of those parties.

The date of the filing of the document is determined pursuant to the Court's Rules.

Form 59
Rule 29.02(1)

Affidavit

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

Affidavit of: Daniel Patrick McCoach

Address: Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Occupation: Solicitor

Date: 18 September 2025

Contents

| Document number | Details | Paragraph | Page |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach in support of the applicants' submissions in reply to the first respondent's and second respondent's applications for orders. | 1 | 4 |
| 2 | Exhibit "DPM-1", being a document entitled 'Report Series on the Gen08 Survey – Preliminary Findings: Melbourne & Sydney' (August 2009 Report 1) by Andrew Marcus, Nicky Jacobs and Tanya Aronov first published 2009 and reprinted in 2011. | 4 | 12 |
| 3 | Exhibit "DPM-2", being a document entitled 'Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey – Preliminary Findings' by David Graham and Andrew Marcus first published March 2018. | 5 | 65 |
| 4 | Exhibit "DPM-3", being a document entitled 'Crossroads 23: Surveying Australian Jews on Israel' dated 14 June 2023. | 6 | 157 |

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

| Document number | Details | Paragraph | Page |
|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Exhibit "DPM-4" being a document entitled 'The Jewish University Experience Survey – July 2023' (Version: 1) prepared by The Social Research Centre. | 7 | 198 |
| 6 | Exhibit "DPM-5", being a document entitled 'Australian Jews in the Shadow of War: Main Survey Findings' by Dr Adina Bankier-Karp & Dr David Graham dated May 2024. | 8 | 237 |
| 7 | Exhibit "DPM-6", being the NSW Law Reform Commission's consultation paper in its review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) dated May 2025. | 9 | 286 |
| 8 | Exhibit "DPM-7", being a document entitled 'CSG Analysis of Reported Antisemitic Incidents in Australia in 2023' by Community Security Group dated 2024. | 10 | 554 |
| 9 | Exhibit "DPM-8", being a document entitled 'IHRA non-legally binding working definition of antisemitism – Adopted by the IHRA Plenary in Bucharest' published by the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance dated 26 May 2016. | 11 | 579 |
| 10 | Exhibit "DPM-9", being an extract of chapter 4 of the book 'Why Do People Discriminate Against Jews?' (Oxford University Press) by Jonathan Fox and Lev Topor published 2021. | 12 | 582 |
| 11 | Exhibit "DPM-10", being materials extracted and redacted on 18 September 2025 from sections of websites associated with Jewish Australian schools and/or youth movements as set out in paragraph 13. | 13 | 607 |
| 12 | Exhibit "DPM-11", being a petition on Change.org entitled 'Petition: The Jewish Council of Australia Does Not Represent Me!' retrieved on 17 September 2025. | 14 | 646 |
| 13 | Exhibit "DPM-12", being a compilation of the first respondent's X (Twitter) account posts from 7 October 2023 to 23 December 2023 and taken on 23 December 2023. | 15 | 651 |
| 14 | Exhibit "DPM-13", being a copy of the Senate Hansard for the 'Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2)' dated 20 September 2024. | 16 | 1101 |
| 15 | Exhibit "DPM-14", being a transcript of Portfolio Committee No. 3 – Education (NSW) Examination of proposed expenditure for the portfolio area – SKILLS, TAFE AND TERTIARY EDUCATION (Corrected) dated 4 September 2024. | 17 | 1181 |
| 16 | Exhibit "DPM-15", being a document entitled 'University of Sydney External Review Report' (November 2024) by Bruce Hodgkinson AM SC. | 18 | 1255 |
| 17 | Exhibit "DPM-16", being a document entitled 'WSMS RFS Report - 1-488253' dated 3 September 2024. | 19 | 1325 |
| 18 | Exhibit "DPM-17", being a media release 'Statement on Racism' by Universities Australia dated 27 February 2025. | 20 | 1378 |

| Document number | Details | Paragraph | Page |
|---|---|---|---|
| 19 | Exhibit “DPM-18”, being a document entitled ‘Our commitment to anti-racism - Supplementary resources’ published by the University of Sydney retrieved on 17 September 2025. | 21 | 1381 |
| 20 | Exhibit “DPM-19”, being a letter sent by me by way of email to the representatives (respectively) of the first respondent and second respondent on 30 July 2025. | 22 | 1389 |
| 21 | Exhibit “DPM-20”, being a document entitled ‘Antisemitism in Australian Universities Post 7 October – Survey by Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism’ by Emeritus Professor Andrew Markus, Associate Professor Efrat Eilam and Emerita Professor Suzanne Rutland dated May 2025. | 23 | 1393 |
| 22 | Exhibit “DPM-21”, being a document entitled ‘ANTISEMITISM IN THE CULTURAL AND CREATIVE INDUSTIES – MONASH INITIATIVE FOR RAPID RESEARCH INTO ANTISEMITISM (MIRRA)’ by Associate Professor David Slucki, Dr Lauren Chalk, Professor Paul Long and Noè Harsel dated 2025. | 24 | 1569 |
| 23 | Exhibit “DPM-22”, being a document entitled ‘Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey – Jewish Education in Melbourne’ by Andrew Marcus, Miriam Munz and Tanya Munz first published 2020. | 25 | 1646 |
| 24 | Exhibit “DPM-23”, being a document entitled ‘Report on Antisemitism in Australia 2023 – 1 October 2022 – 30 September 2023’ by Julie Nathan published by the Executive Council of Australian Jewry dated 31 December 2023. | 26 | 1764 |
| 25 | Exhibit “DPM-24”, being various submissions received by the committee of the Inquiry into a Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2) as set out in paragraph 27. | 27 | 2040 |
| 26 | Exhibit “DPM-25”, being an extract of a section of the website of the Jewish Council of Australia’s entitled ‘Who are we?’ retrieved on 18 September 2025. | 28 | 2234 |
| 27 | Exhibit “DPM-26”, being a redacted copy of ‘Incident Hazard Report – [113]’ printed 26 June 2024. | 29 | 2245 |
| 28 | Exhibit “DPM-27”, being a document entitled ‘Submission of the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism to the NSW Legislative Council Parliamentary Inquiry into Antisemitism’ submitted by Suzanne Rutland OAM and Gregory Rose and dated 5 April 2025. | 30 | 2251 |
| 29 | Exhibit “DPM-28”, being a document entitled ‘Quality of governance at Australian higher education providers - 5A Submission to the Senate Education and Employment Legislation Committee’ by the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism submitted on or around 2 September 2025. | 31 | 2277 |

| Document number | Details | Paragraph | Page |
|---|---|---|---|
| 30 | Exhibit "DPM-29", being a document entitled '5A Submission to the Senate and Constitutional Affairs Legislation Committee Inquiry into the Criminal Code Amendment (Hate Crimes) Bill 2024' submitted by Gregory Rose and Melinda Jones and Gregory Rose. | 32 | 2303 |
| 31 | Exhibit "DPM-30", Being a document entitled 'Submission 603- Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2)' by the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism and extracted on 18 September 2025 | 33 | 2318 |

I, Daniel Patrick McCoach of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000, Director at Rotstein Commercial Lawyers, affirm:

1. I am a Director of the firm Rotstein Commercial Lawyers, the solicitors for the applicants.

2. Unless otherwise stated, I make this affidavit on my own knowledge, information and belief, including information provided to me by or on behalf of one or more of the applicants which I believe to be true.

3. I make this affidavit in support of the applicants' submissions in reply to:

   (a) the first respondent's application for orders pursuant to rule 16.21 of the Federal Court Rules 2011 (Cth) ("Rules") that certain parts of the applicant's Amended Statement of Claim filed on 30 July 2025 ("ASOC") be struck out with no leave to replead, and that the applicants pay the first respondent's costs of that application;

   (b) the second respondent's application for orders pursuant to section 31A of the Federal Court of Australia Act 1976 (Cth) and rule 26.01(a) and (c) of the Rules that certain claims against the second respondent in the ASOC be dismissed summarily; and

   (c) the second respondent's application for orders pursuant to rule 16.21 of the Rules that certain parts of the ASOC be struck out.

4. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-1" ("Gen08 Survey") is a copy of Report Series on the Gen08 Survey – Preliminary Findings: Melbourne & Sydney (August 2009 Report 1) by Andrew Marcus, Nicky Jacobs and Tanya Aronov first published 2009 and reprinted in 2011 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/research-and-projects/past-projects/jewish-attitudinal-surveys/gen08/gen08-preliminary-findings.

5. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-2" ("Gen17 Survey") is a copy of Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey – Preliminary Findings by David Graham and Andrew Marcus first published March 2018 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/research-and-projects/past-projects/jewish-attitudinal-surveys/gen17.

6. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-3" ("Crossroads 23 Survey") is a copy of Crossroads 23: Surveying Australian Jews on Israel dated 14 June 2023 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://thejewishindependent.com.au/surveying-australian-jews-on-israel.

7. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-4" ("Jewish University Experience") is a copy of The Jewish University Experience Survey – July 2023 (Version: 1) prepared by The Social Research Centre and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.ecaj.org.au/the-jewish-university-experience-survey-july-2023/.

8. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-5" ("Shadow of War Survey") is a copy of Australian Jews in the Shadow of War: Main Survey Findings by Dr Adina Bankier-Karp & Dr David Graham dated May 2024 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/research-and-projects/current-projects/australian-jews-in-the-shadow-of-war-ajsw.

9. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-6" ("ADA Review 2025") is a copy of Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) by the NSW Law Reform Commission dated May 2025.

10. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-7" ("2023 CSG Report") is a copy of A CSG Analysis of Reported Antisemitic Incidents in Australia in 2023 by Community Security Group dated 2024 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.csgnsw.org.au/publications.

11. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-8" ("IHRA Definition") is a copy of IHRA non-legally binding working definition of antisemitism – Adopted by the IHRA Plenary in Bucharest published by the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance dated 26 May 2016 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://holocaustremembrance.com/resources/working-definition-antisemitism.

12. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-9" ("Fox and Topor") is a copy of an extract of chapter 4 of the book Why Do People Discriminate Against Jews? (Oxford University Press) by Jonathan Fox and Lev Topor published 2021.

13. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-10" is a copy of materials extracted and redacted on 18 September 2025 from sections of websites associated with Jewish Australian schools and/or youth movements as follows:
    (a) Australasian Zionist Youth Council the Roof Body For Australia and New Zealand's Zionist youth movements;
    (b) Betar;
    (c) Hineni;
    (d) Hashy;

(e) Habonim Dror;

(f) Bnei Akiva;

(g) Netzer;

(h) Hatzofim;

(i) CatZ;

(j) JAZY;

(k) Moriah College;

(l) Masada College;

(m) Mount Scopus Memorial College;

(n) Bialik College; and

(o) The King David School.

14. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-11" ("J-United Petition") is a copy of the Change.org Petition: The Jewish Council of Australia Does Not Represent Me! retrieved on 17 September 2025.

15. On 17 September 2025, Richard Hutchings of Cornwalls Solicitors provided to me by way of email and imbedded link, a document setting out various screenshots of the first respondent's X (Twitter) account posts from 7 October 2023 to 23 December 2023 taken on 23 December 2023. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-12" ("Riemer X Posts") is a copy of that document.

16. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-13" ("Inquiry into Antisemitism Hearing") is a copy of the Senate Hansard for the Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2) dated 20 September 2024.

17. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-14" ("Legislative Council, Wednesday 4 September 2024, Skills, Tafe and Tertiary Education") is a copy of a transcript of Portfolio Committee No. 3 – Education (NSW) Examination of proposed expenditure for the portfolio area – SKILLS, TAFE AND TERTIARY EDUCATION (Corrected) dated 4 September 2024.

18. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-15" ("Hodgkinson Report") is a copy of the University of Sydney External Review Report prepared by Bruce Hodgkinson AM SC dated November 2024.

19. On 17 September 2025, Andy Smidt (Adjunct Associate Professor at the University of Sydney as part of the Centre for Disability Research and Policy) provided to me a redacted document entitled WSMS RFS Report - 1-488253 dated 3 September 2024. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-16" ("SafeWork Investigation Findings") is a copy of that document.

20. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-17" ("Universities Australia Definition on Combatting Antisemitism") is a copy of Statement on Racism media release by Universities Australia dated 27 February 2025 retrieved on 17 September 2025.

21. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-18" ("USYD Endorsement of UA Definition") is a copy of Our commitment to anti-racism - Supplementary resources by the University of Sydney retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.sydney.edu.au/about-us/vision-and-values/diversity/cultural-diversity/anti-racism-commitment.html.

22. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-19" ("Particulars Letter") is a copy of a letter sent by me by way of email to the representatives (respectively) of the first respondent and second respondent on 30 July 2025.

23. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-20" ("5A Survey") is a copy of Antisemitism in Australian Universities Post 7 October – Survey by Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism by Emeritus Professor Andrew Markus, Associate Professor Efrat Eilam and Emerita Professor Suzanne Rutland dated May 2025.

24. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-21" ("MIRRA") is a copy of ANTISEMITISM IN THE CULTURAL AND CREATIVE INDUSTIES – MONASH INITIATIVE FOR RAPID RESEARCH INTO ANTISEMITISM (MIRRA) by Associate Professor David Slucki, Dr Lauren Chalk, Professor Paul Long and Noè Harsel dated 2025 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/monash-initiative-for-rapid-research-into-antisemitism-mirra.

25. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-22" ("Gen 17 Education") is a copy of Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey – Jewish Education in Melbourne by Andrew Marcus, Miriam Munz and Tanya Munz first published 2020 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/research-and-projects/past-projects/jewish-attitudinal-surveys/gen17.

26. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-23" ("2023 ECAJ") is a copy of Report on Antisemitism in Australia 2023 – 1 October 2022 – 30 September 2023 by Julie Nathan published by the Executive Council of Australian Jewry dated 31 December 2023 and retrieved on 17 September 2025 from a link located at https://www.ecaj.org.au/the-ecaj-2023-antisemitism-report/.

27. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-24" is a copy of various submissions received by the committee of the Inquiry into a Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2) and retrieved on 18 September 2025 from https://www.aph.gov.au/Parliamentary_Business/Committees/Senate/Legal_and_Constitutional_Affairs/AntisemitismBill/Submissions, being submissions numbered and submitted by the following:

    (a) 61 – StandWithUs Australia;

    (b) 97 – Executive Council of Australian Jewry Inc. (ECAJ);

    (c) 103 – ACT Jewish Community;

    (d) 114 – Zionist Federation of Australia;

(e) 134 – Australasian Union of Jewish Students;

(f) 136 – Australia/Israel & Jewish Affairs Council (AIJAC);

(g) 137 – Moriah College;

(h) 138 – Never Again is Now Ltd;

(i) 158 – Australian Association of Jewish Holocaust Survivors and Descendants Inc;

(j) 178 – Ms Moran Dvir;

(k) 179 – Miss Dror Liraz;

(l) 195 – Mr Mark Friedgut;

(m) 319 – Mr Marc Light;

(n) 422 – Jillian Segal AO; and

(o) 634 – Miss Freya Leach.

28. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-25" is a copy of an extract of a section of the website of the Jewish Council of Australia's entitled Who are we? retrieved on 18 September 2025 from https://www.jewishcouncil.com.au/who-we-are.

29. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-26" is a redacted copy of Incident Hazard Report – [113] printed 26 June 2024.

30. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-27" ("5A Parliamentary Inquiry") is a copy of Submission of the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism to the NSW Legislative Council Parliamentary Inquiry into Antisemitism submitted by Suzanne Rutland OAM and Gregory Rose and dated 5 April 2025.

31. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-28" ("5A Senate") is a copy of Quality of governance at Australian higher education providers - 5A Submission to the Senate Education and Employment Legislation Committee by the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism submitted on or around 2 September 2025.

32. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-29" ("5A Hate Crimes") is a copy of 5A Submission to the Senate and Constitutional Affairs Legislation Committee Inquiry into the Criminal Code Amendment (Hate Crimes) Bill 2024 submitted by Gregory Rose and Melinda Jones and Gregory Rose.

33. Annexed to this affidavit and marked "DPM-30" ("5A Judicial Sub") is a copy of Submission 603- Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2) by the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism and extracted on 18 September 2025 from https://www.aph.gov.au/Parliamentary_Business/Committees/Senate/Legal_and_Constitutional_Affairs/AntisemitismBill/Submissions.

AFFIRMED at Melbourne in the State of Victoria on this 18th day of September 2025

DANIEL PATRICK MCCOACH
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means in accordance with the Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

I also observe the following:

DANIEL PATRICK MCCOACH signed and initialed this affidavit by electronic means and not by hand/handwriting.

DANIEL PATRICK MCCOACH has affirmed this affidavit in my presence by audio-visual link.

This affidavit that I am signing in my capacity as an authorised affidavit taker is an electronic copy, not an original.

Schedule of Parties

Applicants

| | |
|---|---|
| Second Applicant: | Suzanne Rutland OAM |
| Third Applicant: | Ariel Eisner |
| Fourth Applicant | Yaniv Levy |

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Second Respondent: | The University of Sydney |

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-1" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

REPORT SERIES ON THE GEN08 SURVEY

PRELIMINARY FINDINGS:
MELBOURNE & SYDNEY

AUTHORS:

ANDREW MARKUS
NICKY JACOBS
TANYA ARONOV

Gen08

MONASH University
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation

AUGUST 2009

REPORT 1

All rights reserved
© Andrew Markus, Nicky Jacobs and Tanya Aronov

First published 2009, reprinted 2011
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation
Faculty of Arts
Monash University Victoria 3800

http://www.arts.monash.edu.au/acjc

ISBN: 0 9750751 52

This work is copyright. Apart for any use permitted under the Copyright Act 1968, no part of it may be reproduced by any process without written permission from the publisher. Requests and inquiries concerning reproduction rights should be directed to the publisher.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

| | |
|---|---|
| ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS | 1 |
| EXECUTIVE SUMMARY | 2 |
| INTRODUCTION | 3 |
| JEWISH IDENTITY | 4 |
| JEWISH COMMUNITY | 8 |
| DISCONNECTEDNESS | 11 |
| ANTISEMITISM | 13 |
| ISRAEL | 15 |
| EDUCATION | 18 |
| LIFE SATISFACTION | 24 |
| POVERTY | 27 |
| PATTERNS OF JUDAISM | 28 |
| IMMIGRANTS | 33 |
| CHANGE OVER TIME | 37 |
| ATTITUDES ACROSS THE DIASPORA | 38 |
| NOTE ON METHODOLOGY | 39 |

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is the second publication of the Jewish population study, established in 2007 through a partnership between Monash University's Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation and Jewish Care Victoria.

The establishment of this project was made possible by the support of the Australian Research Council under its Linkage Grants program and by the Industry Partner, Jewish Care Victoria. We particularly acknowledge the key roles of Jewish Care President Robyne Schwarz and CEO Bruce Salvin. We also gratefully acknowledge the financial support provided by the Pratt Foundation, the Gandel Charitable Trust, the Besen Family Foundation, Lorraine Topol and the Benjamin Slome Charitable Foundation, The D & R Goldschlager Family Charitable Foundation, the Ricci Swart Family, and the National Council of Jewish Women. Grahame Leonard AM (Past President, Executive Council of Australian Jewry) provided support and encouragement at all stages of the project and was instrumental in fostering the contacts necessary for a national study. Laurence Joseph has played a leadership role in Melbourne.

The project's implementation in New South Wales and hence its national scope was made possible by the support of JCA (Jewish Communal Appeal) Planning, under the leadership of Jillian Segal AM. JCA Planning provided staff time and financial support for survey implementation, under the direction of Amanda Goodman, Naomi Gelbart and Miri Sonnabend.

We gratefully acknowledge the expertise and generous commitment of time of our committee members. The Jewish population study is directed by its Melbourne Steering Committee, chaired by Laurence Joseph, with membership comprising Anton Block (Past President, Jewish Community Council of Victoria), David Brous, Dr Nicky Jacobs, Grahame Leonard, Professor Andrew Markus, Dr Miriam Munz and Bruce Salvin. Amanda Goodman and then Naomi Gelbart were the Sydney representatives on this committee. The Sydney Steering Committee is chaired by Jillian Segal and comprises Susi Brieger OAM, Professor Bettina Cass AO, Dr Gary Eckstein, David Knoll, Paul Kaplan and Peter Philippsohn OAM, with Andrew Markus as the Melbourne representative. The project's Technical Advisory Committee is chaired by Andrew Markus and comprises Dr Susan Feldman, Anita Frayman, Dr John Goldlust, Dr Nicky Jacobs, Daniel Leighton, Dr Philip Mendes, Dr Miriam Munz, Professor Bernard Rechter, Irving Saulwick AM and Barbara Szwarc.

Confidential access to databases for the first phase of contact with potential respondents was provided by JCCV, UIA Victoria, Maccabi Victoria and JCA Planning. The weightings for the survey were prepared by John Hinchy, his services made possible pro bono by Dhruba Gupta, Managing Director of DBM Consulting Pty. Ltd. The project was undertaken with oversight at its several stages by the Monash University Standing Committee on Ethics in Research Involving Humans.

This report was written by Andrew Markus. Nicky Jacobs took responsibility for analysis of life satisfaction data and assisted with statistical analysis. Tanya Aronov was project co-ordinator during the administration of the survey, undertook analysis of a large and complicated data file and helped compile this publication. Additional assistance in project administration and promotion was provided by Leanne Moss, Abie Munz, Kieran Mitchell, Karen Klein, Miriam Munz, Anita Frayman and Ran Porat. JCA and the Sydney Steering Committee played a key role in the implementation of the online survey.

This first report of the Jewish Population Survey provides a general overview of findings for Melbourne and Sydney. Subsequent reports will develop the analysis (including consideration of changing patterns revealed by close examination of earlier Melbourne surveys) and consider other centres of Jewish population in Australia and New Zealand. If organisations require specific information they should contact the authors at the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The key points to emerge from this survey are:

- There is a very strong sense of Jewish identification; depending on definition, between 80% and 90% of respondents see their 'Jewishness' as an important or defining characteristic of their lives.
- A distinguishing characteristic of Jews in Australia is the connectedness of families. Over 70% of respondents indicated that they spent Friday evening Sabbath with their family every week or most weeks.
- Support for Israel unifies the Jewish community. There is evidence of division of opinion in response to many issues, but much of the difference disappears when Israel is considered; close to 80% of respondents indicated that they regarded themselves as Zionist, while only 13% did not. There are, however, a wide range of views on the policy to be followed in pursuit of peace with Palestinians.
- There is a relatively high level of discrimination, understood in terms of antisemitism, reported by Jewish Australians. Of those who have experienced antisemitism in Australia (59% of respondents), 45% in Melbourne and 45% in Sydney reported one or more incidents in the last twelve months.
- When asked about the extent of change in antisemitism in Australia over the last five years, 45% were of the view that it was about the same as five years ago. But those who thought that it was less of a problem were outnumbered more than six to one by those who considered antisemitism to be 'worse' or 'much worse'.
- Generally there was strong support for the Jewish community. Only 20% of respondents indicated that they felt no connection (or only a 'slight' connection) with the community. A larger proportion of one third, however, indicated that they could 'never' or 'hardly ever' have a say on issues that were important to them.
- Comparison of the outlook of Jewish day school graduates with those who had no Jewish day school education indicates a marked differentiation. But closer examination points to factors additional to the type of school attended in the shaping of identity, two of which are considered in this report: religion (or its absence) in the parental home, and involvement in UJEB/BJE supplementary classes or secular youth groups. Differentiation in outlook and reported behaviour is most evident when those of religious background who attended a Jewish day school are compared with those of secular background who attended a non-Jewish school.
- Almost nine out of ten respondents indicated that they were very satisfied or satisfied with their 'life as a whole', a marginally higher level than is indicated by general Australian surveys. Consideration of a range of variables with possible impact on life satisfaction indicated that socio-economic status produced the largest variation.
- While poverty is at a relatively low level within the Jewish population, those at greatest risk by a large margin are those unable to work because of a disability.
- A comparison of immigrants from South Africa, the Former Soviet Union (FSU) and Israel highlights differences in experience – and the range and extent of problems faced by FSU immigrants, including serious difficulty finding employment, obtaining recognition of qualifications and inadequate income. Notwithstanding difficulties experienced, FSU-born together with South Africa-born, indicated a high level of satisfaction with their lives in Australia compared to their former homelands. A majority of the Israel-born also indicated satisfaction, but there was more equivocation in their responses.

INTRODUCTION

This report presents the preliminary findings for Melbourne and Sydney of the Gen08 Jewish population survey which was conducted from September 2008 to April 2009 in Australia and New Zealand. Gen08 was the first national and cross-national survey undertaken in the two countries. A lengthy questionnaire of some 144 questions was completed by over 6200 respondents. Details of the respondent profile are contained in the methodological note at the end of the report.

This report of the preliminary findings for Melbourne and Sydney, based on 5100 completed surveys, deals with three sets of issues. First, it considers six thematic areas: sense of identity; sense of community, including connectedness and disconnectedness; perceptions and experience of antisemitism; attitudes to Israel; education; and life satisfaction. It then considers the impact, necessarily briefly, of two cross-cutting variables: patterns of religious (and non-religious) identification and birthplace, with reference to three major immigrant groups, most of whose members arrived over the last three decades. It also considers issues related to the incidence of poverty. The third section looks at key findings in the context of change over time, benchmarking findings against earlier survey work conducted in Melbourne, and compares the findings for Melbourne and Sydney with some major Jewish population centres in the Diaspora.

Who was considered Jewish?

The study included those aged 18 and above who saw themselves as 'Jewish in any way at all'.

JEWISH IDENTITY

A major finding of the survey is the strength of Jewish identity – a finding that largely holds consistently across age groups.

When asked 'how important is being Jewish in your life today?' close to 90% of respondents in Melbourne and Sydney indicated that being Jewish was 'very important' or 'important'. When a more narrowly directed question asked respondents 'which best expresses your sense of being Jewish?', 27% indicated that it was a 'central element' in their lives and 51% that it was a 'significant element'. Taking these two questions together and depending on definition, between 80% and 90% of respondents see their 'Jewishness' as an important defining characteristic of their lives.

An important distinguishing characteristic of Jews in Australian society is the strength of family ties. In both Melbourne and Sydney more than 70% of respondents indicated that they spent Friday evening Sabbath with their family on a regular basis, with 50% of respondents indicating that they spent 'every week' with their family and 23% 'most weeks'. Of those who indicated that they observed Sabbath, 8% did 'not observe any rituals', 75% 'observe some rituals', and 15% indicated 'completely strict observance'.

Figure 1: How often do you spend Friday night Sabbath with your family?

Indicating the strength of feeling supportive of Jewish continuity, only a small minority responded that news of intermarriage in the community left them 'pleased' or 'accepting or neutral': thus 4% indicated that they were 'very pleased' or 'pleased with some reservations' with intermarriage, 23% were 'accepting or neutral' and a further 11% had 'no view', it was not their business. A majority, close to 60%, indicated that they regarded intermarriage with regret or considerable regret. When those with children were asked for their views concerning intermarriage, a further 10% (or 70% in total) indicated that they would view with regret the marriage of one of their children to a non-Jewish person.

Figure 2: When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel?

When attitudes across age groups were considered, a large degree of consistency was found with regard to importance of Judaism, as indicated in Figure 3. This consistency was largely maintained when intermarriage was raised, although a division was evident between those aged 18-44 and 45-84; around 50% of those in the younger age groups indicated regret, compared with over 60% of those aged 45-84.

Figure 3: How important is being Jewish in your life today? Cross-tabulated by age[1]

[1] Unless results for Melbourne and Sydney are specified, data for the two cities is aggregated in this report. The number of respondents in the age categories is 18-24, 460; 25-34, 677; 35-44, 701; 45-54, 857; 55-64, 938; 65-74,476; 75-84, 414; 85+, 274.

Figure 4: When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel? Cross-tabulated by age

Melbourne and Sydney

Results for Melbourne and Sydney followed a similar pattern on most questions – but with one important difference. There was a tendency for a higher proportion of Melbourne Jews to agree with the strongest affirmations of Jewish identity. Thus 67% in Melbourne and 62% in Sydney indicated that being Jewish was 'very important' in their lives; 32% in Melbourne and 22% in Sydney that being Jewish was 'a central element' in their lives; 33% in Melbourne and 23% in Sydney indicated 'very considerable regret' at the news of intermarriage in the community. On the frequency of Sabbath observance with their families, there was no difference – 50% of respondents in both cities indicated observance with families 'every week' and 23% on 'most weeks'.

Figure 5: Which of the following best expresses your sense of being Jewish?

As a means of validating this finding, cross-checks were undertaken within sub-sets of respondents, providing further scope to compare the two cities. The differentiation of response was consistently maintained in the sub-groups. Thus the responses within four sub-groups (two socio-economic, comprising those describing themselves as 'prosperous' and 'living very comfortably', and two religious, the 'Modern Orthodox' and 'Traditional') were considered for the question 'Which of the following best expresses your sense of being Jewish?' In each sub-group a higher proportion of Melbourne residents opted for the first choice, 'it is a central element in my life'.

JEWISH COMMUNITY

Two thirds of respondents indicated that they felt connected to the Jewish community to a 'great' (25%) or 'moderate extent' (43%); 9% were neutral, 14% only felt a slight connection, while 6% indicated no connection at all.

Figure 6: How connected do you feel to Jewish communal life?

The combined 'slight' or 'not at all' proportion comprised 19% in Melbourne, 22% in Sydney. These respondents were asked a follow-up question, asking for their reasons for lack of connectedness. Answers were widely dispersed, with a similar pattern in Melbourne and Sydney. The two most common, with an almost equal number, were a feeling that the community leadership did not represent their views and that they lived outside the Jewish neighbourhoods. Of the total sample, however, those providing these responses relating to leadership and residence totalled 458 out of 5100 respondents, or less than 5% in each case. The next ranked reasons for lack of connectedness concerned financial position, marriage to a non-Jewish person and immigrant status.

Table 1: Which factors have led you to feel that you are not (or only slightly) part of the community?

| Not connected | 20.1% |
|---|---|
| | |
| Reasons for not feeling connected | |
| Views different from leadership | 4.8% |
| Live outside the Jewish neighbourhoods | 4.7% |
| Financial | 2.7% |
| Partner not Jewish | 2.4% |
| Immigrant | 2.2% |
| Not Zionist | 1.8% |
| Children not Jewish | 0.8% |
| Sexual identity | 0.8% |
| N | 5101 |

In Melbourne, there have been assertions that there are problems with community leadership, as a recent writer in the Australian Jewish News observed: 'As the mountains of anecdotal evidence demonstrate, there is an unusually high degree of dissatisfaction with the JCCV and communal leadership in general' (Yoram Symons, AJN, 3 July 09). The survey, however, does not provide evidence of widespread disaffection. As has been noted, only 5% of respondents indicated a sense of disconnectedness because of the views of the community leadership and a further 2% because they were not Zionists.

In response to a second question, however, a substantial minority indicated that they lacked influence in community decisions. Gen08 asked respondents if they felt that they could have a say in the Jewish community on issues that were important to them. Slightly more than half of the respondents indicated that they felt they could have a say 'always' (6%), 'most' (16%) or 'some of the time' (30%). The combined 'always' and 'most of the time' response of 22% is lower than the finding of a 2006 Australian Bureau of Statistics Survey which found that 29% of Australians reported that they were able to have a say in their community on important issues all or most of the time.[2] A substantial minority of respondents felt they could 'hardly ever' (21%) or 'never' (10%) have a say. A further relatively high proportion indicated that they did not know (13%) or declined to answer (3%).

Figure 7: On issues that are important to you, do you feel that you are able to have a say in the Jewish community?

Further questions asked for indication of the major strengths and problems facing the Jewish community. Respondents had the option to choose five factors from a list of 14 strengths; after selecting the five factors they were asked to rank them, from first to fifth.[3] There was marked difference between Melbourne and Sydney in the first preference. 'Support for Israel' was the most popular first ranked choice in Melbourne, chosen by 21% of respondents. The second and third ranked choices were the 'very welcoming community' and the passing on of traditions across the generations. But in Sydney, the success of fundraising ranked first and third: the raising of funds to support community organisations (20%) and the less fortunate (13%). Support for Israel (15%) ranked second.

[2] Australian Social Inclusion Board, A Compendium of Social Inclusion indicators (2009), pp.41-2
[3] The following discussion of ranked strengths and problems does not include respondents to the print version of the survey as a significant number of these respondents did not provide rankings.

Table 2: What do you see as the major strengths of the Jewish community in Melbourne/Sydney, first preferences, ranked

| | First preference | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney |
| There is support for Israel | 1/2 | 20.8% | 15.4% |
| Traditions are passed from one generation to the next | 2/4 | 18.1% | 11.0% |
| is a very welcoming community | 3/6 | 14.3% | 9.1% |
| Funds are raised to support the less fortunate | 4/3 | 10.4% | 13.3% |
| There is support in times of difficulty | 5 | 9.6% | 10.4% |
| Funds are raised to support community organisations | 6/1 | 7.0% | 19.7% |
| N | | 2235 | 1612 |

When respondents were asked to select and rank five factors from a list of 15 relating to major problems or challenges facing the Jewish community, there was greater agreement between Melbourne and Sydney. The problem of intermarriage and assimilation was the standout first choice, selected by 32% in Sydney and 27% in Melbourne. Division between religious and secular Jews and the rejection by young people of traditions of Jewish life ranked second and third. The fourth ranked factor in Melbourne was growing antisemitism and prejudice against Jews (9%), in Sydney it was the division between rich and poor (7%).

Table 3: What do you see as the major problems or challenges, if any, facing the Jewish community in Melbourne/Sydney, first preferences, ranked

| | First preference | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney |
| Intermarriage, assimilation | 1 | 26.7% | 31.6% |
| Division between religious and secular Jews | 2 | 14.2% | 13.3% |
| Young people reject the traditions of Jewish life | 3 | 9.4% | 9.9% |
| Growing antisemitism, prejudice against Jews | 4/5 | 8.8% | 6.5% |
| Duplication of community organisations, services | 5/ | 6.3% | |
| Division between the rich and poor | 6/4 | 5.9% | 7.4% |
| Too few people volunteer | /6 | | 5.7% |
| N | | 2177 | 1615 |

With all five choices were aggregated, a further variation is evident; the 'duplication of community organisations and services' was noted as a problem by over a quarter of respondents (26%) in Melbourne, a markedly lower 18% in Sydney. The differences between Melbourne and Sydney – namely, the perceived effectiveness in Sydney of fundraising and the lower proportion concerned with duplication of organisations and services – may be explained by the success of the Jewish Communal Appeal model.

DISCONNECTEDNESS

Gen08, with 5100 respondents in Melbourne and Sydney, provides the opportunity to explore the attitudes of the minority who indicated little sense of connection to the Jewish community.

The responses of those who indicated that they were 'only slightly' or 'not at all' connected were contrasted with those who felt connected 'to a great extent' or 'to a moderate extent'. Two age groups, 18-34 and 35-54, were considered, with results combined for Melbourne and Sydney to yield a more reliable sample. Within these age groups there were over 560 respondents who identified as 'disconnected', of whom 214 were aged 18-34; the 'connected' comprised some 1800 respondents, of whom 779 were aged 18-34.

A marked contrast was found in response to a number of questions, with the lowest level of differentiation when attitude to Israel and sense of Jewish identity were considered.

Identification as a Zionist was in the range 85%-90% among the connected, 60%-65% among the disconnected, with the younger age group at the lower end of this range. While some 80% of respondents who identified as connected indicated a 'special alarm' or a 'reaction so strong that it was almost the same as if their own life was in danger', 55% of the disconnected aged 18-34 and 66% aged 35-54 indicated a similar level of concern.

Figure 8: When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?

When importance of being Jewish was considered, the combined 'very important' and 'somewhat important' responses indicated a differentiation of 25%-30% between the connected and disconnected, with an even more marked differentiation at the level of the strongest response, 'very important'.

Figure 9: How important is being Jewish in your life today?

Divergence was most marked when friendship patterns and intermarriage were considered.
Among the connected, close to 68% of respondents indicated that 'all' or 'nearly all' of their friends were Jewish, compared to around 36% of the disconnected. With regard to attitudes towards intermarriage, difference was evident within each group by age, but the contrast between the two groups was more marked. Of those aged 18-34 and disconnected, less than 25% considered intermarriage with a degree of regret, compared to over 60% of those aged 18-34 among the connected; for those aged 35-54 the variance was from close to 35% to over 70%.

Figure 10: When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel?

ANTISEMITISM

There are a number of indicators of the extent of discriminatory behaviour in Australian society. One of these, the 2007 Scanlon Foundation Social Cohesion Survey, found that almost one quarter (26%) of Australians had experienced discrimination as a consequence of their national or ethnic background and less than one in ten (8%) on the basis of their religion. Almost one in ten (9%) of Australians reported having encountered discrimination in the last twelve months on the basis of their national or ethnic background or their religion.[4]

There is a much higher level of discrimination, understood in terms of antisemitism, reported by Jewish respondents. In Melbourne 60% and in Sydney 57% of respondents indicated experience of antisemitism in Australia. Of these, 45.1% in Melbourne and 44.9% in Sydney reported one or more incidents of antisemitism over the last twelve months.

Antisemitism was not defined in the Gen08 survey and responses were based on individual perceptions of antisemitic behaviour, ranging from comments made in conversation to physical assault; when referring to incidents of antisemitism very few responses were concerned with media coverage. The most common form of antisemitism reported (as in the Social Cohesion Survey) was 'verbal abuse' (64% of the reported cases in the two cities), followed by graffiti and vandalism (23%). Some 5% of respondents who reported incidents of antisemitism specified physical assault (more frequently reported in Melbourne than Sydney). The reported antisemitic incidents were most likely to occur 'on the street' (19%), followed by 'place of work', including application for work (11%), 'at a sporting event as a spectator or participant' (7%), and at school or university (combined 14%). The other most frequently mentioned occurrences were 'outside a Jewish building' (6%), and in social contexts, such as 'in conversation' (3%).

A large minority (41% in Melbourne, 39% in Sydney) were of the view that antisemitism was a 'very serious' or 'quite serious' problem, close to 50% considered that antisemitism was 'not a very serious problem' or 'not a serious problem at all'; the remaining 10% indicated that they did not know or declined to answer. While there was relatively little difference across age groups, those aged 18-24 were most likely to view antisemitism as 'very serious'. When the 'very serious' and 'quite serious' responses were combined, the highest level of agreement was among those aged 45-54 (46%), followed by a similar level of response among those aged 18-44 (43%). Contrary to the assumption that the elderly are the most likely to be concerned, a relatively low 38% of those aged 65-74 and 36% aged 75-84 viewed antisemitism as 'very serious' and 'quite serious'. The highest proportion (7%) reporting the experience of at least one antisemitic incident a month were aged 18-24, more than double for any other age group.

[4] Andrew Markus and Arunachalam Dharmalingam, Mapping Social Cohesion: The Scanlon Foundation Surveys (2007), p.61

Figure 11: How serious would you say antisemitism is in Australia today?

When asked about the extent of change, if any, in antisemitism in Australia over the last five years, 45% were of the view that it was 'about the same' as it was five years ago (43% Melbourne, 49% Sydney). But the proportion who thought that it was 'less of a problem' (4%) were outnumbered more than six to one (34%) by those who considered antisemitism to be 'worse' or 'much worse'.

Figure 12: Do you feel antisemitism is worse, about the same or less than it was five years ago?

More than a quarter of respondents (28% in Melbourne, 26% in Sydney) indicated that concern over antisemitism had influenced their actions over the last five years, for example leading them to decide not to attend a public function or to be more careful in public places.

ISRAEL

It is common for visitors to Australia to comment on the strength of identification with Israel and Zionism within the Jewish communities. Thus Professor Fania Oz-Salzberger, holder of joint professorial appointments at Monash (the Leon Liberman Chair in Modern Israel Studies) and Haifa Universities, recently observed:

> I am yet to find a single Australian Jew who is indifferent towards Israel. There is a level of proximity here that one cannot find amid British or American Jewry, where many individuals are unstirred by their Jewish ancestry, uninvolved with Israel, or both. I like telling my Jewish-Australian friends that they are first cousins to us Israelis, while many other communities are second cousins at best. (AJN, 5 June 2009)

Eighty per cent of respondents indicated that they regarded themselves as Zionist, while only 13% did not; a further 7% indicated that they did not know, or declined to answer. The relative proportions in Melbourne and Sydney were almost identical, with a marginally higher proportion (82%, 78%) identifying as Zionist in Melbourne.

Some variation is evident when the level of highest educational attainment is considered. The highest proportion indicating that they regarded themselves as Zionist were those with some tertiary study or a completed Bachelor degree. The lowest proportions were among those with trade or apprenticeship level qualifications, a Diploma or PhD.

Table 4: Do you regard yourself as a Zionist?[5] Cross-tabulated by highest level of educational attainment, Melbourne and Sydney

| | Highest level of formal education | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Year 11-12 | Trade or apprenticeship | Diploma | Some tertiary | Bachelor degree | Postgraduate diploma | Masters degree | PhD |
| Yes | 80.9% | 70.7% | 74.1% | 85.1% | 84.4% | 81.8% | 83.7% | 77.4% |
| No | 11.8% | 18.0% | 16.2% | 10.4% | 10.6% | 11.5% | 11.3% | 14.5% |
| Don't know/ Decline to answer | 7.3% | 11.3% | 9.7% | 4.5% | 5.0% | 6.8% | 4.9% | 8.1% |
| N | 560 | 75 | 384 | 503 | 1519 | 891 | 635 | 207 |

When asked for their reaction to international events which put Israel in danger, a large majority indicated that they felt a 'special alarm' (56%) or as if their own life was in danger (20%).

[5] The question on Zionism was worded: 'Do you regard yourself as a Zionist? By the term Zionist we mean that you feel connected to the Jewish people, to Jewish history, culture and beliefs, the Hebrew language and the Jewish homeland, Israel.'

Figure 13: When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?

Across age groups there is a large measure of consistency in identification with Zionism, with the highest level among those aged 45-64, but with a narrow band of variation in the range 75%-85%. This level of consistency (or correlation) is maintained when the two questions – identification with Zionism and concern when international events put Israel in danger – are placed side by side.

Figure 14: Zionism and reaction 'when international events put Israel in danger', cross-tabulated by age

Indicative of the level of engagement with Israel, some 63% kept up with events in Israel 'a lot' or 'to quite a large extent'. Only 2% of respondents in Melbourne and 5% in Sydney indicated total disinterest, in that they kept up with events in Israel 'not at all'.

In terms of personal contact, 74% of respondents have relatives and 53% close friends living in Israel. Eighty six per cent of respondents had visited Israel, with 50% in Melbourne and 45% in Sydney indicating that they had visited three or more times. A significant proportion of the community undertakes regular visits. Thus in the last four years, more than four out of ten respondents had visited Israel.

Excluding respondents born in Israel, the most common length of stay in Israel was 'two to four weeks' (32%); 28% of visits were for 'one to three months', 15% for 'four to twelve months', and 14% of respondents had spent 'more than one year' in Israel.

To obtain an indication of views of the peace process, respondents were asked what proportion of settlements in the West Bank Israel should be willing to dismantle as part of a permanent settlement. Responses on a five point scale ranging from 'all settlements' to 'none' indicated divided views, with a similar distribution of attitudes in Melbourne and Sydney, including a high proportion (18%) who indicated that they 'do not know'. Close to one-third responded that they favoured 'few' or 'no' settlements being dismantled, a marginally smaller proportion favoured dismantling 'all' or 'most', while close to one in five responded 'dismantle some'.

Table 5: What proportion of settlements in the West Bank should Israel be willing to dismantle as part of a permanent settlement?

| | Melbourne | Sydney |
|---|---|---|
| Dismantle all or most | 29% | 29% |
| Dismantle some | 18% | 18% |
| Dismantle few or none | 32% | 29% |
| Don't know | 17% | 19% |
| Decline to answer | 4% | 6% |
| N | 2932 | 2169 |

EDUCATION

Education is seen as a key issue for the future of Jewish life in Australia, an issue much discussed in the context of the pressure of rising institutional costs and school fees. The Gen08 survey enables this issue to be considered at a level of detail rarely possible.

First, the survey provides evidence of views on the strengths and weaknesses of the day schools. The survey asked respondents to select key advantages and weaknesses and then to rank their selections in order of importance, from first to fifth. Tables 6 and 7 indicate the top ranked first and second preferences for Melbourne and Sydney.[6] Of advantages, the strengthening of Jewish identity was, by a large margin, the factor of first choice; the encouragement of Jewish friendship was a clear second option, followed by the quality of academic education. A combined 75% of respondents chose strengthening of Jewish identity as their first or second preference.

Table 6: What do you consider to be the main advantages (if any) of full-time Jewish schooling? First and second preferences, ranked

| | First preference | | | Second preference | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney |
| Strengthens Jewish identity | 1 | 56.8% | 55.3% | 2 | 19.5% | 19.1% |
| Encourages the development of Jewish friendships | 2 | 14.5% | 14.8% | 1 | 30.4% | 30.3% |
| Provides a strong academic education; outstanding results for university entry | 3 | 8.9% | 10.2% | 3 | 12.2% | 11.7% |
| Encourages Jewish observance | 4 | 5.1% | 3.7% | 4 | 11.0% | 10.4% |
| Education takes place in a Jewish environment | 5 | 4.6% | 5.4% | 5/6 | 10.2% | 7.8% |
| Teaches knowledge of Hebrew | 6 | 2.2% | 3.0% | 6/5 | 7.0% | 8.0% |
| N | | 2314 | 1726 | | 2088 | 1544 |

When disadvantages were considered, there was no stand-out selection. The similarity in Melbourne and Sydney opinion was still evident, but in Melbourne the cost of schooling was the first ranked disadvantage, in Sydney it was the 'artificial separation of Jews from other Australians'. When the top two preferences are combined, 40% of Melbourne respondents and almost 50% of Sydney respondents saw the 'separation of Jews from other Australians' as the main disadvantage. (In another section of the survey, respondents with children under the age of 21 were asked if the cost of school fees had ever prevented them from sending one or more of their children to Jewish day schools; both in both Melbourne and Sydney 27% of respondents answered yes, 62% no, while 11% declined to answer or did not know.)

[6] The following discussion of ranked advantages and disadvantages does not include respondents to the print version of the survey as a significant number of these respondents did not provide rankings.

Table 7: What do you consider to be the main disadvantages (if any) of full-time Jewish schooling? First and second preferences, ranked

| | First preference | | | Second preference | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney | Rank | Melbourne | Sydney |
| Too expensive; not good value for money | 1/2 | 26.8% | 19.6% | 4 | 10.6% | 10.4% |
| Artificially separates Jews from other Australians | 2/1 | 23.0% | 28.3% | 1 | 16.6% | 20.2% |
| Does not prepare students for their lives after school | 3 | 10.7% | 9.7% | 2/3 | 15.2% | 12.6% |
| Too religious | 4 | 5.1% | 7.9% | /5 | | 8.1% |
| Too elitist | 5 | 5.1% | 6.6% | 3/2 | 15.1% | 14.7% |
| Limited subject choice | 6 | 5.0% | 3.6% | | | |
| Poor discipline | | | | 5/ | 8.4% | |
| Lack of sport/ other extra-curricular activities | | | | 6 | 7.4% | 7.6% |
| N | | 2045 | 1615 | | 1611 | 1273 |

The survey provides scope to compare the attitudes of Jewish day school graduates with those who had no Jewish day school education. Respondents aged between 18-54 who were born in Australia or who arrived in Australia under the age of 10 were considered, divided between (a) those who spent a minimum of three years in a Jewish day school at primary and three years at secondary level (a minimum of six years of Jewish education in total) and (b) those who spent no years in a Jewish day school. As demonstrated in Table 8, there is a marked differentiation by type of school attended, together with some difference between Melbourne and Sydney. This differentiation is most evident in stated knowledge of Hebrew and friendship patterns. Differentiation is of the order of 20% in response to questions of identity, and almost at that level on views of intermarriage and identification as a Zionist.

Table 8: Selected questions by type of school attended

| | Attended Jewish day school | | Did not attend Jewish day school | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Melbourne | Sydney | Melbourne | Sydney |
| How well can you read Hebrew? 'Very well' or 'well' | 76% | 72% | 26% | 24% |
| Proportion of close friends who are Jewish: 'all' or 'nearly all' | 72% | 67% | 43% | 39% |
| Sense of being Jewish: 'it is a central element in my life' | 42% | 36% | 21% | 18% |
| Importance of being Jewish: 'very important' | 73% | 73% | 53% | 49% |
| View of intermarriage: 'very considerable regret' or 'some regret' | 69% | 61% | 52% | 43% |
| Are you a Zionist? 'Yes' | 86% | 85% | 67% | 68% |
| N | 660 | 280 | 274 | 335 |

Further analysis of responses indicates that the differentiation of attitudes is not as simple or clear cut as the above comparison indicates. There are two other variables of significance which are explored in the following discussion. These are: (i) religious observance (or absence of) in the parental home, and (ii) attendance in UJEB/BJE classes or secular youth groups by those who did not attend Jewish day school. In this analysis, which is concerned to explore sub-groups, Melbourne and Sydney data are combined to increase sample reliability.

The categories for comparison are the following:[7]

(1) Attended Jewish day school[8] and Jewish religious background.[9]
(2) Attended Jewish day school and secular background.
(3) Did not attend Jewish day school[10] and Jewish religious background.
(4) Did not attend Jewish day school and secular background.
(5) Did not attend Jewish day school and attended UJEB or BJE for at least 3 years.[11]
(6) Did not attend Jewish day school and attended a secular youth group, Habonim Dror, Hashomer Hatzair or Skif.

For the age groups analysed, the following proportion of respondents from a Jewish religious background had at least six years of Jewish education: Strictly Orthodox 100%, Modern Orthodox 85%, Traditional 67% and Progressive 23%.

This analysis reveals three patterns. First, with regard to some of the issues considered, including speaking, reading and understanding Hebrew, the marked differentiation between attendance at Jewish and non-Jewish schools is maintained, most evidently in the ability to speak Hebrew.

[7] The number of respondents in these categories are: [1] 786; [2] 94; [3] 383; [4] 166; [5] 219; [6] 194.
[8] Sub-sample aged 18-54, born in Australia or arrived in Australia under the age of 10, and spent at least three years in Jewish primary school and three years in Jewish secondary school (minimum of six years of Jewish education).
[9] Background is determined by response to a question which asked respondents 'How would you describe religious attitudes in the home in which you grew up?' Respondents were provided with a list of major forms of Jewish religious identification, as discussed on p.28 of this report; those who indicated that they were 'Not religious (secular home)', 'opposed to religion' and 'opposed to Judaism' were included in the secular category for the purposes of this analysis.
[10] Sub-sample aged 18-54, born in Australia or arrived in Australia under the age of 10, and spent no years at Jewish day school.
[11] Those in the UJEB/BJE and youth group category spent no years at Jewish day school. They are not disaggregated by religious attitudes in the home in which the respondent grew up as the sample size precluded such disaggregation. UJEB/BJE refers to the United Jewish Education Board in Victoria and Academy BJE (New South Wales Board of Jewish Education) in New South Wales. These organisations provide Jewish education to children in schools which are outside the Jewish day school system. These include religious education, Hebrew language and Jewish studies classes (after school or on Sundays). Detailed information is available on the internet sites of the two organisations.

Figure 15: At present, how well can you speak Hebrew?

Figure 16: At present, how well can you read Hebrew?

Second, differentiation is also evident when attitudes to intermarriage and friendship patterns are considered, although there are some qualifications: (i) the evidence of differentiation is strongest at the top level of the scale ('very considerable regret', 'all or nearly all'); (ii) in response to a number of questions, including those relating to friendship networks, differentiation of attitudes is most marked for those of religious background who attended a Jewish day school and those of secular background who attended a non-Jewish school; (iii) the differentiation is attenuated by attendance at UJEB/BJE classes and secular youth groups. The role of the day schools seems to be most significant in the maintenance and reinforcement of attitudes developed in the home.

Figure 17: When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel?

Figure 18: Thinking of your close friends, how many of them are Jewish?

Third, with regard to some general issues, such as strength of identity considered in broad terms and identification with Israel, the apparent impact of Jewish day school education is greatly lessened to the point of being statistically non-significant. Thus statistical testing of responses to the question of Zionist identification indicates no significant variation by educational experience. Further analysis of this topic will be undertaken in Melbourne and Sydney.

Figure 19: How important is being Jewish in your life today?

Figure 20: Do you regard yourself as a Zionist? 'Yes'

The apparent finding concerning the significance of the home is reinforced when the category 'Attended Jewish day school and Jewish religious background' is further analysed through division between those who attended a Jewish day school and described the parental home as: (i) Ultra-Orthodox, Strictly Orthodox or Modern Orthodox and (ii) Conservative, Traditional or Progressive.

Differentiation is marked when religious practice and observance is considered. For example, 62% from the first category attend synagogue at least once per month, compared to 28% of the second, the relative proportions for strict Kosher observance are 36% and 8%. With a number of questions ranked on a four or five point scale, those from Orthodox homes register the strongest level of agreement; thus in response to the question on sense of identity, 59% of those from an Orthodox background indicate that being Jewish is a 'central element' in their life, compared to 32% from a Conservative, Traditional or Progressive background; 55% of the first group indicate considerable regret at intermarriage, compared to 25%. However, with a range of questions relating to friendship, Israel, and Friday evening Sabbath, the difference is narrowed or disappears; in particular, 85% of those from Orthodox homes indicate that they regard themselves as Zionist, compared to 90% of those from a Conservative, Traditional or Progressive background.

LIFE SATISFACTION

When asked to rate level of satisfaction with 'life as a whole', a combined total of almost nine out of ten respondents indicated that they were 'very satisfied' (42%, with a marginally higher proportion in Sydney) or 'satisfied' (46%); 4% indicated that they were 'dissatisfied' or 'very dissatisfied 'and 6% a neutral position – 'neither satisfied nor dissatisfied'.

Figure 21: Thinking about your own life and personal circumstances, how satisfied are you with your life as a whole?

This finding is consistent with surveys conducted across the Australian population, with a marginally higher proportion indicating the highest levels of satisfaction in the Jewish community and a marginally lower proportion indicating dissatisfaction. For example, a 2007 Australian survey asked respondents to rate their level of happiness over the last year, 'taking all things into consideration'. 89% of respondents indicated that they were 'very happy' (35%) or 'happy' (54%); 8% of respondents indicated that they were 'very unhappy' or 'unhappy'. [12]

The Gen08 results were further examined by state of residence, gender, country of birth, religious observance and self-rated socio-economic status. For all of the variables considered, a very low proportion indicated that they were very dissatisfied with their lives, with a large degree of consistency. Self-reported socio-economic status produced the largest variation – of those reporting their status as 'prosperous', 97% in Melbourne and Sydney indicated that they were 'very satisfied' or 'satisfied' with their lives; of those who reported that they were 'just getting along', 77% indicated satisfaction; of those reporting that they were 'poor', 51% indicated satisfaction.

[12] Andrew Markus and Arunachalam Dharmalingam, Mapping Social Cohesion: The Scanlon Foundation Surveys (2007), pp. 63-4

Figure 22: Thinking about your own life and personal circumstances, how satisfied are you with your life as a whole? Cross-tabulated by self-rated socio-economic status[13]

In response to other questions, 90% reported satisfaction with their standard of living; 80% with their health; 74% with their life achievements; 80% with their personal relationships; 90% with feeling safe; 89% with their access to health care; and 79% with their access to sport and physical activity.

Socio-Economic Status

Gen08 provided for socio-economic status to be self-rated by participants on a scale ranging from 'prosperous' to 'poor'. As prosperity decreased so did people's satisfaction with their health, personal life achievements and satisfaction with personal relationships. About 42% of those self classified as 'poor' still reported to be 'satisfied' or 'very satisfied' with their relationships. Most dissatisfaction was reported by the 'poor' in relation to personal safety, but again, overall the community is satisfied with their level of personal safety. Acceptance in the community was differentiated by socio-economic status, and as prosperity decreased so did people's level of feeling accepted by the community, with the 'poor' reporting the highest levels of being 'dissatisfied' and 'very dissatisfied' (25%).

Level of Religious Observance

Level of religious observance as indicated by frequency of synagogue attendance did not impact on people's overall level of personal life satisfaction or with most aspects of their lives. Across all levels of religious observance from 'did not attend at all' to 'daily-several times a week', 88% of the community reported being either satisfied or very satisfied with their overall life as a whole.

[13] For the relative proportions in the several socio-economic categories, see below, p.45.

There was however, large variation when perception of acceptance was correlated with levels of religious observance; those who attend synagogue more frequently felt more satisfied with their acceptance within the community than those who 'did not attend at all'.

Figure 23: Thinking about your own life and personal circumstances, how satisfied are you with your acceptance in the Jewish community? Cross-tabulated by synagogue attendance[14]

As to be expected, those who attended synagogue more regularly reported higher levels of spiritual satisfaction (around 90% satisfaction) than those who 'did not attend at all' (41%) and 'only on special occasions' (51%). However, almost 35% of the less observant reported ambivalence about their spirituality, rather than dissatisfaction.

[14] The number of respondents in the categories is: daily-several times a week, 331; about once a week, 446 ; once-several times a month, 731; on special occasions and High Holy Days, 1607; only on High Holy Days, 482; only on special occasions, 683 ; did not attend at all, 437.

POVERTY

There were three indicators of poverty in the survey: those who, when asked concerning their present financial circumstances, indicated that they were 'poor' or 'nearly poor'; those who indicated that in the last 12 months they had to reduce the size of their meals because there was not enough money to buy food; those who indicated that they could not afford prescription medicine. The findings are presented below.

Table 9: Indicators of poverty

| | Melbourne | | Sydney | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Total* | Percentage | Total* | Percentage |
| Nearly poor | 32 | 1.1% | 22 | 1.0% |
| Poor | 19 | 0.6% | 13 | 0.6% |
| Reduce meals 1-4 occasions | 75 | 2.5% | 44 | 2.1% |
| Reduce meals 5-10 occasions | 28 | 0.9% | 15 | 0.7% |
| Reduce meals more than 10 occasions | 51 | 1.7% | 34 | 1.6% |
| Could not afford prescription medicine | 126 | 4.2% | 79 | 3.8% |

* Unweighted frequencies

Cross-tabulation of categories showed that about two-thirds of those who responded that they had to reduce the size of their meals also described themselves as 'nearly poor' or 'poor'. In the following preliminary analysis reduction of meals is used as a proxy for financial difficulty. Correlation analysis was undertaken with four variables: present employment situation, present religious identification, age, and country of birth for five countries – Australia, United Kingdom, FSU, South Africa and Israel. This analysis shows that those who described their present employment situation as 'unable to work because of a disability' were 17 times more likely than the average to reduce their meals because they did not have enough money (significant at the .001 level); those who stated that they were 'unemployed and not looking for work' were three times more likely to have to reduce their meals. Above average indicators of the need to reduce meals were also found among those identifying as Ultra-Orthodox and Strictly Orthodox and those born in the FSU, with a lower but above average indicator for those born in Israel.

Correlation with this index of poverty, in a context in which low levels of dissatisfaction were recorded, indicated that the poor, when compared with all respondents, were twice as likely to be dissatisfied with their health, more than four times as likely to be dissatisfied with their access to health care, five times as likely to be dissatisfied with their level of personal safety.

PATTERNS OF JUDAISM

Respondents were asked: 'As far as your present feelings about the Jewish religion are concerned, which of these best describes you?' They were provided with a range of options, which had been determined in consultation with religious leaders. There was a similar pattern of response in Melbourne and Sydney, with a marginally larger proportion of Ultra-Orthodox and Strictly Orthodox in Melbourne and a larger proportion of Modern Orthodox and Conservative respondents in Sydney. The largest category, Traditional, and the categories Progressive, Not Religious and Opposed to Judaism/Religion were of similar proportions.

For purposes of analysis, responses were grouped into six categories: the Strictly Orthodox (including the Ultra-Orthodox), Modern Orthodox, Conservative, Traditional, Progressive and Secular. These categories may indicate denominational affiliation or personal identification; they have been used for the purpose of establishing general patterns in observance and outlook across the Jewish population, not specific detail. Responses were tabulated for these groups for a range of questions, including religious observance, attitude to Judaism, friendship patterns, attitudes towards intermarriage, Israel, the Jewish community, and involvement in voluntary work.

When responses are located on a continuum, the Strictly Orthodox are at one end, the Secular at the other. On most indicators, the Modern Orthodox are positioned at the mid-point between the Strictly Orthodox on the one hand and the Conservative and Traditional on the other, with the Progressive at the next position on a number, but not all, indicators. On a few questions, such as involvement in voluntary work, there is little or no differentiation.

Table 10: Patterns of Judaism, overview (5% intervals)

| | Religious observance | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Strictly Orthodox | Modern Orthodox | Conservative | Traditional | Progressive | Secular |
| Attend synagogue once or more per week | 70% | 40% | 20% | 10% | 5% | 0% |
| Attend synagogue once or more per month | 15 | 25 | 30 | 15 | 25 | 0 |
| Observe Kosher – eat only certified | 90 | 25 | 5 | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Observe some Kosher laws, not others | 5 | 60 | 70 | 60 | 40 | 20 |
| Being Jewish is a central element of my life | 90 | 50 | 30 | 25 | 15 | 5 |
| Being Jewish is a significant element of my life | 10 | 45 | 50 | 65 | 60 | 40 |
| Very important to be Jewish | 100 | 85 | 75 | 75 | 55 | 35 |
| Somewhat important to be Jewish | 0 | 15 | 25 | 25 | 40 | 40 |
| Observe Friday Sabbath with family every week | 85 | 70 | 55 | 55 | 35 | 25 |
| Observe Friday Sabbath with family most weeks | 10 | 20 | 20 | 25 | 30 | 25 |
| Connection to Jewish communal life 'great' | 60 | 40 | 30 | 25 | 20 | 5 |
| Connection to Jewish communal life 'moderate' | 35 | 45 | 50 | 50 | 45 | 35 |
| All close friends are Jewish | 55 | 25 | 10 | 20 | 5 | 10 |
| Nearly all close friends are Jewish | 40 | 50 | 50 | 50 | 35 | 30 |
| View intermarriage with much regret | 90 | 55 | 20 | 30 | 10 | 10 |
| View intermarriage with some regret | 5 | 30 | 40 | 40 | 30 | 25 |
| Zionist | 80 | 95 | 90 | 90 | 75 | 65 |
| Israel endangered - feel same as if own life was in danger | 45 | 25 | 20 | 20 | 15 | 10 |
| Israel endangered - feel special alarm | 50 | 60 | 60 | 60 | 55 | 55 |
| Dismantle all or most settlement in the West Bank | 5 | 20 | 35 | 25 | 40 | 40 |
| Dismantle few or no settlements in the West Bank | 80 | 45 | 30 | 30 | 15 | 15 |
| Volunteer once or more per week | 25 | 25 | 20 | 15 | 20 | 10 |
| Volunteer once or more per month | 25 | 20 | 20 | 20 | 20 | 10 |
| N | 265 | 918 | 168 | 1774 | 678 | 1031 |

As to be expected, in terms of synagogue attendance the highest proportion of the Strictly Orthodox report attendance at least once per week (higher among male respondents), followed by a sharp decline to the Modern Orthodox at 40% per week. About 65% of the Modern Orthodox, 50% Conservative, 24% Traditional and over 30% Progressive indicate synagogue attendance once or more per month.

With regard to observance of Jewish dietary laws, only the Strictly Orthodox meet the requirement of only eating 'food certified as Kosher by a Rabbinic authority'; 57% of Progressive and 80% of the Secular 'do not keep any dietary laws'. Close to 80% of the Strictly Orthodox indicate that they are able to participate in 'all of the service' in synagogue, over 41% Modern Orthodox and around 30% Conservative and Progressive.

Figure 24: Patterns of observance

In response to the narrower question dealing with identity, 90% of the Strictly Orthodox and 51% Modern Orthodox indicate that Judaism is 'a central element' in their lives; this compares with 31% Conservative, 23% Traditional, 17% Progressive and 7% Secular. A broader question on identity yields less differentiation, ranging from close to 100% agreement by the Strictly Orthodox with the proposition that it is 'very important to be Jewish', 74% by Conservative and Traditional respondents, 54% by Progressive and 34% by Secular.

When asked about sense of connection to Jewish life, there is again a marked differentiation at the level of 'great sense of connection', ranging from 61% by the Strictly Orthodox to 7% by the Secular.

Figure 25: Importance of Judaism and sense of connectedness

Weekly Sabbath observance or Friday family gathering ranges from 86% by the Strictly Orthodox to 33% Progressive and 25% Secular. Sabbath observance with family for 'most weeks' or 'every week' is indicated by 64% of Progressive and 50% Secular Jews.

There is marked differentiation in friendship patterns and attitude to intermarriage. The proportion indicating that all or nearly all of their friends are Jewish ranges from 95% to 40%. The proportion indicating very considerable regret at intermarriage ranges from close to 90% by the Strictly Orthodox, 55% Modern Orthodox, and under 30% for other groups, with the low point under 10% for Secular.

Figure 26: Family, friendship and intermarriage

Questions relating to Israel elicit a much narrower range of differentiation, with the notable exception of the peace process. In response to the question of identification with Zionism, the highest level is in the range 88%-93% among the Modern Orthodox, Traditional and Conservative, followed by 78% Strictly Orthodox, 74% Progressive and 65% Secular. There is a similar range in the response to sense of threat when Israel is in danger, although on this question the Strictly Orthodox indicate the highest level of concern. By contrast, on the question of the proportion of settlements in the West Bank that Israel should be willing to dismantle as part of a permanent peace settlement, a large majority (80%) of the Strictly Orthodox favour 'none' or 'few', the largest proportion among the Progressive and Secular (40%) favour 'all' or 'most'.

Figure 27: Zionism and reaction 'when international events put Israel in danger', cross-tabulated by religious identification

IMMIGRANTS

There were sufficient respondents to provide for analysis by five countries of birth: Australia, United Kingdom, Former Soviet Union, South Africa and Israel.[15]

On most questions, those born in Australia and United Kingdom indicated a similar pattern of response. Those from South Africa were also similar, but with some questions indicating higher levels of Jewish observance and stronger levels of identification. The Israel-born respondents indicated negativity in response to some questions. On most indicators in Melbourne and Sydney the FSU-born held a position at the end of the continuum of attitudes and reported behaviour.

- Synagogue attendance at the level of once or more times each month was highest for the South African at 41%, 33% for the Australia and UK-born, 17% for the FSU and 14% for Israeli.
- 88% of South African-born spent Friday night Sabbath with their families 'every week' or 'most weeks', 77% Australia-born, 76% Israeli, 68% UK, and a markedly lower 41% FSU.
- A substantial majority of FSU (63%) and Israeli (63%) do not follow Jewish dietary laws.
- 83% of South Africa-born indicated that Judaism was a significant or central element in their lives, similar to the proportion among the Australia and UK-born; the proportion for the Israel-born was 74% and much lower 54% for FSU.
- The highest proportion (88%) of those indicating that half or more of their friends were Jewish was among the South African, the lowest at 66% among FSU (but a high proportion, compared to other indicators for FSU).
- Half of the Israel-born respondents indicated that they did not regard the marriage decisions of others as their concern, or indicated that they were neutral, accepting or pleased with intermarriage. This was close to the FSU proportion. Among UK-born the proportion was 41%, 38% among Australia-born and 33% among South African.
- Sense of connectedness with Jewish life was highest among Australia-born, with 72% indicating connectedness to a great or moderate extent, closely followed by the UK and South African (69%-70%), with a much lower figure for Israeli (52%) and FSU (42%).

[15] The number of respondents in the several categories is: Australia, 2354; United Kingdom, 230; Former Soviet Union, 345; South Africa, 686; and Israel, 280.

Figure 28: Synagogue attendance, view of intermarriage and Jewish identity

Figure 29: Connection to community, friends and family

When attitudes to Israel were considered, the pattern of differentiation largely disappeared. The key feature was the narrow differentiation in attitude, with the highest proportion of Zionists among the Israel-born. Respondents born in the FSU were equally concerned for the safety of Israel and only marginally lower in Zionist identification when compared to the Australia-born.

Figure 30: : Zionism and reaction 'when international events put Israel in danger'

Immigrants were asked to indicate if they had experienced difficulties since their arrival in Australia. Eleven options were listed, with answers on a three point scale: 'yes, serious', 'yes, moderate', and 'no'. When the FSU, South African and Israeli immigrants were considered, the proportion of respondents indicating 'serious difficulty' at 10% or above were found for six categories among the FSU: finding employment (29%), recognition of qualifications (24%), inadequate income (16%), making friends (14%), English language (12%) and finding suitable housing (12%). Among the South Africa-born the highest level of serious difficulty was making friends (4%) and education of children (4%), among the Israel-born recognition of qualifications (8%) and housing (6%).

Figure 31: Highest rated indication of 'serious' difficulties encountered by overseas-born

Notwithstanding difficulties experienced, FSU-born, together with South African, indicated a high level of satisfaction with their lives. When asked to compare their level of satisfaction to life in Australia compared to their former homelands, 64% FSU and 55% South African indicated that they were 'much more satisfied', 18% of FSU and 30% South African were 'more satisfied'. Thus a combined 82% FSU and 85% South African indicated satisfaction. The 'less satisfied' comprised 3% of South African and 1% FSU, with others adopting a neutral position or indicating that they did not know or declined to answer.

The pattern was different for the Israel-born. Only 22% indicated that they were 'much more satisfied', 38% that they were 'more satisfied', a total of 60%. A high proportion, 19%, indicated that they did not know, 15% were neither satisfied nor dissatisfied, and 5% indicated that they were 'less satisfied'.

CHANGE OVER TIME

Comparing survey findings is a hazardous exercise; comparison of survey results is useful for highlighting trends, not for consideration of specific detail.

Changes in the wording and the context of the questions (placement in the survey, balance of questions in the survey) may impact on responses. Further, communities change; Jewish life in Melbourne and Sydney is not a replica of life twenty or forty years ago. The distribution and ethnic character of the Jewish population has undergone significant change. The Jewish population of Melbourne is more concentrated than it was twenty years ago (51.4% in Glen Eira LGA in 2006, 44.6% in 1991). The proportion of the population born and raised in Australia has increased; the generation of Holocaust survivors and other post-war immigrants have declined; and there has been the impact of the large numbers of immigrants from the Former Soviet Union and South Africa.

Table 11: Survey findings 1967-2009

| | 1967 Melb. | 1991 Melb. | 2008/9 Melb. | 2008/9 Sydney |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Attend synagogue once or more per month | 15% | 22% | 32% | 31% |
| Observe Friday Sabbath with family most weeks | 68 | 71 | 74 | 72 |
| Kosher - strict/only certified | | 7 | 14 | 8 |
| - keep some, not all | | 42 | 42 | 49 |
| - do not keep | | 52 | 43 | 43 |
| Hold or attend Passover Seder each year | 84 | 84 | 86 | 84 |
| Fast on Yom Kippur every year | 64 | 53 | 56 | 61 |
| Being Jewish is very important | 45 | 58 | 66 | 62 |
| Half of more close friends are Jewish | | 89 | 89 | 86 |
| Antisemitism in Australia - very serious problem | 8 | 12 | 5 | 4 |
| Antisemitism in Australia - quite a serious problem | 59 | 51 | 37 | 35 |
| Visited Israel at least once | | 73 | 87 | 86 |
| Have friends or family in Israel | | 75 | +79 | +68 |
| When Israel endangered - feel same as if own life in danger | | 28 | 23 | 17 |
| - feel special alarm | | 58 | 55 | 57 |

The major trend to emerge from the comparison of survey findings is the indication of higher levels of religious identification and practice. Comparing the 1991 and 2008/9 Melbourne surveys, there is change in the frequency of synagogue attendance, Friday night Sabbath and Kosher observance, and in Jewish identification – as a rough generalisation, the proportion indicating observance and identification has increased by around 10%. Attendance at a Passover Seder (already at a very high level), fasting on Yom Kippur and Friday night Sabbath with family did not show any significant change. With regard to the indicators considered, where data is available there is a consistent pattern across the three Melbourne surveys in the direction of greater identification. Thus 'being Jewish' was important to 45% of respondents in 1967, 58% in 1991 and 66% in 2008/9.

The pattern of increased religious identification is to be found in other faith-groups in Australia. Professor Gary Bouma in his Australian Soul: Religion and Spirituality in the Twenty-First Century (2006), discusses the evidence that many young people are more intense religiously than their parents. He also notes the grass roots movements that reflect the revitalisation of religion, as evident in Jewish Australia.

With regard to other indicators which can be compared, concern at the seriousness of antisemitism shows a decline, as does indication of concern when Israel is in danger; a larger proportion of the community has visited Israel, as would be expected given the greater affordability of international travel.

ATTITUDES ACROSS THE DIASPORA

There is considerable difference in the character of Diasporic Jewish communities. At one extreme, found in the United States, there are communities characterised by low levels of synagogue attendance, observance of rituals and High Holidays. 'Being Jewish' is less central to the lives of those of Jewish descent, the proportion of close friends who are Jewish is fewer, and only a small minority of students attend Jewish day schools. Only a minority of the Jewish population has visited Israel and the level of attachment to Israel is at similarly low levels. These general observations do not, of course, apply to all segments of the Jewish population. Rather, Jewish population centres of America have a significant differentiation between the core and the periphery. Major centres of Jewish learning, strength of institutional development, close Israel connectedness and a vibrant Jewish life in all of its forms characterise the core.

In a second type of community the differentiation of core and periphery is less marked, the proportion of those on the periphery of Jewish life is much smaller. These types of communities are to be found in Australia, the United Kingdom and South Africa. A large majority of families are together on Friday nights; a higher proportion of the population is involved in the ritual aspects of Jewish life; being Jewish is seen as very important by a majority; a majority of the school age population attends Jewish day schools; and the level of direct Israel connectedness is markedly higher. Of the three countries considered, the level of engagement seems to be highest in South Africa.

Table 12: Comparison of survey findings across countries

| | USA 2000/1 | Boston 2005 | Atlanta 2006 | London 2002 | South Africa 2005 | Melb. & Sydney 2008/9 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Estimated Population | +5.2m | 210,000 | 120,000 | 195,000 | 88,000 | 100,000 |
| Attend synagogue once or more per month | 19% | 29% | 31% | 36% | 48% | 31% |
| Light Sabbath candles always or most weeks | 19 | 22 | 33 | 82 | 76 | 73 |
| Light Sabbath candles sometimes | 19 | 25 | 33 | | 16 | 7 |
| Attend Passover Seder – last year | 57 | 52 | 64 | 75 | 95 | 85 |
| Fast on Yom Kippur – every year | 32 | | 56 | | 90 | 58 |
| Half or more close friends are Jewish | 45 | | | +80 | | 87 |
| Jewish day school attendance/ secondary | 11 | 16 | 11 | +50 | 70 | 60 |
| Visited Israel once | 29 | 38 | 36 | 88 | 83 | 86 |
| Visited Israel twice or more | 12 | 22 | | | | 64 |
| Have family in Israel | 31 | 37 | | | 78 | 74 |
| Have close friends in Israel | | 26 | | | | 53 |
| Emotional attachment to Israel - very strong | 25 | 33 | 37 | | | [75] |
| - somewhat | 34 | 36 | 39 | | | |

Sources: NJPS, Boston and Atlanta surveys, SPSS data files, North American Jewish Data Bank; The 2005 Boston Community Survey: Preliminary Findings (2006); A Portrait of Jews in London and the Southeast (2003); O. Valins et al., The Future of Jewish Schooling in the United Kindgom (2002); Shirley Bruk Research, The Jews of South Africa 2005 – Report on a Research Study

NOTE ON METHODOLOGY

The methodology adopted in this survey is distinctive. Its successful implementation was dependent on the active support of a broad range of community leaders and institutions and public acceptance of the goals and worth of the project.

Earlier Australian (and most overseas) studies have been undertaken with a relatively small number of respondents. For example, the 1991 Melbourne survey had 640 respondents, the 1967 survey had 504. Both employed face to face interviews. While the number of respondents is small, these surveys have claims to be 'scientific'. If their sample targets are met they can provide an overview of a population with a high degree of reliability, at best plus or minus 2.5%. The inherent limitation of such work is that the high cost per completed survey usually limits the sample, leaving little or no scope to examine sub-groups of interest. The 1991 Melbourne study, for example, included a total of 40 respondents who described themselves as Strictly Orthodox. Sub-groups of this size cannot be reliably disaggregated for analysis.

There is a second issue, independent of cost or sample size. A 'scientific' sample is only as reliable as the database from which the sample is drawn. Community databases will necessarily under-represent marginal groups. Further, acceptance of an invitation to participate in a survey differs across segments of the community, with the potential to compromise its claims to be 'scientific'.

If a random methodology is used to locate participants, as adopted in a number of American surveys which start without a database from which the sample may be drawn, then a very large number of contacts need to be initiated for each completed survey. The US 2000-2001 national survey took one year to administer and began with an initial sample of more than 1.2 million phone numbers. Some 180,000 people were contacted for 4500 completed interviews with Jewish adults, with a short version of the survey completed by an additional 650 individuals of Jewish background. On average each completed survey with a Jewish respondent required 1,500 calls for a total of 6.7 million dialings. Surveys of this nature are necessarily very expensive, with the cost of the US survey reaching more than US$6 million.

With such a low ratio of completed survey per potential respondent approached, even if pre-determined stratification targets are met there can be problems of reliability. With all of the resources at its disposal, the 2000-2001 American national survey did not succeed in meeting its targets in the first phase of surveying and in the second phase resorted to paying participants, introducing a further element of potential bias to the sample. A storm of controversy met the release of its findings.[16]

A further problem with random telephone surveying is that there is differential access to telephones across a population and increasingly segments of the population are unwilling to respond to surveys. Further, many people now only have mobile phones and a range of issues, including privacy laws and difficulty in establishing sample frames, preclude systematic surveying over mobile connection.

The Gen08 survey achieved over 6200 completed surveys in Australia and New Zealand – for a fraction of the cost of major overseas surveys. In place of payment to trained staff to administer and score the survey, the survey was self administered and scored. With a total of 144 questions, a number of which included a range of sub-questions, the survey was long and at the limit of self-administration in a general population. In Melbourne and Sydney, 87.8% (or 4479) of the questionnaires were completed online, 12.2% (or 622) in print.

[16] See, for example, Leonard Saxe and Charles Kadushin, 'Population study: questioning the validity', Jewish Week, September 2003.

Gen08 clearly engaged the interest and commitment of Australian Jews, for some 89% of those who began the online survey completed it, despite fears expressed at the pilot stage that completion rates would be well below 50%. The surveys completed in the print version were entered in the database by four project employees who worked together to ensure consistency in coding.

The validation of the survey depended on two factors. First, detailed demographic data on Australian Jews derived from the census, a source not available in the United States where there is no religion question in the census. American surveys, by far the most extensive and well funded in the Jewish world, expend much effort on establishing the basic demographic profile of the Jewish population. Such surveys are necessarily both demographic and attitudinal, and the survey itself contributes to establishing the basis for weights to be applied to the sample frame. In Australia demographic data is obtained independent of the survey. While census data is subject to interpretation, as only some 70% of the population indicate religion (an optional question), most estimates for the Jewish population are within a narrow range and the relativities for gender balance, age profile, qualification, income, residential pattern, place of birth, and a number of other demographic variables can be established with a large measure of certainty.

Prior to the Gen08 survey detailed analysis of the 2006 census was undertaken in Melbourne and Sydney, utilising customised data purchased from the Australian Bureau of Statistics. In common with survey practice, this data provided the basis for weighting of the Gen08 survey to accurately reflect the total Jewish population, utilising three key variables: gender, age and educational attainment. Due to large variation in the size of weights, the weights were trimmed to reduce the mean squared error of key outcome estimates. Weights that were greater than the median weight plus six times the inter-quartile range of the weights were made equal to that limit. A total of 67 weights (1.1% of the total) did not meet that criteria and were trimmed.

As a second means of checking the reliability of the achieved sample, results were examined across three respondent categories: those who (1) responded to an invitation to participate in the survey; (2) requested to participate and completed the survey online; (3) requested to participate and completed the print version of the survey. Through a category code embedded in passwords used by respondents to access the survey, and a code used to enter the print versions, it was possible to track categories of respondents. There was a fourth category employed, a random sample of invited participants, which yielded 805 completed surveys (15.8% of the total), but not at a level of statistical significance to warrant its use in this preliminary report.

Over 25,000 invitations to participate were mailed or emailed to all identified households using a database compiled for the survey in Melbourne and the database of the JCA (Jewish Communal Appeal) in Sydney.

In Melbourne, where there is currently no organisation with a comprehensive database of the Jewish population, three leading organisations (JCCV, UIA Victoria and Maccabi Victoria) provided access to their records on condition of strictest confidentiality, enabling a composite database of households to be compiled. These organisations were chosen because between them they provided the most comprehensive coverage available, with the Maccabi database most likely to include individuals who are relatively unaffiliated with the mainstream. This database was at no time removed from the offices of the organisations involved and once letters and labels were generated the database was destroyed. Likewise, all data from the JCA offices was used with strict confidentiality and no link could be made between individual identity and survey response.

Every available means was used, in addition to invitation by mail, to publicise the survey, including an advertising campaign conducted in the Australian Jewish News and the Hebrew-language Eton, Facebook, distribution of promotional cards with passwords at various functions and venues, and promotion through various email networks, both personal and organisational. The 21 JCA member organisations greatly assisted recruitment of participants amongst their membership. A special effort was made to ensure the participation of the marginalised and members of two immigrant groups whose involvement was known to present special challenges - those from the Former Soviet Union and Israel. Over 30 focus groups were held in Melbourne and Sydney prior to the commencement of surveying, in part to refine the survey instrument, but also to establish a broad range of contacts and build confidence in the project. A number of meetings were also held with key individuals. In Sydney, a letter from a rabbi was mailed to members of a large religious congregation with significant involvement by immigrants from the FSU and a significant effort was made to recruit FSU immigrants by JewishCare.

In Melbourne several Russian-speaking people were engaged to assist participation using the print version of the survey. In addition, in Melbourne two Ph.D. students (Anita Frayman and Ran Porat) worked to increase participation by the elderly and by those born in Israel.

A final objective was to ensure greater participation by young people. In addition to publicity at various venues, during Orientation Week in February 2009 in Melbourne and Sydney, in co-operation with the Australian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS) and Hillel, a small incentive payment (the payment of membership fees in the university student organisation, worth $10) was offered to encourage completion of the survey, either online or in the print version. A small incentive payment was made to AUJS and a Chabad group with contacts among youth across Australia. A number of prizes in raffles were offered; during the main period of surveying, those completing the survey online or in print were eligible to enter a draw to win one of three iPhones. In February 2009 university students completing the survey could enter a draw to win $50 shopping vouchers.

All this effort will be recognised as well and good, but in communities known for their critical inquiry and scepticism the first question to be asked relates to the reliability of the survey findings. What evidence, it will be asked, is there to indicate that that data is representative of views of Jewish Australians in the two cities considered in this report?

As a first step in responding to such legitimate questioning, the respondent profile was subject to analysis. Three respondent categories have been disaggregated to allow for comparison of respondent profiles and patterns of response. This examination, much of it too detailed to be included in this report of preliminary findings, discloses that respondents in the invited group have marginally higher socio-economic status and marginally higher representation of some overseas born groups; those who took the initiative to request a password to participate online are marginally younger, marginally more likely to be born in Australia and marginally more religiously identified. The main distinguishing factor across the three respondent frames relates, as to be expected, to age; those who requested to complete the survey in print form contain an older age cohort, a difference which is diluted somewhat by young people completing the print version of the survey during Orientation Week at their universities in February 2009. Again in keeping with an older age profile, the print version includes respondents of lower educational attainment and lower socio-economic profile, but with only marginal differentiation by other demographic categories.

Table 13: Respondent profile by respondent frame, Melbourne and Sydney

| | N | % | Year of birth | | Education | | Socio-economic status | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | Mean | Std. Dev. | Mean | Std. Dev. | Mean | Std. Dev. |
| Invited | 2914 | 57.1% | 1958.9 | 16.9 | 6.77 | 1.98 | 2.61 | 0.87 |
| Requested – online | 1565 | 30.7% | 1964.6 | 16.7 | 6.78 | 1.94 | 2.75 | 0.86 |
| Requested – print | 622 | 12.2% | 1947.1 | 25.0 | 5.68 | 2.29 | 2.81 | 0.88 |
| Total/Average | 5101 | 100% | 1959.2 | 18.7 | 6.65 | 2.04 | 2.68 | 0.87 |

| | Country of birth | | Identity: religious / secular | | Gender | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Mean | Std. Dev. | Mean | Std. Dev. | Mean | Std. Dev. |
| Invited | 3.93 | 3.74 | 5.23 | 1.83 | 1.53 | .499 |
| Requested – online | 3.69 | 3.84 | 5.17 | 1.91 | 1.56 | .496 |
| R Requested – print | 3.89 | 3.04 | 5.21 | 1.91 | 1.57 | .496 |
| Total/Average | 3.85 | 3.69 | 5.21 | 1.87 | 1.54 | .498 |

When answers to questions are disaggregated by respondent profile, the strongest finding is the similar pattern of response. There is limited variation between the two online respondent categories, more marked variation when comparison is made with print version respondents. Variation, to be subject to further analysis, appears to be explained in the respondent demographics, notably the age and educational variables, which may account for the higher proportion of the 'Don't know/ Decline to answer' and which explains much of the variation. It was also possible to leave questions unanswered in the print version (but not online), which also adds to the 'Decline to answer' category.

Table 14: How important is being Jewish is your life today? Cross-tabulated by respondent frame

| | Invited | Requested - online | Requested - print |
|---|---|---|---|
| Very important | 64.4% | 66.3% | 59.8% |
| Somewhat important | 28.1% | 25.1% | 22.0% |
| Not very important | 4.4% | 6.5% | 7.9% |
| Not at all important | 1.6% | 1.2% | 3.8% |
| Don't know/decline | 1.5% | 0.7% | 6.4% |

Table 15: When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel? Cross-tabulated by respondent frame

| | Invited | Requested - online | Requested - print |
|---|---|---|---|
| No view, not my business | 9.8% | 11.3% | 14.8% |
| Very pleased | 1.6% | 2.4% | 2.7% |
| Pleased with some reservations | 2.1% | 3.0% | 2.5% |
| Accepting or neutral | 24.6% | 21.9% | 18.3% |
| Feel some regret | 32.5% | 27.3% | 26.2% |
| Feel very considerable regret | 27.1% | 32.1% | 26.6% |
| Don't know/decline | 2.3% | 1.8% | 8.8% |

The last part of this analysis of respondent profile considers the extent to which the aggregated respondent categories match demographic indicators available in the 2006 census and data on school enrolments.

One important indicator is residential pattern. A failure to match the known residential pattern would indicate that the survey did not reach across the community; this failure to match the known distribution could be random, indicative of an unreliable sample, or concentrated in the regions of heavy Jewish concentration, indicating that the survey reached the core but not the periphery of the community. The following data (a table which plots distribution by postcode in Melbourne and a graph representing regional distribution in New South Wales) indicates that the survey succeeded in reaching across the Jewish population.

Table 16: Respondent location by postcode, 2006 Census and Gen08 compared, Melbourne

| | Estimated Jewish population 2006 Census | Proportion Jewish population 2006 Census | Gen08 Survey |
|---|---|---|---|
| Caulfield North 3161 | 8,841 | 16.1% | 18.2% |
| Caulfield South 3162 | 8,716 | 15.9% | 15.6% |
| St Kilda East/Balaclava 3183 | 5,291 | 9.6% | 9.1% |
| Bentleigh 3204 | 3,040 | 5.5% | 3.8% |
| Carnegie 3163 | 3,006 | 5.5% | 4.8% |
| Bentleigh East 3165 | 2,883 | 5.2% | 4.0% |
| Ripponlea 3185 | 2,580 | 4.7% | 4.8% |
| Toorak 3142 | 2,219 | 4.0% | 5.0% |
| Brighton East 3187 | 2,137 | 3.9% | 3.5% |
| Brighton 3186 | 1,144 | 2.1% | 2.4% |
| Malvern 3144 | 1,042 | 1.9% | 2.6% |
| Caulfield East 3145 | 908 | 1.7% | 2.3% |
| South Yarra 3141 | 903 | 1.6% | 1.4% |
| Elwood 3184 | 893 | 1.6% | 1.9% |
| Glen Iris 3146 | 773 | 1.4% | 2.0% |
| Armadale 3143 | 727 | 1.3% | 1.4% |
| Melbourne 3004 | 727 | 1.3% | 1.4% |
| Auburn 3123 | 620 | 1.1% | 1.3% |
| Kew 3101 | 577 | 1.1% | 1.3% |
| Hampton 3188 | 478 | 0.9% | 1.6% |
| Hawthorn 3122 | 401 | 0.7% | 0.4% |
| Doncaster 3108 | 367 | 0.7% | 0.5% |
| South Melbourne 3205 | 320 | 0.6% | 0.5% |
| Balwyn North 3104 | 315 | 0.6% | 0.3% |
| Camberwell 3124 | 284 | 0.5% | 0.7% |
| Hughesdale 3166 | 268 | 0.5% | 0.5% |
| Cheltenham 3192 | 264 | 0.5% | 0.4% |
| Doncaster East 3109 | 254 | 0.5% | 0.3% |
| Moorabbin 3189 | 229 | 0.4% | 0.3% |
| Total | 50,207 | 91.4% | 92.3% |

Figure 32: NSW Jewish population, residential location, 2006 Census and Gen08 compared

Four additional variables were considered:

- Male/female ratio: the survey respondent frame is within one percent of the census for Melbourne, within three percent for Sydney; for Melbourne, 46.5% of respondents were male (census 47.4%), female 53.4% (census 52.6%); for Sydney, 44.5% of respondents were male (census 47.4%), female 55.5% (census 52.6%).
- Age distribution: there is some over-representation for the age groups 18-24 and 55-64, under-representation of other groups, but the variance is within a relatively narrow range; thus combined Melbourne and Sydney, the age group 25-34 in the census was 16%, in the survey 15.1%; of those aged 35-44, the relative proportions were 15.5% (census) and 13.3% (survey); for 45-54, 18.7% and 16.9%.
- Birthplace: of the four major birthplace groups plus the UK-born, discussed in this report, the match is very close for three groups. Thus, for Melbourne there were exact matches for the UK and Israel-born, for South Africa-born the difference was 0.4%; for Sydney, the variance for UK and Israel-born was under 1%, for the large South African population there was a slight over-representation (21.0% in the census, 23.8% in the survey). There is an over representation of the Australia-born and an under representation of FSU-born in the survey; the census indicated that 45% of the Melbourne and 37% of the Sydney population was born in Australia, for the survey the proportions were 55% and 44%; the under-representation of the FSU was around 3%.

One additional cross-check was undertaken – day school attendance. An over-representation of survey respondents with day school education would again indicate that the survey had failed to reach across the community. It is estimated that in the past decade in any specific year some 60% of the school age population attended day schools, with a slightly higher number attending at the primary than the secondary level. The proportion attending day schools was lower in earlier decades, at around 40% in the 1980s in Sydney, closer to 60% in Melbourne where the day schools were developed earlier and had wider acceptance. It is difficult to exactly match these figures with the survey, as those who 'ever attended' a day school will be higher than those attending a day school in a specific year and the survey captured the former (or boosted) category.

For Melbourne, among the population aged 18-34, 69% of respondents attended a Jewish day school at primary level and 64% at secondary level. For Sydney, the proportion for those aged 18-34 was 57% at primary level and 57% at secondary level. Given that the data is not directly comparable, this finding indicates that the survey either very closely matches or marginally exceeds the expected level. Of all respondents aged 18-54, around 55% in Melbourne and 35% in Sydney had at least one year of day school attendance in Australia.

As has been remarked in the substantive part of this report, the survey findings for Melbourne and Sydney are either close to identical or vary within a narrow range, with a similar pattern of response in the two cities. This similarity is also evident in the demographic profile of respondents in the two cities. Thus the self-described economic status of respondents:

Table 17: Which of the following terms best describes your financial circumstances today?

| | Melbourne | Sydney |
|---|---|---|
| Prosperous | 7.0% | 7.1% |
| Living very comfortably | 33.3% | 33.9% |
| Living reasonably comfortably | 44.1% | 42.6% |
| Just getting along | 12.2% | 12.4% |
| Nearly poor | 1.1% | 1.0% |
| Poor | 0.6% | 0.6% |
| Don't know/decline to answer | 1.8% | 2.4% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |
| N | 3000 | 2101 |

The indicators considered above all point to the representative character of the achieved sample, but there is one additional criticism that may be made. The sample may be reliable for the engaged members of the community, for the closely affiliated, but it may not have reached the marginalised, despite the fact that it seems to have achieved a representative sample as judged against census and other statistical data. The following points may be made in response:

- The survey findings indicate that those of lower socio-economic status are less likely to be affiliated. As indicated in the immediately preceding table, some 14% of respondents in Melbourne and Sydney indicated that they were 'just getting along', 'nearly poor' or 'poor'. This compares with 17.7% in the four lowest household gross weekly income categories (nil to $499) as indicated by the 2006 census.
- 19% of respondents in Melbourne and 22% in Sydney indicated that they were 'only slightly' or 'not at all connected' to Jewish communal life, while a further 9% indicated that they were neutral with regard to their community engagement; thus there were between 1000 and 1500 respondents (depending on definition) in the two cities without close communal identification whose views are available for analysis.

These statistics point to the success of the survey in reaching a broad range of sub-groups within the community. Even if it is thought that the representation of marginal groups is too small, there is basis for analysis of relevant sub-groups. The number of disconnected respondents makes possible the section of the report dealing with this sub-group. It is known that the level of engagement of immigrants from the Former Soviet Union and Israel is at a lower level than for the Australia and South Africa-born. The survey was completed by 339 FSU-born and 295 Israel-born in Melbourne and Sydney. These sub-groups were also of a size sufficient for separate analysis, as evident in the discussion of recent immigrant groups in this report.

REPORT 1

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-2" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Gen17

JCA today tomorrow forever

MONASH University
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation

GEN17 AUSTRALIAN JEWISH COMMUNITY SURVEY

PRELIMINARY FINDINGS

DAVID GRAHAM & ANDREW MARKUS

Gen17

Research Partners

JCA today tomorrow forever

MONASH University
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation

funding Partners

JCA today tomorrow forever

GANDEL PHILANTHROPY

PRATT FOUNDATION

AJF Australian Jewish Funders

Besen Family FOUNDATION

CHER FAMILY FOUNDATION

JewishCare My Community. My Choice.

All rights reserved
© David Graham and Andrew Markus

First published 2018
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation
Faculty of Arts
Monash University Victoria 3800
https://arts.monash.edu/acjc/

And
JCA
140-146 Darlinghurst Rd
Darlinghurst NSW 2023
http://www.JCA.org.au

ISBN: 978-0-9945960-6-2

This work is copyright. Apart for any use permitted under the Copyright Act 1968, no part of it may be reproduced by any process without written permission from the publisher.
Requests and inquiries concerning reproduction rights should be directed to the publisher.

CONTENTS

| | |
|---|---|
| FOREWORD | 1 |
| ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS | 2 |
| AUTHORS | 3 |
| EXECUTIVE SUMMARY | 4 |
| INTRODUCTION | 7 |
| DEMOGRAPHIC OVERVIEW OF AUSTRALIA'S JEWISH POPULATION | 9 |
| JEWISH IDENTITY | 12 |
| JEWISH INTERMARRIAGE | 24 |
| JEWISH EDUCATION | 33 |
| JEWISH COMMUNAL LIFE | 42 |
| SOCIOECONOMIC WELLBEING AND DISADVANTAGE | 46 |
| CHARITABLE GIVING | 50 |
| IMMIGRANTS | 55 |
| ISRAEL | 60 |
| ANTISEMITISM | 67 |
| APPENDIX 1: CHANGE OVER TIME | 72 |
| APPENDIX 2: WORLD COMPARISONS | 75 |
| APPENDIX 3: METHODOLOGY | 78 |
| APPENDIX 4: RESPONDENT PROFILE | 85 |

FOREWORD

Whilst having the ninth largest Jewish population in the world, the Australian Jewish community has again punched well above its weight in delivering Gen17: Australia's Jewish Community Survey. With 8,621 responses nationally, it is not only the largest such study ever conducted in Australia but one of the largest samples ever collected across the globe in a national Jewish community study.

Even before considering the findings, this highlights the success, nature and engagement of our dedicated community. A survey is only as good as the willingness of participants to complete it. When a survey requires as much time from each of the respondents as this one, their diligence, and the importance they attached to the survey, must be acknowledged.

Further we can be confident that the findings provide insights into the entire community beyond those who are communally active, by reason of the meticulous approach taken by the lead authors in applying appropriate weights to the final dataset.

The original Gen08 report was ground-breaking in its findings and in the quality of data-driven insights it provided into Australia's Jewish community. Gen08 was a strategic treasure to JCA and NSW's Jewish communal organisations. I understand that it was also recognised as an important resource by a range of Melbourne organisations, as testified by the funding received in Melbourne from major philanthropists and Jewish Care Victoria. JCA proudly partnered with Monash University on Gen17, an evolved iteration of the Gen08 survey and report.

JCA's vision is of a sustainable, vibrant and secure Jewish community. Like most, if not all, Jewish communities around the world we spend countless hours around the boardroom and Shabbat tables, dreaming and debating about the kind of community we want to create for our future generations – an engaging and empathetic community, enriched by core Jewish values. To realise our aspirations and plan more effectively — even to dream more fully — we must understand who we are in the here and now. What drives our community today? Who are we as Jews? What are our communal needs? How do we give back? What matters to us? How do we relate to one another? It is these questions, and so many more, that the Gen17 survey has endeavoured to answer.

The results of past studies have helped shape our communal agendas, catalysing the creation of new initiatives and realigning priorities. In Sydney, programs such as Youth 2 Israel (Y2i) and JBridge were direct outcomes from the insights provided by Gen08. Our hope is that the findings from this survey will inform strategic planning and also prove helpful to synagogues, day schools, and other Jewish service providers, funders, and grassroots organisations; regional, national, and international Jewish organisations; public officials and the media; and scholars, students, and the public at large.

It is with pride, gratitude, and a sense of accomplishment that we invite you to read the findings of Gen17: Australia's Jewish Community Survey.

Sincerely,

Stephen Chipkin
JCA President

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is based on data from The Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey, which was conducted by JCA (Jewish Communal Appeal) in Sydney and the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation (ACJC), Monash University, Melbourne, with data gathering managed by Research Now.

JCA and ACJC are particularly indebted to our donors for their communal leadership and generous financial support, without which the survey would not have been possible. In NSW, JCA was able to fully fund its equal share of the costs of the project thanks to the generous support of the Education Heritage Foundation. In Victoria, we thank Gandel Philanthropy, Pratt Foundation, Besen Family Foundation, Cher Family Foundation, JewishCare Victoria and Australian Jewish Funders.

We also acknowledge and thank the many Jewish community organisations across Australia and their executives for their assistance in developing and refining the survey questions, as well as their assistance in publicising the survey.

In NSW, we wish to sincerely thank all the staff and volunteers without whom this report would never have been achieved. We specifically wish to thank Jillian Segal AM, Peter Philippsohn OAM, Peter Wertheim AM, Dr Leanne Piggott, Danny Goldberg, Stephen Chipkin, Bruce Goldsmith, Alain Hasson, Nicola Zeh-Katz, Shari Lowe, Elyse Chiert, Ashleigh Levett, Greg Einfeld, and William Nemesh.

In Melbourne, we gratefully acknowledge the expertise and generous commitment of time of the Melbourne Planning Committee members Adina Bankier-Karp, Dr Anita Frayman, Dr John Goldlust, Emmanuel Gruzman, Professor Andrew Markus, Dr Miriam Munz and Dr Ran Porat. Confidential access to databases for email and postal contact was made possible by Jewish Care Victoria. Tanya Munz, the Research Associate on this project, co-ordinated the roll out and promotion of this survey, undertook data analysis and designed this report. Additional assistance in project administration and promotion was provided by Adina Bankier-Karp, Emmanuel Gruzman, Karen Klein, Dani Miller, Dr Miriam Munz, Gabi Newman and Dr Ran Porat. We wish to also thank community members of Melbourne, Perth, Brisbane and Adelaide who acted as project ambassadors, promoting the survey to their networks.

Dr David Graham and Professor Andrew Markus Lead Authors

AUTHORS

The Gen17 project is the result of collaboration over a three-year period between the lead authors and their respective institutions in Sydney and Melbourne. As such, this report is also a collaborative effort and each centre focused on specific sections. David Graham was the principal author of the following: Demographic overview of Australia's Jewish population, Socioeconomic wellbeing and disadvantage, Jewish education, Jewish intermarriage, Charitable giving, World comparisons and the Methodology. Andrew Markus was the principal author of the sections on: Immigrants, Antisemitism, Israel, Communal life and Change over time. Both authors contributed to the section on Jewish identity.

Dr David Graham is a research consultant to JCA in Sydney. He is an Honorary Associate at the Department of Hebrew, Biblical and Jewish Studies, University of Sydney and Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Jewish Policy Research (JPR) in the UK. He has published widely for academic, professional and general interest audiences both nationally and internationally on the topics of Jewish identity and demography. His most recent publications have utilised UK census and survey data to analyse intermarriage and Israeli migration and he has worked on Australian census data to produce two socio-demographic analyses of that Jewish community. He holds a DPhil in geography from the University of Oxford.

Professor Andrew Markus is the Pratt Foundation Research Professor in Jewish Civilisation and Director of the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University. He is a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia and has published extensively in the fields of Australian race relations, immigration history and community attitudes. Andrew was the lead researcher on the Gen08 Jewish community survey and heads the Scanlon Foundation social cohesion research program, which has conducted ten national surveys since 2007. His recent publications include Australians Today: The Australia@2015 Scanlon Foundation Survey and Mapping Social Cohesion: The Scanlon Foundation Surveys 2017.

Glossary

| | |
|---|---|
| ABS | Australian Bureau of Statistics |
| ACJC | Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation |
| FSU | Former Soviet Union (encompasses Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Estonia, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, and Uzbekistan) |
| JCA | Jewish Communal Appeal known as 'JCA' |
| JDS | Jewish day school |
| RoA | Rest of Australia |

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Jewish identity

Jewish identity is a deeply personal attribute and there is no such thing as a 'typical Australian Jew'. Gen17 provides a rare, empirical glimpse into the diversity of Australian Jewish identity and Jewish life and of undercurrents of change within it. For example, by comparing the type of Jewish upbringing respondents have experienced with their current positions, we see that overall there has been a shift away from Traditional/Orthodox streams towards more progressive and secular streams. Nevertheless, Jewish identity is keenly felt and wide-spread. The identification markers that resonate most broadly, and are therefore the most uniting, chime with basic human instincts like justice and fairness. Thus, almost all Jews regard remembering the Holocaust, upholding strong moral and ethical behaviour, and combatting antisemitism, as being important aspects of their own sense of Jewish identity. Yet on matters of religious belief and doctrine, such as 'Believing in God', acceptance is far less universal and more likely to engender differences of opinion across groups. Whilst overall, less than half of respondents (46%) regard 'Believing in God' to be important to their Jewish identity, among the Modern Orthodox Jews it is 81% and among the Secular Jews it is 9%.

In terms of Jewish behaviour, Passover seder attendance is the most commonly observed Jewish practice, with 90% of Jews attending most years. Almost two out of three (63%) Jews usually attend a Friday night (Shabbat) meal with their family, but on more restrictive and less socially-oriented practices there is rather less engagement; less than one in three Jews (29%) lives in a home for which only kosher meat is purchased.

Like fraternal twins, the Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney, Australia's two dominant Jewish population centres, exhibit similar characteristics in a great many respects but they are not identical, and this is most apparent in terms of Jewish identity. Compared with Sydney, Melbourne exhibits higher levels of religious behaviour and a generally greater intensity in its sense of Jewish belonging and belief. Though many Jews in Sydney are religious, and a majority exhibit a very strong sense of communal belonging, the intensity of lived Jewish life in a traditional sense, remains stronger in Melbourne than in Sydney.

Intermarriage

Almost two out of three respondents (63%) say they are concerned about intermarriage in Australia. Fewer (55%) say they would feel regret if their child married a non-Jew, although this, like so many variables, is sensitive to one's religious identification. Thus, most (84%) Strictly Orthodox Jews would feel regret if a family member married out, compared with half (54%) of Conservative and a quarter (26%) of Secular Jews.

Almost a quarter of Jews living in couples have a non-Jewish partner (23%), although among married couples this proportion is lower (17%). But the overall Australian intermarriage rate, revealed here possibly for the first time, was 33% for the period 2010 to 2017. That is, since 2010, out of every three marriages involving at least one Jew, two were in-marriages and one was an out-marriage. Although this is almost double the rate of the 1990s (at 17%) it is just over half the rate in the United States (58%). It is higher in Sydney (35%) than in Melbourne (26%), and higher among Secular Jews (62%) than Progressive/Reform (49%) or Traditional Jews (13%). Intermarriage is rare among Orthodox Jews.

Jewish education

Jewish education, in the broadest sense, has been widely experienced by respondents. For example, over half (54%) have attended a youth movement and half have attended a Jewish day school (51%). Most men (84%) have had a Bar Mitzvah. Overall, the younger the respondent, the more Jewish educational experiences they are likely to have had.

In terms of Jewish day schooling, respondents believe that its main advantage is to 'Strengthen Jewish identity', but attitudes deviate by city. Respondents in Melbourne are far more likely to express a preference for Jewish schooling despite being more likely than Sydney respondents to say the main disadvantage of Jewish schools is 'High cost of fees'. Moreover, Sydney respondents are more likely to believe Jewish schools 'Provide a sense of belonging to the Jewish community' whereas Melbourne respondents are more likely to believe they 'Provide strong Jewish education'.

One out of three households (32%) says the cost of fees prevented them from sending at least one child to a Jewish school. And among households which currently have a child in a Jewish school, over half (55%) say doing so entails a significant or major financial sacrifice for them.

Communal life

A large majority (70%) of respondents indicate a sense of connectedness to the Jewish community, but among those who do not, the most likely reason is their 'secular outlook/lifestyle'. Out of a list of 13 services provided by the Jewish community, respondents ranked helping those with 'Infirmity due to old age' in first place. And respondents say Jewish communal life can best be improved or changed by increasing 'Jewish day school fee assistance' (43%) and reducing 'religious division between Jews' (42%).

Socioeconomic wellbeing

We know that in a national context, the Jewish community as a whole is economically thriving, but not everyone is so fortunate. One in five Jews (19%) assesses their own financial circumstances as being marginal—they feel they are 'just getting along' or else are nearly poor. This financial strain closely follows a typical life course which is no doubt related to the financial pressures of childrearing: rising from early adulthood, peaking in the late forties and thereafter declining and flattening out. But the data also reveal the extent of material deprivation in the community with one in 20 (6%) Jews saying they are on, or near, the breadline having had to reduce meal size or having not been able to afford medicine in the previous 12 months.

Charitable giving

Jewish charity, often referred to by the Hebrew term tzedakah, meaning justice or righteousness, is central to Australian Jewish life, testified by the fact that eight out of ten (78%) Jews say that 'donating money to charity' is important to their own sense of Jewish identity. And it is demonstrated by a strong commitment to giving. In NSW and ACT, 86% personally donated money in the previous 12 months and one in five (42%) donated up to $500. That charity starts at home is no less true of Australian Jews with 45% prioritising 'Jewish charities in Australia' and 19% prioritising 'Israel charities'. The amount people give, and to whom, is driven by a variety of factors but three key ones are income, age and level of religious observance. Whilst wealthier respondents give more, this is also the case the older they are. Similarly, religious background also matters: outside NSW and ACT, 68% of Modern Orthodox Jews gave $500 or more to charity compared with 42% of Traditional and 29% of Secular Jews.

Immigrants

Today, the majority of the community's immigrant population hails from the Former Soviet Union (FSU), South Africa, and Israel. Of those arriving since 1980, more than half indicated they came to Australia for family reasons, such as joining a partner. Immigrants from the FSU have experienced the most challenging settlement issues including difficulties with language (72%), inadequate income (48%) as well as difficulty making friends in the community. This too was also indicated by two out of five (38%) Israeli immigrants. Nevertheless, most (91%) FSU immigrants indicated that they were more satisfied with their life in Australia than in their former homeland, as were most South African (80%) and Israeli (69%) immigrants.

Israel

Israel is a strong unifying theme for Australian Jews. Among Melbourne and Sydney respondents, the vast majority (88%) feel a personal responsibility to ensure that the Jewish State 'continues to exist'. This is also characterised by very high levels of connectedness with 92% having visited Israel and two out of three (66%) having close family living there.

Nevertheless strong attachment does not equate to blind support or cross-communal unity on every issue. On a list of 18 key Jewish identity markers, 'Visiting Israel' ranks in 8th position. Moreover, almost half (47%) of respondents say there is too much corruption in Israel's political system. There is mixed evidence as to whether younger generations are more 'distant' from Israel than older generations: fewer in the younger age groups feel personally responsible for Israel's continued existence, but in terms of identifying as Zionist, a label close to seven out of ten (69%) self-ascribe to, younger generations identify as strongly as their elders.

Further, opinion is divided on several key issues, especially in terms of Jewish background. Thus, while almost two out of three (64%) say Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel's society, the figure is 90% among Progressive and 43% among Modern Orthodox respondents. And whilst 58% of respondents agree Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for its security, 34% of Secular Jews share this view.

Antisemitism

Opinion in the community is divided about how big a problem antisemitism may or may not be in Australia today. Whilst a majority (57%) believe it is not a big problem, more than two out of five (43%) feel it is a (fairly or very) big problem. Even so, in terms of actual antisemitic experiences, these are most likely to have occurred online, with half (51%) of respondents having encountered antisemitism on Facebook and two out of five (42%) encountering it in online discussion and comment forums over the last 12 months. As many as eight out of ten (80%) Jews aged in their twenties have seen antisemitic content on Facebook. Asked whether they took any action following such an experience, half (53%) responded by replying or reporting it, though almost half (47%) took no action. In terms of more personal—as opposed to virtual—experience of antisemitism, almost one in ten Jews (9%) indicated that they had witnessed or experienced verbal insults and harassment over the previous 12 months, with the highest level being among Strictly Orthodox Jews aged under 40 (31%).

INTRODUCTION

The Gen17 Jewish Community Survey was a nationwide study designed to gather detailed information about Australia's Jewish community. This Preliminary Findings Report provides insight into selected key findings that have emerged from a preliminary data analysis. It has been designed to demonstrate the potential breadth and value of Gen17 data to the many organisations and Jewish service providers operating in the community. The present analysis barely scratches the surface of the information that is potentially available from this survey and more in-depth, topic-based reports are planned for the near future.

About the Gen17 survey

Australia's Jewish community is fortunate to be able to benefit from a national census that includes a question on religion and which takes place every five years. This invaluable data source has provided a plethora of organisations with a detailed understanding of the socio-demographic makeup of the Jewish population that could not be obtained through any other method[1]. However, the census is an instrument of government planning, not of Jewish communal planning, and the data it gathers can only tell so much about the Jewish community. For example, the census is silent on key matters of Jewish belief, belonging and behaviour, and therefore overlooks the complexity of Jewish identity with its mix of religious, ethnic and cultural traits. Moreover, it fails to inform us about day-to-day Jewish life in Australia, information that is crucial to ensuring the health, welfare, safety and happiness of Jewish Australians in the future.

Survey data from Gen17, especially when combined with census information, provide community leaders, service providers and many other interested parties with an extremely powerful empirical tool for planning, appraising and delivering products and services aimed at the Jewish community. Without reliable data, planners are forced to fall back on anecdote and intuition in order to understand and provide for this community; in any other context, such an approach would be deemed inadequate and wasteful.

Gen17 covers a wide variety of topics aimed at delivering information about all major aspects of the Jewish Australian experience. For a population with a significant migrant component, it explores migratory histories, languages and experiences. For a community committed to furthering Jewish life it covers Jewish schooling, Jewish education, Jewish student experience, Jewish identity, Jewish partnerships as well as aspects of Jewish communal life from fundraising to volunteering. For a caring community it investigates child care, health and welfare, socioeconomics and poverty. And for a politically engaged community it provides data on attitudes towards and engagement with Israel, experience of antisemitism, the Holocaust, as well as data about life in Australia more generally.

Goals of Gen17

A project of this scale is a complex and expensive exercise and therefore only happens infrequently. In the past, large-scale community studies have been limited to the state level,[2] and it was only in 2008 that the first attempt to survey the community on a national scale took place with Gen08.[3] In subsequent years, a number of monographs utilising Gen08 have been published, on topics including Jewish Continuity, Education, Poverty, Antisemitism, and the Elderly[4]. The present study, carried out almost a decade later, has built on that work and the experience gained by undertaking it.

---

Note: The online links listed in these footnotes are as accessed on 8 March 2018.

[1] For a detailed analysis of the 2011 Census data see Graham D 2014 The Jewish population of Australia: Key findings from the 2011 Census, Monash University Melbourne and JCA Sydney

[2] Encel S and Buckley B 1978 (first published 1972) The New South Wales Jewish Community, New South Wales University Press; Goldlust J 1993 The Melbourne Jewish Community: A Needs Assessment Study, Australian Government Publishing Service, Canberra

[3] Markus A, Jacobs N and Aronov T 2009 2008-09 Jewish Population Survey, Preliminary Findings: Melbourne & Sydney, Monash University

[4] See http://artsonline.monash.edu.au/gen08/ to gain free access to these and other Gen08 reports

From its inception, a central aim of the Gen17 project team was to ensure the widest range of communal voices were heard and, where possible, accommodated in the questionnaire. Major Jewish charities and communal organisations in Australia were consulted in the preparatory stages of this project to ensure, as far as possible, that the data are relevant and valuable.

Another central aim was to deliver high-quality data within the limitations of communal financial resources. It was important not only for the data to be broadly representative but also for the dataset to be sufficiently large to facilitate the highly detailed analytical work that will benefit the widest array of Jewish subgroups and organisations.

Note that a large part of this report presents an overview of findings using the consolidated Australian dataset, in other sections analysis is narrowed to Melbourne and Sydney, where most of the Jewish population resides, to allow for more precise analysis of change between the earlier Gen08 survey and Gen17. As a result, there are minor differences in reported findings as indicated, some applicable to the Australian sample, others to the narrower focus on Melbourne and Sydney. In every instance the geographical focus is clearly indicated.

Technical details

Gen17 was carried out online between February and May 2017. It was conducted jointly by JCA in Sydney and the ACJC at Monash University in Melbourne.[5] The total sample size is 8,621, an enormous number when compared with a number of international studies; for example, the Pew Research Center 2013 survey of American Jews utilised a sample of 3,475 and the 2013 JPR study of British Jews a sample 3,736 respondents.[6] Gen17 includes 4,571 households which can be identified in the data due to the use of a pioneering filtering mechanism implemented in the survey and which did not rely on the use of personal addresses information.

Table 1: Gen17 dataset - Unique household counts and individual counts by state (unweighted)

| | UNIQUE HOUSEHOLDS | TOTAL INDIVIDUALS |
|---|---|---|
| New South Wales | 2,072 | 3,938 |
| Victoria | 2,136 | 4,109 |
| Queensland | 89 | 138 |
| South Australia | 42 | 56 |
| Western Australia | 140 | 249 |
| Tasmania | 20 | 29 |
| Northern Territory | 5 | 7 |
| Australian Capital Territory | 67 | 95 |
| Total | 4,571 | 8,621 |

Unless otherwise stated, the survey data presented in this report have been weighted. A detailed methodological chapter is included at the end of this report (p78) explaining the sampling procedure and the approach taken to weighting the final dataset.

[5] JCA (https://www.jca.org.au/) and ACJC (https://arts.monash.edu/acjc/)
[6] Pew Research Center 2013 Portrait of Jewish Americans, Findings from a Pew Research Center Survey of U.S. Jews p119; Graham et al 2014 Jews in the United Kingdom in 2013: Preliminary findings from the National Jewish Community Survey, JPR p41

DEMOGRAPHIC OVERVIEW OF AUSTRALIA'S JEWISH POPULATION

MAIN FINDINGS

- There are estimated to be 113,000 Jews in Australia and the majority (87%) lives in Victoria or New South Wales (NSW)
- The age profile of the Jewish population is slightly older than the general population and contains a large cohort of 'baby boomers' currently entering retirement
- Just over half the population is Australian-born with the major immigrant groups since the 1970s coming from the Former Soviet Union, South Africa, and Israel
- Relative to the general Australian population, Jews have above average levels of educational qualifications and above average incomes, although there are also significant pockets of poverty

In the following section we outline some of the key demographic determinants of the Jewish community based on findings from the 2011 Census. Although 2016 Census data were available at the time of writing, they have not been reproduced in this section due to concerns about the potential impact of changes to the religion question formatting between 2011 and 2016. (A review of the impact of these changes on the 2016 Census is planned for the near future.) Moreover, since evidence outside the census leads us to expect to find that the community as a whole did not undergo significant demographic change between 2011 and 2016, we believe the 2011 data remain accurate for our present purposes.

Geographical distribution

Australia's Jewish population was estimated to number 112,000 people in 2011 and constituted 0.5% of the national population. A more recent estimate revises the figure to 113,000.[7] The community is principally bimodal with 87% of the population living in Victoria or New South Wales. Within Victoria, 98% of Jews live in Melbourne, and in NSW 95% of Jews live in Sydney.

Figure 1: Proportionate distribution of the total Australian Jewish population by state and territory

Source: ABS 2011 Census

[7] As published in Graham D 2014 The Jewish population of Australia: Key findings from the 2011 Census, Monash University Melbourne and JCA Sydney p2; Dashefsky A, DellaPergola S, and Sheskin I 2016 World Jewish Population, 2016 Berman Jewish Databank, p23

Age and sex

The Jewish population is slightly older than the general Australian population. In 2011, 23% of Jews were aged under 20 years old compared to 26% in the general population, and 7% of Jews were aged 80 years or over compared with 4% generally.

The Jewish population's age distribution has a relatively high number of people aged in their fifties and early sixties—these are 'baby boomers' born in the years following the Second World War, many of whom have already entered retirement. There is a smaller peak of people aged in their late thirties who are the children of the baby boomers which in demographic terminology is an echo. We can also see a second echo at the base of the graph where a third peak occurs; these are the boomers' grandchildren.

Figure 2: Age-sex pyramid for the Jewish population

Source: ABS 2011 Census

Birthplace

Australia's Jewish population has benefited from several waves of migration that have contributed to a steady increase in its size over the last century. Compared with other Jewish diaspora populations, Australia's community contains a very high proportion of migrants. In 2011, just over half of the Jewish population was Australian-born compared with 81% in the UK[8]. The largest migrant group was South African born accounting for one in seven of Australia's Jewish population and almost one in five in NSW.

[8] ONS 2011 Census Table DC2207

Table 2: Country of birth by state

| | NSW | VICTORIA | WESTERN AUSTRALIA | REST OF AUSTRALIA | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Australia | 48% | 57% | 41% | 49% | 52% |
| South Africa | 19% | 8% | 28% | 7% | 14% |
| Former Soviet Union | 6% | 10% | 1% | 2% | 8% |
| Israel | 5% | 7% | 7% | 9% | 6% |
| UK | 5% | 3% | 10% | 11% | 5% |
| Other | 16% | 15% | 13% | 22% | 16% |
| Total | 100% | 100% | 100% | 100% | 100% |

* Columns may not sum to 100% due to rounding

Source: ABS 2011 Census. Data exclude inadequately described and not stated responses

Economic indicators

The Jewish community has an above average level of educational achievement with 36% overall having completed a bachelor degree or above compared with 15% among Australians generally.

Similarly, in terms of personal income, Jews are more likely to be in the upper brackets with 18% having an annual personal income of $104,000 or more compared with 7% generally. This is also reflected in data on family income where Jews are considerably more likely to be in the upper income brackets and considerably less likely to be in the lower income brackets.

Figure 3: Weekly total family income, Jewish population and remainder of the Australian population

JEWISH IDENTITY

MAIN FINDINGS

- Gen17 considers differences within the streams of Judaism from the perspective of individual community members. It considers what it means to be a Jewish person who identifies, for example, as Modern Orthodox, Traditional, Progressive, or Secular in the Australia of 2017.
- One indication of difference in attitude is provided by a segment of the survey that asked for indication of the importance of eighteen attitudinal statements and markers of identity 'for your own sense of Jewish identity.' The highest level of strong and consistent positive response were indicated for 'upholding strong moral and ethical behaviour,' 'remembering the Holocaust,' 'sharing Jewish festivals with your family,' and 'combatting antisemitism'.
- As expected, the lowest level of agreement was in response to statements concerning religious belief and practice. These markers of identity find greatest difference within the community, with a range from above 90% strong positive indicated by the Strictly Orthodox (when asked, for example, concerning the importance of religious law or prayer) to less than 10% strong positive for some aspects of religious observance and belief among Conservative, Progressive, non-denominational, and Secular.
- When asked about the importance of 'being Jewish,' 96% of Strictly Orthodox indicated that it is a 'central element of my life,' 62% Modern Orthodox, 38% Conservative, 30% Traditional, 23% Progressive, 14% non-denominational, and 10% Secular.
- The largest Jewish stream by current self-identification is 'Traditional' (30%) although more people grew up in this stream (36%). In general, the direction of 'switching' from the position of one's upbringing to one's current position is away from Traditional/Orthodox streams towards more progressive and non-religious/Secular streams, i.e. a secularising trend.

One of the key advantages of a survey like Gen17 is that it allows us to explore the identity of Jews in a way that is simply not possible using census or other administrative datasets. Jewish identity is complex and multifaceted and therefore it is necessary to include a wide variety of questions about Jewish belief, belonging and behaviour in order to obtain a detailed picture of what being Jewish means to those who identify as Jews in Australia today.

There are differences on a broad range of issues within the Jewish population. The eight major Jewish day schools in Melbourne, each with distinctive values and observances, exemplify these differences.

Gen17 considers these differences not from the perspective of theology and interpretations of religious law, but from the perspective of individual community members. It seeks to bring understanding to the lived reality; it considers what it means to be a Jewish person who self-identifies, for example, as Modern Orthodox or Progressive or Secular in the Australia of 2017. It seeks to answer the often-asked question – 'what does it mean to be a Traditional Jew in the contemporary world?' Survey findings are necessarily in terms of probability—the likelihood of a person who identifies with a specific stream of Judaism holding to a view on a specific issue or observing a religious practice.

First, the number of adherents. We can use the Gen17 data to derive estimates of the numerical size of key Jewish sub-groups or 'streams' in the community. The figures in Table 3 are based on self-assessed responses to the question, 'how would you describe your current religious identification?' and are based on the assumption that there are about 85,000 Jewish adults (aged 18 and above) in Australia. It is emphasised that these are only estimates, and a numerical range (from minimum to maximum) is indicated.

Table 3: Streams of Judaism, estimated numbers of adults and proportions, Australia, 2017

| SELF-IDENTIFIED STREAM OF JUDAISM | ESTIMATED MINIMUM (NUMBER) | ESTIMATED MAXIMUM (NUMBER) | ESTIMATED PROPORTION |
|---|---|---|---|
| Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | 3,400 | 4,200 | 4% |
| Modern Orthodox | 14,100 | 15,400 | 18% |
| Traditional | 23,700 | 25,400 | 30% |
| Conservative | 2,600 | 3,300 | 3% |
| Progressive | 8,800 | 10,000 | 11% |
| No-denomination, just Jewish | 9,300 | 10,500 | 12% |
| Secular | 16,200 | 17,600 | 21% |
| Mixed religion (Jewish and another religion) | 800 | 1,200 | 1% |
| Total | 78,900 | 87,600 | 100% |

* The lower and upper bounds are 95% confidence limits

A sufficient number of survey respondents identifying as adherents of the different streams of Judaism were obtained by the Gen17 survey to enable analysis of the distribution of attitudes and religious practice within the major streams of Judaism.

In developing weights for Gen17, synagogue membership data were collected, these being a key baseline indicator of Jewish affiliation that are measurable and independent of the survey and census processes. The data were stratified in three ways: Affiliated Orthodox, Affiliated Non-Orthodox and Unaffiliated. In this way it was possible to redress the inevitable oversampling of more engaged Jews that a communal survey such as this will achieve (see Methodology on page 78).

Given the large number of respondents, it has been possible to analyse sub-groups within the different streams, for example by gender and age. Some of this analysis is presented in this preliminary report, but the scope for detailed analysis will be fully utilised in reports to be developed on the model of the specialised Gen08 reports.

Jewish identity

There are various approaches that can be taken to unpacking the complexity of Jewish identity within the confines of a quantitative survey. One of the approaches adopted in the survey was to present respondents with eighteen attitudinal statements and markers of identity, randomised so that each respondent saw the questions in a difference order, and to ask respondents to indicate its importance or unimportance 'to your own sense of Jewish identity.' Each statement provided six response options, 'very important', 'fairly important', fairly unimportant', 'very unimportant', 'don't know,' and 'prefer not to say'. The following discussion focuses on the strongest level of positive response, i.e. 'very important', providing insight into the extent of differentiation with regard to firmly held views within the Jewish population. Tables are, however, provided to allow for separate consideration of both strong positive and the combined strong and second level positive responses. (See Tables 4 and 5)

Of the eighteen statements and markers of identity, the highest level of strong positive response ('very important') across the streams of Judaism was obtained in answer to four markers, each of which obtained above 60% of respondents indicating 'very important'. These were, in rank order, 'upholding strong moral and ethical behaviour,' 'remembering the Holocaust,' 'sharing Jewish festivals with your family,' and 'combatting antisemitism'. For example, the range for respondents indicating that 'remembering the Holocaust' is 'very important' for their identity was sixteen points – from 64%-65% (Strictly Orthodox, Secular) to 80% (Traditional).

Three additional statements obtained agreement that they were 'very important', averaging above 50% among respondents; these related to belonging to a Jewish community, identification with the Jewish people world-wide, and 'marrying another Jew'. Among Secular Jews, however, less than one-third agreed that these considerations were 'very important,' and only one-third identifying as Progressive or non-denominational agreed that 'marrying another Jew' was 'very important.'

Another seven statements obtained average strong positive response in a relatively low range, 35%-37% of respondents; these related to learning about Jewish history and culture, Israel connectedness, social justice, and support for charities. A statement concerning 'supporting social justice causes' obtained relatively minor variation across the different streams of Judaism, from a low of 28% (Strictly Orthodox) to a high of 44%-45% (Conservative, Progressive).

The lowest strong positive average was obtained in response to four statements concerning religious belief and practice. As was to be expected, strong positive response was very high, above 90%, among the Strictly Orthodox. It was, however, relatively low at 42% among those identifying as Modern Orthodox, and below 15% among other forms of identification – it was at 12% among Traditional, 10% Progressive, and 2% Secular. The range for 'observing Halacha (Jewish law)' was 98 percentage points - indicated as very important - by 98% Strictly Orthodox, 41% Modern Orthodox, 6% Traditional, 7% Conservative, 3% Progressive and non-denominational, and 0% Secular.

The following graph provides an overview of the pattern of response. This is followed by findings by stream of Judaism provided in Tables 4 and 5.

Figure 4: 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?' Percent reporting 'Very important' and 'Fairly important', Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

Table 4: 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?' Response: 'Very important', by self-described religious identity, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

| | Total | Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Conservative | Progressive/ Reform | No denomination - just Jewish | Non-practising/ Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Upholding strong moral and ethical behaviour | 75% | 96% | 86% | 79% | 80% | 78% | 68% | 60% |
| Remembering the Holocaust | 73% | 65% | 75% | 80% | 69% | 69% | 71% | 64% |
| Sharing Jewish festivals with your family | 65% | 94% | 87% | 79% | 74% | 64% | 44% | 35% |
| Combatting antisemitism | 63% | 51% | 68% | 71% | 67% | 62% | 62% | 50% |
| Group average | 69% | 76% | 79% | 77% | 72% | 68% | 61% | 52% |
| Belonging to a Jewish community | 58% | 96% | 85% | 71% | 72% | 61% | 40% | 25% |
| Feeling part of the Jewish people worldwide | 57% | 82% | 75% | 67% | 66% | 57% | 50% | 31% |
| Marrying another Jew | 51% | 99% | 86% | 66% | 52% | 33% | 34% | 15% |
| Group average | 55% | 92% | 82% | 68% | 63% | 50% | 41% | 24% |
| Learning about Jewish history | 48% | 68% | 62% | 49% | 55% | 41% | 43% | 36% |
| Jewish cultural experiences (Jewish music, literature, art) | 26% | 23% | 29% | 28% | 32% | 27% | 23% | 20% |
| Group average | 37% | 45% | 45% | 38% | 43% | 34% | 33% | 28% |
| Visiting Israel | 47% | 45% | 66% | 54% | 54% | 39% | 39% | 29% |
| Supporting Israel financially | 26% | 36% | 43% | 34% | 30% | 21% | 21% | 12% |
| Group average | 36% | 41% | 54% | 44% | 42% | 30% | 30% | 20% |
| Donating money to charity | 39% | 89% | 61% | 45% | 45% | 37% | 28% | 19% |
| Supporting social justice causes | 36% | 28% | 34% | 35% | 44% | 45% | 37% | 37% |
| Volunteering for charitable causes | 31% | 60% | 47% | 34% | 35% | 36% | 22% | 17% |
| Group average | 35% | 59% | 47% | 38% | 41% | 39% | 29% | 24% |
| Believing in God | 27% | 98% | 58% | 27% | 25% | 20% | 12% | 5% |
| Prayer | 15% | 93% | 39% | 9% | 13% | 11% | 5% | 2% |
| Observing halacha (Jewish law) | 14% | 98% | 41% | 6% | 7% | 3% | 3% | 0% |
| Studying Jewish religious texts | 12% | 88% | 31% | 4% | 11% | 8% | 4% | 1% |
| Group average | 17% | 94% | 42% | 12% | 14% | 10% | 6% | 2% |

Table 5: 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?' Response: 'Very important' + 'Fairly important' combined, by self-described religious identity, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

| | Total | Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Conservative | Progressive/ Reform | No denomination - just Jewish | Non-practising/ Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Upholding strong moral and ethical behaviour | 94% | 99% | 98% | 96% | 96% | 96% | 92% | 88% |
| Remembering the Holocaust | 95% | 93% | 96% | 97% | 94% | 93% | 94% | 93% |
| Sharing Jewish festivals with your family | 91% | 100% | 99% | 98% | 96% | 95% | 83% | 75% |
| Combatting antisemitism | 91% | 86% | 94% | 95% | 94% | 92% | 89% | 86% |
| Group average | 93% | 94% | 97% | 97% | 95% | 94% | 90% | 85% |
| Belonging to a Jewish community | 88% | 100% | 99% | 97% | 96% | 94% | 82% | 66% |
| Feeling part of the Jewish people worldwide | 90% | 97% | 97% | 96% | 94% | 94% | 87% | 77% |
| Marrying another Jew | 76% | 100% | 97% | 92% | 84% | 68% | 67% | 43% |
| Group average | 85% | 99% | 98% | 95% | 91% | 85% | 79% | 62% |
| Learning about Jewish history | 91% | 96% | 95% | 92% | 95% | 91% | 88% | 86% |
| Jewish cultural experiences (Jewish music, literature, art) | 72% | 55% | 76% | 77% | 77% | 76% | 69% | 65% |
| Group average | 81% | 75% | 86% | 85% | 86% | 83% | 78% | 76% |
| Visiting Israel | 82% | 85% | 93% | 90% | 88% | 79% | 81% | 63% |
| Supporting Israel financially | 61% | 75% | 82% | 73% | 67% | 59% | 52% | 36% |
| Group average | 72% | 80% | 88% | 82% | 78% | 69% | 66% | 50% |
| Donating money to charity | 78% | 98% | 93% | 85% | 86% | 82% | 70% | 62% |
| Supporting social justice causes | 75% | 60% | 75% | 78% | 81% | 84% | 74% | 73% |
| Volunteering for charitable causes | 74% | 94% | 86% | 80% | 83% | 79% | 64% | 56% |
| Group average | 76% | 84% | 85% | 81% | 83% | 82% | 70% | 64% |
| Believing in God | 46% | 99% | 81% | 54% | 47% | 37% | 30% | 9% |
| Prayer | 35% | 98% | 76% | 37% | 47% | 38% | 16% | 4% |
| Observing halacha (Jewish law) | 34% | 99% | 79% | 38% | 34% | 22% | 14% | 3% |
| Studying Jewish religious texts | 30% | 98% | 63% | 25% | 36% | 27% | 16% | 10% |
| Group average | 36% | 99% | 75% | 39% | 41% | 31% | 19% | 6% |

Further detailed insight into beliefs and practices was provided by the broad range of questions across the survey, providing scope for more nuanced understanding of groups. 24 questions are considered in the following discussion. Again, focus is on the strongest level of positive response (for questions where a scale of responses was available) and tables make possible a comparison of strongest positive and combined strongest and second level positive responses (See Tables 6 and 7).

Synagogue membership was indicated in the range 76%-80% among Strictly Orthodox, Modern Orthodox, Conservative and Progressive, but synagogue attendance once or more times a week was indicated by less than 15%, with the exception of Strictly Orthodox and Modern Orthodox.

Attendance 'always' at a Passover seder meal was the festival observed by the highest proportion, indicated by a majority of respondents, with lowest proportions among Secular (56%) and non-denominational (63%), above 95% for other streams of Judaism with the exception of a marginally lower proportion (86%) indicated by the Progressive.

Participation in a Shabbat meal 'always' was indicated by 43% of respondents, and 'always' and 'usually' by 63%. In the latter group, the rate of participation within the different streams of Judaism was 95% among the Strictly Orthodox, 89% among Modern Orthodox, 76%-77% among Traditional and Conservative, 60% among Progressive, and 37%-39% among the non-denominational and Secular.

Kosher observance in meat bought for the home found marked variation: 99% Strictly Orthodox, 71% Modern Orthodox, 31% Traditional, 21% Conservative, and 5% or lower among Progressive, non-denominational and Secular.

Jewish identity as a 'central element of my life' was indicated by 96% Strictly Orthodox, 62% Modern Orthodox, 38% Conservative, 30% Traditional, 23% Progressive, 14% non-denominational, and 10% Secular. The proportion of combined 'central element' and 'significant element' was indicated by close to nine out of ten (or higher) by all streams of Judaism, with the exception of non-denominational (67%) and Secular (59%).

With this set of questions, the highest proportion indicating positive response was obtained in regard to Israel. An average of 69% indicated that they were Zionist, with lowest the proportion among the Strictly Orthodox (48%). The range for other streams of Judaism was from 85% Modern Orthodox, 76%-78% Traditional and Conservative, to 68% Progressive and 55% Secular.

Finally, comparing Melbourne and Sydney, and focusing just on the 'Very important' responses, reveals subtle differences in the way each community constructs Jewish identity. Overall, the two populations are rather similar with the same items ranking near the top, middle and bottom. But closer inspection reveals that respondents in Melbourne are more likely to view 14 of the 18 markers as being 'Very important' than respondents in Sydney. In other words, on most items, Jews in Melbourne generally exhibit a more intensive level of Jewish identity than Jews in Sydney. In proportionate terms, the differences are greatest on the most religious items such as 'Prayer' and 'Observing halacha (Jewish law)'. Differences are smaller on markers with a more communal-facing or ethnocentric flavour such as 'Belonging to the Jewish community' and 'Feeling part of the Jewish people'. On only four of the 18 items are Sydney respondents more likely than Melbourne respondents to say they are 'Very important', and each of these is ethnocentric: 'Remembering the Holocaust', 'Combatting antisemitism', 'Visiting Israel', and 'Supporting Israel financially'.

Figure 5: 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?' Percent reporting 'Very important', Melbourne and Sydney compared (N=8,047)

Table 6: Patterns of Judaism, selected questions by self-described religious identity, strongest response only, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

| | TOTAL | Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Conservative | Progressive/ Reform | No denomination-just Jewish | Non-practising/ Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Yes, paid synagogue membership | 37% | 76% | 78% | 58% | 80% | 79% | 18% | 13% |
| Attend synagogue once or more per week | 14% | 69% | 45% | 8% | 13% | 12% | 3% | 1% |
| Always attend a Friday night Shabbat meal | 43% | 93% | 75% | 52% | 47% | 30% | 23% | 18% |
| Always light candles at home on Friday night* | 42% | 99% | 76% | 49% | 49% | 30% | 15% | 8% |
| Always attend a Passover seder meal | 82% | 100% | 98% | 95% | 95% | 86% | 63% | 56% |
| Always fast on Yom Kippur | 43% | 78% | 70% | 57% | 58% | 37% | 23% | 14% |
| Only kosher meat bought for the home* | 29% | 99% | 71% | 31% | 21% | 4% | 5% | 2% |
| Observance average | 41% | 88% | 73% | 50% | 52% | 40% | 21% | 16% |
| Being Jewish is 'a central element of my life' | 31% | 96% | 62% | 30% | 38% | 23% | 14% | 10% |
| All close friends are Jewish | 27% | 74% | 45% | 32% | 19% | 13% | 18% | 11% |
| Very concerned about intermarriage in Australia | 30% | 75% | 59% | 39% | 31% | 16% | 15% | 8% |
| Feel 'very considerable regret' if own child married out | 30% | 73% | 61% | 41% | 26% | 14% | 13% | 8% |
| Strong preference for a Jewish Day (HIGH) School | 42% | 97% | 73% | 52% | 41% | 22% | 25% | 13% |
| Raising children Jewish | 86% | 99% | 99% | 99% | 96% | 96% | 78% | 58% |
| Children, intermarriage average | 41% | 86% | 66% | 49% | 42% | 31% | 27% | 18% |
| Very connected to Jewish communal life | 30% | 83% | 57% | 34% | 35% | 32% | 14% | 9% |
| Volunteers for a Jewish organisation at least once a week | 37% | 43% | 40% | 34% | 32% | 38% | 36% | 39% |
| Highest priority for Jewish charities in Australia | 45% | 79% | 66% | 55% | 41% | 42% | 35% | 23% |
| Connectedness average | 37% | 68% | 54% | 41% | 36% | 37% | 28% | 24% |
| Zionist-yes | 69% | 48% | 85% | 76% | 78% | 68% | 62% | 55% |
| When Israel in danger- feel 'as if own life in danger' | 16% | 36% | 23% | 16% | 20% | 8% | 18% | 8% |
| I feel a sense of responsibility to ensure that the State of Israel continues to exist - Strongly agree | 62% | 67% | 78% | 69% | 73% | 60% | 58% | 45% |
| Israel average | 49% | 50% | 62% | 54% | 57% | 45% | 46% | 36% |

* Unique households only; data for kosher meat excludes vegetarians

Table 7: Patterns of Judaism, selected questions by self-described religious identity, strongest and second strongest response combined, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

| | TOTAL | Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Conservative | Progressive/ Reform | No denomination- just Jewish | Non-practising/ Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Yes, paid synagogue membership + other form of membership | 42% | 93% | 88% | 66% | 85% | 86% | 24% | 16% |
| Attend synagogue more than once a month | 25% | 83% | 67% | 23% | 35% | 34% | 8% | 3% |
| Always + usually attend a Friday night Shabbat meal | 63% | 95% | 89% | 76% | 77% | 60% | 39% | 37% |
| Always + usually light candles at home on Friday night* | 59% | 99% | 89% | 74% | 74% | 54% | 29% | 19% |
| Always + usually attend a Passover seder meal | 90% | 100% | 100% | 99% | 99% | 95% | 81% | 74% |
| Always + usually fast on Yom Kippur | 52% | 79% | 73% | 66% | 67% | 50% | 38% | 22% |
| Only kosher meat + non-kosher meat but not pork bought for the home* | 70% | 99% | 94% | 84% | 79% | 63% | 58% | 34% |
| Observance average | 57% | 93% | 86% | 70% | 74% | 63% | 40% | 29% |
| Being Jewish is 'a central element' + 'significant element' of my life | 82% | 100% | 98% | 92% | 96% | 87% | 67% | 59% |
| All + more than half close friends are Jewish | 70% | 95% | 88% | 82% | 66% | 58% | 62% | 49% |
| Very concerned + somewhat concerned about intermarriage in Australia | 64% | 84% | 85% | 79% | 71% | 60% | 55% | 34% |
| Feel 'very considerable regret' + 'some regret' if own child married out | 56% | 75% | 83% | 71% | 59% | 43% | 46% | 27% |
| Strong preference + some preference for a Jewish Day (HIGH) School | 63% | 99% | 89% | 77% | 65% | 48% | 47% | 34% |
| Raising children Jewish* | 86% | 99% | 99% | 99% | 96% | 96% | 78% | 58% |
| Children, intermarriage average | 70% | 92% | 90% | 83% | 75% | 65% | 59% | 43% |
| Very connected' + 'somewhat connected' to Jewish communal life | 70% | 97% | 92% | 83% | 80% | 81% | 56% | 42% |
| Volunteers for a Jewish organisation at least once a month | 62% | 67% | 66% | 58% | 62% | 68% | 59% | 63% |
| Highest priority for Jewish charities in Australia + Israeli charities | 65% | 92% | 89% | 78% | 65% | 55% | 60% | 37% |
| Connectedness average | 66% | 85% | 82% | 73% | 69% | 68% | 58% | 48% |
| Zionist-yes* | 69% | 48% | 85% | 76% | 78% | 68% | 62% | 55% |
| When Israel in danger- feel 'as if own life in danger' + 'special alarm' | 74% | 92% | 87% | 81% | 78% | 70% | 73% | 56% |
| I feel a sense of responsibility to ensure that the State of Israel continues to exist - Strongly agree + agree | 89% | 86% | 95% | 94% | 94% | 92% | 89% | 76% |
| Israel average | 77% | 75% | 89% | 84% | 83% | 77% | 75% | 63% |

* Unique households only; data for kosher meat excludes vegetarians

SWITCHING JEWISH STREAMS

By comparing respondents' description of their current Jewish/religious identification with the description of their Jewish identification growing up, we can establish how Jewish identity changes when people are free to choose their identity as opposed to assuming the one they were ascribed. In one sense this is akin to viewing Jewish identity in a 'free market', highlighting the choices people make about the type of Jew they want to be after having grown up. Note these labels have been self-selected by respondents (albeit from a pre-determined, randomised list) and are not based on any particular Jewish bodies or institutions, nor should this be viewed as a direct measure of religious change over time.

The largest group self-identifies as 'Traditional', a label adopted by three out of ten (30%) respondents. However, a larger proportion (36%) say they grew up Traditional indicating that this stream of Judaism is less favoured once respondents are free to choose. Generally, we can see that the switches for each stream are modest but overall, there has been a marked switching away from Traditional/Orthodox strands towards more progressive and non-religious/Secular strands of Judaism. For example, there is a net switching into 'Non-practising (Secular/cultural)' but also a slight net switching away from Modern Orthodox. Overall therefore we can say that the main thrust of Jewish switching once respondents are free to choose, reflects a trend towards secularisation in the form of a shift away from traditional (small 'T') strands towards more progressive (small 'P') strands.

Table 8: Switching streams: comparison between Jewish identification during upbringing and current self-described religious/Jewish identification, Australia (N=8,621)

| | RELIGIOUS/ JEWISH IDENTIFICATION OF THE HOME IN WHICH YOU GREW UP | CURRENT RELIGIOUS/ JEWISH IDENTIFICATION |
|---|---|---|
| Traditional | 36% | 30% |
| Non-practising (Secular/cultural) | 16% | 19% |
| Modern Orthodox | 19% | 18% |
| No denomination – just Jewish | 10% | 12% |
| Progressive/Reform | 10% | 11% |
| Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | 5% | 5% |
| Masorti/ Conservative | 3% | 4% |
| Mixed religion (Jewish and another religion) | 1% | 1% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

Since the net position only shows the total change, it belies some the switching complexity between each stream. For example, not everyone switches. Indeed, a majority has maintained the stream of their upbringing. The extent to which a religious stream has maintained adherents is a measure of its stability and the data show that the most stable stream is Strictly Orthodox with 71% of those raised in this stream remaining within it. The least stable category is 'Mixed religion (Jewish and another religion)' with just 22% currently adhering to this category.[9] Focusing on some of the larger groups, we can see that among those raised 'Traditional,' 40% no longer adhere to this stream and of these, most (63%) have chosen more secular/progressive streams whilst 37% have chosen more orthodox streams. In other words, movement away from 'Traditional' has mainly been towards more secular positions.

[9] Since only people who currently identity as Jewish (in any way) are included in Gen17, the data excludes anyone who was raised Jewish but no longer considers themselves to be Jewish which would likely impact some of these figures.

Figure 6: Jewish stream 'switching': current position by type of Jewish upbringing, Australia

JEWISH INTERMARRIAGE

MAIN FINDINGS

- Household size is closely related to religious identification. On average 2.4 people live in Progressive/Reform households compared with 3.0 in Modern Orthodox households
- Almost one in four (23%) of households with more than one person living there are mixed faith homes
- Among Jews living in couples, 23% have a non-Jewish partner
- The intermarriage rate for the period 2010 to 2017 was 33% which is almost double the 1990's rate
- In Sydney the intermarriage rate is 35% compared with 26% in Melbourne
- Among Traditional Jews the intermarriage rate is 13%; it is 49% among Progressive/Reform Jews
- By almost all attitudinal measures, intermarried Jews exhibit weaker levels of Jewish identification and Jewish behaviour than their in-married counterparts
- 63% of respondents say they are concerned about intermarriage in Australia. Respondents aged under 40 are consistently less likely to be concerned about intermarriage than those aged 40 and above
- 55% say they would feel at least some regret if their child married a non-Jew. This is sensitive to religious identification: it is 84% among the Strictly Orthodox, 54% among Conservative and 26% among Secular Jews

Jewish household makeup

The Gen17 survey was carefully designed not only to capture data about Jewish individuals but also about households. This was done in such a way that ensured household data related to unique households only so as to avoid double-counting.[10] As a result, the survey contains data on 4,517 unique households with an average of 2.7 people in each household.

Households in Sydney are slightly smaller (2.6 people) and households in Melbourne are slightly larger (2.9 people). This size gap is related to the differing religious profiles; broadly speaking, the more religious a Jewish household is, the larger it tends to be and Jews in Melbourne tend to be somewhat more religious than Jews in Sydney. In terms of self-identified Jewish stream, we found that Masorti/Conservative and Progressive/Reform households had an average of 2.3 and 2.4 persons respectively, among Traditional households it was 2.7, 3.0 among Modern Orthodox and 3.8 among Strictly Orthodox households. These differences also reflect variation in age structures as well as varying attitudes towards family formation in that the more religious Jews are, the greater the importance they attach to procreation.

Religiosity also influences the makeup of Jewish households. For example, a Jewishly homogenous household refers to any household in which all its members identify (or are identified) as being Jewish. By contrast, a Jewishly heterogenous household refers to any household in which at least one person is not (or does not identify as) Jewish. We found that 81% of all households are Jewishly homogenous (all-Jewish) and 19% are heterogenous (mixed). However, since all lone person households are, by definition, Jewishly homogenous, multi-person households should be considered separately. Thus, among multi-person households only, 23% are heterogenous or almost one in four.

[10] This was achieved without compromising strict data confidentiality rules such as collecting personal address details.

Examining the data by state in NSW a quarter (25%) of multi-person Jewish households are heterogenous compared with 19% in Victoria. But outside of Australia's main Jewish centres, more than half (56%) of multi-person Jewish households contain non-Jews. Such data reflect the reality that a large proportion of 'Jewish households' and therefore, the 'Jewish community', consists of significant numbers of non-Jews.

Table 9: Proportion of Jewish households that are mixed (heterogeneous)* by state and household type, Australia (N=4,751)

| | ALL HOUSEHOLDS | MULTI-PERSON HOUSEHOLDS (EXCLUDING LONE-PERSON HOUSEHOLDS) |
|---|---|---|
| NSW | 19% | 25% |
| Victoria | 15% | 19% |
| Western Australia | 19% | 22% |
| Rest of Australia | 42% | 56% |
| Australia | 19% | 23% |

* A 'heterogenous' Jewish household implies not all household members are Jewish

Jewish partnerships

The nature of Jewish household heterogeneity can be quite varied, for example, it may arise due to Jews sharing a home with non-Jewish flatmates, more common among young adults, or where a Jewish household employs non-Jewish live-in staff (such as au pairs and carers). But the most common reason a Jewish household is religiously heterogenous is due to interfaith partnerships or intermarriage.

Gen17 contains data on 3,161 unique couple households (with or without children and other household members present). Of these Jews in couples, 77% have a Jewish partner and almost a quarter (23%) has a partner who is not Jewish. As with household heterogeneity, we find this to be more common in NSW (24%) and less common in Victoria (19%) but most common outside of the main Jewish centres (54%).

Table 10: Religion of partner for Jews in couples by state, Australia (N=3,161*)

| | PARTNER JEWISH | PARTNER NOT JEWISH |
|---|---|---|
| NSW | 76% | 24% |
| Victoria | 81% | 19% |
| Western Australia | 77% | 23% |
| Rest of Australia | 46% | 54% |
| Australia | 77% | 23% |

* All respondents in unique households and who are living with their partner

Most couples are married but 11% are de facto (cohabiting) partnerships. Mixed-faith coupling is far more likely among de facto couples than among married couples. Whilst 17% of married couples are exogamous (i.e. intermarried), this is the case for 63% of de facto couples.[11]

[11] These figures are similar to the results obtained in the 2011 census. For example, 9% of couples were de facto, 20% of married couples were exogamous and 60% of de facto couples were exogamous. (Such correspondence is also reassuring since it increases our confidence in the accuracy of the Gen17 dataset.) See Graham D 2014 The Jewish Population of Australia: Key findings from the 2011 Census, p19-20

The intermarriage rate

Although the census provides detailed data on intermarriage,[12] it is important to recognise that census data have always been restricted to measures of the prevalence of intermarriage (i.e. a snapshot of the total number of cases in the whole partnered population at a particular point in time) rather than the incidence of intermarriage (i.e. the number of new cases occurring over a particular period of time) more commonly known as the intermarriage rate. This is because unlike Gen17, the census does not include a question about when marriages took place.

As such, Gen17 provides some of the first statistically reliable measurements of intermarriage rates in Australia.[13] The intermarriage rate is the number of intact[14] exogamous (i.e. out-married) marriages that took place in a specified time period as a proportion of all intact marriages involving Jews in that same time period. The Australian intermarriage rate for the period 2010 to 2017 was 33%.[15] In other words, for every three weddings occurring since 2010 that involved at least one Jewish person, two were marriages between Jews and one was a marriage between a Jew and a non-Jew.[16] Similar data for the United States reveal an intermarriage rate of 58%.[17]

The intermarriage rate has been increasing steadily over time. It has doubled over the last 20 years.

Figure 7: The Jewish intermarriage rate over time, Australia (N=3,314*)

* All respondents who are married (or separated and not remarried) or widowed and who live in unique households

[12] Graham 2014 ibid

[13] Even so, Gen17 only provides an approximation of the intermarriage rate since the data are also a snapshot in time, rather than a complete record of all marriages involving Jews over time. In other words, despite weighting the data, some people are excluded such as those who married but have since passed away or emigrated. Further, the data do not specify where the marriage took place.
Note that the figures cited here report intact marriages only, i.e. they exclude anyone whose current marital status is 'divorced and not remarried'.

[14] 'Intact' means married and living with one's spouse, or married but separated, or widowed from a marriage and not remarried.

[15] This is likely to be a slight understatement since only data for NSW and Victoria have been weighted for Jewish identity. (see notes on weighting)

[16] It is not possible to directly corroborate these figures with the census—indeed one of the reasons surveys such as Gen17 are carried out is precisely because the census cannot reveal statistics such as the intermarriage rate. However, 2011 Census data showing intermarriage prevalence by age indicate that a peak of 33% occurred among Jews aged 35-39 years. (Graham 2014 op cit p21)

[17] PEW 2013 A Portrait of Jewish Americans, p35. This figure is for the period 2005-2013 and relates to the 'Net Jewish' (i.e. Jews by religion and Jews of no religion combined) population.

Intermarriage by location

Intermarriage rates vary considerably from place to place. In general, the larger and denser the local Jewish population, the lower intermarriage rates tend to be; conversely, the smaller and more dispersed the Jewish population, the higher they tend to be. In NSW the intermarriage rate for the 2010 to 2017 period was 35% whereas in Victoria it was 26% which, given the larger Jewish population in Victoria, follows the expected pattern (Figure 8). Outside of these two Jewish centres, where the Jewish population is small and highly dispersed the intermarriage rate is considerably greater (61%).

We can also examine the long-term intermarriage trend for each state. This reveals that intermarriage has been more common in NSW than in Victoria since at least the 1960s although the extent of the difference has varied. For instance, there appears to have been significant divergence in the 1990s when NSW exhibited an intermarriage rate more than double that of Victoria. It is currently one third greater in NSW.

Figure 8: The intermarriage rate by decade and location for all intact marriages, Australia (N=3,314)

* All respondents who are married (or separated and not remarried) or widowed and who live in unique households

Intermarriage prevalence by type of Jewish upbringing

The type of Jewish upbringing a person experienced is also closely related to the likelihood of their being intermarried. And as we have just seen, intermarriage is more likely the more recently the marriage took place. Figure 9 shows this relationship, for example, 7% of Traditional Jews are intermarried but this is almost double (13%) among Traditional Jews who married since 2010. But among Progressive/Reform Jews the overall prevalence of intermarriage is 29% and among those who married since 2010, half (49%) are intermarried.

Figure 9: The prevalence of intermarriage and most recent intermarriage rate by religious identification, Australia (N=3,314)

* All respondents who are married (or separated and not remarried) or widowed and who live in unique households

Intermarriage and Jewish identity

By almost all attitudinal measures, intermarried Jews exhibit weaker levels of Jewish identification than their in-married counterparts. Although the cause is unlikely to be simply the result of intermarriage (as level of Jewish identification can itself influence choice of partner), the differences are important nevertheless. In relative terms, they are greatest with respect to more religious aspects of identification as well as matters related to communal belonging and Israel. For example, 'Belonging to the Jewish community' (64% in-married versus 29% intermarried), 'Sharing festivals with your family' (71% in-married v 41% intermarried), and 'Supporting Israel financially' (30% in-married v 11% intermarried). But the differences are smaller when it comes to the more cultural universal items like 'Remembering the Holocaust', and 'Supporting social justice causes'.

Figure 10: 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?', percent answering 'Very important', Australia (N=6,020*)

* All respondents who are married and living with their spouse. Data ordered by proportionate difference between bars.

Similarly we also find that intermarried Jews exhibit weaker levels of Jewish behaviour compared with in-married Jews. For example, intermarried Jews are five times more likely to say they 'Never' observe Shabbat be that a Friday night meal with family (40% in-married v 8% intermarried) or lighting candles (49% in-married v 10% intermarried). They are also far less likely to attend a seder meal at Passover (Pesach), fast on Yom Kippur, or eat kosher meat.

Table 11: Jewish behaviour for in-married and intermarried Jews, various indicators, Australia (N=6,020*)

| VARIABLE | SUB-CATEGORY | MARRIED, LIVING WITH JEWISH SPOUSE | MARRIED, LIVING WITH NON-JEWISH SPOUSE |
|---|---|---|---|
| How often, if at all, do you attend a Friday night Sabbath (Shabbat) meal with your family? | Always | 50% | 14% |
| | Never | 8% | 40% |
| How often, if at all, are candles lit at home on Friday night Sabbath (Shabbat)? | Always | 53% | 14% |
| | Never | 10% | 49% |
| How often, if at all, do you attend a seder meal at Passover (Pesach)? | Always | 88% | 48% |
| | Never | 1% | 14% |
| How often, if at all, do you fast on Yom Kippur? | Always | 61% | 20% |
| | Never | 21% | 57% |
| What kind of meat, if any, is bought for your home? | Only kosher meat | 35% | 4% |
| | Ordinary (non-kosher) meat, but not pork products | 47% | 37% |
| | Ordinary (non-kosher) meat including pork products | 17% | 59% |
| Do you eat non-kosher meat outside your own home? | Only kosher meat | 24% | 2% |
| | Ordinary (non-kosher) meat, but not pork products | 47% | 37% |
| | Ordinary (non-kosher) meat including pork products | 29% | 61% |

* All respondents who are married and living with their spouse.

Community attitudes towards intermarriage

The Gen17 survey included a number of questions about Jewish people's general attitudes toward intermarriage. One of the questions asked respondents, 'To what extent, if at all, are you personally concerned or unconcerned about intermarriage in Australia?' A minority (34%) said they are unconcerned but most respondents (63%) express some level of concern.

Figure 11: 'To what extent, if at all, are you personally concerned or unconcerned about intermarriage in Australia?', Australia (N=8,621)

Focusing on the pattern by age, the proportion responding 'Very concerned' rises steadily from around 25% for those aged under 25 years old, peaks at 45% for those aged 50-54 years, but thereafter flattens out and even begins to decline. This pattern is similar when respondents who selected the 'Very' and 'Somewhat concerned' options are combined. However, some religious sub-groups exhibit clearer age gradients than others. In Figure 12, whilst we see a consistent pattern of lower levels of concern expressed among those aged 18-39 regardless of Jewish identification, among the older age groups the pattern varies. For example, among the Orthodox groups it rises with age, in the Traditional group it flattens out and in the Conservative group it even declines in later ages.

Figure 12: 'To what extent, if at all, are you personally concerned or unconcerned about intermarriage in Australia?' Response: 'Very concerned'. By age and religious identification, Australia (N=8,621)

In addition, all respondents were asked a more direct question about how they would feel 'If one of your children said they were going to marry a non-Jew'. Again, most respondents express negativity with over half (55%) saying they would feel 'some regret' or 'very considerable regret'. Most of the remainder (25%) would be 'Accepting or neutral'. And as we saw with general levels of concern, respondents aged under 40 years are less likely to express regret than older respondents (46% versus 58% for those above 40 years).

Attitudes are highly sensitive to the respondent's Jewish background (Figure 13). Among non-practising Jews, one quarter (26%) said they would regret their child marrying a non-Jew (i.e. three-quarters would not regret this) but among Traditional Jews, the proportion expressing regret rises to 68%. Nevertheless, expressions of regret are highest among Haredim (84%) and within this group, 10% go so far as to say they 'Would have no further association with my child', a traditional religious response that might have been more common in the past but is barely in evidence anywhere else in the community.

Figure 13: 'If one of your children said they were going to marry a non-Jew, how would you feel about it?', by current Jewish identification, Australia (N=8,621)

JEWISH EDUCATION

MAIN FINDINGS

- Bar/Bat Mitzvah is the most common type of Jewish educational experience to take place outside Jewish school settings at 67% (84% for males) followed by Jewish youth movement meetings (54%)
- The younger a respondent is, the more of these educational items they are likely to have experienced
- 49% of respondents have never attended a Jewish day school (JDS)
- 32% have attended a Jewish primary school and 32% have attended a Jewish high school in Australia
- The younger the respondent, the more likely they are to have attended a JDS
- Respondents in Melbourne are far more likely to express preference for a JDS over other types of schools than respondents in Sydney
- The more religious respondents are the more likely they are to prefer a JDS
- Respondents believe the main advantage of a JDS is to 'Strengthen Jewish identity'; the main disadvantage is 'High cost of fees/too expensive' although opinions vary between Melbourne and Sydney
- Among those who had considered the option, 32% said cost had prevent them from sending a child to a JDS
- 55% of those with a child/children at a JDS said this entails significant or major financial sacrifice
- The most common way of funding JDS fees is 'personal/household income' (62%)

Whilst the Jewish day school typifies many people's idea of 'Jewish education' the reality is that for most people, the Jewish educational experience takes place in a variety of contexts that may, or may not, include formalised school-based learning.

The most common type of Jewish education experienced (excluding JDS attendance) is the Bar/Bat Mitzvah ceremony (67%) followed by Jewish youth movement meetings (54%). All other types of education were experienced by less than half of the respondents. Gender makes a difference on some variables, in particular, 84% of males have had a Bar Mitzvah whereas 51% of females have had a Bat Mitzvah. Indeed, female respondents are more likely to have attended Jewish youth movement meetings (54%) than have had a Bat Mitzvah.

Figure 14: Type of Jewish educational experience (other than JDS attendance), Australia (N=8,621)

With the exception of state-specific programs (like BJE in Sydney and UJEB in Melbourne), comparisons between Sydney and Melbourne exhibit only minor difference in this respect but differences were greater for:

- Part-time classes in a synagogue or Sunday School (cheder) (46% Sydney v 37% Melbourne)
- An organised youth trip to Israel (less than 1-year duration) (27% Sydney v 20% Melbourne)
- An organised year-long youth program in Israel (10% Sydney v 14% Melbourne)
- Study at a yeshiva/seminary in Israel (5% Sydney v 12% Melbourne)

We can use the data to create a scale of non-day school educational experience. On average, respondents have experienced just over three (3.2) items each but there is a clear relationship with age. The younger a respondent is, the more items they are likely to have experienced. Thus, respondents aged 20-24 have experienced an average of five items whereas their parents (aged 50-54) experienced around three items and their grandparents (aged 80-84), less than two items. A possible explanation is that this reflects different levels of opportunity with younger respondents having a greater choice of options than their forbears but it may equally be related to increased communal investment in Jewish education over time.

Figure 15: Average number of non-day school Jewish educational items experienced by age, Australia (N=8,621)

Jewish day school education

Just over half (51%) of respondents have attended a Jewish day school (JDS) for at least some of their schooling either in Australia or overseas. A third (32%) of respondents attended a Jewish primary school in Australia and the same proportion attended a Jewish high school in Australia.

Table 12: Jewish day school (JDS) attendance by stage and location, Australia (N=8,621)

| | |
|---|---|
| Never attended JDS | 49% |
| Attended JDS at primary stage in Australia | 32% |
| Attended JDS at secondary stage in Australia | 32% |
| Attended JDS at primary stage overseas | 17% |
| Attended JDS at secondary stage overseas | 14% |

The likelihood of having attended an Australian JDS is higher the younger the age group. Thus over three quarters of respondents (77%) aged in their twenties had attended a Jewish high school compared to just under half (47%) of respondents aged in their thirties. It is notable that although JDS take-up is far higher in the youngest cohort than any other, there is a slight shift in favour of Jewish high schools over Jewish primary schools. In other words, in most generations the proportions attending Jewish primary and high schools are more or less balanced but in the youngest cohort (aged 18-29), a preference for Jewish high schools over primary schools is apparent.

Figure 16: Jewish day school attendance by stage and age, Australia (N=8,237)

Whilst respondents in Melbourne are more likely to have attended an Australian Jewish primary and high school than respondents in Sydney, the gap between the two states decreases the younger respondents are, especially among those aged in their twenties. For example, in Melbourne, respondents in their forties are twice as likely to have attended a Jewish high school than respondents of the same age in Sydney whereas the difference between the two states among respondents in their twenties is minimal (76% NSW v 80% Victoria).

Figure 17: Australian Jewish day school attendance by age, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,686)

| | Syd | Melb | Syd | Melb | Syd | Melb | Syd | Melb | Syd | Melb | Syd | Melb |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 18-29 years | | 30-39 years | | 40-49 years | | 50-59 years | | 60-69 years | | 70-79 years | |
| Primary | 67% | 76% | 44% | 55% | 23% | 46% | 15% | 35% | 7% | 26% | 3% | 13% |
| High | 76% | 80% | 44% | 53% | 22% | 45% | 14% | 39% | 5% | 27% | 2% | 11% |

Attitudes towards Jewish day schools

Respondents were asked: 'Whether or not you have children, do you feel it is preferable for Jewish children to attend a school that is Jewish OR non-Jewish OR do you have no preference either way?'. They were also asked to indicate whether school stage made a difference. We found that there is relatively little difference between the levels of preference expressed for primary and secondary stages with 41% expressing a 'Strong preference for a Jewish Day School' at both primary and high stages and 23% expressing 'Some preference for a Jewish Day School' at the primary and 21% at the high school stage.

However, a sizable difference is observed when we compare responses from Sydney and Melbourne. In essence, respondents in Melbourne are far more likely to express a strong preference for a JDS than respondents in Sydney. At the primary level, 32% of Sydney respondents express a strong preference for a JDS compared with 48% in Melbourne. Similarly, at the secondary level, 33% of Sydney respondents express a strong preference for a JDS compared with 48% in Melbourne.

There is also considerable difference depending on self-reported religious stream with more religious respondents being more likely to express a strong preference for a JDS than less religious respondents. For example, almost all (97%) Strictly Orthodox respondents express a strong preference for a JDS at the primary level, compared with 71% of Modern Orthodox respondents and 25% of Progressive respondents.

Figure 18: 'Strong preference for a Jewish day school' by current religious stream and school stage, Australia (N=8,621)

Perceived advantages and disadvantages of Jewish day schools

Respondents were also asked a series of questions about what they considered to be the key benefits and drawbacks of Jewish day schools. Respondents were asked to list up to three advantages in order of importance out of a randomised list of 16 options. The data can be analysed in a number of ways but here we focus on responses relating to the First main advantage only. This shows that a quarter of respondents (24%) place 'Strengthen Jewish identity' as the first main advantage of a Jewish school. (The top Second main advantage was the same as the top Third main advantage which was to 'Develop Jewish friendships and networks' mentioned by 20% of respondents in each case.)

Again we see clear differences between Sydney and Melbourne. Whilst 'Strengthen Jewish identity' is most likely to be mentioned as the First main advantage in both states (just under a quarter in each), Sydney respondents were far more likely to mention 'Provide a sense of belonging to the Jewish community' (21%) than respondents in Melbourne (14%) as being the First main advantage. By contrast, respondents in Melbourne were far more likely to mention 'Provide strong Jewish education' than respondents in Sydney (20% versus 11% respectively). Such results attest to clear differences of priorities between these two states about the role of Jewish schooling.

Figure 19: First main advantage* of Jewish day schools, Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,028)

* Note respondents were asked to list up to three main advantages so this graph reflects the top priority only

Respondents were asked to list up to three disadvantages of Jewish day schools from a list of 15 options. Focusing on the First main disadvantage, by far the item most likely to be mentioned was 'High cost of fees/too expensive', which was selected by almost two out of five respondents (39%). (The top Second main disadvantage was 'Lack of ethnic and cultural diversity' (15%) as was the top Third main disadvantage (14%).)

Contrasting Sydney and Melbourne once more, high cost is the top First main disadvantage in both places but respondents in Melbourne are rather more likely than those in Sydney to mention this (44% versus 34% respectively).

Figure 20: First main disadvantage of Jewish day schools, Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,028)

* Note respondents were asked to list up to three main disadvantages so this graph reflects the top priority only

Finally, the younger the respondents are, the more likely they are to mention high cost as being the First main disadvantage. This was also the case with regard to 'Lack of ethnic and cultural diversity'. Older respondents were more likely than younger respondents to say there were 'No disadvantages' to a JDS (4% among the under forties and 13% among those aged 60 and above).

Sending children to Jewish day schools: the financial dimension

All householders with children were asked 'Has the cost of school fees ever prevented you from sending one or more children to a Jewish Day School in Australia?'. 19% said this was not applicable as they had never considered the option. But among those for which it was relevant, 32% said the cost of JDS fees had prevented them from choosing this option. This was more likely to be the case among Sydney householders (34%) than those in Melbourne (28%).

Among householders who currently have a child or children attending a JDS, 13% said the cost was 'well within [their] household's financial capacity', 33% said it 'entails some financial sacrifices for [their] household', 30% said it 'entails significant financial sacrifices for [their] household', and 22% said this 'entails major financial sacrifices for [their] household'. There is little difference in responses between householders in Sydney and Melbourne although Sydney householders are slightly more likely to report 'significant' or 'major' sacrifice than those in Melbourne (54% versus 51% respectively).

Figure 21: 'To what extent does the cost of sending your child/children to a Jewish day school entail financial sacrifice?', Melbourne and Sydney (N=969)

* All householders with children currently in JDS

Among households with children who have ever considered a JDS option, the likelihood of the cost of JDS fees deterring them from choosing a JDS for their child/children is closely related to Jewish denominational stream. In general, the more religious a householder reports being, the less likely it is that fees were considered a barrier to choosing a Jewish school. However, this is a loose relationship since it is notable that there is no difference between Modern Orthodox and Progressive/Reform householders; in both cases 25% claim fees were a barrier.

Figure 22: Proportion of householders saying the cost of school fees has prevented them from sending one or more children to an Australian Jewish day school, by religious stream, Australia (N=3,529)

* All householders with children who have considered a JDS option

Householders were also asked about how they were funding the JDS fees for their child/children. They were presented with a list of five options plus 'Other' and asked to select all that applied. By far the most common way in which respondents said they were currently financing JDS fees was through 'personal/household income' (62%). The next most common form of finance was through 'other family members (e.g. grandparents)' at 17%.

Most householders (71%) are funding their JDS fees through one mode of finance but 29% reported using two or more approaches.

Differences between Sydney and Melbourne were small for all items except 'Means-tested subsidies from the school' which was selected by 11% of NSW respondents but 20% of Victorian respondents. In terms of Jewish denomination, the most important difference between the groupings also relates to mean-tested subsidies, which was selected by 42% of Strictly Orthodox respondents compared with an average of 16%.

Figure 23: 'In what way or ways are you currently financing your child's/children's Jewish day school fees?' (N=1,077)

* All householders with children currently in JDS

JEWISH COMMUNAL LIFE

MAIN FINDINGS

- A large majority (70%) of survey respondents indicate a sense of connection to the community: 30% are 'very connected,' 40% 'somewhat connected'
- Those who do not have a sense of connection were asked to indicate their reason. By a large margin (32% in Melbourne, 31% in Sydney), the most frequently indicated reason was 'secular outlook/ lifestyle,' followed by a feeling of not fitting in (14%,16%) and lack of interest in Jewish communal life (10%,11%).
- Gen17 asked respondents if there were any aspects of Jewish communal life that needed to be improved or changed. Two issues stood out, each selected by more than 40% of respondents: 'increase Jewish day school fee assistance' (43%) and 'reduce religious division between Jews' (42%).
- An additional question asked respondents to indicate their priority in the provision of services by the Jewish community. The top ranked services were those provided to people with limited capacity to help themselves: the infirm elderly (43%) and children (40%) and adults (29%) with developmental, intellectual and physical disabilities.

Sense of connection

A large majority of survey respondents in Melbourne and Sydney indicate a sense of connection to the community: 30% 'very connected,' 40% 'somewhat connected', a total of 70%; 14% were neutral, 16% felt 'somewhat unconnected' or 'very unconnected'. The combined 'somewhat' and 'very connected' proportion was 73% in Melbourne, 66% in Sydney. The combined unconnected proportion was 13% in Melbourne, 19% in Sydney.

Table 13: 'How connected do you feel to Jewish communal life?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

| | TOTAL | MELBOURNE | SYDNEY |
|---|---|---|---|
| Very connected | 30% | 35% | 24% |
| Somewhat connected | 40% | 38% | 42% |
| Sub-total connected | 70% | 73% | 66% |
| Neither connected nor unconnected | 14% | 13% | 15% |
| Somewhat unconnected | 9% | 7% | 11% |
| Very unconnected | 7% | 6% | 8% |
| Sub-total unconnected | 16% | 13% | 19% |
| Don't know/ decline | 1% | 1% | 1% |
| Total | 100% | 100% | 100% |

The 30% of respondents who indicated a neutral response or that they were not connected were asked to indicate their reason. Eleven possible response options were specified, with an additional option to write-in a response under the 'Other' category. A similar pattern of response was obtained in both Melbourne and Sydney.

By a large margin (31%, 32%), the most frequently indicated reason was 'Secular outlook/ lifestyle,' followed by a feeling of not fitting in (14%-16%) and lack of interest in Jewish communal life (10%-11%). More than half the sample selected one of the top three responses, 59% in Melbourne and 55% in Sydney. No other response option was selected by more than 10% of respondents. Although respondents had options to indicate a lack of connection because of specific actions taken by community leadership or attitudes within the community, only a very small proportion of respondents specified such a factor. Thus 'your views on Israel' was selected as a main reason by 4% in Melbourne and 6% in Sydney, with similar proportions selecting 'your partner is not Jewish,' 'your financial situation,' and 'you don't know many Jewish people.' The 'other', write in, option was selected by less than 10% of respondents and there was no specific reason nominated by a large number of respondents: responses included age, 'children do not attend a Jewish school,' 'communal groups not welcoming,' 'elitism,' 'treatment of women,' 'do not have time,' and 'I don't see a need.'

Table 14: 'You indicated you do not feel that connected to Jewish communal life. Are there any particular reasons leading you to feel this way?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

| | MELBOURNE MAIN REASON | SYDNEY MAIN REASON |
|---|---|---|
| Your secular outlook/lifestyle | 32% | 31% |
| You don't feel you fit in | 16% | 14% |
| You are not interested in Jewish communal life | 11% | 10% |
| You live far from Jewish communal centres | 6% | 6% |
| Your views on Israel | 4% | 6% |
| Your partner is not Jewish | 3% | 6% |
| You don't know many Jewish people | 4% | 5% |
| Your financial situation | 4% | 5% |
| You recently arrived in Australia | 2% | 1% |
| Your sexual identity | 2% | 1% |
| Your children are not Jewish | 0% | 0% |
| Other | 7% | 9% |
| Don't know / Prefer not to say | 10% | 8% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

What the community needs to do to improve

Respondents were asked if in their view there were any aspects of Jewish communal life that needed to be improved or changed. They were presented with fifteen options in sequence and asked if there was need for improvement or change with a yes/no response option. The online survey was designed to randomly rotate the order of the questions, so each respondent saw the sequence in different order. There was a similar pattern of response in Melbourne and Sydney, although for seven response options there was variation.

The two issues that stood out from the list, selected by the largest proportion of respondents, were 'increase Jewish day school fee assistance' (43%) and 'reduce religious division between Jews' (42%). (See Figure 24)

Six issues selected by between a quarter and one third of respondents followed these top ranked issues. Three of these issues related to reduction of divisions in the community and acceptance of diversity, two relate to aged care and disability services. They are: 'increase communal involvement of young adults' (32%); 'increase funding of aged care services' (28%); 'improve acceptance of Jews who are LGBTI' (26%); 'reduce divisions between wealthy and impoverished Jews' (26%); improve acceptance of interfaith couples' (26%); and 'increase funding of services for people with disabilities' (24%).

Three of the issues ranked in the bottom seven, but with still a substantial proportion indicating that they are of significance, relate to community leadership and Israel: 'greater acceptance of alternative attitudes to Israel' was selected by one in five respondents (21%), 'increased representativeness of communal leadership' by close to one in seven (15%), with a similar proportion indicating 'improved planning for Jewish organisations (13%).

Just 6% of respondents selected the write-in option, indicating another aspect of communal life; over 99% of respondents indicated at least one aspect for improvement or change.

In response to a number of aspects of communal life, a higher proportion of Melbourne respondents indicated the need for change or improvement.

The major aspects that differentiated Melbourne and Sydney responses were the higher proportion in Melbourne indicating the need for increased day school fee assistance (47%, 39%), funding of aged care services (30%, 25%), and of services for people with disabilities (27%, 21%). A higher proportion in Melbourne also indicated the need to increase the representativeness of communal leadership (17%, 13%), acceptance of Jews who are LGBTI (28%, 24%), and increased donations to Jewish charities (14%, 10%). The only area in which a significantly higher proportion in Sydney indicated a priority was in acceptance of interfaith couples (29%, 24%).

Figure 24: 'Many people feel this is a thriving Jewish community but others do not. Are there any aspects of Jewish communal life that you believe need to be improved or changed?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

Priority in service provision

An additional question asked respondents to indicate their priority in the provision of services. For each service specified respondents were asked to indicate if they considered the service to be important or not, a yes/no response.

The top ranked services were those provided to those with limited capacity to help themselves: with infirmity due to old age (43%) and children (40%) and adults (29%) with disabilities. A relatively large proportion of respondents also selected support to the socially isolated. A lower proportion, close to one in five, indicated financial assistance and services to new immigrants.

To a large extent there was a similar pattern of responses in Melbourne and Sydney, with largest difference in ranking of three services; a marginally higher proportion in Sydney indicated services to the infirm elderly, while higher proportions in Melbourne indicated financial and housing assistance.

Figure 25: 'The Jewish community is currently providing services and support to these groups. For which of these groups do you think it is most important that the Jewish community provides services?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

SOCIOECONOMIC WELLBEING AND DISADVANTAGE

MAIN FINDINGS

- The majority of respondents assesses their own financial circumstances as being comfortable or better. However, one in five (19%) say they are 'Just getting along' or worse
- Financial wellbeing is sensitive to age with maximum stress being experienced by people in their late forties—among this age group, one in four (27%) are 'Just getting along' or worse
- Material deprivation (not being able to afford basic necessities like food and medicine) was experienced by 1 in 20 respondents (6%) in the twelve months prior to the survey
- This was most likely to have been the case among Strictly Orthodox Jews (14%)
- The weaker a respondent's financial wellbeing, the less likely they are to hold paid synagogue membership

The census provides detailed information on personal and household income of Jews—demonstrating the community's income to be well above average (see Figure 3)—but such data, whilst indicating the numbers on relatively lower income levels, provide only a partial picture of poverty and economic disadvantage in the Jewish community. In part this is because financial well-being is often relative; we assess how rich we feel based on the wealth we believe others possess. But it is also because low income may disguise other financial assets such as high savings and, conversely, high income may disguise high outgoings on debts like mortgages or private school fees. Therefore, Gen17 included a number of questions to help us better understand the nature and extent of economic disadvantage in the Jewish community.

One such question asked respondents to describe their current financial circumstances. This was a purely self-assessed measure and no guidance was offered about how to interpret categories like 'Poor' or 'Prosperous'. Therefore, respondents had to provide an answer based on their personal judgement, a feeling of financial security or insecurity. Whilst a majority (78%) assess their financial circumstances to be, at the very least, 'comfortable', almost one in five (19%) say they were 'Just getting along' and 3% say they were 'Nearly poor' or 'Poor'.

Figure 26: 'Which of the following terms best describes your current financial circumstances?', Australia (N=8,621)

Setting aside those who preferred not to report their self-assessed financial circumstances (3% of respondents) and focusing on those who feel they are 'Just getting along' or poorer (19% of the remainder), this is more likely to be the case in Victoria than in NSW (20% v 18% respectively). However, a clearer, and potentially more important, relationship was found between feelings of financial insecurity and age with maximum stress occurring in the late forties. Among this age group as many as 27% feel like they are 'Just getting along' financially or are otherwise 'Nearly poor' or 'Poor'. After this age people's self-assessed financial circumstances improve steadily. The proportion feeling financial strain levels off at around 14% once respondents reach their sixties. This suggests financial wellbeing is related to life stage since people in their forties are at peak family forming years, and therefore most likely to be experiencing financial pressure such as upsizing their property and, for many, funding private school fees.

Figure 27: Proportion describing their current financial circumstances as 'Just getting along' or worse by age group, Australia (N=8,621)

Material deprivation

An alternative, and more absolute, measure of socioeconomic disadvantage examined in Gen17 aimed at understanding whether respondents had recently experienced material deprivation. One set of questions asked whether or not they had needed to reduce the size of their meals in the previous twelve months 'because there wasn't enough money to buy food' and another question asked whether they had needed prescription medicine but did not get any because they 'couldn't afford to buy it'.

A total of 6% (more than 1 in 20 people) reported that they had personally reduced their meal size and/or gone without prescription medicine in the previous twelve months because they could not afford it. The likelihood of such material deprivation correlates with a wide range of variables. For example, it is notably more prevalent in Victoria than in NSW and female respondents were more likely to report such deprivation than male respondents. Further, younger respondents, especially those aged in their twenties and forties, were more likely to experience deprivation than other age groups. However, the group which was by far the most likely to report material deprivation in the previous twelve months were the Strictly Orthodox at 14%, i.e. more than double the average.

Table 15: Reduced size of meal(s) and/or gone without prescription medication due to lack of money in the previous twelve months by various indicators, Australia (N=8,621)

| VARIABLE | SUB-CATEGORY | EXPERIENCED FOOD AND/OR MEDICINAL DEPRIVATION |
|---|---|---|
| Sex | % of males | 4.7% |
| | % of females | 7.0% |
| Age | 18-29 years | 9.9% |
| | 30-39 years | 6.9% |
| | 40-49 years | 8.2% |
| | 50-59 years | 6.5% |
| | 60-69 years | 3.4% |
| | 70-79 years | 2.4% |
| | 80+ | 2.3% |
| State | NSW | 4.4% |
| | Victoria | 7.0% |
| | Western Australia | 8.4% |
| | Rest of Australia | 9.8% |
| Country of birth | Russian Federation/former USSR | 8.2% |
| | Israel | 7.9% |
| | Australia | 6.5% |
| | South Africa | 5.3% |
| Current Jewish identity | Strictly Orthodox/Hareidi | 13.7% |
| | No denomination – just Jewish | 8.2% |
| | Modern Orthodox | 5.7% |
| | Traditional | 5.0% |
| | Non-practising (Secular/cultural) | 4.9% |
| | Progressive/Reform | 4.3% |

Economic disadvantage and Jewish identity

Gen17 is ideally placed to develop a detailed examination of the relationship between Jewish identity and financial wellbeing. For example each of the three indicators of financial wellbeing was assessed at the individual and household level and this shows, as expected, a negative relationship between paid synagogue membership and disadvantage: higher levels of economic disadvantage are associated with lower levels of paid synagogue membership.

Similarly, the higher a respondent's personal or household income, the more likely they are to be paid synagogue members. For example, among those with a personal income of less than $10,000, 28% are paid synagogue members compared with 58% of those with personal incomes of $500,000 or more.

Table 16: Relationship between personal and household income and paid synagogue membership, Australia (N=8,621 personal income; N=4,571 household income)

| INCOME BRACKET | PERCENTAGE OF EACH INCOME BRACKET HOLDING PAID SYNAGOGUE MEMBERSHIP | |
|---|---|---|
| | FOR PERSONAL INCOME | FOR HOUSEHOLD INCOME |
| Less than $10,000 | 28% | 30% |
| $10,000 to $24,999 | 25% | 28% |
| $25,000 to $49,999 | 34% | 33% |
| $50,000 to $74,999 | 33% | 42% |
| $75,000 to $99,999 | 37% | 42% |
| $100,000 to $149,999 | 36% | 36% |
| $150,000 to $199,999 | 42% | 40% |
| $200,000 to $299,999 | 51% | 47% |
| $300,000 to $499,999 | 58% | 56% |
| $500,000 or more | 58% | 60% |

We see the same relationship when paid synagogue membership is measured against self-assessed financial circumstances and, again, it makes no difference if we focus on the individual or the household. Hence, less than 20% of those who say they are 'Nearly poor' or 'Poor' are paid synagogue members compared with 56% of those who report being 'Prosperous'. This pattern also holds with respect to absolute measures of poverty. Thus, in households that had to reduce their meal size or forgo prescription medicine because they could not afford it, 34% are paid synagogue members compared with 46% among those who did not experience such financial hardships. This pattern is similar at the individual level.

CHARITABLE GIVING

MAIN FINDINGS

- When asked which type of charitable causes they prioritise, 45% indicate 'Jewish charities in Australia' and 19% indicate 'Israel charities'. 23% prioritise 'general charities in Australia'
- The older respondents are, the more likely it is they prioritise Israel-related causes; the younger they are, the more likely they are to prioritise overseas aid
- Priorities relate closely to the religious stream with which respondents identify: Jewish charities in Australia are prioritised by 65% of Modern Orthodox, 39% of Progressive and 23% of Secular respondents
- 78% of all respondents indicate that 'donating money to charity' is important to their own sense of Jewish identity, but this is more likely to be the case the older respondents are and the more religious they are
- In NSW/ACT in the previous 12 months, 14% of respondents had not personally donated any money to charity, 42% had donated up to $500 and 20% had donated between $501 and $2,000
- In Victoria, 10% of respondents said that 'they or their household' had donated no money to charity, 44% had donated up to $500 and 20% had donated between $501 and $2,000
- The amount donated increases the older respondents are, the greater their income is and the more religious they are
- Among those giving $500 or more to charity in Australia (but excluding NSW and ACT), this was the case for 29% of Secular, 42% of Traditional and 68% of Modern Orthodox Jews
- Respondents in Sydney are more likely to support a centrally organised communal fundraising model; in Melbourne they are more likely to support each charity fundraising independently

Fundraising and charitable giving, often referred to by the Hebrew term tzedakah (meaning justice or righteousness), are central aspects of Jewish communal life in Australia. Gen17 contained multiple questions in order to develop a thorough understanding of these key communal pillars. Here we focus on overall trends, but Gen17 data contains detailed information about giving to all the major Australian Jewish charities.

Charitable priorities

When asked which type of charitable cause respondents prioritise, 45% say 'Jewish charities in Australia' followed by 'General charities in Australia' (23%), confirming the adage that charity begins at home.

There is very little difference in this pattern between the three main Jewish centres of Sydney, Melbourne and Perth although in the Rest of Australia, respondents prioritise 'General charities in Australia' ahead of 'Jewish charities in Australia' (35% and 32% respectively).

Figure 28: Charitable giving priorities,* Australia (N=8,621)

* 'To which of the following causes, if any, do you give the highest and second highest priority?' Chart indicates 'Highest priority'

Some notable differences are observed in terms of age. The older respondents are, the more likely it is they prioritise Israel charities whereas the younger respondents are, the more likely it is they prioritise 'Aid for the poor overseas'. But the most revealing differences are found in terms of self-assessed Jewish identity. The more religious streams place far greater importance on Jewish causes in Australia (e.g. 81% of Strictly Orthodox respondents place this as their highest priority compared with 23% of Secular respondents). Conversely, the more religious respondents are, the lower priority they place on General Australian charities, whereas the less religious respondents are, the more likely they are to prioritise general (non-Jewish) charities.

Figure 29: 'To which of the following causes, if any, do you give the highest priority?' by Jewish denomination,* Australia (N=8,621)

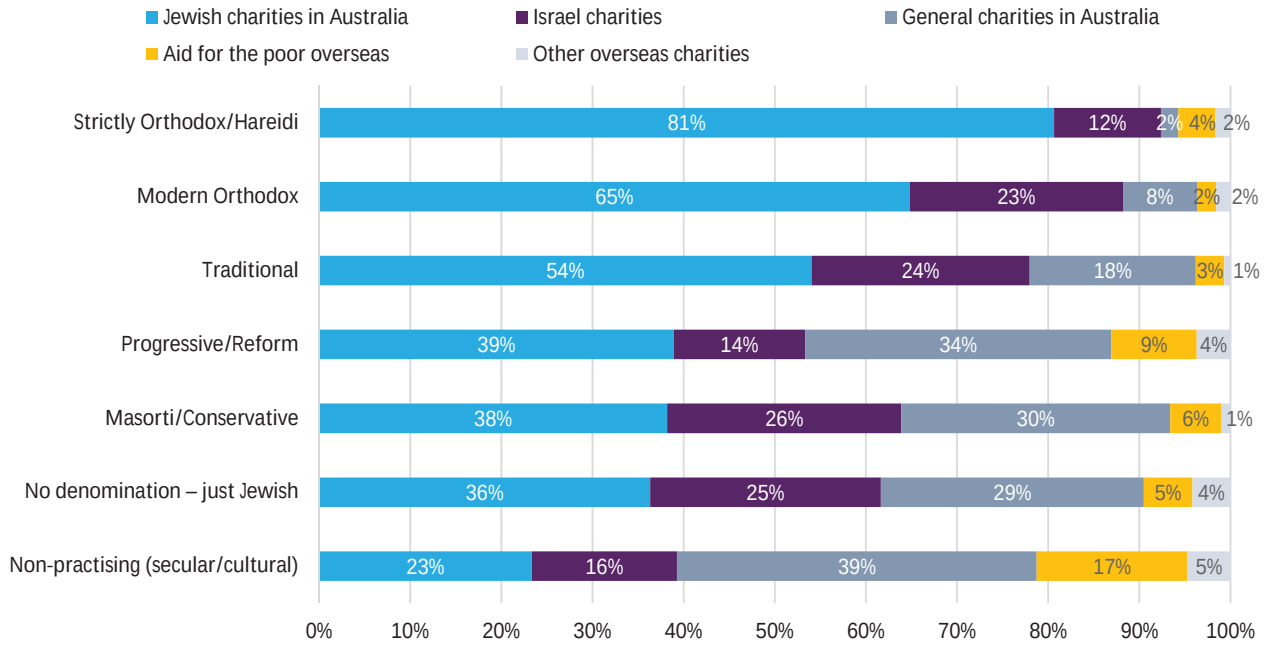

* Chart indicates 'Highest priority'

Importance of charitable giving to one's Jewish identity

In addition to which causes they prioritise, respondents were also asked how important 'Donating money to charity' is to their own sense of Jewish identity. Just over three-quarters (78%) say it is important (38% 'Very Important' and 40% 'Fairly important') confirming the centrality of charitable giving to most Jews.

However, the importance placed on charity is related to age whereby the older a person is, the greater the level of importance they attached to charitable giving. Whilst giving is deemed important to 84% of respondents aged 80 and above this is the case for 72% of respondents aged under 30 years old.

Figure 30: Importance of charitable giving by age,* Australia (N=8,621)

* 'How important or unimportant are each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?: Donating money to charity'

There is a clear and strong relationship between the importance placed on charitable giving to one's own sense of Jewish identity and religious position. The more religious the stream, the greater the level of importance is attached to 'Donating money to charity'. Among those who say giving is 'Very important', this was the case for 88% of the Strictly Orthodox, 57% for Modern Orthodox, 40% for Traditional, 35% for Progressive/Reform, 27% among the non-denominational 'Just Jewish' respondents, and 17% among Secular Jews.

Amount donated to charity[18]

In NSW/ACT, 14% of respondents had not 'personally' donated any money to charity in the previous 12 months, 42% had donated up to $500 and 20% had donated between $501 and $2,000. In Victoria, 10% of respondents said that 'they or their household' had donated no money to charity, 44% had donated up to $500 and 20% had donated between $501 and $2,000.

[18] Gen17 asked differently worded questions about amount donated to charity in NSW/ACT (where individual and household donations were differentiated) compared with Victoria and the rest of Australia (where no such differentiation was made). This precludes some national and interstate comparisons. In all states respondents were asked to 'exclude synagogue membership and Jewish school fees' from their assessments.

The amount donated by households is greater than the amount donated by individuals, thus in NSW/ACT, 16% of individuals had donated between $2,001 and $10,000 but this was the case for 22% of households.

Three variables have been found in other studies that strongly predict levels of charitable giving among Jews.[19] These are age, income and stream of Judaism. As regards age, the Australian data show that the older people are, the more money they personally donate to charity. Hence, in NSW/ACT, 13% of respondents aged under 30 gave more than $500 compared with 48% of people in their fifties and 68% of people in their eighties.

Similarly, and not surprisingly, there is a close relationship between income and the amount donated to charity. The higher a respondent's personal income, the more money they donated in the previous 12 months. Again in NSW/ACT, 20% of respondents with personal incomes of under $50,000 donated more than $500 in the previous year compared with 79% of those with personal incomes of $200,000 or more.

As noted, it has been shown elsewhere that Jewish identity is also a strong predictor of the amount donated to charity. For example, data for Victoria and the rest of Australia (excluding NSW and ACT) on those giving $500 or more to charity in the previous 12 months indicate this was the case for 29% of Secular Jews, 42% of Traditional Jews and 68% of Modern Orthodox Jews.

Figure 31: Amount donated to charity by stream of Judaism, Australia excluding NSW/ACT* (N=3,757)

* In Victoria and other states outside NSW/ACT, respondents were asked 'How much in total have you or your household given to Jewish and/or general charities IN THE PAST 12 MONTHS? If you are unsure, please estimate. Please exclude synagogue membership and Jewish school fees.'

[19] See Graham D and Boyd J 2016 Charitable giving among Britain's Jews: Looking to the future, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, London

Fundrasing models

Finally, respondents were asked about their attitudes towards different models of communal fundraising. This is in the context of different models being in operation across Australia. In NSW and ACT, a significant proportion of fundraising is channelled through JCA in Sydney, an umbrella body representing 22 constituent charities. By contrast, in Melbourne, each charity carries out fundraising independently. Gen17 respondents were asked 'Which approach to Jewish communal fundraising is more preferable: fundraising through one central organisation acting on behalf of all charities and schools (though not synagogues), OR, each Jewish organisation fundraising on its own?' Overall, 17% of respondents said they did not know which approach was better (and these proportions were the same in Sydney and Melbourne—17% in each).

Focusing on those respondents who did provide an opinion, we see widely differing views in the two cities. Support for centralised fundraising is much stronger in Sydney (46%) than in Melbourne (30%) and, conversely, support for the independent structure is far stronger in Melbourne (42%) than in Sydney (20%).

Figure 32: Preferred model for Jewish communal fundraising, Melbourne and Sydney (N=6,994)

IMMIGRANTS

MAIN FINDINGS

- The Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney have been significantly impacted by immigration. The 2011 census indicated that 52% of the New South Wales Jewish population and 43% of the Victorian population were born overseas, both substantially higher than the figure for the total Australian population—28%.
- Since the 1970s there have been three significant Jewish immigration waves: from the Former Soviet Union (FSU), South Africa, and most recently from Israel.
- When asked for the reason that prompted them to come to Australia, the highest proportion, more than half, indicated family reasons – to join family or a partner, or they came as a child with parents.
- Immigrants from the FSU experienced substantial difficulties in Australia: 72% had difficulties with the English language, 48% inadequate income, 46% finding suitable employment, and 40% inability to afford adequate housing and difficulty in making friends in the community. Lower levels of difficulty were indicated by arrivals from South Africa and Israel. The highest proportion indicated by South Africans, at 25%, was inadequate income.
- A relatively high proportion of Israelis, close to one in three, indicated difficulties with the English language (37%), difficulties making friends (38%), and difficulty finding suitable employment (35%).
- Although they encountered a higher level of settlement and adjustment difficulties, 91% of immigrants from the FSU indicated that they were more satisfied with life in Australia than in their former homeland, compared to 80% South African and 69% Israelis. The strongest level, 'much more satisfied', was indicated by 70% FSU, 52% South African, and 39% Israeli.

Immigrant communities

The Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney have been significantly impacted by immigration. At the peak of European immigration between 1947 and 1961, the Jewish population more than doubled in size.

Since the post-war years, there have been three significant waves of Jewish immigration to Melbourne and Sydney:

- From the Former Soviet Union (FSU), with arrivals at a relatively high level from 1979-80 and 1989-94, and a peak of arrivals of over 500 in 1992;
- South Africa from 1986-89 and 1994-2004, with arrivals over 500 in 1986 and again in 1997;
- Most recently from Israel since 2001, but with considerably lower number of arrivals, with peaks close to 200 in 2007 and 2015.

The 2011 census indicated that 52% of the New South Wales Jewish population and 43% of the Victorian were born overseas born, substantially higher than the 28% of the total Australian population.

In Sydney today, the largest overseas-born groups are from South Africa at 19%, with the FSU and Israel both in the 5%-6% range; in Melbourne there is a higher proportion born in the FSU at 10%, and a considerably lower proportion of those born in South Africa at 8%, and of those born in Israel at 7%.

The following discussion considers the three largest immigrants groups, which make up some 60% of the overseas-born group in these main centres of Jewish population.

Reasons for migrating to Australia

The main reason for leaving their countries of birth was indicated by responses to the question 'Which, if any, of the following reasons prompted you to leave your country of origin'. The responses, consistent for the three immigrant groups, focused on family reunion, with a number of respondents also indicating that they left their countries of birth as children. In addition, those from the FSU indicate 'poor future for my children', 'to escape persecution' and 'poor political situation'; those from South African indicate 'poor political situation', 'to escape social strife/ crime', and 'poor future for my children'. Among immigrants from Israel, the highest proportion, almost half, indicated family reasons, close to double the proportion for the other two national groups.

When asked for the reasons that prompted them to come to Australia, again the highest proportion, more than half, indicated family reasons - to join family or a partner, or that they came as a child with parents. Other important factors indicated by arrivals from the FSU and South Africa were 'better future for my children' and 'a safe environment'; among Israeli born, additional reasons were selected by a lower proportion, with close to 10% indicating 'better future for my children' and 'employment reasons.'

Table 17: 'Which of the following reasons prompted you to come to live in Australia?' (Most important reason). Sydney and Melbourne, arrivals after 1980 (N=1,959)

| | FORMER SOVIET UNION | SOUTH AFRICA | ISRAEL |
|---|---|---|---|
| To join family or partner here | 24% | 20% | 25% |
| Came with my parents as a child | 24% | 20% | 22% |
| Better future for my children | 21% | 17% | 11% |
| A safe environment | 12% | 16% | 7% |
| Australia is similar to my country of origin | 1% | 11% | 0% |
| Employment reasons (e.g. recruited by employer) | 2% | 3% | 11% |
| Ability to obtain an Australian visa | 6% | 5% | 3% |
| Better economic prospects | 5% | 1% | 6% |
| Educational reasons (e.g. to study) | 2% | 1% | 4% |
| The Jewish community here | 1% | 3% | 1% |
| Other reason(s) to move here (Please specify) | 2% | 3% | 8% |
| Prefer not to say | - | 1% | 2% |
| Total | 100% | 100% | 100% |

* Columns may not sum to 100% due to rounding

Difficulties encountered by immigrants

Respondents were asked to indicate if they experienced difficulty on arrival in Australia, with a number of response options provided. With the responses 'Yes to a great extent' and 'Yes to some extent' combined, the highest levels of difficulty was indicated by immigrants from the FSU; 72% had difficulties with the English language, 48% inadequate income, 46% finding suitable employment, and 40% inability to afford adequate housing and make friends in the community. Lower levels of difficulty were indicated by arrivals from South Africa and Israel. The highest proportion indicated by South Africans, at 25%, was inadequate income, marginally above housing costs (22%) making friends in the community (21%) and finding suitable employment

(21%). A relatively high proportion of Israelis, close to one in three, indicated difficulties with the English language (37%), difficulties making friends (38%), and difficulty with finding suitable employment (35%).

Table 18: 'Did you experience any of the following difficulties when you first arrived in Australia?' Response: 'Yes, to a great extent' and 'Yes, to some extent' combined. Sydney and Melbourne, arrivals after 1980 (N=1,959)

| | FORMER SOVIET UNION | SOUTH AFRICA | ISRAEL |
|---|---|---|---|
| With English language | 72% | 0% | 37% |
| Getting qualifications recognised | 23% | 17% | 21% |
| Finding suitable employment | 46% | 21% | 35% |
| Making friends in the community | 40% | 21% | 38% |
| Inadequate income | 48% | 25% | 29% |
| Inability to afford adequate housing | 40% | 22% | 20% |
| Educating your children | 9% | 6% | 11% |
| Personal health issues | 15% | 8% | 9% |
| Discrimination at work | 12% | 5% | 8% |
| Discrimination mixing with Australians | 26% | 18% | 22% |
| Discrimination from Jewish community | 24% | 11% | 21% |

Jewish identification

Responses concerning strength of Jewish identification were analysed of those aged 18-39 and 40-69 in the three immigrant groups. These were compared to the responses concerning strength of Jewish identification of those respondents who were both born in Australia and who have to Australian-born parents (here referred to as third generation Australians). There was no analysis of those over the age of 69 because of the limitations of sample size for the overseas born.

Comparison by age group and country of origin finds a large degree of consistency. Limited, little or no importance was attached to 'being Jewish' in the responses of 31% of FSU-born aged 18-39, and 34% aged 40-69. For those born in Israel in these age groups, the figures were 30% and 39% respectively. For those born in South Africa, the figures were much lower, at 11% and 12% respectively, which are proportions close to those indicated by Jewish third generation Australians (13% and 12%).

However, among the three immigrant groups and third generation Australians aged 18-39, a large majority - in the range 66%-88% - indicated that 'being Jewish' was 'a central element' or 'a significant element' in their lives. The proportion was marginally lower at 59% among those aged 40-69 born in Israel.

Table 19: 'Which of the following best expresses your sense of being Jewish? Being Jewish is...', arrivals after 1980 compared with third generation Australians, Melbourne and Sydney by age (N=1,959)

| AGE | BEING JEWISH IS... | THIRD GENERATION AUSTRALIAN* | SOUTH AFRICA | FORMER SOVIET UNION | ISRAEL |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 18-39 | A central element of my life | 38% | 38% | 14% | 25% |
| | A significant element of my life | 48% | 50% | 52% | 45% |
| | Sub-total | 86% | 88% | 66% | 70% |
| | Limited to taking part in some communal or family activities+ of little importance + of no importance | 13% | 11% | 31% | 30% |
| | Don't know/ decline | 1% | 1% | 4% | 0% |
| | Total | 100% | 100% | 100% | 100% |
| | | | | | |
| 40-69 | A central element of my life | 32% | 33% | 6% | 15% |
| | A significant element of my life | 55% | 55% | 59% | 44% |
| | Sub-total | 87% | 88% | 65% | 59% |
| | Limited to taking part in some communal or family activities+ of little importance + of no importance | 12% | 12% | 34% | 39% |
| | Don't know/ decline | 1% | 1% | 1% | 1% |
| | Total | 100% | 100% | 100% | 100% |

* Australian-born respondents with both parents Australian-born; Columns may not sum to 100% due to rounding

Sense of belonging in Australia

Respondents were asked a question to indicate their sense of belonging in Australia. A large majority, in the range from 63% to80% indicated a 'very strong sense of belonging' or 'quite strong sense of belonging', compared to 94% of Jewish third generation Australians. The highest level of identification, a 'very strong sense', was selected by 65% of third generation Australians, 41% of FSU-born, 40% of South African born, and considerably fewer - 20% - of Israeli–born respondents.

Figure 33: 'To what extent do you have a sense of belonging in Australia?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=1,959)

Life satisfaction of immigrants

Survey respondents were asked to indicate their level of life satisfaction in Australia, compared to life in their country of former permanent residence. The highest proportion - those indicating that they were 'much more satisfied' - ranged from 70% of those from the FSU, 52% of those from South Africa and 39% of those from Israel.

With the top two responses combined, 'much more satisfied' and 'more satisfied', a substantial majority of the three national groups indicated satisfaction, but again with a considerable range: 91% FSU, 80% South Africa, and 69% Israel.

Figure 34: 'Compared to life in the country you lived in permanently before coming to Australia, how satisfied are you with your life in Australia?' Sydney and Melbourne, arrivals after 1980 (N=1,959)

ISRAEL

MAIN FINDINGS

- A very high level of personal connectedness with Israel characterises the Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney; 92% have visited Israel, more than 60% three or more times. One in five has lived in Israel for one year or longer. The majority indicate that they have relatives or close friends who live in Israel.
- 69% identify as Zionist.
- Overseas Jewish community research finds lower engagement with Israel by age, particularly among young members of the community. There is evidence of this pattern in response to some questions, but it is not a consistent finding. In fact, the highest level of identification is indicated by 18-29 year olds.
- Responses to a series of propositions about Israeli society and the peace process indicate substantial agreement on some propositions that are critical of Israel. A majority (64%) agree that the Orthodox have too much influence in Israeli society and a substantial minority (47%) consider that there is 'too much corruption in Israel's political system.' On the other hand, only 13% of respondents disagree with the proposition that 'democracy in Israel is alive and well.'
- A proposition concerning the peace process finds opinion almost evenly split, 42% agree and 44% disagree that 'Israel should give up territory in exchange for guarantees of peace with the Palestinians', although 58% agree that 'control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security.'
- The largest proportion indicating agreement with negative propositions concerning Israel are found among those self-identifying as Conservative, Progressive and Secular. Yet even among this section of the Jewish population, there is majority agreement with the proposition that 'democracy in Israel is alive and well' and with the proposition that 'Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security;'
- In a very strong finding, 88% feel a personal 'sense of responsibility to ensure that the state of Israel continues to exist.'
- One of the key unifying issues within the Jewish community is a sense of personal connection to Israel. The security of Israel is the immediate issue of concern that unifies Australian Jews more than any other.

Personal connectedness with Israel

A high level of personal connectedness with Israel characterises the Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney. This is indicated by visits, with 92% indicating that they had visited Israel at least once in their life, and 62% in Melbourne and 61% in Sydney having visited three or more times. Close to one in five have lived in Israel for more than one year, 24% of Melbourne residents not born in Israel and 17% of Sydney residents. Close to 40% of respondents (42% Melbourne, 37% Sydney) had visited Israel at least once over the last three years (2015-17).

More than half of Melbourne and Sydney respondents indicated that they had relatives or close friends living in Israel. Close family living in Israel was indicated by 66% of respondents, close friends by 58%. Again, the proportions were marginally higher in Melbourne than Sydney.

In response to a question which asked respondents if they intended to make Aliyah ('How likely is it that you will choose to live permanently in Israel in the future?'), 4% indicated 'very likely', 7% 'fairly likely', while 32% indicated 'not very likely' and 52% (49% in Melbourne, 56% in Sydney) 'not at all likely.'

Are you a Zionist?

69% of respondents indicated that they regarded themselves as Zionist, while 22% did not, and a relatively high 10% indicated that they did not know, or declined to answer. This is a lower proportion than those indicating Zionist identification in the Gen08 survey, when the proportion was 80%– a fall of close to 10 percentage points.

The lower proportion, however, may be the result of a change in the question wording

> Gen17 – 'Although there are different opinions about what the term Zionism means, in general, do you consider yourself to be a Zionist?'

This contrasts with Gen08, which provided a wide-ranging definition of Zionism, one so general that those who were equivocal may have been persuaded to answer 'yes.'

> Gen08 – 'Do you regard yourself as a Zionist? By the term Zionist we mean that you feel connected to the Jewish people, to Jewish history, culture and beliefs, the Hebrew language and the Jewish homeland, Israel?'

Overseas Jewish community research finds lower engagement with Israel by age, particularly among young members of the community. There is evidence of this pattern in response to some questions asked in the Gen17 survey, but it is not a consistent finding.

In each ten-year age group, between 65% and 75% of respondents gave an affirmative response to the question 'Are you a Zionist'. The age group with the highest proportion of affirmative responses (at 75%) was the youngest age category. No consistent correlation of age and identification as a Zionist is indicated.

Figure 35: 'Do you consider yourself to be a Zionist?' Melbourne and Sydney by age group (N=8,047)

Analysis by age and Jewish identification similarly finds no consistent decline in Zionist identification, although different levels of Zionist identification are indicated within the different streams of Judaism.

The sample is of sufficient size to allow for analysis of streams of Judaism by 20 year groupings. Among Modern Orthodox, Zionist identification is indicated by 88% aged 18-39, 85% aged 40-59, and 85% aged 60-79; among Traditional, the proportions are 79%, 77% and 75%; among Progressive, 72%, 71%, and 68%.

Among the secular, a lower proportion indicate Zionist identification in the younger age group, but the difference is marginal at around five percentage points.

Figure 36: 'Do you consider yourself to be a Zionist?' By age group and Jewish identification, Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

Other questions in the two surveys which were asked in identical terms and provided four response options, (as distinct from the yes/no option in the question on Zionism) provide a precise basis for evaluating any possible shift in opinion. The response pattern for these additional questions finds little or no shift.[20]

One question common to the two surveys asked 'When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?' with four detailed response options:

- 'I do not feel any different about it than I would if another important foreign country were in the same sort of danger'
- 'I feel rather more concerned than if another country was in the same situation'
- 'I feel a special alarm because it is Israel and not some other country in danger'
- 'My reaction is so strong that it is almost as if my own life was in danger'

A large majority of respondents selected one of the two strongest indications of concern, with 16% indicating that their reaction was almost as if their own life was endangered and 58% a special alarm, 74% combined. Gen08 obtained almost the same proportion, 76%. Very few indicated that they were uninterested in Israel's fate, just 4% (3% Gen08).

The range by age group indicating lack of interest was 7% aged 18-29, 6% aged 30-39, and 3% or lower for other age groups.

[20] Care should be taken in drawing direct comparisons between Gen08 and Gen17 data. Unlike Gen17, the Gen08 data were not weighted to account for varying levels of Jewish identification. In other words, Gen08 data are more likely than Gen17 data to have over-represented the more engaged sections of the Jewish population.

Figure 37: 'When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?' Gen08 and Gen17 compared, Melbourne and Sydney* (N=5,101; 8,047)

*In this section analysis is restricted to Melbourne and Sydney as an objective of this section is to enable comparison between the Gen08 and Gen17 surveys with the maximum of precision.

A second question (asked in identical terms in the two surveys) asked 'To what extent do you keep up with current events which involve Israel?' The response options were 'a lot'; 'quite a lot'; 'a little', 'not at all'.

Interest at the level of 'a lot' or 'quite a lot' is indicated by 68% of respondents, almost identical to the proportion who indicated that they were Zionists and 5 percentage points higher than respondents to Gen08; again a very small proportion, just 3%, indicated lack of interest.

Figure 38: To what extent do you keep up with current events which involve Israel?' Gen08 and Gen17 compared, Melbourne and Sydney (N=5,101, 8,047)

To explore attitudes further, respondents were presented with a number of propositions concerning Israeli society and the peace process.

One of the propositions obtained a majority negative response – 'Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel's society' found 64% in agreement ('strongly agree' or 'agree'); just under a majority (47%) agreed that 'there is too much corruption in Israel's political system'; a minority, but close to one in three respondents (37%), agreed that 'In Israel, non-Jewish groups suffer from discrimination.' In contrast, only a very small minority (13%) are in disagreement with the proposition that 'democracy in Israel is alive and well.' while 74% agree (See Table 20).

A proposition concerning the peace process finds opinion almost evenly split, 42% agree and 44% disagree that 'Israel should give up territory in exchange for guarantees of peace with the Palestinians'. Less than one-third (32%) agree that 'Israel should negotiate with Hamas' to achieve peace, a small majority (51%) disagree; and less than one in four (24%) disagree with the proposition that 'Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security', a much larger proportion (58%) agree that it is vital.

Responses were analysed by gender, religious identification and age of respondent; this analysis found that a higher proportion of women are less sure about specific questions on Israel, resulting in a higher proportion indicating 'Don't know' or 'Decline to answer.' For example, 15% of women and 5% of men indicated that they had no opinion or did not know when asked concerning democracy in Israel, 17% of women and 7% of men responded in the same terms when asked if Israel should give up territory for peace.

Analysis by Jewish identification finds considerable difference in the balance of opinion.

Of the Strictly Orthodox, the only proposition that finds majority agreement with a view critical of Israel relates to corruption in Israel's political system, with 51% in agreement.

Among those who identify as Modern Orthodox, a large minority agree that Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel (43%) and that there is too much corruption (45%).

Among those who identify as Traditional, the proposition concerning the influence of Orthodox Judaism finds majority agreement (61%), with a large minority (40%) in agreement that there is too much corruption and Israel should give up territory for guarantees of peace (36%).

The largest proportion indicating agreement with negative propositions concerning Israel are amongst those identifying with the Conservative stream of Judaism, the Progressive and the Secular. Yet even among this section of the Jewish population, less than a third disagree with the proposition that 'democracy in Israel is alive and well,' and disagreement with the proposition that 'Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security' is indicated by a minority, at 32%-35% amongst Conservative and Progressive, and 47% among Secular.

Table 20: 'To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements?', Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

| | TOTAL | STRICTLY ORTHODOX/ HAREIDI | MODERN ORTHODOX | TRADITIONAL | CONSERVATIVE | PROGRESSIVE/ REFORM | NO DENOMINATION, JUST JEWISH | NON-PRACTISING/ SECULAR |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| ISRAELI SOCIETY | | | | | | | | |
| Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel's society- 'Strongly agree' + 'tend to agree' | 64% | 4% | 43% | 61% | 84% | 90% | 73% | 83% |
| There is too much corruption in Israel's political system- 'Strongly agree' + 'tend to agree' | 47% | 51% | 45% | 40% | 58% | 51% | 44% | 59% |
| In Israel, non-Jewish groups suffer from discrimination- 'Strongly agree' + 'tend to agree' | 37% | 8% | 23% | 28% | 50% | 49% | 36% | 59% |
| Democracy in Israel is alive and well- 'Tend to disagree' + 'strongly disagree' | 13% | 10% | 5% | 7% | 17% | 18% | 12% | 28% |
| PEACE PROCESS | | | | | | | | |
| Israel should give up territory in exchange for guarantees of peace with the Palestinians-'Strongly agree' + 'tend to agree' | 42% | 6% | 31% | 36% | 58% | 58% | 42% | 65% |
| The government of Israel should negotiate with Hamas in its efforts to achieve peace- 'Strongly agree' + 'tend to agree' | 32% | 8% | 24% | 26% | 41% | 42% | 31% | 48% |
| Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security- 'Tend to disagree' + 'strongly disagree' | 24% | 4% | 10% | 17% | 35% | 32% | 23% | 47% |

Sense of responsibility for Israel's existence

A final question asked for responses to the proposition that 'I feel a sense of responsibility to ensure that the State of Israel continues to exist'. This proposition obtained the highest level of positive response across the survey. Concern about threats to Israel's continuing existence is the issue that unifies the Jewish community more than any other.

Almost nine out of ten respondents (88%) indicated agreement while 6% disagreed and a further 6% indicated that they had no opinion, preferred not to say or did not know.

- Analysis by age group finds the lowest proportion in agreement are among those aged 18-29, but still at 82%, with the same proportion among those aged 30-39; agreement was above 90% among those aged 50-89
- When responses were analysed by stream of Judaism, agreement was in the range 92%-95% among Modern Orthodox, Traditional, Conservative and Progressive, with disagreement at 4% or below
- The lowest proportion in agreement was among those identifying as Secular, but it was still indicated by three out of four respondents (76%), with disagreement at 15%

Figure 39 'I feel a sense of responsibility to ensure that the State of Israel continues to exist' 'To what extent do you agree or disagree?' By age group, Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

Figure 40: 'I feel a sense of responsibility to ensure that the State of Israel continues to exist' 'To what extent do you agree or disagree?' By religious identification, Melbourne and Sydney (N=7,742)

ANTISEMITISM

MAIN FINDINGS

- Survey respondents were asked for their view of the seriousness of antisemitism in Australia today. Opinion was divided, but the larger proportion considered that it is 'not a very big problem' or 'not a problem at all' (54%), compared to a substantial minority (43%) who considered that it was 'a very big problem' or 'a fairly big problem'.
- One finding points to what may be a significant new development: a majority of respondents have encountered antisemitism online over the last year, including 51% on Facebook, with a much higher proportion (80%) among those aged 18-29. Just 21% of respondents indicated that they had 'not seen any antisemitic content online and social media.'
- Antisemitic comment on the Internet or social media was seen as a 'very big' or 'fairly big' problem by 64% of respondents, 73% among those aged 18-39.
- On viewing antisemitic content online, 53% took some form of action such as replying or reporting it, but almost half (47%)'took no action'
- Gen17 also considered direct or personal – as distinct from virtual – experience of antisemitism. Almost one in ten respondents indicated that they had witnessed or experienced verbal insults and harassment over the last 12 months, with a high level of 31% indicated by Strictly Orthodox aged 18-39.

How big a problem is antisemitism?

Respondents were asked 'In your opinion, how big a problem is antisemitism in Australia today?,' with four response options: 'a very big problem,' 'a fairly big problem', 'not a very big problem,' and 'not a problem at all.' Opinion was divided and the results were almost a mirror of those obtained by the Gen08 survey.

At the extremes, 6% regard antisemitism to be a 'very big' problem, 3% 'not a problem at all.'

For the large majority, 88%, antisemitism is a problem of some magnitude, but a majority are of the view that it is 'not a very big problem' or 'not a problem at all' (54%). Aggregating the two levels (not very big/ not a problem – very big/ fairly big) obtains a 54%/43% divide. For the Gen08 survey the proportions were 51%/41%. Allowing for margins of error in surveying this is almost an identical result.

Figure 41: 'In your opinion, how big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism in Australia today?' Gen08 and Gen17 compared, Melbourne and Sydney* (N=5101, 8,047)

* In this section analysis is restricted to Melbourne and Sydney as an objective of this section is to enable comparison between the Gen08 and Gen17 surveys with the maximum of precision.

Disaggregation by sub-groups finds that a marginally higher proportion of Sydney than Melbourne respondents consider that antisemitism is a 'very big' or 'fairly big' problem (44%, 42%);

- A higher proportion of women than men (47%, 37%)
- Strictly Orthodox, Modern Orthodox and Traditional (50%, 50%, 50%) than Progressive, Conservative and Secular (40%, 37%, 31%)
- Analysis by age finds only minor variation: 42% aged 18-29, 44% aged 30-39, then by ten-year age groups 44%, 45%, 39%, 43%, 41%, 41%

In none of these subgroups do 10% or more consider that antisemitism is a 'very big' problem. For example, it is considered in such terms by 7%-8% of Strictly Orthodox, Modern Orthodox, Traditional; 5% Progressive; and 3% Conservative and Secular.

Figure 42: 'In your opinion, how big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism in Australia today?' Melbourne and Sydney compared (N=8,047)

Experience of antisemitism: online

In contrast with the minority (43%) ranking of antisemitism as a 'very big' or 'fairly big' problem when a question is asked in general terms, a large majority of respondents indicate that they have encountered antisemitism over the last year, particularly on the Internet. This finding points to what may be a significant change that is occurring in Australian society.

Respondents were asked, 'from what you have personally experienced, to what extent, if at all, are the following a problem in Australia today?'

- Antisemitic comments in discussions people have (for example, at the workplace, at school, or elsewhere)
- Antisemitic reporting in the media (for example, TV, radio, newspapers)
- Antisemitic comments on the Internet or social media (including discussion forums, social networking sites)

Antisemitic comment in personal discussions was seen as 'a very big problem' by 8% of respondents, antisemitic reporting in the media by 17%, and on the Internet or social media by 26%. The combined 'very big problem' and 'fairly big problem' response for antisemitism in personal discussions was 35%, antisemitic reporting in the media 51%, and on the Internet or social media 64% (73% among those aged 18-39).

Figure 43: 'From what you have personally experienced, to what extent, if at all, are the following a problem in Australia today?' Melbourne and Sydney (N=8,047)

Antisemitism is encountered in a range of online contexts, with much evidence of its presence on social media platforms and sites of political commentary and other discussion forums. The world of online media provides enhanced opportunities for antisemites to spread messages of hatred, a development that has been documented in the annual report on antisemitism produced for the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, by the Online Hate Prevention Institute and other organisations.

In response to a question on Internet-based antisemitism, just 20% of respondents indicated that they had 'not seen any antisemitic content online and on social media.' Close to half (51%) had encountered antisemitism on Facebook, 42% on online discussion forums, 38% on online news sites, 24% on YouTube, and 11% on Twitter.

These proportions are much higher within subgroups that make greater use of the Internet.

- 80% among those aged 18-29 had seen antisemitic content on Facebook, 72% aged 30-39, 62% aged 40-49, compared to 21% aged 70-79.

Those who had seen antisemitic content online were asked how they had responded; 21% indicated that they reported it to the website or platform operator (35% of those aged 18-29), 7% reported it to a Jewish authority such as CSG (Community Security Group) or State Jewish roof body, and 18% wrote an online comment. One in five (20%) shared the content with family, friends or colleagues (highest among those in the older age groups, thus 29% of those age 60-69, 32% aged 70-79, compared to just 13% of aged 18-39. Almost half (47%) indicated that they 'took no action'.

Figure 44: 'In the last 12 months, have you personally seen antisemitic content on any of the following?' Melbourne and Sydney, (N=8,028)

Experience of antisemitism: physical attack, verbal insult and harassment

Gen17 also considered direct or personal – as distinct from virtual – experiences of antisemitism. Respondents were asked if they had 'personally witnessed' 'other Jews being verbally insulted or harassed' and 'other Jews being physically attacked.' In a separate question they were asked if they had personally experienced 'verbal insults or harassment' and 'physical attack.'

A small proportion indicated they had witnessed (2%) or experienced (0.5%) physical attack over the last twelve months. More than one in ten, however, had witnessed verbal insults and harassment – 15% of men and 8% of women indicated witnessing such incidents. The highest proportions – 32% of men, 21% of women – were indicated by those aged 18-29.

There is further significant variation when responses are analysed by age and religious identification.

- 31% of Strictly Orthodox aged 18-39 had personally experienced verbal insults and harassment over the last twelve months, 17% Modern Orthodox, 10% Traditional, 17% Conservative, 16% Progressive, 11% no-denomination, and 14% Secular.

The large measure of consistency indicated by young adults across the different streams of Judaism indicate that targets of attacks are not simply those who antisemites think are Jewish, identified by visible markers such as distinctive clothing.

Table 21: 'In the last twelve months, have you personally experienced any of the following types of antisemitic incidents in Australia?' Response: 'I have been verbally insulted or harassed.' Melbourne and Sydney, (N=7,742)

| AGE | TOTAL | Strictly Orthodox/ Hareidi | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Conservative | Progressive/ reform | No denomination -just Jewish | Non-practising/ secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 18-39 | 14% | 31% | 17% | 10% | 17% | 16% | 11% | 14% |
| 40-59 | 10% | 28% | 13% | 6% | 10% | 7% | 7% | 8% |
| 60-79 | 5% | 21% | 6% | 4% | 5% | 3% | 5% | 3% |
| 80+ | 2% | - | 1% | 2% | - | 3% | 3% | 2% |
| Total | 9% | 26% | 12% | 6% | 9% | 7% | 7% | 7% |

APPENDIX 1: CHANGE OVER TIME

Comparison of findings between surveys is a difficult exercise. Changes in question wording, in the mode of survey (interviewer administered, self-administered) and in the context of question (placement in the survey, balance of questions in the survey) may influence responses. Results may also be influenced by different approaches to survey weighting.[21] Further, communities change over time, so comparison is not necessarily like with like. The geographic distribution and ethnic character of the Jewish population has undergone significant change. For example, the Jewish population of Melbourne is more concentrated in the Glen Eira Local Government Area than it was twenty-five years ago. The proportion of the population born and raised in Australia has increased; the generation of Holocaust survivors and other post-war immigrants has declined; and there has been the impact of the large numbers of immigrants from the Former Soviet Union, South Africa and Israel. Comparison of survey results is most useful for highlighting broad trends, not for minor variation in individual questions.

Jewish observances

With these limitations in mind, comparison of findings on Jewish observance, perception of antisemitism in Australia, and selected attitudinal questions has been undertaken. The four Jewish population surveys conducted in Melbourne (1967, 1991, 2008/9, 2017) and three relating to Sydney (1971, 2008/9, 2017) are considered, which provide scope for comparison of Melbourne and Sydney.

Questions relating to behaviour can be expected to be less influenced by changes in wording and survey context than attitudinal questions. One significant aspect of behaviour, the incidence of intermarriage, has been discussed earlier in this report (see p. 24).

A large degree of consistency in the Melbourne surveys is indicated for attendance at a Passover seder; across the four surveys, it is in the range 84%-86%. Fasting on Yom Kippur 'every year' declined between 1967 and 1991 (64%, 53%), was at close to the same level in 1991 and 2008/9 (53%, 56%), and further declined in 2017 (43%). Observance of Friday Sabbath 'always' or 'usually' finds a larger measure of consistency, in the range 67%-74%, but a decline of 7 percentage points between 2008/9 and 2017. With regard to synagogue attendance once or more per month, Melbourne surveys find an increase between 1967 and 2008/9 (from 15% to 32%), with the 2017 finding almost identical with 2008/9.

To the extent that direct comparisons can be made (see important caveats above), data for Sydney indicate that overall there has been a pattern of decline in observance since the 1970s though not on every indicator. Thus we see that there has been moderate decline in festival observance including a small decline in Passover seder attendance, and a steeper decline in fasting on Yom Kippur (though both trends could also be explained by changing age structures). A clear decline is observed with respect to synagogue attendance apparently halving in almost fifty years. However, Shabbat observance whilst apparently lower than in 2008/9 is actually higher than in the early 1970s.

[21] As previously noted, care should be taken in drawing direct comparisons between Gen08 and Gen17 data since unlike Gen17, the Gen08 data were not weighted to account for varying levels of Jewish identification.

Table A1.1: Selected Jewish observances, specified surveys

| | 1967 Melbourne | 1991 Melbourne | 2008/9 Melbourne | 2017 Melbourne | 1971 Sydney | 2008/9 Sydney | 2017 Sydney |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Hold or attend Passover seder each year | 84% | 84% | 86% | 84% | 82% | 84% | 78% |
| Fast on Yom Kippur every year | 64% | 53% | 56% | 43% | 80% | 61% | 42% |
| Observe Friday Sabbath with family always/ usually | 68% | 71% | 74% | 67% | 55% | 72% | 59% |
| Attend synagogue once or more per month | 15% | 22% | 32% | 31% | 42% | 31% | 19% |

* Melbourne Jewish Sociological Survey 1967, data tables; John Goldlust 1993, The Jews of Melbourne: A Community Profile. A Report on the Findings of the Jewish Community Survey, 1991; Encel S and Buckley B 1978 The New South Wales Jewish Community: A Survey

Antisemitism

Questions on perception of antisemitism asked across the four Melbourne surveys finds a decline in the proportion who regard the level of antisemitism in Australia to be 'very serious' or 'quite serious' between 1991 and 2008/9 (from 63% to 42%), and no change between the 2008/9 and 2017 surveys. The proportion indicating the strongest level of response, 'very serious', also declined, but by a smaller proportion (15% to 5%-6%). The question was asked with different wording in 1967.

Comparison of the Gen08 and Gen17 surveys finds similar level of concern in Melbourne and marginal increase in Sydney. In 2008/9 42% of respondents in Melbourne considered that antisemitism was 'very serious' or 'quite serious' in Australia; in 2017 the proportion was unchanged. In Sydney, however, the proportion increased from 39% to 44%.

Table A1.2: Perception of antisemitism in Australia, Melbourne surveys

| | 1967 'Extent of antisemitism in Australia' | 1991 'How serious a problem is antisemitism in Australia' | 2008/9 'How serious would you say antisemitism is in Australia' | 2017 'How big a problem is antisemitism in Australia...' |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 'Great'; 'very serious'; 'very big' | 7% | 12% | 5% | 6% |
| 'Fair amount'; 'quite serious'; 'fairly big' | 25% | 51% | 37% | 36% |

Attitudinal indicators

Three attitudinal indicators were considered for this first report: importance of being Jewish, concern about Jews marrying non-Jews, and level of concern for Israel's security.

Changes in question wording preclude the scope for comparison across the four surveys conducted in Melbourne, but Gen08 and Gen17 provide some scope for comparison of the two cities and of age groups, here considered with reference to respondents aged 18 to 29.

The main finding is the large measure of consistency in the pattern of response – there is much less variation in attitudinal indicators than in behavioural indicators.

The response to two of the questions indicates consistency for Melbourne and for Sydney between the two surveys – and also a consistent pattern of differentiation.

There is a marginal increase among those who indicate that 'being Jewish is a central element in my life;' in Melbourne the increase is from 31% to 36%, in Sydney from 22% to 24%. The proportion among those aged 18-29 increased from 34% to 39%.

The proportion indicating the highest level of concern 'about Jews marrying non-Jews' is consistent across the two surveys for each city, and among 18-29 year olds, but it is at a higher level in Melbourne than in Sydney (33%-33% Melbourne, 24%-25% Sydney). The proportion indicating 'some regret' finds increase in Sydney and among 18-29 year olds.

The final question considered, about level of concern for Israel's security, obtains findings consistent with the analysis presented in earlier sections of this report that found high levels of identification with Israel across a broad range of groups. Thus, the responses to this question show little difference as between Melbourne and Sydney. There is a decline between Gen08 and Gen 17 in the number of respondents expressing the strongest level of concern about Israel's security in Melbourne (from 23% to 16%) and among those aged 18-29 (from 18% to 12%) , but for both cities a strong level of concern is indicated by close to 75%.

Table A1.3: Selected attitudinal indicators*, Gen08 and Gen17 surveys

| Indicator* | Category | Gen08 Melbourne | Gen17 Melbourne | Gen08 Sydney | Gen17 Sydney | Gen08 Melbourne and Sydney combined, age 18-29 | Gen17 Melbourne and Sydney combined, age 18-29 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Sense of being Jewish | Being Jewish is a central element in my life | 31 | 36 | 22 | 24 | 34 | 39 |
| | A very important element | 49 | 47 | 54 | 55 | 45 | 47 |
| | Sub-total | 80 | 83 | 76 | 79 | 79 | 86 |
| Attitudes towards intermarriage | Concerned about Jews marrying non-Jews – 'very concerned'/ 'very considerable regret' | 32 | 33 | 24 | 25 | 25 | 23 |
| | 'Somewhat concerned'/ 'some regret' | 30 | 31 | 31 | 36 | 25 | 33 |
| | Sub-total | 62 | 64 | 55 | 61 | 50 | 56 |
| Concern for Israel's security | When Israel is in danger – 'as if my own life was in danger' | 23 | 16 | 17 | 15 | 18 | 12 |
| | 'A special alarm' | 55 | 57 | 57 | 59 | 52 | 51 |
| | Sub-total | 78 | 73 | 74 | 74 | 70 | 63 |

* Question wording: 'Which of the following best expresses your sense of being Jewish?' (Gen08 and Gen17); "When you hear about intermarriage in the community, how do you feel?' (Gen08); To what extent, if at all, are you personally concerned or unconcerned about intermarriage in Australia?' (Gen17); 'When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?' (Gen08 and Gen17)

APPENDIX 2: WORLD COMPARISONS

Several major Jewish communal studies have been carried out worldwide in recent years enabling us to contextualise the Gen17 data internationally.

In terms of Jewish behaviour, we can compare Australia with the United States, Israel and the UK. Israel exhibits consistently higher levels of Jewish commitment than the other populations and the US exhibits consistently lower levels. Australia tends to fall in between the two.

As is common across the Jewish world, attendance at a Passover seder is one of the most universally observed Jewish practises. Australians are more likely to observe this than their British and American counterparts, but not as likely as Israelis where Passover is effectively a national holiday. The High Holiday practice of fasting on Yom Kippur is another widely observed ritual although here we see that Australians are closer to the Americans than to the British.

Australian and British Jews exhibit similar levels of behaviour with respect to Sabbath observance (here measured in terms of lighting Shabbat candles on Friday night), again well ahead of American Jewry but not as pervasive as in Israel. But it is on the most stringent behavioural variable, keeping a kosher home where Australia is notably different. Here Australia is about on par with the United States (25%, 22%) and almost half the level of the UK (47%).

Figure A2.1: International comparisons of Jewish behaviour, various indicators, Australia, the United Kingdom, the United States and Israel compared

* UK: Graham D, Staetsky L, and Boyd J 2014 Jews in the United Kingdom in 2013: Preliminary findings from the National Jewish Community Survey, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, London; US: Pew Research Center 2013 Portrait of Jewish Americans, Findings from a Pew Research Center Survey of U.S. Jews (Question asked was: Do you keep kosher in your home?); Israel: Pew Research Center 2016 Israel's Religiously Divided Society. Data on Kosher meat include vegetarians.

Comparative data can also be assessed internationally with respect to the topic of Israel. The number of Australian Jews who have ever visited Israel is near universal and in that sense, it is very similar to the UK. But both Australia and the UK highlight how relatively low the level is in the US at less than half the Australian level.

Table A2.1: Proportion who have ever visited Israel. Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States compared

| | VISITED ISRAEL AT LEAST ONCE |
|---|---|
| Australia (Gen17) | 92% |
| UK (2010)* | 95% |
| US (2012) (Net Jewish)* | 43% |

* Graham D and Boyd J 2010 Committed, concerned and conciliatory: The attitudes of Jews in Britain towards Israel: Initial findings from the 2010 Israel Survey, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, London. p12; Pew Research Center 2013 Portrait of Jewish Americans, Findings from a Pew Research Center Survey of U.S. Jews, p175

British and Australian Jews were also asked whether they would describe themselves as being 'Zionist'. The data reveal remarkable levels of similarity in this respect with 70% in Australia and 72% in the UK describing themselves as Zionists.

Table A2.2: 'Although there are different opinions about what the term Zionism means, in general, do you consider yourself to be a Zionist?' Australia and the United Kingdom

| | AUSTRALIA (GEN17) | UK (2010)* |
|---|---|---|
| Yes | 70% | 72% |
| No | 22% | 21% |
| Don't know | 8% | 7% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

* UK: Graham D and Boyd J 2010 Committed, concerned and conciliatory: The attitudes of Jews in Britain towards Israel: Initial findings from the 2010 Israel Survey, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, London. p12

Finally we are also able to directly compare Jewish identity in the UK and Australia by means of responses to a set of attitudinal Jewish markers. In both countries, respondents were asked 'How important or unimportant is each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?' and again, a high level of similarity is observed. The relative ordering of the indicators is very similar with high importance attached to ethnocentric markers and low importance attached to religious markers. But one notable difference is that Australians attach a higher level of importance to ethnocentric markers than the British whereas the British attach a higher level of importance to religious markers.

Figure A2.2: 'How important or unimportant is each of the following to your own sense of Jewish identity?', Response = 'Very important', Australia and the United Kingdom

* UK: Graham D and Boyd J 2010 Committed, concerned and conciliatory: The attitudes of Jews in Britain towards Israel: Initial findings from the 2010 Israel Survey, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, London. p13

APPENDIX 3: METHODOLOGY

Questionnaire design

Whilst the survey instrument was broadly based on the Gen08 questionnaire,[22] it was by no means a carbon copy. In the first instance, the survey team was keen to try to shorten the length of the survey in order to reduce the time burden on respondents. But amendments were also implemented following a comprehensive consultation exercise with the community. For example, in NSW, the survey team met with key stakeholders and communal representatives (e.g. school presidents, the NSW Jewish Board of Deputies, the Community Security Group, the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, Jewish Care, and the Sydney Jewish Museum) to test questions and identify new topics and issues facing different service providers. Questions were also amended or removed where it was felt they had not worked optimally in the 2008 survey or were no longer relevant or required amending for other reasons.

One key difference made to the 2017 instrument was the implementation of a set of questions enabling the survey team to uniquely identify households without compromising the confidentiality requirements of Monash University's ethics review panel. Importantly, this avoided the possibility of double counting households, and also reduced the total response time burden by ensuring only one person in each household completed household-specific questions.

Sampling

It is not possible to carry out a random probability sample of Australian Jews, since no universal and up-to-date list of names and contact details exists from which a sample can be drawn. Therefore alternative approaches must be sought to identify Jews in a scientifically reasonable manner. In the United States, major national community studies (such an NJPS 2000-01 and the 2013 Pew Research Center Survey) have been carried out using random (or stratified-random) digit telephone dialling.[23] But in Australia, where the Jewish population, in relative terms, is four times rarer than in the US, and where the Jewish population is well understood from census data on religion, such a strategy is financially unviable, but also unnecessary.[24]

Thus, a pragmatic approach to sampling was devised considering the limited budgets available, but one that also minimised the extent to which data integrity might be compromised. The approach utilised and built on the methods successfully employed in the Gen08 project as well as those used internationally such as in the UK's 2013 NJCS study.[25]

Sampling procedure

The initial approach taken was a geographically stratified, non-probability convenience sample. It was carried out online[26] and eligibility was assessed by a series of questions starting with whether respondents saw themselves 'as being Jewish in any way at all'. Independent approaches to sampling were developed in order to maximise the response level. In NSW/ACT the sampling frame was initially based on a combined list provided by the extensive and very well-maintained databases held by JCA and the NSW Jewish Board of Deputies (NSWJBD). In Melbourne there is no community database of comparable size and reliability to those in Sydney. As a consequence, the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation (ACJC) worked with a wide range of community organisations to promote the Gen17 survey. A key partner, Jewish Care Victoria, posted invitations to participate to 3000 randomly selected households on their database and an additional 3000 on their email database. A follow up email was sent three weeks later. Other invitations were sent to email lists and via their

[22] Markus et al 2009 2008-09 Jewish Population Survey Preliminary Findings: Melbourne and Sydney, Monash University
[23] UJC 2004 The National Jewish Population Survey 2000-01: Strength, Challenge And Diversity In The American Jewish Population p28; Pew Research Center 2013 A Portrait of Jewish Americans: Findings from a Pew Research Center Survey of U.S. Jews p129
[24] Even though the US Jewish population is over 55 times larger than the Australian Jewish population it was still necessary for NJPS to screen 175,000 phone numbers and Pew to screen 71,000 phone numbers.
[25] Graham et al 2014 Jews in the United Kingdom in 2013: Preliminary findings from the National Jewish Community Survey, JPR newsletters by various organisations including synagogues and schools and other community organisations. In Melbourne the survey was also promoted via a designated Gen17 Facebook page and individuals were encouraged to promote the survey to their social media networks. An animated video was created which was viewed and shared in emails and on Facebook. The Gen17 Facebook page, managed by ACJC, generated 379 'followers', 10 (of several) posts were 'boosted' (i.e. turned into paid campaigns to a target audience) reaching 7,630 people and leaving 17,790 impressions.
[26] The survey could be completed on computers and tablet devices but not on mobile phones.

The survey was promoted for six weeks in both Sydney and Melbourne in paid advertising in the Australian Jewish News and in the Jewish Report. In Melbourne promotional cards were distributed at key communal events, outside kosher establishments, on university campuses and at the In One Voice festival. A promotional flier was generated for the elderly community and distributed by Jewish Care and Emmy Monash, encouraging members of their family to help them complete the survey. A flier was also translated into Russian and distributed by Jewish Care and members of the Russian Jewish community. The survey was also promoted to Israelis via specific Facebook groups, websites and blogs.

In NSW/ACT sampling was carried out in three stages: direct invitation (seed list), referrals and open web survey. Initially reliance was placed on utilising the full database assembled from JCA and NSWJBD—the seed list. Each email invitation was uniquely embedded with a link enabling invitees to open the survey but also allow them to leave the survey and return to the same point they exited if they were unable to complete it in a single sitting. Up to three rounds of reminders were subsequently issued to those who had not responded or eligible respondents who had only partially responded. To further broaden the survey beyond those already included on the seed list, all NSW/ACT respondents were asked, on completion of the survey, if they would forward a pre-prepared email text inviting other Jewish people to take part. These 'referrals' were instructed to either contact JCA by email or enter their email address in a submission page hosted by the survey administrators. In each case, once assessed for duplication, referrals were then sent uniquely linked invitations to take part. This developed what was initially a convenience sample into a snowball sample. Finally, towards the end of the fieldwork stage, an open survey was launched by advertising the email submission page on JCA's own Gen17 Facebook page allowing any potential respondent to opt in and submit their email address. Once assessed for duplication, they too were sent an invitation to participate.

Almost two out of five (38%) NSW/ACT respondents took up the opportunity to invite 'other Jewish people, by email, to complete the survey' but it is not possible to determine how many of these people actually followed through. However, a total of 326 respondents can be identified as referrals (7% of the NSW response and 27% of the ACT response). Further analysis indicates that this sub-set of referred respondents is demographically more representative of the Jewish population than the invited sample. For example, unadjusted data show that 24% of the NSW/ACT sample is under 40 years old, but this is the case for 34% of the invited sample and 32% in the 2011 census. And 49% of referrals are male compared with 44% in the invited sample and 48% in the 2011 census. It is also more representative of the whole Jewish community since 42% are not synagogue members compared with 30% in the invited sample.

In Victoria those who received a direct invitation to participate were also provided with a password providing access to the survey; people could also visit the survey website and request a password, which was sent to them by an automated survey. A significant finding, as presented in this report, is the large measure of consistency in response across the two major states surveyed, which was obtained despite the different approaches to recruitment of participants.

The Gen17 survey questionnaire was highly complex and necessitated the recruitment of a professional polling company to program the online instrument, send out and track thousands of unique invitations, and securely collect and collate the responses. The international polling company Research Now was enlisted for this task based on the success of previous collaborations with ACJC and work on Gen08 itself.

The team also undertook a sophisticated marketing campaign prior to, and during, the fieldwork. This was designed to increase communal awareness of the project pre-launch and publicise it as widely as possible during the fieldwork period. To do this, a professional PR/ad agency was enlisted to create a design concept, theme, logo, branding and messaging for the campaign using traditional and new media outlets. Finally, to encourage maximum participation, a financial incentive was offered in the form of a prize draw for the chance to win one of three cash vouchers each worth $400AUD.

Response diagnostics

The graph below plots the total time taken to complete the Gen17 survey by frequency. This shows most respondents completed the survey in between half an hour and three quarters of an hour; the modal[27] time taken was 37 minutes. This is reflective of the considerable investment by respondents in the Gen17 project. It also shows a long tail (truncated at 120 minutes in the graph) since many people completed the survey in multiple sittings and did not necessarily log out of the system between sessions.

The median[28] time taken to complete the survey was 49 minutes. However, Householders (i.e. those randomly selected to complete household-specific questions) took slightly longer to do so (52 minutes) than non-householders (46 minutes). Respondents in NSW spent longer completing the survey (53 minutes) than respondents in Victoria (45 minutes).

Figure A3.1: Time taken to complete Gen17 questionnaire

* This chart shows 80% of the data. For reasons of space we have not shown the long tail of data beyond 120 minutes (see text)

[27] The mode is the point in a distribution where the highest frequency occurs (in other words 'the most').
[28] The median of a distribution is the point where half the population is below the point and half is above.

Gen17 was in the field for just under 14 weeks. It went live on 15 February 2017 and was finally closed on 22 May 2017. The chart below shows the response pattern for the two independent sampling frames, JCA (NSW and ACT) and ACJC (Victoria and the rest of Australia). Because quite different approaches were taken we can see the response patterns are distinct. The centralised database used in NSW/ACT enabled mass email-outs and this shows that following the initial invitation (17 February) two further peaks were in response to two reminder emails being sent out (28 February and 12 March). But for Victoria and the rest of Australia, where there was no centralised list, each major organisation needed to be dealt with separately and this can be seen in the lower but more frequent set of peaks throughout much of the duration of the period. Despite the two different approaches taken, we still obtained very similar response patterns in the two samples.

Figure A3.2: Response rate by date respondents started the survey by sampling frame

*RoA = Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania and Northern Territory

Sample evaluation and data weighting

It was the intention of the survey team to achieve a very large sample in order to facilitate more detailed statistical analyses. The final Gen17 sample size was 8,621 respondents including 4,571 unique households. (The survey also contains information on other household members so in total there are data on 13,643 people.)

The size of the Gen17 sample is enormous by any comparative standards and almost 50% larger than the Gen08 survey containing 5,840 respondents. Since there were between 85,000 and 90,000 Jewish people aged 18 and above in Australia in 2016[29], Gen17 represents 10% of the entire Jewish population. The sheer size of the sample means that detailed sub-group analyses can be carried out that are simply not feasible using smaller sample sets. By way of contextualisation, the 2013 Pew survey of the United States' Jewish community contains a sample of 3,475 Jewish respondents[30] for a population of six million Jews and the UK's NJCS achieved a sample of 3,736 respondents[31] for a population of 300,000 Jewish people. The New York 2011 study (population 1.5 million) contained 5,993 responses making it 'the largest such study ever conducted in North America'[32].

[29] The number of people aged 18 or over in 2016 was 71,479. However, this is the reported number unadjusted for non-response due to the voluntary nature of the religion question. Further, the 2016 Census changed the format of the religion question which further depressed the likelihood of Jews reporting their religion as Jewish.

However the key question, as far as the quality of the data are concerned, is less about the absolute size of the sample and more about its representativeness. Given Gen17 is a non-probability sample, even a very large sample size may be skewed towards certain demographics and particular sections of the community who are more predisposed to such a survey than others. In the post-field context, the best way to address this issue is through weighting. In this regard Australia is fortunate in being able to rely on high-quality quinquennial national census data that includes a voluntary question on religion to bolster communal surveys.[33]

Weights have been applied to the final dataset in order to statistically adjust the data so that they more accurately reflect the known structure and distribution of Jews in Australia. For example, since the survey was primarily focused on NSW, VIC and ACT, other states were likely to be undersampled. Similarly, since the survey was carried out online people such as the very elderly were more likely to be undersampled. Weighting adjusts the actual data so that they align with a reliable baseline such as the census. Weights were created to adjust the survey data in line with 2016 Census[34] results on age, sex, state, and country of birth.

Further, a survey like Gen17 is also vulnerable to oversampling the communally engaged and connected as compared with communally distant and less engaged Jews. No amount of census weighting can adjust for this type of self-selection bias. Therefore, in addition to the census baseline data, a synagogue membership survey was carried out in NSW and Victoria to provide a baseline measure of Jewish communal engagement with which to further weight the data.[35] By subtracting the total membership figures from the total population size recorded in the 2016 census,[36] it was possible to create a baseline for weighting by 'Jewish identity': 1) those affiliated to an Orthodox synagogue; 2) those affiliated to a non-Orthodox synagogue; [37] and 3) those not affiliated to any synagogue.

In addition to the above measures taken to ensure the data are as representative as possible, we can also carry out some basic comparisons with fine-grained census data. For example, what evidence is there to indicate that the sample obtained is indeed representative of the Jewish community? This question can be considered with reference to the two major centres of Jewish population, Melbourne and Sydney, where close to 90% of the survey respondents were located.

Examination of the 2011 and 2016 Australian censuses in terms of the geographic location of the Jewish population shows consistent findings between the location of the Jewish population and the geographic location of survey respondents. Tables A3.1 and A3.2 indicate the distribution of the Jewish population in the census and Gen17 survey. Suburbs are ranked in terms of Jewish population size; first the five suburbs with the largest Jewish population, then succeeding groupings by five suburbs. Comparison with the weighted

---

[30] Pew Research Center 2013 Portrait of Jewish Americans, Findings from a Pew Research Center Survey of U.S. Jews p119
[31] Graham et al 2014 Jews in the United Kingdom in 2013: Preliminary findings from the National Jewish Community Survey, JPR p41
[32] Cohen SM, Ukeles JB, and Miller R 2012 Jewish Community Study of New York: 2011 Comprehensive Report, UJA-Federation of New York, p5
[33] Graham D 2014 The Jewish Population of Australia Key findings from the 2011 Census
[34] It was mentioned earlier in this report that changes in the formatting of the census question on religion between 2011 and 2016 give us cause for concern about the accuracy of the 2016 Census count for Jews (and some other religious groups). However, we have taken the view that although these changes probably resulted in a Jewish undercount in 2016, our initial assessment suggests the relative (between-group) measures should still be reliable. As such, 2016 Census data form the basis of the Gen17 survey weighting.
[35] Synagogue membership data were gathered in NSW by the NSW Jewish Board of Deputies and in Victoria by researchers at the ACJC at Monash University. Despite considerable effort, attempts to gather synagogue membership data in other states and territories could not be achieved in a timely manner.
[36] As discussed, this was complicated by concerns that the 2016 Census data appear to have undercounted the total size of the Jewish population relative to the 2011 census. Detailed examination of this issue is ongoing but for the purposes of Gen17 the 2016 Census is assumed to have surveyed 88.4% of the Jewish population it would have sampled had the question format remained unchanged from 2011. Note this adjustment does not account for any non-response that may have occurred due to the voluntary nature of the census question.
[37] Orthodox = Hareidi, Strictly Orthodox, Modern Orthodox, Inclusive Orthodox, Chabad, Orthodox, and Sephardi synagogues; Non-Orthodox = Masorti, Progressive and Renewal, Progressive and Egalitarian, Conservative/Masorti, Liberal/Reform, and Jewish Humanist synagogues.

Gen17 data, which has been used throughout this report, is comparable to within 3 percentage points, an acceptable margin of error for such sample data.

Table A3.1 Geography – suburb of residence, Melbourne

| SUBURBS % OF JEWISH POPULATION | SUBURBS INCLUDE | 2011 CENSUS | 2016 CENSUS | GEN17 UNWEIGHTED | GEN17 WEIGHTED* |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Rank 1-5 | Caulfield/Caulfield North/ St Kilda East/Bentleigh | 49.7% | 50.4% | 56.2% | 52.6% |
| Rank 6-10 | Elsternwick/Carnegie/Toorak/ Brighton/Brighton East | 18.0% | 17.6% | 17.0% | 17.9% |
| Rank 11-15 | Windsor/Malvern/Malvern East/ Armadale/South Yarra | 7.0% | 7.0% | 8.4% | 8.1% |
| Rank 16-20 | Glen Iris/Elwood/St Kilda/ Cheltenham/Hawthorn East | 5.2% | 4.8% | 4.7% | 4.7% |

* Note Gen17 weights only accounted for state-level geography, not sub-state level

Table A3.2 Geography – suburb of residence, Sydney

| SUBURBS % OF JEWISH POPULATION | SUBURBS INCLUDE | 2011 CENSUS | 2016 CENSUS | GEN17 UNWEIGHTED | GEN17 WEIGHTED* |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Rank 1-5 | Bondi/ Vaucluse/ Dover Heights/ Watsons Bay/ Rose Bay/Bellevue Hill/ St Ives | 41.7% | 41.1% | 47.8% | 41.9% |
| Rank 6-10 | Maroubra/ Randwick/ Bondi Junction/ Queens Park Darling Point/ Point Piper/ Edgecliff/ Matraville | 15.6% | 16.2% | 17.1% | 18.8% |
| Rank 11-15 | Coogee/ Woollahra/ Double Bay/ Kingsford/ Daceyville/ Bronte/ Waverley | 7.0% | 7.1% | 8.6% | 8.2% |
| Rank 16-20 | Paddington/ Centennial Park Riverview/Lane Cove Waterloo/ Zetland/Kensington Darlinghurst/ Surry Hills | 5.0% | 4.8% | 4.5% | 4.8% |

* Note Gen17 weights only accounted for state-level geography, not sub-state level

It is also possible to compare demographic indicators in the Gen08 and Gen17 surveys to establish if like is being compared with like. Have the two surveys reached a similar cross-section of the Jewish community, or are these significantly different samples that would invalidate their use in establishing change (or otherwise) over the last decade?[38]

One directly comparable indicator is self-assessed financial status. Respondents were asked in both surveys 'which of the following best describes your financial status/circumstances?' There is again a high level of consistency in response in the weighted results (Tables A3.3), with a maximum variation under 3 percentage points within the categories.

[38] As previously noted, care should be taken in drawing direct comparisons between Gen08 and Gen17 data. Unlike Gen17, the Gen08 data were not weighted to account for varying levels of Jewish identification. In other words, Gen08 data are more likely than Gen17 data to have over-represented the more engaged sections of the Jewish population.

Table A3.3: Which of the following best describes your financial status (Gen08) / circumstances (Gen17)? Melbourne and Sydney

| | GEN08 MELBOURNE | GEN17 MELBOURNE | GEN08 SYDNEY | GEN17 SYDNEY |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Prosperous | 5.7% | 5.7% | 5.8% | 7.3% |
| Living very comfortably | 28.9% | 26.6% | 30.8% | 28.2% |
| Living reasonably comfortably | 45.7% | 45.7% | 41.7% | 43.2% |
| Just getting along | 14.4% | 16.0% | 15.5% | 15.3% |
| Nearly poor | 1.2% | 2.1% | 1.1% | 1.5% |
| Poor | 0.9% | 1.0% | 0.8% | 0.7% |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 3.2% | 2.9% | 4.2% | 3.8% |
| Total | 100% | 100% | 100% | 100% |

* Columns may not sum to 100% due to rounding

APPENDIX 4: RESPONDENT PROFILE

The respondent profile (unweighted counts) relevant to sub-group analysis presented in this report is as follows:

Table A4.1: State

| New South Wales | Victoria | Queensland | South Australia | Western Australia | Tasmania | Northern Territory | Australian Capital Territory | Total |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 3,938 | 4,109 | 138 | 56 | 249 | 29 | 7 | 95 | 8621 |

Table A4.2: Age

| | SYDNEY | MELBOURNE | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|
| 18-29 years | 389 | 664 | 1,053 |
| 30-39 years | 561 | 628 | 1,189 |
| 40-49 years | 699 | 771 | 1,470 |
| 50-59 years | 686 | 641 | 1,327 |
| 60-69 years | 893 | 792 | 1,685 |
| 70-79 years | 528 | 434 | 962 |
| 80-89 years | 158 | 152 | 310 |
| 90 years+ | 24 | 27 | 51 |
| Total | 3,938 | 4,109 | 8,047 |

Table A4.3: Current religious identification

| | SYDNEY | MELBOURNE | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|
| Strictly Orthodox | 60 | 390 | 450 |
| Modern Orthodox | 1,005 | 904 | 1,909 |
| Traditional | 1,317 | 1,192 | 2,509 |
| Conservative | 216 | 138 | 354 |
| Progressive/ Reform | 492 | 497 | 989 |
| No denomination - just Jewish | 318 | 291 | 609 |
| Non-practising / Secular | 440 | 482 | 922 |
| Total | 3,848 | 3,894 | 7,742 |

Table A4.4: Gen08 and Gen17

| | GEN08 | GEN17 |
|---|---|---|
| Sydney + Melbourne combined | 5,101 | 8,047 |

Table A4.5: Country of birth

| SYDNEY + MELBOURNE COMBINED | THIRD GENERATION AUSTRALIAN | SOUTH AFRICA | ISRAEL | FORMER SOVIET UNION | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| All | 1,242 | 1,570 | 436 | 323 | 3,571 |
| Arrived in Australia after 1980 | - | 1,398 | 326 | 235 | 1,959 |

Table A4.6: Country of birth by age group

| AGE | SOUTH AFRICA | ISRAEL | FORMER SOVIET UNION | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 18-39 | 302 | 151 | 68 | 521 |
| 40-69 | 903 | 170 | 135 | 1,208 |

Table A4.7: Partnership status and religion of partner by state

| | PARTNER JEWISH | PARTNER NOT JEWISH | NO PARTNER |
|---|---|---|---|
| New South Wales | 1,187 | 256 | 629 |
| Victoria | 1,237 | 233 | 666 |
| Queensland | 31 | 29 | 29 |
| South Australia | 10 | 16 | 16 |
| Western Australia | 77 | 23 | 40 |
| Tasmania/Northern Territory* | 9 | 10 | 6 |
| Australian Capital Territory | 18 | 25 | 24 |
| Total | 2,569 | 592 | 1,410 |

* Categories combined for reasons of confidentiality

Gen17

JCA today tomorrow forever

MONASH University
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-3" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

CROSSROADS23
SURVEYING AUSTRALIAN JEWS ON ISRAEL

Preliminary analysis by Emeritus Professor Andrew Markus
Monash University
Produced by Plus61J Media
June 14, 2023

PLUS 61J MEDIA

CONTENTS

Introduction ..... 3

Background to the survey ..... 4

Questionnaire and sample ..... 6

Achieved sample and data cleaning ..... 7

Overview of Crossroads23 findings ..... 10

- Identification with Israel ..... 11
- Israeli-Palestinian conflict ..... 14
- Israeli democracy ..... 15
- Judicial reform ..... 17
- Disunity in the Jewish world ..... 18
- Consultations with the Diaspora ..... 18
- Changing attitudes – the past five years ..... 20

Sub-group analysis

- Organisational alignment: Zionist Federation of Australia and Plus61J Media ..... 22
- Age and sex ..... 25
- Political alignment and religious identification ..... 26

Appendix 1: Demographic profile ..... 30

Appendix 2: Questionnaire ..... 32

INTRODUCTION

Plus61J Media creates platforms for a diverse range of voices on issues of interest to Australia, Israel and the Jewish world. When the Office of Israel's president launched Kol Ha'am – Voice of the People to consult with Diaspora communities, we wanted to ensure that the many voices of our community would be heard.

Crossroads23: Surveying Australian Jews on Israel produced a cleaned data sample of 1080 self-selected respondents in a week. The response alone is an indication that members of the community feel strongly about Israel and want to express their opinions.

The survey results indicate a strong baseline identification with Israel: 90% agree that it is important that the Australian Jewish community maintains close ties with Israel, 88% feel a high level of personal connectedness with Israel, 86% agree that the existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people, 83% keep up with Israeli current events involving Israel and 80% indicate a high level of concern for Israel's safety.

BUT FAITH IN ISRAEL'S FUTURE IS FAR FROM STRONG WITH 57% INDICATING THEY ARE OPTIMISTIC ABOUT ISRAEL'S FUTURE, 42% PESSIMISTIC AND 8% UNCERTAIN.

Responses are weaker still when the survey drills down to current issues, and comparison with the Gen17 survey shows a marked decline in Australian Jews' faith in Israel's politics and society. Only 46% agree that democracy is "alive and well", in sharp contrast with the 76% obtained for this question in the Gen17 survey; 77% agree that "there is too much corruption in Israel's political system" (up from 48%) and 85% agree that "Orthodox Judaism has too much influence" (up from 62%). Asked about their changing feelings, 66% of respondents say they feel less confident Israel is a democratic country than they did five years ago. The lowest positive response comes in relation to judicial reform which only 14% of respondents consider good for Israel.

In relation to the Israel-Palestinian conflict, the survey also finds a declining confidence in Israel's policies: 57% of respondents agree less with Israeli policy than they did five years and a minority 41% believe that Israel's control of the West Bank is vital for Israel's security. But 56% believe a viable solution to the conflict is possible.

The survey indicates that Australian Jews feel a strong stake in Israel and a right to be involved: 79% agree "It is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies". In particular, they believe Diaspora Jews have a stake in Israel's policies on Jewish status (75%), recognition of pluralism (67%) and the role of Orthodox Judaism (62%). More than half also consider Diaspora Jews should voice their opinions on the situation of Palestinians in the West Bank/Gaza, women's rights, judicial reform, LGBTQI+ rights and Arab citizenship rights. But there is little confidence that Diaspora Jews' input will be respected, with 57% agreeing with the proposition that "Israelis do not care what Diaspora Jews think".

Producing this data in the very short timeframe between the announcement of the Kol Ha'am Australian consultation and the event was a remarkable achievement. It could not have happened without the dedicated work of Professor Andrew Markus and the tremendous efforts of the Plus61J Media team. We hope it will contribute to a fruitful consultation that enhances the relationship between Israel and Diaspora Jews.

Deborah Stone

Editor-in-Chief, Plus61J Media

BACKGROUND TO THE SURVEY

An invitation to participate in a series of consultations was issued to members of 15 Jewish communities worldwide by the President of Israel, Isaac Herzog, in May 2023. His message inviting participation stated:

> We are celebrating 75 years of Israel, a momentous milestone for our nation. Over the years, we have risen from the ashes of great catastrophes and cultivated a thriving centre of Jewish life that is innovative, creative, and a force of good in the world. However, the growing distance between our Jewish communities concerns me deeply. The gaps between us are widening, and we struggle to agree on essential issues. Even more concerning, we are often unable to discuss them, eroding the critical web of connectedness that has sustained our people for millennia. This lack of contact is leading to indifference, which undermines our sense of belonging and collective story.
>
> As a culture, we celebrate dialogue and acknowledge that we must listen and learn from one another in order to grow. It is with great pleasure that I announce the creation of Voice of the People: A Worldwide Jewish Dialogue. This is a first-of-its-kind global council for Jewish dialogue, designed to be a collaborative, nonpartisan, and apolitical forum - a Jewish Davos, so to speak - that can accommodate and reflect the full and diverse range of Jewish voices.
>
> This platform is where we can engage in meaningful, sensitive, and strategic discussions on the most complex and pressing issues facing our people. We can come up with concrete proposals and action items to address, while cultivating the next generation of Jewish leaders who can bear the torch of our peoplehood and infuse it with new life, keeping it relevant, buoyant, and alive. This is not a one-time gathering but a framework for an ongoing conversation and dialogue, under the auspices of the President of Israel, for all Jews today and for generations to come.
>
> In pursuit of this vision, I have enlisted The Jewish Agency and the World Zionist Organization to help me transform it into reality. Now, we reach out to you. To further develop this vision collaboratively, we have organised a series of "strategic labs" facilitated by a professional team from the international consulting firm Deloitte, in 15 major Jewish communities worldwide, including Israel, Latin and Central America, Europe, South Africa, Australia, and North America.
>
> I cordially invite you, as Jewish leaders, to participate in one of these labs, to help us develop this vision into a viable operating model. For those who cannot join physically, virtual labs will also be held on Zoom.
>
> I strongly encourage you to participate in one of the labs and express your thoughts and concerns. This is an opportunity for you to help shape the future of our collective community. Let us commit to working hand in hand and shoulder to shoulder to shape our shared future and write the next chapter in the story of our people.

In response to the President's initiative, Plus61J Media initiated a survey to give all members of the Australian Jewish community an opportunity to voice their views. The invitation from Plus61J Media was presented in terms of a historic opportunity, with Israel reaching out to the Diaspora for the first time in its history. In an email distributed on May 30, it explained:

CROSSROADS23: SURVEYING AUSTRALIAN JEWS ON ISRAEL IS A ONE-OFF OPPORTUNITY TO COMMUNICATE YOUR VIEWS ON ISRAEL THROUGH A DIRECT LINE TO THE OFFICE OF ISRAEL'S PRESIDENT.

Australian Jews have a brief opportunity to register their feelings about Israel in a survey which will feed into an international project to better connect the Diaspora and Israel.

Plus61J Media has initiated Crossroads23: Surveying Australian Jews on Israel to enable all Australian Jews to have their say in an international consultation project, Kol Ha'am – Voice of the People, initiated by the office of Israel's president.

The aim of this survey is to provide input into forthcoming discussions at Melbourne's workshop for Kol Ha'am on Sunday, June 18.

Kol Ha'am, subtitled The President's Initiative for Worldwide Jewish Dialogue, is a global consultation project to reconnect Israel with the Diaspora. It was created in response to the growing divide between Israeli and Diaspora Jews, which has been brought to a head by the controversial judicial overhaul proposals.

The Australian [forum] ... will be held in Melbourne on June 18 for invited delegates. But Plus61J Media has launched the survey to ensure all Australian Jews have the opportunity to contribute. The Zionist Federation of Australia will distribute the survey to its affiliates and Plus61J Media is seeking wider participation to ensure the broadest spectrum of views.

"Kol Ha'am means the Voice of the People and that should be all the people. We want as many Australian Jews as possible to have their say on what they feel and believe about Israel through this survey," said Plus61J Media publisher Uri Windt.

"The timetable set by Israel is very short, so it is essential people fill in the survey straight away and share it widely," he said.

The survey is anonymous. Data will be analysed and reported by Emeritus Professor Andrew Markus, Monash University.

The Plus61J Media initiative was supported by the Zionist Federation of Australia, which also promoted the survey by email and social media on May 30. The ZFA described the survey in the following terms:

CROSSROADS23: SURVEYING AUSTRALIAN JEWS ON ISRAEL

The Australian Jewish community has a unique opportunity to voice their opinions on key topics related to the relationship between Israel and the Australian Jewish community. The data this survey creates will help inform discussion at the Kol Ha'am - Voice of the People conference, an important project initiated by the President of Israel, Isaac Herzog.

Hosted by Plus 61J Media, the survey's aim is to provide input from a wide spectrum of Australian Jewry perspectives into the discussions that will take place at the Melbourne-based conference.

For the survey to be as accurate and well-rounded as possible, it's really important for as many Australian Jews – from across the political spectrum and from across Australia – to provide their outlooks on Israel and the Jewish people.

The survey is anonymous, takes only 10-15 minutes to complete and will make a great impact on the quality of the discussions held in the Kol Ha'am - Voice of the People conference.

I'VE COMPLETED THE SURVEY, NOW WHAT?

This survey's accuracy is dependent on the participation of as many Australian Jews as possible. Send the link to your Jewish friends, families, colleagues and neighbours and encourage them to complete the survey as soon as possible.

The survey closes on Tuesday, June 6, and can be completed from your computer or mobile device.

QUESTIONNAIRE DESIGN

The questionnaire drew on a number of sources: the Gen17 Australian Jewish communal survey, conducted in 2017, recent surveys conducted in Jewish communities in the United States and England, and questions suggestions by Plus61J Media and the Zionist Federation of Australia.

The questionnaire comprised eight substantive questions, including one with 14 sub-questions and one with five. In addition, there were two open-ended questions and 12 demographic questions. A copy of the questionnaire is included in the appendix to this report.

The thematic areas covered by questionnaire included:

- Identification with Israel (eight questions)
- The Israeli-Palestinian conflict (two)
- Functioning of Israeli democracy (three)
- The controversy over the Israeli government's plan for judicial reform (two)
- Disunity in the Jewish world (one)
- Consultations with the Diaspora (three)

The questions covering the thematic areas were followed by five questions dealing with change in attitudes over the past five years, concerned with:

- Sense of connection with Israel
- Israeli democracy
- Policy towards Palestinians
- Advocating for Israel among the respondent's Jewish friends
- Advocating for Israel among non-Jewish friends

The survey included 12 demographic questions, to provide scope to establish the profile of the achieved sample, which was benchmarked against the 2021 census and the community profile indicated by the Gen17 survey, which was completed by 8,6210 respondents. The key demographic questions covered age, gender, country of birth, state where the respondent lives, stream of Judaism, political views, visits to Israel, time spent in Israel, relatives and close friends who are resident in Israel, and organisational membership or affiliation.

The two open-ended questions concerned critical challenges facing the Jewish people and perception of the Australian Jewish community's responsibility to Israel. The findings of the open-ended questions will be reported at a later time, once the responses have been coded for analysis.

SURVEY ADMINISTRATION

As noted, the survey was promoted by Plus61J Media and the Zionist Federation of Australia. The survey was only available for completion online, using one of five entry points provided – separate links were provided to enable tracking of respondents. The five points of access were:

1. Crossroad23, the link promoted for Plus61J Media respondents, which was also shared by the ZFA to its affiliates
2. ZFA organisational link
3. Plus61J Media social media link
4. ZFA social media link
5. Australian Jewish News, link provided in a front-page advertisement

The survey was open for eight days, between May 30 and June 6. The survey was accessed on 1511 occasions. Nearly all of the access (1357 cases) was through the Crossroads23 link, with small numbers accessing the link provided in the Australian Jewish News (17), Plus61J Media social media (31), ZFA organisational (79) and ZFA social media (27).

DATA CLEANING

It was recognised that there was risk of fraudulent completion of the survey, with multiple surveys completed by the one person, some possibly motivated by hostility to the Jewish community.

To lessen the risk, the achieved sample was examined with attention to time taken for completion, repeat entry to the survey from the one internet enabled device, and pattern response.

With regard to time taken to complete the survey, examination of the data file indicated that 180 persons entered the survey but exited within two minutes, while another 49 persons began the survey but exited within four minutes. A check of the online site found that it was possible to complete the survey in under four minutes if the open-ended questions were skipped, although not many would be able to complete in such a short time. Most surveys were completed between five and 11 minutes, and the median for completion was 11 minutes and 30 seconds. A number of survey completions (14.7%) took over 23 minutes, possibly a reflection of the age of respondents and respondents failing to exit the survey, with their internet connection left open.

Indication of time to complete is provided in Table 1. For analysis, the 229 surveys that were completed under four minutes were excluded. The data file with these exclusions comprised 1282 cases and are referenced as Crossroads23 [A] in this report.

Table 1 Crossroad23 survey: completion time

| Minutes (seconds in brackets) | Number of surveys | Percentage (cumulative percentage in brackets) |
|---|---|---|
| 0–2 (>119) | 180 | 11.9 |
| 2–4 (120-239) | 49 | 4.3 (15.2) |
| 4–5 (240-299) | 40 | 2.6 (17.8) |
| 5–8 (300-479) | 269 | 17.8 (35.6) |
| 8–11 (480-659) | 287 | 19.0 (54.6) |
| 11–14 (660-839) | 215 | 14.2 (68.8) |
| 14–17 (840-1019) | 121 | 8.0 (76.8) |
| 17–20 (1020-1199) | 71 | 4.7 (81.5) |
| 20–23 (1200-1379) | 57 | 3.8 (85.3) |
| 23+ (1400+) | 222 | 14.7 (100) |

A second check of respondents was made with reference to the number of surveys completed on the one internet device (computer or telephone), made possible by the IP address of the device captured in the case record. It was found that seven surveys were completed from one IP address, six surveys from a second IP address. The data obtained from these two IP addresses was manually checked and did not disclose pattern response, for example, consistent negative responses to all or most questions.

In addition, 13 devices were used three times to complete the survey and 75 devices to complete the survey twice. The large majority of surveys, 1080, were completed on individual devices. The analysis of IP addresses is provided in Table 2.

A second data set was created and restricted to the 1080 cases with surveys completed on individual devices. This data set is referenced as Crossroads23 [B] in this report. In the overview of survey findings, data from Crossroads23 [A] and Crossroads23 [B] is presented side by side. The result obtained from the two data sets is almost identical, with responses consistent within one percentage point.

Table 2 IP address of surveys commenced (excluding surveys closed in under 4 minutes)

| Unique IP address, number of times used to access the survey | Frequency | Cases | Percentage |
|---|---|---|---|
| 7 | 1 | 7 | 0.5 |
| 6 | 1 | 6 | 0.5 |
| 3 | 13 | 39 | 3.0 |
| 2 | 75 | 150 | 11.7 |
| 1 | 1080 | 1080 | 84.2 |

Hence this cleaning of the survey data has produced two data sets, Crossroads23 [A] comprising 1282 respondents (surveys completed in more than four minutes) and Crossroads23 [B] with 1080 respondents (surveys completed in more than four minutes and no more than one survey completion on an individual device).

THE ACHIEVED SAMPLE

There were three approaches to determining the character of the achieved sample: comparison of identical questions in the Gen17 and Crossroads23 surveys; the 2021 Australian census; and analysis with reference to segments of the community.

Comparison with the Gen17 survey finds that the respondents to the Crossroads23 survey were more connected with Israel, and with more positive attitudes to Israel when questions of a general nature, as distinct from current developments, were considered.

As summarised in Table 3, 77% of Crossroads23 respondents identified as Zionist, compared with 71% in Gen17; 74% of Crossroads23 respondents indicated that they had visited Israel three or more times, compared with 65% Gen17; 72% of Crossroads23 respondents had family and close friends living in Israel, compared with 59%-65% in Gen17.

Table 3 Gen17 and Crossroads23 surveys compared, selected questions

| | Gen17 % | Crossroads [A] % | Crossroads23 [B] % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Identification as Zionist | 71 | 77 | 77 |
| Concern when Israel is in danger – top two indications of concern | 77 | 80 | 80 |
| Number of times visited Israel – three or more | 65 | 74 | 74 |
| Close family living in Israel | 65 | 72 | 72 |
| Close friends living in Israel | 59 | 72 | 72 |
| Number | 8621 | 1282 | 1080 |

As to be expected, in a survey available only for a brief period of eight days and promoted most effectively using organisational email and social media, those with organisational connections will be over-represented. A key finding of the demographic analysis is that the younger members of the community, always difficult to survey, were under-represented in the Crossroads23 survey. The census finding is that 37% of people of Jewish faith are under the age of 44, a much lower 18% in Crossroads23; 32% are aged 65 or over, in the Crossroads23 survey 51%.

With regard to other demographic indicators, the survey did surprisingly well, given the limited time it was available and limited promotion. Thus, 53% of the survey respondents are female, within one percentage point of the census; 55% of the survey respondents were born in Australia, again within one percentage point of the census finding for the population over the age of 18; 50% of the survey respondents live in Victoria, within three percentage points of the census.

Table 4 Sample profile, percentage

| SEX | Female | Male | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Crossroads23 [B] | 53 | 46 | | | | |
| Census | 52 | 48 | | | | |
| AGE | 18-34 | 35-44 | 45-54 | 55-64 | 65-74 | 75+ |
| Crossroads23 [B] | 9 | 9 | 12 | 19 | 32 | 19 |
| Census | 22 | 15 | 16 | 15 | 18 | 14 |
| BIRTHPLACE | Australia | South Africa | Israel | Russian Fed./ Ukraine | England | US |
| Crossroads23 [B] | 55 | 11 | 10 | 1 | 6 | 3 |
| Census | 56 | 13 | 7 | 3 | 4 | 3 |
| STATE | Victoria | NSW | Queensland | Western Australia | South Australia | ACT |
| Crossroads23 [B] | 50 | 37 | 7 | 2 | 1 | 2 |
| Census | 47 | 40 | 5 | 6 | 1 | 1 |

The 2021 census data is for Jewish religion, aged 18 or above, Australia

A third and most important way of locating a non-probability survey, such as Crossroads23, in its community is by analysis focused on population sub-groups. While the achieved sample may be skewed at the community level, for some sub-groups with significant number of respondents (in this survey notably those affiliated with Zionist organisations and Plus61J Media), the skew is less, providing a reliable insight into the pattern of opinion within these segments. The third part of this report presents the survey findings for sub-groups.

Figure 1: Israel connections

OVERVIEW OF CROSSROADS23 FINDINGS

An overview of the survey finds strongest positive response for general questions related to Israel. Thus, 77% of respondents indicate that they identify as a Zionist, 90% agree that it is important that the Australian Jewish community maintains close ties with Israel, 88% feel a high level of personal connectedness with Israel, 86% agree that the existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people, 80% indicate a high level of concern for Israel's safety when it is endangered by international events, and 83% keep up with current events involving Israel.

A lower proportion (64%) indicate that they feel more secure in the knowledge that if antisemitism increased in Australia they could go to Israel, possibly a lower positive response because Australians do not expect a deterioration in their conditions of life in Australia leading to their departure for Israel.

These strong positive responses provide an important context for the negative results obtained by a number of other questions in the survey: they clearly demonstrate that the achieved sample obtained by Crossroasd23 is not an unrepresentative cohort with little positive connection with Israel.

There is just one general proposition that obtains a relatively low positive response: when asked if optimistic about Israel's future, 49% were optimistic (with only 18% strongly optimistic) and 42% were pessimistic while a further 8% indicated that they did not know.

For some of the other thematic areas covered in the survey, questions obtain lower positive responses, in keeping with the lower sense of optimism for Israel's future. Thus, a relatively low 56% agree that a viable solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is possible, and a minority 41% agree that Israel's control of the West Bank is vital for Israel's security.

With regard to the functioning of Israeli democracy, 46% agree that its democracy is "alive and well", in sharp contrast with the 76% obtained for this question in the Gen17 survey; 77% agree that "there is too much corruption in Israel's political system" (up from 48% obtained by Gen17) and 85% agree that "Orthodox Judaism has too much influence" (62% Gen17).

The lowest positive response is obtained by two questions concerned with proposed judicial reform in Israel; 76% indicate that they have followed the discussion of judicial reform, but only 14% have formed the view that the reforms are good for Israel.

With regard to the proposition that "it is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israel government and its policies", a substantial majority of 79% indicate agreement with freedom to express views, although there is little confidence that such views are respected, with 57% agreeing with the proposition that "Israelis do not care what Diaspora Jews think".

When asked to indicate issues on which Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion, in the context of the consultation process initiated by the President of Israel, the highest level of agreement was obtained for Jewish status, with reference to conversion (75%), recognition of pluralism (67%) and the role of Orthodox Judaism (62%). A number of issues were indicated by a smaller majority (including the situation of Palestinians and women's rights), while the lowest level was obtained for the "status of Holy places" (42%) and "security issues" (34%).

The last series of five fixed-choice questions asked respondents to consider any change in their attitudes when compared to five years ago. The largest change was obtained when respondents were asked to consider "Israel as a democratic country": 62% indicated that they were now less confident that Israel is a democratic country, compared with 16% who were more confident.

When asked to consider their confidence in advocating for Israel among their non-Jewish friends, 44% were less confident, 26% were more. As expected, respondents were more confident advocating for Israel among their Jewish friends.

Views on Israeli policy on issues related to Palestinians strongly moved in the negative, with 57% indicating less agreement with Israeli policy, only 14% more.

Sense of connection with Israel is least changed, in keeping with the largely positive response to general questions related to Israel: 34% indicated that they felt more connected to Israel, 42% neither more nor less, while that lowest proportion, 24%, indicated a lower sense of connection.

IDENTIFICATION WITH ISRAEL

Table 5 Although there are different opinions about what the term Zionism means, in general, do you consider yourself to be a Zionist? Please select one answer

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| Yes | 984 | 77 | 77 | 71 |
| No | 172 | 13 | 14 | 20 |
| Don't know | 95 | 7 | 8 | 8 |
| Prefer not to say | 12 | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Missing | 19 | 1 | | |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 6 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 818 | 66 | 66 |
| Tend to agree | 296 | 24 | 24 |
| Tend to disagree | 54 | 4 | 4 |
| Strongly disagree | 21 | 2 | 2 |
| No opinion | 37 | 3 | 3 |
| Don't know | 19 | 2 | 1 |
| Prefer not to say | 3 | 0 | 0 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 7 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? I feel a high level of personal connectedness to Israel

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 704 | 56 | 56 |
| Tend to agree | 391 | 31 | 32 |
| Tend to disagree | 81 | 6 | 7 |
| Strongly disagree | 40 | 3 | 3 |
| No opinion | 15 | 1 | 1 |
| Don't know | 9 | 1 | 1 |
| Prefer not to say | 8 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 8 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 821 | 66 | 67 |
| Tend to agree | 243 | 19 | 19 |
| Tend to disagree | 76 | 6 | 6 |
| Strongly disagree | 64 | 5 | 6 |
| No opinion | 15 | 1 | 1 |
| Don't know | 25 | 2 | 2 |
| Prefer not to say | 4 | 0 | 0 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 9 When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel? Please select one answer

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| I do not feel any different about it than I would if another important foreign country were in the same sort of danger | 50 | 4 | 4 | 3 |
| I feel rather more concerned than if another country was in the same situation | 182 | 14 | 15 | 19 |
| I feel a special concern because it is Israel and not some other country in danger | 783 | 62 | 63 | 60 |
| My reaction is so strong that it is almost the same as if my own life was in danger | 228 | 18 | 17 | 17 |
| Don't know | 6 | 0 | 1 | |
| Prefer not to say | 10 | 1 | 1 | |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 23 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 10 To what extent do you keep up with current events which involve Israel? Would you say... Please select one answer

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| A lot | 500 | 40 | 39 | 32 |
| Quite a lot | 537 | 43 | 44 | 38 |
| A little | 207 | 16 | 17 | 26 |
| Not at all | 9 | 1 | 1 | 3 |
| Don't know | 1 | 0 | | 0 |
| Prefer not to say | 5 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | |
| Missing | 23 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 11 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? I feel more secure knowing I could go to Israel if antisemitism increased in Australia

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 427 | 34 | 34 |
| Tend to agree | 382 | 31 | 30 |
| Tend to disagree | 173 | 14 | 14 |
| Strongly disagree | 116 | 9 | 10 |
| No opinion | 88 | 7 | 7 |
| Don't know | 56 | 4 | 4 |
| Prefer not to say | 6 | 0 | 0 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 12 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? I am optimistic about Israel's future

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 207 | 17 | 18 |
| Tend to agree | 382 | 31 | 31 |
| Tend to disagree | 365 | 29 | 28 |
| Strongly disagree | 171 | 14 | 14 |
| No opinion | 19 | 2 | 2 |
| Don't know | 97 | 8 | 8 |
| Prefer not to say | 7 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

ISRAELI-PALESTINIAN CONFLICT

Table 13 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 237 | 19 | 20 | 33 |
| Tend to agree | 269 | 22 | 21 | 28 |
| Tend to disagree | 318 | 25 | 26 | 14 |
| Strongly disagree | 289 | 23 | 23 | 9 |
| No opinion | 25 | 2 | 2 | 4 |
| Don't know | 96 | 8 | 8 | 11 |
| Prefer not to say | 14 | 1 | 1 | 2 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 14 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is possible

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 208 | 17 | 16 |
| Tend to agree | 499 | 40 | 40 |
| Tend to disagree | 271 | 22 | 22 |
| Strongly disagree | 81 | 6 | 7 |
| No opinion | 20 | 2 | 1 |
| Don't know | 160 | 13 | 13 |
| Prefer not to say | 9 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

ISRAELI DEMOCRACY

Table 15 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Democracy in Israel is alive and well

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 239 | 19 | 19 | 40 |
| Tend to agree | 331 | 27 | 27 | 36 |
| Tend to disagree | 318 | 25 | 26 | 10 |
| Strongly disagree | 306 | 25 | 24 | 3 |
| No opinion | 16 | 1 | 1 | 3 |
| Don't know | 34 | 3 | 2 | 7 |
| Prefer not to say | 4 | 0 | 0 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 16 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? There is too much corruption in Israel's political system

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 444 | 36 | 36 | 16 |
| Tend to agree | 512 | 41 | 41 | 32 |
| Tend to disagree | 71 | 6 | 6 | 12 |
| Strongly disagree | 31 | 2 | 2 | 3 |
| No opinion | 57 | 5 | 5 | 13 |
| Don't know | 125 | 10 | 11 | 23 |
| Prefer not to say | 8 | 1 | 1 | 2 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Table 17 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel's society

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 702 | 56 | 56 | 35 |
| Tend to agree | 345 | 28 | 29 | 27 |
| Tend to disagree | 96 | 8 | 8 | 12 |
| Strongly disagree | 38 | 3 | 3 | 8 |
| No opinion | 34 | 3 | 3 | 7 |
| Don't know | 26 | 2 | 2 | 9 |
| Prefer not to say | 7 | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 | 8621 |

Figure 2: Israeli democracy

JUDICIAL REFORM

Table 18 To what extent have you followed the discussion of judicial reform proposals in Israel?

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| A lot | 437 | 35 | 35 |
| Quite a lot | 502 | 41 | 41 |
| A little | 268 | 22 | 22 |
| Not at all | 29 | 2 | 2 |
| Prefer not to say | 1 | 0 | |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 45 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 19 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? The proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel.

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 72 | 6 | 6 |
| Tend to agree | 98 | 8 | 8 |
| Tend to disagree | 173 | 14 | 14 |
| Strongly disagree | 745 | 60 | 59 |
| No opinion | 50 | 4 | 4 |
| Don't know | 100 | 8 | 8 |
| Prefer not to say | 10 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Figure 3: Future prospects

DISUNITY IN THE JEWISH WORLD

Table 20 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Disunity threatens the Jewish world

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 474 | 38 | 38 |
| Tend to agree | 403 | 32 | 34 |
| Tend to disagree | 187 | 15 | 16 |
| Strongly disagree | 90 | 7 | 7 |
| No opinion | 39 | 3 | 3 |
| Don't know | 49 | 4 | 3 |
| Prefer not to say | 6 | 0 | 0 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

CONSULTATIONS

Table 21 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? It is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly their views about the Israeli government and its policies

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 524 | 42 | 42 |
| Tend to agree | 452 | 36 | 37 |
| Tend to disagree | 155 | 12 | 13 |
| Strongly disagree | 55 | 4 | 5 |
| No opinion | 29 | 2 | 2 |
| Don't know | 22 | 2 | 2 |
| Prefer not to say | 11 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 22 To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Israelis do not care what Diaspora Jews think about Israel's government or its policies

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Strongly agree | 182 | 15 | 14 |
| Tend to agree | 533 | 43 | 43 |
| Tend to disagree | 262 | 21 | 22 |
| Strongly disagree | 66 | 5 | 5 |
| No opinion | 40 | 3 | 3 |
| Don't know | 158 | 13 | 13 |
| Prefer not to say | 7 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 34 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 23 The President of Israel has initiated a process to consult with Diaspora communities. On which of the following issues in Israel do you think Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion? (Mark as many as you consider to be important)

| | Crossroads23 [A] | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|
| | Percent | % |
| Jewish status (who is a Jew, conversion) | 74 | 75 |
| Recognition of pluralism in Israel | 67 | 67 |
| The role of Orthodox Judaism | 61 | 62 |
| Situation of Palestinians in the West Bank/ Gaza | 58 | 58 |
| Women's rights | 58 | 57 |
| Judicial reform | 55 | 54 |
| LGBTQI+ rights | 51 | 50 |
| Arab citizenship rights | 51 | 51 |
| Status of Holy places | 42 | 41 |
| Security | 34 | 34 |

PERCEIVED CHANGE IN ATTITUDES – THE PAST FIVE YEARS

Table 24 Compared to five years ago ... I feel more/less connected to Israel

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Much more | 220 | 18 | 18 |
| Somewhat more | 194 | 16 | 16 |
| Neither more nor less | 518 | 42 | 42 |
| Somewhat less | 202 | 16 | 16 |
| Much less | 93 | 7 | 8 |
| No opinion | 7 | 1 | 1 |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 9 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 39 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 25 Compared to five years ago ... I feel more/less confident that Israel is a democratic country

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Much more | 85 | 7 | 7 |
| Somewhat more | 103 | 8 | 9 |
| Neither more nor less | 248 | 20 | 20 |
| Somewhat less | 400 | 32 | 32 |
| Much less | 383 | 31 | 30 |
| No opinion | 12 | 1 | 1 |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 12 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 39 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 26 Compared to five years ago ... I agree more/less with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Much more | 71 | 6 | 5 |
| Somewhat more | 103 | 8 | 9 |
| Neither more nor less | 284 | 23 | 23 |
| Somewhat less | 268 | 22 | 22 |
| Much less | 449 | 36 | 35 |
| No opinion | 27 | 2 | 2 |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 41 | 3 | 3 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 39 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 27 Compared to five years ago ... I feel more/less confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Much more | 174 | 14 | 14 |
| Somewhat more | 200 | 16 | 16 |
| Neither more nor less | 409 | 33 | 34 |
| Somewhat less | 213 | 17 | 17 |
| Much less | 198 | 16 | 16 |
| No opinion | 37 | 3 | 3 |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 12 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 39 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Table 28 Compared to five years ago ... I feel more/less confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends

| | Crossroads23 [A] | | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Frequency | % | % |
| Much more | 141 | 11 | 11 |
| Somewhat more | 177 | 14 | 15 |
| Neither more nor less | 338 | 27 | 27 |
| Somewhat less | 251 | 20 | 21 |
| Much less | 291 | 23 | 23 |
| No opinion | 30 | 2 | 2 |
| Don't know/ Prefer not to say | 15 | 1 | 1 |
| Total | | 100 | 100 |
| Missing | 39 | | |
| N | 1282 | | 1080 |

Figure 4: Compared to five years ago ...

SUB-GROUP ANALYSIS: UIA AND PLUS61J MEDIA

The Crossroads23 survey asked respondents to "indicate your organisational membership or affiliation". Membership or affiliation was indicated by more than 200 respondents for three organisations: the United Israel Appeal (265, henceforth UIA), Jewish National Fund (240, henceforth JNF) and Plus61J Media (245).

JNF is not analysed because of the extent of overlap in membership with the UIA; a sample of 50 respondents found that 40 (or 80%) indicated dual membership or affiliation with the JNF and UIA.

The demographic profile of respondents finds very few aged 18-34, and only a small minority under the age of 54, 17% UIA and 21% Plus61J Media.

Among UIA respondents there is almost the same proportion of women and men, while among Plus61J Media respondents there is an over-representation of women (66% female, 34% male).

Reflecting the character of the two organisations, the UIA has a higher proportion of respondents who indicate alignment with the Modern Orthodox and Traditional streams of Judaism, 64% compared to 34% Plus61JMedia, while a higher proportion of Plus61J Media respondents indicate alignment with Conservative or progressive streams or identify as "Just Jewish" (43%, compared to 29%), and a much higher proportion indicate secular identification (20%, compared to 5%)

In terms of political alignment, the differentiation indicated by respondents again reflects the character of the two organisations: 24% of the respondents who indicate membership or affiliation with the UIA identify as conservative and 49% as moderate or centrist, a combined 73%, in contrast with Plus61J Media respondents, the largest proportion of whom (67%) identify as progressive.

The findings point to a high level of positive response from those associated with both organisations with regard to identification as a Zionist, connectedness to Israel and the importance of close ties with Israel. A substantial majority (71% UIA, 86% Plus61J Media) agree that it is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies. A substantial majority of both organisations are concerned that disunity threatens the Jewish world, 86% UIA, 61% Plus61J Media.

But the large measure of consensus is not maintained beyond these questions. Thus, with regard to the workings of democracy, a central issue identified in this survey, only 33% of those associated with Plus61J Media agree that democracy in Israel is alive and well, compared with 68% of those associated with UIA. A lower 59% associated with UIA indicate that they are either more positive or stable in their view that Israel is a democratic country, compared with a small minority of 20% Plus61J Media.

The lowest proportion among those associated with the UIA is obtained in response to the proposition that the proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel (24% agree, 61% disagree, 14% indicate no opinion or don't know), compared with just 3% agreement among those associated with Plus61J Media.

Contrasting proportions are also obtained for a question on the possibility of a viable solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, agreed to by 46% UIA associates and a higher 71% Plus61J Media. Despite their pessimistic view on the prospects for a viable solution to the conflict, 75% UIA associates are optimistic about Israel's future, comparted to a much lower 33% for Plus61J Media associates.

This potential contradiction in views may be explained on the basis that while UIA associates are not optimistic about peace with the Palestinians, they have confidence in the ability of the Israeli state to cope with any challenges arising from the conflict, whereas a majority of Plus61J Media associates believe that a viable solution can be reached, but are pessimistic that it will be reached. This is reflected in other questions, for example, in the different response with regard to confidence in advocating for Israel among non-Jewish friends, indicated by 71% of UIA associates and 34% Plus61J Media.

With regard to issues on which Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion, there is agreement that the top two issues relate to Jewish status (conversion) and recognition of pluralism in Israel; security issues, on the other hand, rate last, seen by a large majority as a matter to be left to Israelis. The issues of rights for women, LGBTQI+ persons and Arab citizenship rate substantially higher among Plus61J Media associates, as does the situation of Palestinians (70% Plus61J Media, compared with 48% UIA).

Table 29 Demographic indicators, membership or affiliation with UIA and Plus61J Media (percentage)

| | Age 18-34 | 35-44 | 45-54 | 55-64 | 65-74 | 75-84 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| UIA | 1 | 8 | 8 | 15 | 39 | 24 |
| Plus61J | 8 | 6 | 7 | 20 | 42 | 20 |

| | Female | Male |
|---|---|---|
| UIA | 51 | 49 |
| Plus61J | 66 | 34 |

| | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Progressive/ Conservative | Just Jewish | Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| UIA | 27 | 37 | 19 | 10 | 5 |
| Plus61J | 9 | 25 | 28 | 15 | 20 |

| | Conservative | Moderate or centrist | Progressive |
|---|---|---|---|
| UIA | 24 | 49 | 22 |
| Plus61J | 2 | 28 | 67 |

Table 30 Pattern of response, UIA and Plus61J Media (Crossroads23 [B], percentage)

| | UIA | Plus61J |
|---|---|---|
| Consider yourself to be a Zionist – yes | 93 | 74 |
| High level of personal connectedness to Israel – strongly agree or tend to agree | 96 | 85 |
| The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people Israel – strongly agree or tend to agree | 100 | 79 |
| It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties - strongly agree or tend to agree | 100 | 89 |
| Acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies – strongly agree or tend to agree | 71 | 86 |
| Optimistic about Israel's future – strongly agree or tend to agree | 75 | 33 |
| A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestine conflict is possible – strongly agree or tend agree | 46 | 71 |
| Disunity threatens the Jewish world – strongly agree or tend to agree | 86 | 61 |
| Democracy in Israel is alive and well – strongly agree or tend to agree | 68 | 33 |
| Proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel – strongly agree or agree | 24 | 3 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident that Israel is a democratic country | 59 | 20 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... connected to Israel [Somewhat less, much less] | 88 | 66 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ...advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends | 83 | 48 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident advocating for Israel among my non-Jewish friends [Somewhat less, much less] | 71 | 34 |
| Compared to five years ago I agree ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians | 58 | 16 |
| N | 265 | 245 |

Figure 5: Pattern or response, UIA and Plus16J affiliates

Table 31 The President of Israel has initiated a process to consult with Diaspora communities. On which of the following issues in Israel do you think Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion? (Mark as many as you consider to be important) (Crossroads23 [B])

| | UIA | Plus61 J |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Jewish status (who is a Jew, conversion) | 79 | 78 |
| Recognition of pluralism in Israel | 65 | 81 |
| The role of Orthodox Judaism | 61 | 68 |
| Women's rights | 51 | 73 |
| Judicial reform | 52 | 67 |
| Situation of Palestinians in the West Bank/ Gaza | 48 | 70 |
| LGBTQI+ rights | 43 | 65 |
| Status of Holy places | 43 | 43 |
| Arab citizenship rights | 41 | 69 |
| Security | 38 | 30 |
| N | 265 | 245 |

AGE AND SEX

The extent of variation evident in attitudes of UIA and Plus61J Media associates is not replicated when age groups and men and women are considered. There is a consistently high level of identification with Israel. Thus, the affirmation of personal connectedness with Israel is in the narrow range 84%-90%, concern about the threat of disunity among the Jewish people is at a high level, in the range 69%-72%, and three-quarters or more respondents across the groups (76%-89%) agree that it is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to express views about the Israeli government.

Confidence in advocating for Israel among non-Jewish friends almost evenly divides respondents across the groups, with higher level of confidence indicated by those aged 65 or older (55%) and men (60%).

Confidence in the workings of Israeli democracy is indicated by a minority across all the groups but it is at the lowest level among those aged 18-34: 23% in this age group consider that Israeli democracy is alive and well and only 26% indicate that compared to five years ago, they are more confident or stable in the view that Israel is a democratic country. In general, men are more positive than women in their attitudes

The issue of proposed judicial reform obtains a very high negative response, seen in positive terms by just 5% of those aged 18-34, with the highest positive view at only 20%, indicated by men.

POLITICAL ALIGNMENT AND RELIGIOUS IDENTIFICATION

Assessment by political alignment and religious identification finds substantial variation in response to a number of questions, similar to the pattern of response obtained by analysis of organisational affiliation.

There is high level of identification with Zionism, in the range 90%-97% across political alignment and 75%-94% across streams of Judaism, with an outlier of 57% indicated by secular respondents.

Personal connectedness with Israel is similarly indicated by a large majority, in the range 83%-94% by political alignment and 80%-96% by stream of Judaism.

However, views on the functioning of Israeli democracy sharply divide, viewed as "alive and well" by 86% of those who indicate that they are conservative, 21% by those progressive, 68% by Modern Orthodox, 37% "just Jewish" and 19% secular.

While a bare majority of 51% of conservatives view the proposed judicial reforms as positive, this view is not shared by even 20% among other groupings: the proposed reforms are viewed as positive by 14% centrists, 3% progressives, 18% traditional, 12% "just Jewish" and 5% secular.

Optimism about Israel's future is high among those of conservative political alignment at 84% and , among Modern Orthodox at 79%, but it is at what might be seen as an alarmingly low level among those of progressive political beliefs at 28%, 42% of Progressive or Conservative faith, and 21% secular.

A majority of all groups agree that it is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government, with agreement at the lowest level among conservatives (54%) and those of Modern Orthodox faith (59%), at the highest levels among those of progressive political belief (90%), Progressive or Conservative faith (89%), "just Jewish" (86%) and secular (87%).

Figure 6: Pattern of response by political alignment

Table 32 Selected questions by age and sex (Crossroads23 [B], percentage)

| | Age 18-34 | 35-44 | 45-54 | 55-64 | 65/+ | Female | Male |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Consider yourself to be a Zionist – yes | 74 | 74 | 86 | 77 | 77 | 76 | 81 |
| High level of personal connectedness to Israel – strongly agree or tend to agree | 84 | 86 | 89 | 86 | 90 | 89 | 88 |
| The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people – strongly agree or tend to agree | 75 | 80 | 88 | 83 | 90 | 86 | 87 |
| Optimistic about Israel's future – strongly agree or tend to agree | 31 | 34 | 45 | 45 | 56 | 42 | 56 |
| A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestine conflict is possible – strongly agree or tend agree | 54 | 52 | 59 | 59 | 57 | 58 | 55 |
| Democracy in Israel is alive and well – strongly agree or tend to agree | 23 | 37 | 49 | 49 | 48 | 38 | 54 |
| Proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel – strongly agree or agree | 5 | 10 | 14 | 16 | 17 | 10 | 20 |
| Disunity threatens the Jewish world – strongly agree or tend to agree | 71 | 69 | 74 | 71 | 72 | 72 | 72 |
| Acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies – strongly agree or tend to agree | 86 | 89 | 76 | 76 | 78 | 78 | 80 |
| It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties - strongly agree or tend to agree | 77 | 84 | 92 | 91 | 93 | 90 | 92 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... connected to Israel [Somewhat less, much less] | 66 [33] | 63 [36] | 77 [22] | 75 [25] | 79 [20] | 75 [24] | 76 [24] |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ...confident that Israel is a democratic country | 26 | 31 | 30 | 32 | 42 | 30 | 43 |
| Compared to five years ago I agree ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ...with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians | 32 | 32 | 44 | 36 | 39 | 32 | 45 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends | 59 | 54 | 62 | 68 | 66 | 61 | 68 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends [Somewhat less, much less] | 51 [45] | 48 [47] | 49 [49] | 52 [46] | 55 [42] | 47 [50] | 60 [38] |
| N | 95 | 87 | 123 | 187 | 506 | 529 | 461 |

Table 33 Political alignment (In general, would you describe your political views as ...?) (Crossroads23 [B], percentage)

| | Conservative | Moderate or centrist | Progressive |
|---|---|---|---|
| Consider yourself to be a Zionist – yes | 97 | 93 | 90 |
| High level of personal connectedness to Israel – strongly agree or tend to agree | 94 | 93 | 83 |
| The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people – strongly agree or tend to agree | 100 | 95 | 76 |
| Optimistic about Israel's future – strongly agree or tend to agree | 84 | 61 | 28 |
| A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestine conflict is possible – strongly agree or tend agree | 30 | 53 | 70 |
| Democracy in Israel is alive and well – strongly agree or tend to agree | 86 | 59 | 21 |
| Proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel – strongly agree or agree | 51 | 14 | 3 |
| Disunity threatens the Jewish world – strongly agree or tend to agree | 89 | 80 | 61 |
| Acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies – strongly agree or tend to agree | 54 | 76 | 90 |
| It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties - strongly agree or tend to agree | 99 | 98 | 83 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... connected to Israel [Somewhat less, much less] | 98 [2] | 85 [14] | 61 [38] |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ...confident that Israel is a democratic country | 81% | 43 | 14 |
| Compared to five years ago I agree ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians | 83 | 48 | 1 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends | 93 | 78 | 45 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends [Somewhat less, much less] | 84 [13] | 64 [33] | 33 [64] |
| N | 141 | 360 | 443 |

Table 34 Stream of Judaism (Crossroads23 [B], percentage)

| | Modern Orthodox | Traditional | Progressive/ Conservative | Just Jewish | Secular |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Consider yourself to be a Zionist – yes | 94 | 89 | 75 | 75 | 57 |
| High level of personal connectedness to Israel – strongly agree or tend to agree | 96 | 93 | 84 | 88 | 80 |
| The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people – strongly agree or tend to agree | 98 | 96 | 82 | 87 | 68 |
| Optimistic about Israel's future – strongly agree or tend to agree | 79 | 60 | 42 | 41 | 21 |
| A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestine conflict is possible – strongly agree or tend agree | 43 | 50 | 63 | 56 | 70 |
| Democracy in Israel is alive and well – strongly agree or tend to agree | 68 | 60 | 41 | 37 | 19 |
| Proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel – strongly agree or agree | 35 | 18 | 6 | 12 | 5 |
| Disunity threatens the Jewish world – strongly agree or tend to agree | 83 | 78 | 70 | 71 | 57 |
| Acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies – strongly agree or tend to agree | 59 | 71 | 89 | 86 | 87 |
| It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties - strongly agree or tend to agree | 99 | 97 | 91 | 90 | 74 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... connected to Israel [Somewhat less, much less] | 93 [7] | 81 [18] | 70 [29] | 75 [24] | 60 [39] |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident that Israel is a democratic country | 60 | 47 | 27 | 33 | 15 |
| Compared to five years ago I agree ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians | 64 | 47 | 31 | 34 | 17 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends | 83 | 76 | 61 | 55 | 44 |
| Compared to five years ago I feel ... much more, somewhat more, neither more nor less ... confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends [Somewhat less, much less] | 72 [24] | 63 [34] | 47 [50] | 42 [56] | 36 [60] |
| N | 151 | 245 | 232 | 153 | 177 |

APPENDIX 1

DEMOGRAPHIC PROFILE

Table 35

Age distribution, Jewish population aged 18-100

| | Crossroads23 [B] | 2021 Census – Jewish population by religion |
|---|---|---|
| | % (N in brackets) | % |
| 18-34 | 9% (95) | 22% |
| 35-44 | 9% (87) | 15% |
| 45-54 | 2% (123) | 16% |
| 55-64 | 19% (187) | 15% |
| 65-74 | 32% (319) | 18% |
| 75/+ | 19% (187) | 14% |
| Missing | 1% (8) | |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

Table 36

Gender, Jewish population aged 18-100

| | Crossroads23 [B] | 2021 Census – Jewish population by religion |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Male | 46% | 48% |
| Female | 53% | 52% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

Table 37

Country of birth, Jewish population aged 18-100

| | Crossroads23 [B] | 2021 Census – Jewish population by religion |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Australia | 55% | 56% |
| South Africa | 11% | 13% |
| Israel | 10% | 7% |
| United Kingdom | 6% | 4% |
| Russian Federation/ Ukraine | 1% | 3% |
| USA | 3% | 3% |
| Hungary | 2% | 1% |
| Poland | 2% | 1% |
| New Zealand | 2% | 1% |

Table 38

Location – state in which currently live, Jewish population aged 18-100

| | Crossroads23 [B] | 2021 Census – Jewish population by religion |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Victoria | 50% | 47% |
| NSW | 37% | 40% |
| Queensland | 7% | 5% |
| Western Australia | 2% | 6% |
| ACT | 2% | 1% |
| South Australia | 1% | 1% |
| Total | 100% | 100% |

Table 39

Number of times visited Israel

| | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Never | 4 | 7 |
| Once | 9 | 13 |
| Twice | 13 | 15 |
| Three or more | 74 | 65 |
| Prefer not to say | 0 | 0 |
| Total | 100 | 100 |

Table 40

Longest time spent in Israel (excludes born in Israel)

| | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| <2 weeks | 5 | 6 |
| 2 weeks- 1 month | 22 | 28 |
| 1 month – 4 months | 32 | 34 |
| 4 months – 12 months | 13 | 12 |
| 1 year – 3 years | 17 | 15 |
| 3 years / + | 11 | 6 |
| Prefer not to say | 0 | |
| Total | 100 | 100 |

Table 41

Close family living in Israel

| | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Yes | 72 | 65 |
| No | 27 | 34 |
| Prefer not to say | 1 | 1 |
| Total | 100 | 100 |

Table 42

Close friends in Israel

| | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17 |
|---|---|---|
| | % | % |
| Yes | 72 | 59 |
| No | 28 | 40 |
| Prefer not to say | 1 | 1 |
| Total | 100 | 100 |

Table 43

Political views

| | Crossroads23 [B] |
|---|---|
| | % |
| Very conservative | 1 |
| Conservative | 14 |
| Moderate or centrist | 36 |
| Progressive | 44 |
| Radical | 2 |
| Prefer not to say/ Other | 2 |
| Total | 100 |

Table 44

Religious identification/stream of Judaism

| | Crossroads23 [B] | Gen17/ communal data |
|---|---|---|
| | % | |
| Strictly Orthodox/ Modern Orthodox | 16 | 22 |
| Traditional | 24 | 30 |
| Progressive/ Reform/ Conservative | 23 | 14 |
| Just Jewish | 15 | 12 |
| Secular | 18 | 21 |
| Total | 100 | 100 |

APPENDIX 2

QUESTIONNAIRE, KOL HA'AM SURVEY 2023

Q1

ALL

Although there are different opinions about what the term Zionism means, in general, do you consider yourself to be a Zionist?

Please select one answer

1. Yes ☐
2. No ☐
3. Don't know ☐
4. Prefer not to say ☐

Q2

ALL

When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?

Please select one answer

1. I do not feel any different about it than I would if another important foreign country were in the same sort of danger ☐
2. I feel rather more concerned than if another country was in the same situation ☐
3. I feel a special concern because it is Israel and not some other country in danger ☐
4. My reaction is so strong that it is almost the same as if my own life was in danger ☐
5. Don't know ☐
6. Prefer not to say ☐

Q3

ALL

To what extent do you keep up with current events which involve Israel? Would you say ...

Please select one answer

1. A lot ☐
2. Quite a lot ☐
3. A little ☐
4. Not at all ☐
5. Don't know ☐
6. Prefer not to say ☐

Q4

ALL except Q3, response 4

To what extent have you followed the discussion of judicial reform proposals in Israel?

Please select one answer

1. A lot ☐
2. Quite a lot ☐
3. A little ☐
4. Not at all ☐
5. Don't know ☐
6. Prefer not to say ☐

Q5

ALL

To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements?

Please select one answer on each row

| | | Strongly agree | Tend to agree | Tend to disagree | Strongly disagree | No opinion | Don't know | Prefer not to say |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | Democracy in Israel is alive and well | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 2. | I feel a high level of personal connectedness to Israel | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 3. | There is too much corruption in Israel's political system | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 4. | Orthodox Judaism has too much influence in Israel's society | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 5. | Israeli control of the West Bank (Judea/Samaria) is vital for Israel's security | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 6. | I feel more secure knowing I could go to Israel if antisemitism increased in Australia | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 7. | The existence of Israel is essential for the future of the Jewish people | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 8. | The proposed judicial reforms are good for Israel | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 9. | Disunity threatens the Jewish world | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 10. | A viable solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is possible | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 11. | It is acceptable for Jewish people who do not live in Israel to publicly express their views about the Israeli government and its policies | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 12. | It is important that the Australian Jewish community and Israel maintain close ties | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 13. | Israelis do not care what Diaspora Jews think about Israel's government or its policies | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 14. | I am optimistic about Israel's future | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |

Q6

ALL

Compared to five years ago ....

Please select one answer on each row

| | Much more | Somewhat more | Neither more nor less | Somewhat less | Much less | No opinion | Don't know/ Prefer not to say |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1. I feel more/ less connected to Israel | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 2. I feel more/ less confident that Israel is a democratic country | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 3. I agree more / less with Israeli policy on issues related to the Palestinians | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 4. I feel more/less confident advocating for Israel among my Jewish friends | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 5. I feel more/less confident advocating for Israel among my non-Jewish friends | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |

Q7

ALL

The President of Israel has initiated a process to consult with Diaspora communities.
On which of the following issues in Israel do you think Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion?

Mark as many as you consider to be important

1. Jewish status (who is a Jew, conversion) ☐
2. The role of Orthodox Judaism ☐
3. Recognition of pluralism in Israel ☐
4. Status of Holy places ☐
5. Judicial reform ☐
6. Arab citizenship rights ☐
7. Women's rights ☐
8. LGBTQI+ rights ☐
9. Security ☐
10. Situation of Palestinians in the West Bank/Gaza ☐
11. Other (please specify) ☐

Q8

ALL

The President of Israel has initiated a process to consult with Diaspora communities.
On which of the following issues in Israel do you think Diaspora Jews should voice an opinion?

Select the three most important to you, in order of importance

| | | 1st (most important) | 2nd | 3rd |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | Jewish status (who is a Jew, conversion) | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 2. | The role of Orthodox Judaism | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 3. | Recognition of pluralism in Israel | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 4. | Status of Holy places | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 5. | Judicial reform | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 6. | Arab citizenship rights | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 7. | Women's rights | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 8. | LGBTQI+ rights | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 9. | Security | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 10. | Situation of Palestinians in the West Bank/ Gaza | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |
| 11. | Other (please specify) | ☐ | ☐ | ☐ |

DEMOGRAPHIC

Q9

ALL

What age are you?

1. 18–24 ☐
2. 25–34 ☐
3. 35–44 ☐
4. 45–54 ☐
5. 55–64 ☐
6. 65–74 ☐
7. 75–84 ☐
8. 85 or older ☐
9. Prefer not to say ☐

Q10

ALL

Are you...?

Please select one answer

1. Male ☐
2. Female ☐
3. Non-binary/ Other ☐
4. Prefer not to say ☐

Q11

ALL

In which country were you born?

Please select one answer

1. Australia ☐
2. South Africa ☐
3. Russian Federation/USSR ☐
4. Ukraine ☐
5. Israel ☐
6. New Zealand ☐
7. United Kingdom ☐
8. United States of America ☐
9. France ☐
10. Germany ☐
11. Hungary ☐
12. Poland ☐
13. Other country (please specify) ☐

Q12

ALL

In which state or territory do you currently live?

Please select one answer

1. Victoria ☐
2. New South Wales ☐
3. Western Australia ☐
4. Queensland ☐
5. South Australia ☐
6. ACT ☐
7. Tasmania ☐
8. Northern Territory ☐

Q13

ALL

Which of the following best describes your religious beliefs, even if none of the options is exactly right?

Please select one answer

1. Strictly Orthodox/ Haredi ☐
2. Modern Orthodox ☐
3. Traditional ☐
4. Progressive/Reform/Conservative ☐
5. Just Jewish ☐
6. Secular ☐
7. Prefer not to say ☐
8. Other (please specify) ☐

Q14

ALL

In general, would you describe your political views as ...?

Please select one answer

1. Very conservative ☐
2. Conservative ☐
3. Moderate or centrist ☐
4. Progressive ☐
5. Radical ☐
6. I don't know ☐
7. Prefer not to answer ☐
8. Other (please specify) ☐

Q15

IF NOT BORN IN ISRAEL (NOT Q11, response 5)

How many different times in your life have you visited Israel?

Please select one answer

1. Never ☐
2. Once ☐
3. Twice ☐
4. Three or more times ☐
5. Don't know ☐
6. Prefer not to say ☐

Q16

IF NOT BORN IN ISRAEL (NOT Q11, response 5)

What was the longest time you spent in Israel at any one visit?

Please select one answer

1. Less than 2 weeks ☐
2. weeks but less than 1 month ☐
3. month but less than 4 months ☐
4. months but less than 12 months ☐
5. year but less than 3 years ☐
6. years or more ☐
7. Don't know ☐
8. Prefer not to say ☐

Q17

ALL

When were you last in Israel?

Please select one answer

1. 2023 ☐
2. 2022 ☐
3. 2021 ☐
4. 2020 ☐
5. 2019 ☐
6. 2018 ☐
7. 2017 or earlier ☐
8. Prefer not to say ☐

Q18

ALL

Have you any ... ?

Please select one answer per column

| | (A) close family living in Israel? | (B) close friends living in Israel? |
|---|---|---|
| 1. Yes | ☐ | ☐ |
| 2. No | ☐ | ☐ |
| 3. Don't know | ☐ | ☐ |
| 4. Prefer not to say | ☐ | ☐ |

Q19

ALL

Please indicate you organisational membership or affiliation

Please select all that apply

1. UIA ☐
2. JNF ☐
3. Jewish day school parent organisation or board ☐
4. Jewish Care ☐
5. Zionist youth movement ☐
6. AUJS ☐
7. WIZO ☐
8. National Council of Jewish Women ☐
9. Australian Federation of Russian Jewry ☐
10. Maccabi ☐
11. Ameinu ☐
12. Friends of Likud ☐
13. ARZA ☐
14. Meretz ☐
15. Mercaz Masorti ☐
16. Plus61J ☐
17. NIF ☐
18. Prefer not to say ☐
19. Other(s) (please write) ☐

Q20

ALL

OPEN ENDED

1. What do you think are the critical challenges facing the Jewish people over the next three years?

2. What do you see as the Australian Jewish community's responsibilities to Israel, if any?

PLUS61J MEDIA CREATES PLATFORMS FOR DIVERSE VOICES ON AUSTRALIA, ISRAEL AND THE JEWISH WORLD

GET OUR FREE BI-WEEKLY NEWSLETTER

Scan here and subscribe to receive emails every Tuesday and Friday, or follow us on social media and stay up-to-date throughout the week.

PLUS 61J MEDIA

Australia, Israel and the Jewish world

We acknowledge and pay respect to the traditional custodians of the land on which Plus61J Media is published, the Gadigal people of the Eora Nation.

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-4" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

The Jewish University Experience Survey

JULY 2023

Social Research Centre

Report prepared for:

Dr Bren Carlill

Director of Public Affairs

Zionist Federation of Australia

bcarlill@zfa.com.au

Report prepared by:

The Social Research Centre

Level 5, 350 Queen Street

MELBOURNE VIC. 3000

Tel: (613) 9236 8500

Fax: (613) 9602 5422

Email: info@srcentre.com.au

www.srcentre.com.au

Version: 1

Contents

List of figures ..... ii

1. Key messages ..... 1

1.1. Summary of findings ..... 1

2. About the research ..... 3

2.1. Methodological overview ..... 3

2.2. About the data ..... 3

3. University experience of Jewish students ..... 5

3.1. Experiences of antisemitism ..... 5

3.1.1. Types of antisemitic behaviours ..... 5

3.1.2. Frequency of antisemitism ..... 6

3.2. Where are these experiences occurring, and who is participating? ..... 7

3.3. Complaints experience ..... 9

4. Defining antisemitism in a university setting ..... 11

5. Confidence in raising complaints ..... 12

6. Changing behaviours ..... 14

7. Additional feedback ..... 15

Appendix 1 Sample profile ..... 17

Appendix 2 Methodology ..... 20

Recruitment and sample ..... 20

Appendix 3 Field of study where antisemitic experience occurred ..... 23

Appendix 4 Questionnaire ..... 24

List of figures

Figure 1 Types of antisemitic behaviour experienced by respondents in a university setting (%) ..... 6
Figure 2 Reported as actively participating in antisemitic behaviour (%) ..... 8
Figure 3 Incidence of university staff ignoring antisemitic behaviour (%) ..... 8
Figure 4 Incidence of submitting a complaint after most impactful experience (%) ..... 9
Figure 5 Reasons for not submitting a complaint (%) ..... 10
Figure 6 Incidence of respondents' experiencing a statement or action they found offensive as a Jew, but were unsure if it was antisemitic (%) ..... 11
Figure 7 Overall confidence in making a complaint to university about antisemitism (%) ..... 12
Figure 8 More confident in making a complaint if university adopted a definition of antisemitism, among those with low confidence levels (%) ..... 13
Figure 9 Incidence of respondents avoiding campus and / or hiding Jewish identify (%) ..... 14
Figure 10 Proportion of survey completes over fieldwork period; survey invitation and reminder communications (BASE: AUJS sample, n=396 completed surveys) ..... 21
Figure 11 Proportion of survey completes via opt in link over fieldwork period (BASE: opt-in link, n=167 completed surveys) ..... 21

List of tables

Table 1 Frequency of experiencing antisemitic behaviours in a university setting ..... 6
Table 2 Additional feedback ..... 15
Table 3 Sample profile ..... 17
Table 4 Key project statistics ..... 20
Table 5 Field of study where antisemitic experience occurred (all responses) ..... 23

1. Key messages

Jewish students report frequent encounters with antisemitic behaviour while attending university in Australia. Appearance makes a difference; students who are visibly Jewish (that is they wear clothing and/or jewellery identifiable as Jewish) were more likely to report antisemitic experiences.

Antisemitism is affecting how Jewish students approach their appearance while at university. It is not uncommon for these students to hide their Jewish identity when on campus. The extent of hiding their Jewish identity is higher among those who have previously experienced antisemitism in a university setting. These antisemitic experiences are affecting Jewish students both within a classroom environment and externally of the class setting.

Students were largely dissatisfied and faced many barriers when trying to raise a complaint with their university in response to antisemitic behaviour. The majority of those who did raise a complaint were dissatisfied with their university's response. Many students won't raise a complaint as they don't believe complaining will make a difference.

1.1. Summary of findings

Antisemitism in a university setting has been experienced by many of the Jewish students surveyed. Almost two thirds (64%) reported at least one incident of antisemitism during their time at university. The majority (88%) of these students had encountered antisemitism within their last twelve months of university.

A range of antisemitic behaviours have been experienced by students in a university setting. When asked whether they'd experienced one or more of a range of possible incidents, the most reported experience was 'people or events that made you feel intimidated because of your Jewish identity' (47%). Other experiences included:

- Antisemitism based on perceptions of Jewish money, power or influence (37%)
- Someone comparing Israel to Nazi Germany (37%)
- Antisemitism based on religion or race (31%)
- Someone denying or minimising the Holocaust (30%)
- Being involuntarily singled out, or excluded, because of matters relating to Israel (25%)

These antisemitic behaviours were experienced by students on a relatively frequent basis. For many, these incidents occurred either monthly or more often, every few months, or every 6 to twelve months.

For a substantial minority, these antisemitic incidents stemmed from the actions of staff. University staff were identified as active participants on 29% of occasions. Further, around 70% of those who indicated that university staff were present, though not active participants, went on to state that this antisemitic behaviour was ignored by these staff members.

Those who experienced antisemitism were more likely to report hiding their Jewish identity when attending university (67% vs 38% of those who have not experienced antisemitism). Avoiding campus at times, due to the antisemitic behaviour of others was a reality for some. This preventative action was reported by 19% of students surveyed.

Although many of the Jewish university students surveyed experienced antisemitism, the incidence of submitting a complaint in response to their most impactful experience was low (14%). Those who did complain were largely dissatisfied with the response received from their university.

Those who did not complain identified many barriers to submitting a complaint. The top two barriers included: a belief that complaining would not make a difference (61%); and that the university would not think the incident was serious enough (48%).

Responses were mixed when students were asked to rate how confident they would feel about making a complaint to their university about antisemitism. Similar proportions reported feeling confident and not confident in this situation (37% and 38% respectively). There were some sub-group differences present. Males (47%) and those who had not experienced antisemitism at university (56%) more likely to feel confident in raising a complaint. Similarly, only 26% of students who had experienced antisemitism at university felt confident about making a complaint. Confidence levels improved when students were asked about the impact of their university adopting a definition of antisemitism. Many (84%) of those who were initially not confident in raising a complaint, indicated that they would feel more confident if their university adopted such a definition.

2. About the research

2.1. Methodological overview

The Zionist Federation of Australia (ZFA), with support of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), the Scanlon Foundation, the Besen Family Foundation and the World Zionist Organization (WZO), commissioned the Social Research Centre (SRC) to undertake the Jewish University Experience Survey. The aim of the survey was to understand Jewish students' experiences of antisemitism in Australian universities. This is the first survey of its kind in Australia.

An online survey was conducted between March and April 2023 with current and former (within the last five years) Jewish university students. Given the challenges in reaching this specific student population, there were two pathways to survey entry provided to maximise responses:

- Survey invitations were sent by the SRC to contacts on the AUJS database
- The SRC provided an opt-in link to the ZFA, who then promoted the survey through their own communication channels.

A total of n=563 surveys were completed over a three-week period, this comprised of n=396 from the AUJS database and n=167 from the opt-in link. Please see Appendix 2 for the detailed methodology.

2.2. About the data

This report provides an overview of key findings relating to the antisemitic experiences of Jewish students while attending university in Australia. The survey primarily consisted of a series of fixed response items; however, some open-ended responses were also included to allow respondents to provide further detail. These responses were coded to reflect the themes of the survey participants' answers.

Several points should be kept in mind when considering the data presented in this report:

- Some questions required respondents to provide responses in relation their experience of antisemitic behaviour in a university setting. In cases where the respondent had more than one antisemitic experience, they were asked to answer about their most impactful experience of antisemitism.
- Where figures in charts were either zero or one percent, data labels have not been shown for ease of reading the chart.
- Unless indicated, responses of 'don't know' or 'prefer not to say' have been excluded from the display of charts and tables.
- In some tables and figures the totals shown and/or mentioned in the accompanying text may differ slightly from the apparent sum of their component elements. This is simply due to the effects of rounding.
- Unless indicated, when the term 'university students' or 'students' is used in the report, this refers to both the current and former university students who completed the survey.
- Statistical tests were conducted to establish whether differences between the responses of subgroups of survey participants were genuine rather than due to random variation. Significance has been reported when the difference is significant at the 0.05 level. Where differences do exist, they have been called out in text.

- The subgroups examined for analysis included:
    - Gender
    - Judaism stream
    - Incidence of wearing clothing and/or jewellery identifiable as Jewish
    - Importance of a sense of connection to Israel for Jewish identity
    - Ever experienced antisemitism at university
    - Sample source (AUJS database or opt-in link)

3. University experience of Jewish students

This part of the report summarises responses across all core survey questions. These questions sought to not only understand the experience of antisemitism among the surveyed Jewish university students, but also explored:

- Frequency and source of these experiences
- Complaints process, including satisfaction levels and barriers
- Identifying a statement or action as antisemitic
- Adopting a definition of antisemitism
- Impact of antisemitism on day-to-day behaviours.

3.1. Experiences of antisemitism

To measure experiences of antisemitism, students were provided with six behaviours. They were then asked if, during their time at university, they had experienced any of these in a university setting (either on campus or online).

Almost two thirds (64%) of the students surveyed had experienced at least one antisemitic behaviour during their time at university. The majority (88%) of these students had recently experienced antisemitism, that is, within their last twelve months of university. Females (92% vs 82% of males) and those who wear Jewish clothing and/or jewellery (92% vs 84% of those who don't) more likely to have recent experience with antisemitic behaviour.

3.1.1. Types of antisemitic behaviours

The percentage of students surveyed reporting each type of antisemitic behaviour is shown in Figure 1.

Of the six behaviours measured, the most common form experienced was 'people or events that made you feel intimidated because of your Jewish identity', at 47%. A higher proportion of females (53% vs 39% of males) reported feeling intimidated in this way.

The next most common experiences were:

- Antisemitism based on perceptions of Jewish money, power or influence (37%)
- Someone comparing Israel to Nazi Germany (37%)
- Antisemitism based on religion or race (31%)
- Someone denying or minimising the Holocaust (30%), more likely among females (34% vs 25% of males)

One in four (25%) students survey reported 'being involuntarily singled out, or excluded, because of matters relating to Israel'.

Across all antisemitic behaviours, students who are visibly Jewish (i.e., wear Jewish clothing and/or jewellery) were more likely to report exposure to these behaviours.

Figure 1 Types of antisemitic behaviour experienced by respondents in a university setting (%)

Q1: Thinking about your time at university, have you ever experienced any of the following, either on campus or online in a university setting (such as online lectures/ tutorials and university affiliated online meetings)? (n=563)

3.1.2. Frequency of antisemitism

Those who experienced antisemitic behaviour (n=360) were asked how frequently this had occurred during their last twelve months of university. Most respondents had experienced antisemitic behaviour on a regular basis. There were some small differences in frequency between the antisemitic behaviours measured, as shown in Table 1.

One third (33%) reported being made to feel intimidated at least monthly because of their Jewish identity. Slightly smaller proportions reported this behaviour occurring every few months (30%) or every six to 12 months (25%).

Table 1 Frequency of experiencing antisemitic behaviours in a university setting

| | Monthly or more often | Every few months | Every 6 to twelve months | Not experienced in last twelve months of university |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| People or events that made you feel intimidated because of your Jewish identity (n=265) | 33% | 30% | 25% | 13% |
| Antisemitism based on perceptions of Jewish money, power or influence (n=210) | 25% | 28% | 31% | 16% |
| Someone comparing Israel to Nazi Germany (n=207) | 29% | 23% | 33% | 15% |
| Antisemitism based on religion or race (n=173) | 21% | 31% | 29% | 18% |

| | Monthly or more often | Every few months | Every 6 to twelve months | Not experienced in last twelve months of university |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Someone denying or minimising the Holocaust (n=170) | 18% | 27% | 39% | 15% |
| Being involuntarily singled out, or excluded, because of matters relating to Israel (n=141) | 31% | 33% | 26% | 11% |

Q2: During your last 12 months at university, how often did you experience these, either on campus or online in a university setting (such as online lectures/ tutorials and university affiliated online meetings)? (n=360)

3.2. Where are these experiences occurring, and who is participating?

Students were asked a series of questions about the setting of their most impactful experience of antisemitism. This sought to understand if these antisemitic experiences were occurring within certain fields of study (or outside of a class setting) and who actively participated.

These antisemitic behaviours were reported as occurring equally within a classroom environment, and outside of a class setting. For almost half (49%) of those who experienced antisemitic behaviour (n=360), their most impactful incident did not occur in a subject or class setting.

Students who are visibly Jewish through their choice of clothing and/or jewellery were more likely identify a field of study as the setting for this antisemitic experience (63% vs 39% of those don't wear Jewish clothing and/or jewellery).

Political and social sciences was the most frequently named field of study (15%) among those who experienced antisemitism in a class setting. For the full list of responses please see Appendix 3, noting these have been reported by very small proportions.

University students were reported as active participants in these antisemitic behaviours the majority (90%) of the time. Smaller proportions (29%) of respondents had witnessed university staff as active participants, shown in Figure 2.

Figure 2 Reported as actively participating in antisemitic behaviour (%)

Q3: Thinking about your most impactful experience of antisemitic behaviour in a university setting, who actively participated in this antisemitic behaviour? Multiple response. (n=360)

A follow up question asked respondents who had not selected university staff as an active participant in the previous question (n=257), if university staff were present at the time of this incident. Less than one in five (18%) of these respondents reported that university staff were present at this time.

As shown in Figure 3, the incidence of university staff who were present ignoring antisemitic behaviour was relatively high, at 70%.

Figure 3 Incidence of university staff ignoring antisemitic behaviour (%)

Q5: And during this most impactful experience did you see university staff ignore this antisemitic behaviour? (n=148)

3.3. Complaints experience

To explore the complaints experience, those who experienced antisemitism were asked if they submitted a complaint to their university. Follow up questions asked about either their satisfaction with how the complaint was handled, or reasons for not submitting a complaint.

Few students' surveyed had submitted a complaint to their university after an antisemitic experience, as shown in Figure 4. Less than one in five (14%) of those who experienced antisemitism (n=360) indicated they submitted a complaint to their university.

Among the students who did raise a complaint (n=51), their university's response to and handling of the complaint did not meet expectations. High levels of dissatisfaction were recorded among these respondents. Approximately two in three (61%) were dissatisfied overall with the university's response to their complaint, including 35% 'very dissatisfied' and 26% 'dissatisfied'.

Figure 4 Incidence of submitting a complaint after most impactful experience (%)

Q7: Did you submit a complaint to the university after this most impactful experience of antisemitic behaviour? (n=360)
Q8: How satisfied were you with the university's response to your complaint? (n=51)

Students who did not complain (n=308) were then asked why they decided not to submit a complaint in response to the antisemitism they experienced.

The top two barriers revolved around the ineffectiveness of complaining (Figure 5). Many (61%) students thought that complaining would not make a difference, while close to half (48%) felt the university would not think the antisemitic incident was serious enough.

Additional barriers related to a complex and unclear complaints process. More than one quarter (28%) did not know who to complain to, and around 25% thought it would be too hard to prove the antisemitism. A further 21% felt the complaints process was too complex.

Figure 5 Reasons for not submitting a complaint (%)

Q9: Why did you decide not to submit a complaint to the university? (n=307)

4. Defining antisemitism in a university setting

Being able to clearly identify when a personally offensive statement or action has crossed the line into antisemitism was difficult for some students.

This level of uncertainty about when a statement or action becomes antisemitic was present for almost two in five (39%) of those surveyed, as shown in Figure 6. This cohort indicated they had experienced a statement or action that offended them as a Jew but were unsure if it was antisemitic. This uncertainty was more common among females (45% vs 32% of males) and those who had previously experienced antisemitism (53% vs 16% of those who have not).

Close to half (46%) had not experienced such a statement or action, while the remaining 14% were confident they knew when a statement or action they experienced was antisemitic.

Figure 6 Incidence of respondents' experiencing a statement or action they found offensive as a Jew, but were unsure if it was antisemitic (%)

Q10: Thinking about your last 12 months at university, have you experienced a statement or action in a university setting (by either university staff or students) that offended you as a Jew, but you weren't sure whether it crossed the line into antisemitism? (n=563)

5. Confidence in raising complaints

Responses were mixed when survey participants were asked how confident they would feel making a complaint about antisemitism to their university.

More than one third of students surveyed (38%) indicated they would not feel confident in making a complaint about antisemitism to their university. A similar proportion (37%) stated they would be confident in doing so (Figure 7).

Students who indicated they were confident ('fairly' or 'very') in making a complaint were more likely to be:

- Male (47% vs 30% of females)
- Have not experienced antisemitism at university (56% vs 26% of those who had experienced antisemitism)
- Entered the survey through the opt-in link (43% vs 34% of those from the AUJS database)

Figure 7 Overall confidence in making a complaint to university about antisemitism (%)

Q12: Overall, how confident <do you / did you > feel about making a complaint about antisemitism to your university? (n=563)

Respondents were then asked if they would be more confident in making a complaint about antisemitism if their university adopted a definition of antisemitism.

Adopting of a definition of antisemitism had a notable impact on those who were previously not confident in making a complaint (Figure 8). The majority (84%) of those with self-reported low levels of confidence (n=211, 'not very' and 'not at all' confident) in making a complaint indicated they would be more confident in raising a complaint if their university adopted a definition of antisemitism.

Figure 8 More confident in making a complaint if university adopted a definition of antisemitism, among those with low confidence levels (%)

Q13: Would you be more confident making a complaint about antisemitism if your university adopted a definition of antisemitism? Note: This figure reports on the responses of those who were 'not very confident' or 'not at all confident' in Q12 (n=211)

6. Changing behaviours

The following question provides a measure of how often survey participants are intentionally changing their appearance and/or campus visitation behaviours. Students were asked how often they avoid attending campus due to the antisemitic behaviours or others, and/or hide their Jewish identity (including by changing clothing or jewellery choice).

As shown in Figure 9 below, there may be a level of concern or fear among some Jewish students. Students are choosing to conceal their Jewish identity and/or change university attendance behaviours to avoid antisemitism.

Many (57%) students surveyed reported hiding their Jewish identity while attending university (either 'always', 'sometimes', or 'rarely'). A previous experience with antisemitic behaviour influences the extent to which students are choosing to conceal their Jewish identity. Those who had previously experienced antisemitism were more likely to hide their Jewish identity while attending university (67% vs 38% of those who have not experienced antisemitism at university). Females were also more likely to hide their Jewish identity when attending university (62% vs 49% of males).

Almost one in five (19%) students avoid attending their university campus due to the antisemitic behaviour of others (either 'always', 'sometimes', or 'rarely'). This avoidance behaviour was also more likely among those who had previously experienced antisemitism (27% vs 6% of those who have not experienced antisemitism at university), and females (24% vs 13% of males).

Figure 9 Incidence of respondents avoiding campus and / or hiding Jewish identify (%)

Q11: While attending university, either on campus or online, how frequently, if at all, <do / did> you… (n=563)

7. Additional feedback

When respondents were given the opportunity to share additional information about their experiences as a Jewish university student, close to a quarter (23%) took this opportunity to provide further commentary. These verbatim responses were varied, with many of these survey participants providing detailed recounts of their challenges and experiences as a Jewish university student.

The text responses were coded into similar themes, however the individuality of many responses meant it was difficult to allocate these to a common theme. Table 2 summarises the top themes arising from the verbatim responses.

Table 2 Additional feedback

| Response categories | |
|---|---|
| Anti-Israel sentiment crosses into antisemitism | 15% |
| Experienced antisemitism from students | 13% |
| Experienced antisemitism from student organizations and groups | 13% |
| Complaints about antisemitism not taken seriously by university | 9% |
| Feel supported / appreciative of what's being done | 8% |
| Issues related to students participating in BDS/ Free Palestine movement | 8% |
| Experienced antisemitism from staff | 8% |
| Insensitive subject matter in courses | 8% |
| Would like more support on campus | 8% |
| Experienced antisemitism at university (no specific mention of staff, students or groups) | 7% |
| Have issues with IHRA definition of antisemitism | 5% |
| Nothing else / No issues | 4% |
| Would have liked more opportunity to explain responses | 3% |
| No consideration of religious days | 3% |
| Other | 40% |
| Total, provided a verbatim response | n=130 |
| Did not provide a verbatim response | n=433 |

Q14: Thank you for answering these questions about your experiences at university as a Jewish student. Is there anything more you would like to share about your experiences? (n=563)

Select verbatim responses have been highlighted below to provide context and specific examples of how respondents answered this question[1]. These responses relate to the types of antisemitism experienced, source, complaints process, feeling uncomfortable on campus, and defining antisemitism.

The types of antisemitism experienced at university included both targeted comments and conversational antisemitism:

> [At my university], it is of a very popular position to take by both staff and student to make antisemitic remarks, especially in regards to Israel. Comments such as 'from the river to the sea' and Jewish colonist occupiers are very common and makes me very wary of being open about my Jewish identity.

[1]Minor grammatical edits have been made to verbatim responses for clarity and to protect respondent identity.

Conversational antisemitism seems to be the most common, where people are just ignorant but also reject criticism of their offensive comments. They're rarely intentional, and this adds to the apathy of reporting, despite the comments impacting more so than others due to the friendlier context before/after.

Student movements / groups were highlighted by some respondents as a source of antisemitism on their university campus:

The socialist movement has said things to me, including calling me a "dirty Zionist Jew" as someone who is clearly a religious student with kippah, tzitzit and a beard.

I feel very unsafe with the presence of anti-Jewish student clubs on campus, such as Students for Palestine.

Some respondents described the challenging processes they encountered when complaining about antisemitism to their university:

Administration bureaucracy to assess antisemitic incidents was very frustrating. Sometimes it would take six months to deal with an issue, usually not leading to any repercussions. The whole process turned me off from informing the university about things.

[My university] has not been taking antisemitic concerns seriously at all. They don't have any systems in place to deal with it properly, with multiple roadblocks when complaints have been made. They don't take any concerns seriously and no meaningful action has occurred when complaints have been made by students.

Other students described when and why they feel uncomfortable as a Jewish student on campus:

I do feel unsteady on campus when things in Israel flair up because of student reactions. Also, especially around Nakba Day I do feel hesitant to come on campus.

I feel uncomfortable about being openly Jewish with other students (other than my close friends). Whenever I would mention it, it always feels a bit like coming out where you don't exactly know how people will respond, if they will judge you negatively or change their behaviour because of it.

Comments about defining antisemitism included concerns about universities not listening to Jewish students, and one student's personal journey to being more confident in identifying antisemitism:

It is very difficult to be a Jewish student at university, especially with regard to non-Jewish people minimising or gaslighting you when you call something antisemitic. Situations are often underplayed by staff and students. They feel that they have the right to define antisemitism and fail to listen to Jewish students. Universities need to be held accountable. They have a duty to hold both their staff and students to account for their actions and must listen to Jewish voices, as they do any other minority groups.

I was offended by certain things that student clubs at my university did, and I wasn't too sure what was considered antisemitic or not. But my friend showed me an AUJS post and I started following AUJS and learning way more about the IHRA definition of antisemitism. This has made it easier to be able to identify antisemitism. I am still a bit scared to call out antisemitism at times because I feel that people will start to dissociate from me.

Appendix 1 Sample profile

Table 3 Sample profile

| Survey completion source | % | n |
|---|---|---|
| Client sample | 70.3 | 396 |
| Open link | 29.7 | 167 |
| Gender | % | n |
| Woman or female | 56.1 | 316 |
| Man or male | 41.9 | 236 |
| Non-binary | 1.6 | 9 |
| Prefer not to say | 0.4 | 2 |
| Age | % | n |
| 16-21 | 46.2 | 260 |
| 22-34 | 51.2 | 288 |
| 35 and over | 2.7 | 15 |
| State / Territory of current or most recent university | % | n |
| VIC | 52.2 | 294 |
| NSW | 30.7 | 173 |
| ACT | 6.9 | 39 |
| WA | 6.7 | 38 |
| QLD | 2.0 | 11 |
| SA | 0.9 | 5 |
| TAS | 0.2 | 1 |
| NT | 0.0 | 0 |
| Prefer not to say | 0.2 | 1 |
| Not sure | 0.2 | 1 |
| Stream of Judaism | % | n |
| Modern Orthodox | 40.3 | 227 |
| Reform | 20.1 | 113 |
| Traditional | 19.4 | 109 |
| Secular | 8.2 | 46 |
| Conservative | 5.2 | 29 |
| Ultra-Orthodox | 2.3 | 13 |
| None | 3.7 | 21 |
| Other | 0.9 | 5 |
| Importance of a sense of connection to Israel for Jewish identity | % | n |
| Very important | 60.4 | 340 |
| Somewhat important | 28.8 | 162 |
| Not very important | 8.2 | 46 |
| Not at all important | 2.5 | 14 |
| Not sure | 0.2 | 1 |

| Incidence of wearing Jewellery or clothing identifiable as Jewish | % | n |
|---|---|---|
| Yes, jewellery | 35.9 | 202 |
| Yes, clothing | 19.4 | 109 |
| No | 51.5 | 290 |
| Not sure | 0.4 | 2 |
| Level of university enrolment (current or most recent) | % | n |
| Bachelor Degree Level | 80.5 | 453 |
| Postgraduate Degree Level (incl. master degree, doctoral degree, other postgraduate degree) | 16.2 | 91 |
| Graduate Diploma and/or Graduate Certificate Level | 2.1 | 12 |
| Advanced Diploma and/or Diploma Level | 1.2 | 7 |
| Current or former university student | % | n |
| I am currently studying at university | 76.2 | 429 |
| I am not currently studying at university, but did so in the last five years | 23.8 | 134 |
| Year commenced current university studies (BASE: current students n=429) | % | n |
| Between 2015 and 2018 | 4.2 | 18 |
| 2019 | 10.7 | 46 |
| 2020 | 20.0 | 86 |
| 2021 | 26.6 | 114 |
| 2022 | 19.8 | 85 |
| 2023 | 18.2 | 78 |
| Prefer not to say | 0.5 | 2 |
| Current or most recent university | % | n |
| Monash University | 24.9 | 140 |
| The University of Melbourne | 11.4 | 64 |
| The University of Sydney | 8.5 | 48 |
| UNSW | 8.3 | 47 |
| The Australian National University | 6.6 | 37 |
| Macquarie University | 5.2 | 29 |
| Deakin University | 4.4 | 25 |
| University of Technology | 4.3 | 24 |
| The University of Western Australia | 3.6 | 20 |
| Swinburne University of Technology | 3.2 | 18 |
| Australian Catholic University | 3.0 | 17 |
| RMIT University | 2.7 | 15 |
| La Trobe University | 2.0 | 11 |
| Curtin University | 1.8 | 10 |
| University of Wollongong | 1.2 | 7 |
| The University of Queensland | 1.1 | 6 |
| The University of Adelaide | 0.7 | 4 |

| Current or most recent university | % | n |
|---|---|---|
| Charles Sturt University | 0.5 | 3 |
| Edith Cowan University | 0.5 | 3 |
| Queensland University of Technology | 0.4 | 2 |
| The University of Newcastle | 0.4 | 2 |
| Torrens University | 0.4 | 2 |
| University of Tasmania | 0.4 | 2 |
| Bond University | 0.2 | 1 |
| Charles Darwin University | 0.0 | 0 |
| Griffith University | 0.2 | 1 |
| Murdoch University | 0.2 | 1 |
| The University of New England | 0.2 | 1 |
| The University of Notre Dame Australia | 0.2 | 1 |
| University of Canberra | 0.2 | 1 |
| University of South Australia | 0.2 | 1 |
| Victoria University | 0.2 | 1 |
| Western Sydney University | 0.2 | 1 |
| Other | 2.1 | 12 |
| Prefer not to say | 1.1 | 6 |

Appendix 2 Methodology

The Zionist Federation of Australia (ZFA), with support of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), the Scanlon Foundation, the Besen Family Foundation and the World Zionist Organization (WZO), commissioned the Social Research Centre (SRC) to undertake the Jewish University Experience Survey. This is the first survey of its kind in Australia.

The questionnaire was provided by the ZFA after consultation with the Scanlon Foundation and refined by the SRC, please see Appendix 4 for a copy of the questionnaire.

An online survey was conducted between March and April 2023 with current and former (within the last five years) Jewish university students. Due to the challenges in reaching this specific student population, there were two pathways to survey entry provided to maximise responses:

- Survey invitations were sent by the SRC to contacts on the AUJS database
- The SRC provided an opt-in link to the ZFA, who then promoted the survey through their own communication channels.

Approximately 70% of all completed surveys were from the AUJS database, with the remaining 30% accessing the survey through the opt-in link (Table 4).

Table 4 Key project statistics

| | Total |
|---|---|
| Date of survey launch | 14th March 2023 |
| Date of survey close | 3rd April 2023 |
| Total invitations (AUJS database) | 3,330 |
| Completed surveys from AUJS database | 396 |
| Proportion of total completes | 70.3% |
| Sample yield from AUJS database | 11.9% |
| | |
| Completed surveys from opt-in link | 167 |
| Proportion of total completes | 29.7% |
| Total completed surveys | 563 |

Recruitment and sample

Jewish university students were recruited via two pathways for survey completion, through the AUJS database and an opt-in link that was promoted by the ZFA.

The AUJS database was securely transferred to the SRC using the SRC's secure file exchange system. This database contained names, email addresses and mobile numbers of students who have provided their contact details to the AUJS. Several steps were taken by the SRC prepare the database for field. This included removing duplicate records, testing email quality and deliverability using Everest, and assigning each record a unique set of survey links.

Respondents from the AUJS database were sent an initial email invitation, followed by 3 email reminders and an SMS reminder. The bulk email and SMS marketing software Vision6 was used to facilitate the email and SMS sends. See Figure 10 for the proportion of database survey completes over the fieldwork period.

The second pathway into the survey was through an opt-in link that was provided to the ZFA by the SRC. By following this link, potential respondents were prompted to enter their email address and after submission would receive an email with their own unique survey link. The ZFA promoted the survey and opt-in link through their own communication channels to encourage participation. See Figure 11 for the proportion of opt-in survey completes over the fieldwork period.

Figure 10 Proportion of survey completes over fieldwork period; survey invitation and reminder communications (BASE: AUJS sample, n=396 completed surveys)

Figure 11 Proportion of survey completes via opt in link over fieldwork period (BASE: opt-in link, n=167 completed surveys)

Participation in the survey was voluntary. Responses have been de-identified and combined for analysis, and used only for the purposes of this research project.

The Social Research Centre is accredited under the ISO 20252 scheme. All aspects of this research were undertaken in accordance with the Research Society code of practice, ISO 20252 standards, the Australian Privacy Principles and the Privacy (Market and Social Research) Code.

Appendix 3 Field of study where antisemitic experience occurred

Table 5 Field of study where antisemitic experience occurred (all responses)

| Full list of response | % | n |
|---|---|---|
| This did not occur in subject or class setting | 48.9 | 176 |
| Political and social sciences | 15.3 | 55 |
| Law and law enforcement | 6.9 | 25 |
| Health (e.g. Medicine, nursing, pharmacy, dental studies, veterinary studies) | 6.1 | 22 |
| Management and commerce (e.g. Accounting, marketing, business, economics, banking and finance) | 4.4 | 16 |
| Creative arts (e.g. Graphic design, performing arts, journalism) | 3.6 | 13 |
| Language and literature, philosophy and religious studies | 3.3 | 12 |
| Natural and physical sciences (e.g. Statistics, astronomy, chemistry, earth sciences, zoology, marine science, microbiology | 2.5 | 9 |
| Education (e.g. Teaching) | 2.2 | 8 |
| Architecture and building | 1.9 | 7 |
| Engineering and related technologies | 1.7 | 6 |
| Information technology (e.g. Computer graphics, systems analysis) | 0.8 | 3 |
| Food, hospitality and personal services | 0.6 | 2 |
| Mixed field programmes (e.g. Employment Skills / General Education / Social Skills programs) | 0.3 | 1 |
| Prefer not to say | 0.3 | 1 |
| Other | 0.8 | 3 |
| Not sure | 0.3 | 1 |
| TOTAL | 100.0 | 360 |

Q6: Please select the field of study that aligns with the subject or class where this antisemitic experience occurred. (n=360)

Appendix 4 Questionnaire

ZIONIST FEDERATION OF AUSTRALIA

THE JEWISH UNIVERSITY EXPERIENCE SURVEY

Developed by the Social Research Centre (SRC) and the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), with the support of the Zionist Federation of Australia (ZFA) and the Scanlon Foundation.

Note when reading this questionnaire:

- All programmer notes and interview notes are in UPPERCASE text.

PROGRAMMING NOTES

*Please display Social Research Centre, Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), Zionist Federation of Australia (ZFA) and Scanlon Foundation logos in the header.
*For questions that have different tense options (e.g. current/ most recent, do/did), please select 'current'/ 'do' for respondents where DEM1=1 (current university student). Please select 'most recent' / 'did' for respondents where DEM1=2 (not currently studying).

INTRODUCTION

*(ALL)
INTRO Welcome to the Jewish university experience survey. This is an important study conducted by the Social Research Centre on behalf of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), with the support of the Zionist Federation of Australia (ZFA) and the Scanlon Foundation.

We are interested in understanding the university experiences of Jewish students. No matter your age, circumstances, views or experiences, your participation is important to ensure the results represent the views and experiences of all Jewish students.

The survey takes about 5 minutes, depending on your answers.

Participation in this survey is completely voluntary. This survey is being conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Privacy Act and the Australian Privacy Principles. Your responses will be used for research purposes only and will be held in the strictest confidence. Any information provided will not be disclosed to any other organisation for marketing or research purposes. The responses of everyone who participates in this survey will be combined for analysis. Any open-end responses / comments you provide will be provided anonymously to the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), the ZFA and the Scanlon Foundation.

For more information or technical support please contact the Social Research Centre via email at JUES@srcentre.com.au or by phone at 1800 023 040.

Please click 'Next' to start the survey.

SCREENING AND INITIAL DEMOGRAPHICS

*(ALL)

INTRODUCTION

INTRO To start with, we have some questions about yourself.

*(ALL)

DEM1 Which of the following best describes your university studies in Australia?

1. I am currently studying at university
2. I am not currently studying at university, but did so in the last five years
3. None of the above (TERM 1)

99. Prefer not to say (TERM 1)

*(ALL)

DEM2 Do you consider yourself to be Jewish?

1. Yes, Jewish
2. No, I am not Jewish (TERM 1)

99. Prefer not to say (TERM 1)

*(ALL)

DEM3 What is your age today?

1. Age given (RECORD AGE IN YEARS) (RANGE 16 to 99)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(DEM3=99 OR 98, UNSURE OR PREFER NOT TO SAY AGE)

DEM3a Which of these age groups do you belong to?

1. 16-17
2. 18-21
3. 22-24
4. 25-34
5. 35-44
6. 45-54
7. 55-64
8. 65 and over

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

DEM4 How do you describe your gender?

1. Woman or female
2. Man or male
3. Non-binary
4. I use a different term (please specify)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

DEM5 In which state or territory is your <current / most recent> university located?

1. NSW
2. VIC
3. QLD
4. SA
5. WA
6. TAS
7. NT
8. ACT

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

MODULE 1

*(ALL)

INTRODUCTION

The next questions are about your experiences as a Jewish student at university.

*(ALL)

Q1 Thinking about your time at university, have you ever experienced any of the following, either on campus or online in a university setting (such as online lectures/ tutorials and university affiliated online meetings)?

*(ROTATE) (STATEMENTS)

a) Antisemitism based on religion or race
b) Antisemitism based on perceptions of Jewish money, power or influence
c) Someone denying or minimising the Holocaust
d) Someone comparing Israel to Nazi Germany
e) Being involuntarily singled out, or excluded, because of matters relating to Israel
f) People or events that made you feel intimidated because of your Jewish identity

(RESPONSE FRAME)

1. Yes
2. No

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q1=ANY A-F, EXPERIENCED ANY DISPLAYS OF ANTISEMITIC BEHAVIOUR)

Q2 During your last 12 months at university, how often did you experience these, either on campus or online in a university setting (such as online lectures/ tutorials and university affiliated online meetings)?

*(ONLY SHOW STATEMENTS A-F SELECTED IN Q1)

a) Antisemitism based on religion or race
b) Antisemitism based on perceptions of Jewish money, power or influence
c) Someone denying or minimising the Holocaust
d) Someone comparing Israel to Nazi Germany
e) Being involuntarily singled out, or excluded, because of matters relating to Israel
f) People or events that made you feel intimidated because of your Jewish identity

(RESPONSE FRAME)

1. Weekly or more
2. Monthly
3. Every few months
4. Every 6 to 12 months
5. Did not experience this in my last 12 months of university

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q1=ANY A-F, EXPERIENCED ANY DISPLAYS OF ANTISEMITIC BEHAVIOUR)

Q3 Thinking about your most impactful experience of antisemitic behaviour in a university setting, who actively participated in this antisemitic behaviour?

Please select all that apply

(MULTIPLE RESPONSE CODES 1-3)

1. University staff
2. University students
3. Another role (specify)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q3=2-99, UNIVERSITY STAFF NOT SELECTED AS ACTIVE PARTICIPANT)

Q4 During this most impactful experience of antisemitic behaviour, were university staff present at this time?

1. Yes, university staff were present
2. No, university were not present

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q3=1 OR Q4=1, UNIVERSITY STAFF WERE PRESENT)

Q5 And during this most impactful experience did you see university staff ignore this antisemitic behaviour?

1. Yes, they ignored it
2. No, they did not ignore it
3. Other (specify)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q1=ANY A-F, EXPERIENCED ANY DISPLAYS OF ANTISEMITIC BEHAVIOUR))

Q6 Please select the field of study that aligns with the subject or class where this antisemitic experience occurred.

1. Natural and physical sciences (e.g. Statistics, astronomy, chemistry, earth sciences, zoology, marine science, microbiology, pharmacology)
2. Information technology (e.g. Computer graphics, systems analysis)
3. Engineering and related technologies
4. Architecture and building
5. Agriculture, environmental and related studies
6. Health (e.g. Medicine, nursing, pharmacy, dental studies, veterinary studies)
7. Education (e.g. Teaching)
8. Management and commerce (e.g. Accounting, marketing, business, economics, banking and finance)
9. Language and literature, philosophy and religious studies
10. Law and law enforcement
11. Political and social sciences
12. Creative arts (e.g. Graphic design, performing arts, journalism)
13. Food, hospitality and personal services
14. Mixed field programmes (e.g. Employment Skills / General Education / Social Skills programs)
15. This did not occur in subject or class setting

96. Other (please specify)
98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q1=ANY A-F, EXPERIENCED ANY DISPLAYS OF ANTISEMITIC BEHAVIOUR)

Q7 Did you submit a complaint to the university after this most impactful experience of antisemitic behaviour?

1. Yes, I submitted a complaint
2. No, I did not submit a complaint

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q7=1, SUBMITTED A COMPLAINT)

Q8 How satisfied were you with the university's response to your complaint?

1. Very satisfied
2. Satisfied
3. Neither satisfied nor dissatisfied
4. Dissatisfied
5. Very dissatisfied

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(Q7=2, DID NOT SUBMIT A COMPLAINT)

Q9 Why did you decide not to submit a complaint to the university?

Please select all that apply

(MULTIPLE RESPONSE CODES 1-96)
(RANDOMISE)

1. I was concerned my grades would be negatively impacted
2. The complaint process is complex
3. I did not think complaining would make a difference
4. I did not know who I could make a complaint to
5. I did not think my complaint would be kept confidential
6. I was worried I might not be believed
7. I did not want to get anyone into trouble
8. I thought it would be too hard to prove
9. I did not think the university would think it was serious enough
96. Other (specify)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

Q10 Thinking about your last 12 months at university, have you experienced a statement or action in a university setting (by either university staff or students) that offended you as a Jew, but you weren't sure whether it crossed the line into antisemitism?

1. Yes, this has happened to me
2. No, I was confident I knew this statement or action was antisemitic
3. No, I have not experienced this

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

Q11 While attending university, either on campus or online, how frequently, if at all, <do / did> you…

(STATEMENTS) (ROTATE)

a) Hide your Jewish identity (including by changing your choice of clothing or jewellery)
b) Avoid attending campus due to the antisemitic behaviour of others

(RESPONSE FRAME)

1. Always
2. Sometimes
3. Rarely
4. Never

97. Not applicable

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

Q12 Overall, how confident <do you / did you > feel about making a complaint about antisemitism to your university?

1. Very confident
2. Fairly confident
3. Neither
4. Not very confident
5. Not at all confident

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

Q13 Would you be more confident making a complaint about antisemitism if your university adopted a definition of antisemitism?

1. Yes
2. No

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

Q14 Thank you for answering these questions about your experiences at university as a Jewish student. Is there anything more you would like to share about your experiences?

(SPECIFY: FULL VERBATIM)

1. No, nothing else to add.

CLOSING QUESTIONS

*(ALL)

INTRODUCTION

Thank you for your responses, to finish we have a few more questions about you, and your university studies.

*(ALL)

C1 Which stream of Judaism do you most identify with?

1. Reform

1. Conservative
2. Traditional
3. Modern Orthodox
4. Ultra-Orthodox
5. None
6. Other (please specify)

99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

C2 How important is a sense of connection to Israel to your Jewish identify?

1. Very important
2. Somewhat important
3. Not very important
4. Not at all important

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

C3 Do you usually wear jewellery or clothing that would likely identify you to others as Jewish?

(MULTIPLE RESPONSE CODES 1-2)

1. Yes, jewellery
2. Yes, clothing
3. No (EXCLUSIVE)

98. Not sure
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

C4 What level university course <are you currently / were you most recently> enrolled in?

1. Advanced Diploma and/or Diploma Level
2. Bachelor Degree Level
3. Graduate Diploma and/or Graduate Certificate Level
4. Postgraduate Degree Level (incl. master degree, doctoral degree, other postgraduate degree)
5. Other (please specify)

99. Prefer not to say

*(DEM1=1, CURRENTLY ENROLLED AT UNIVERSITY))

C5 In what year did you commence your current university course?

1. (SPECIFY YEAR) (RANGE 2010 TO 2023)

99. Prefer not to say

.

*(ALL)

C6 What university <do you currently / did you most recently> attend?

(DROP DOWN LIST)

1. Australian Catholic University
2. Avondale University
3. Bond University
4. Carnegie Mellon University
5. Charles Darwin University
6. Charles Sturt University
7. CQUniversity
8. Curtin University
9. Deakin University
10. Edith Cowan University
11. Federation University Australia
12. Flinders University
13. Griffith University
14. James Cook University
15. La Trobe University
16. Macquarie University
17. Monash University
18. Murdoch University
19. Queensland University of Technology
20. RMIT University
21. Southern Cross University
22. Swinburne University of Technology
23. The Australian National University
24. The University of Adelaide
25. The University of Melbourne
26. The University of New England
27. The University of Newcastle
28. The University of Notre Dame Australia
29. The University of Queensland
30. The University of Sydney
31. The University of Western Australia
32. Torrens University
33. University of Canberra
34. University of Divinity
35. UNSW
36. University of South Australia
37. University of Southern Queensland
38. University of Tasmania
39. University of Technology, Sydney
40. University of the Sunshine Coast
41. University of Wollongong
42. Victoria University
43. Western Sydney University

98. Other (please specify)
99. Prefer not to say

*(ALL)

C7 Thank you. In the future, the Social Research Centre, may wish to conduct additional research related to today's survey. This could take place over the phone, online or in person (such as an in-depth interview or a focus group).

Can we contact you for this?

1. Yes – please provide your:
   Contact name (SPECIFY
   Email address (SPECIFY)
   Phone number (SPECIFY)
2. No thanks

CLOSING SCREEN

*(ALL)

Thank you for taking the time to answer those questions! Your help in this survey has been greatly appreciated.

This survey was conducted by the Social Research Centre on behalf of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students (AUJS), with the support of the Zionist Federation of Australia and the Scanlon Foundation. This study has been carried out in compliance with the Privacy Act and the Australian Privacy Principles, and the information you have provided will only be used for research purposes. Our Privacy Policy is available via our website.

Your answers have been submitted. You may now close the page.

Thank you again for participating.

If you felt upset or distressed at any time during the survey, we encourage you to contact the beyondblue (www.beyondblue.org.au, 1300 22 4636) or Life line Australia (https://www.lifeline.org.au/, 13 11 14).

TERMINATION SCRIPS

TERM 1: For the purposes of this survey, we are looking to speak with current university students or those who completed their studies in the last five years, and who identify as Jewish. Thank you for your time. *(TERMINATE)

The Zionist Federation of Australia, with the support of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students, the Scanlon Foundation, the Besen Family Foundation and the World Zionist Organization, commissioned the Social Research Centre to undertake the Jewish University Experience Survey.

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-5"
annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach
dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Australian Jews in the Shadow of War: Main Survey Findings

Dr Adina Bankier-Karp & Dr David Graham

May 2024

Image: AFP Via Getty Images

Research partners

Funding partners

All rights reserved
© Adina L. Bankier-Karp and David J. Graham

First published 2024

Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation
Faculty of Arts
Monash University Victoria 3800
https://arts.monash.edu/acjc

and

JCA
http://www.jca.org.au

ISBN:

This work is copyright. Apart for any use permitted under the Copyright Act 1968, no part of it may be reproduced by any process without written permission from the publisher.
Requests and inquiries concerning reproduction rights should be directed to the publisher.

Recommended citation:
Bankier-Karp, A.L. & Graham, D.J. (2024). Australian Jews in the shadow of war survey. Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University and JCA Sydney.
https://www.monash.edu/arts/acjc/research-and-projects/current-projects/australian-Australian Jews-in-the-shadow-of-war

Contents

Contents....3
Acknowledgements....5
About the authors....5
Executive Summary....6
Introduction....9
Australian Jewry: demographic context....9
Survey Results....11
News consumption....11
Following news about the war....11
Discussing the war with friends and family in Australia....12
Main sources of information about the war....13
Use of social media during the war....15
How social media was being used by Australian Jews in Australia....16
Emotional impact of social media content about the war on Jewish people in Australia....17
The effect of the war on Jewish people in Australia....18
Jewish peoples' feelings about the war....18
Jewish people's attitudes towards the actions of the IDF and Hamas....18
How well do Jewish people feel they understand the current situation in Israel?....19
Showing support for Israel....20
Openness about Jewish identity in public....20
Charitable donations made since the start of the war....21
Jewish people's feelings about the reaction of non-Jewish friends and colleagues to the war....22
Connections to Israel....24
Jewish peoples' emotional attachment to Israel....24
Jewish people's attitudes about Israel when it is put in danger....24
Personal connections to Israel among Australian Australian Jews....25
Discussing the war with friends and family in Israel....25
Whether Australian Australian Jews have visited Israel....26
Likelihood that Jewish people in Australia would choose to live in Israel....26
Antisemitism and perceptions of personal safety....26
Jewish people's perceptions of the prevalence of antisemitism....26
Jewish peoples' experience of antisemitism since the beginning of the war....27
Reporting antisemitic incidents....28

Jewish university students ..... 29
Experiences of Jewish university students ..... 29
Mental Heath ..... 30
Your experiences as a Jewish Australian: Qualitative reflections ..... 32
Thinking about Israel ..... 34
Media and social media ..... 35
Mental health ..... 38
Australian Jewish community ..... 39
Interactions with non-Jewish Australian friends and colleagues ..... 40
Opportunities for change ..... 43
Appendix A. Methodological Appendix ..... 44
Methodology overview ..... 44
Questionnaire design ..... 44
Sampling procedure ..... 45
Response diagnostics ..... 46
Sample evaluation ..... 47
Demographic subpopulation variables and sample size ..... 47

Acknowledgements

We would like to thank those whose contributions made this research possible. We would like to acknowledge the support and assistance of the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University and JCA for the opportunity to collaborate on the Australian Jews in the Shadow of War Study. We are especially grateful to JCA and Associate Professor David Slucki, Director of the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University, whose professionalism and enthusiasm ensured the survey ran smoothly and efficiently.

We are deeply grateful for the support of JCA and the Loti & Victor Smorgon Family Foundation, in partnership with the Australian Jewish Funders, whose generosity and foresight enabled this survey to be conducted.

We are appreciative of Yaffa Bart for her contribution to the analysis of the qualitative survey responses.

Finally, we thank the 7,611 Jewish people of Australia who participated in the survey. This research would not have been possible without their willingness to share insights into their lives by responding to our questions.

We extend our sincere appreciation to all those who contributed, directly or indirectly, to this research. We hope you find yourselves in the diversity of views presented here. May this report serve as a catalyst for dialogue, inspire further inquiry, and contribute meaningfully to our shared pursuit of knowledge.

Dr. Adina Bankier-Karp
Research Affiliate
Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation
Monash University, Melbourne, Australia

Dr. David Graham
Demographic and Social Research Consultant
Sydney, Australia

About the authors

Dr. Adina Bankier-Karp is a research affiliate at the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University, and associate editor of the journal Contemporary Jewry. She has written for academic and general audiences on topics including Jewish identity formation, Australian Jewry, Jewish education and the intersection of religion and wellbeing. Her most recent publications have examined Jewish identity resilience and the relevance of Jewish denominations to understanding Jewish values and engagement. Adina holds a PhD in Education from Monash University.

Dr David Graham is a demographic and social research consultant based in Sydney. He is an Honorary Associate at the Department of Hebrew, Biblical and Jewish Studies, University of Sydney and Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Jewish Policy Research (JPR) in the UK. And Honorary Research Associate at the University of Cape Town. A geographer by training and expert in the study of Australian Jews in the UK, Australia and South Africa, his skills encompass statistical analysis, survey design, census analysis and geographic information system mapping. He has published widely for academic and general interest audiences and holds a DPhil from the University of Oxford.

Executive Summary

The impact of the Israel-Hamas war on Jewish people in Australia

The aim of this survey was to carry out an empirical assessment of the initial impact the Israel-Hamas war on Australia's Jewish community. The attack on Israel by Hamas on 7 October 2023 was the start of an extremely traumatic period and while anecdote has its place in the record, it is evidence-based, systematic data-gathering that we rely on to fully understand what Jewish people were experiencing and how they reacted.

The findings of this survey, conducted during the fifth week of the war between Israel and Hamas (10-17 November 2023), are based on responses from 7,611 Australian Jewish adults from diverse backgrounds. As we show here, at this point in time, the impact of these events was profound.

News consumption

There was an extremely high level of engagement in news related to the Israel-Hamas war among Jewish people with news being consumed from local and international sources as well as Israeli sources. Jewish people were also obtaining information from personal contacts living in Israel.

High level of interest in the war among Australian Jews

- Eight out of ten Australian Jewish adults (79%) were following news about the Israel-Hamas war 'very' closely, a further 19% were following it 'fairly' closely. Therefore 98% are following the news closely.
- In addition to Australian news sources, 63% of Australian Jews were consuming Israeli news sources, and 60% were getting news from personal conversations.
- Eight out of ten (81%) Australian Jews were talking about the war on a daily basis with their friends and family in Australia, highlighting how the war in Israel is nevertheless a very personal experience for many Australian Jews living as far away as Australia.
- Almost one in three (64%) Australian Jews with close family and friends living in Israel were in personal contact with them every few days of more often since 7 October.

Distress and concern about the war

The data reveal an extraordinarily high level of distress experienced by people in the Jewish community, whether from being upset, offended or frightened by content they had seen on social media or the news; whether by being concerned or upset at the reactions of some of their own non-Jewish friends or colleagues. All of this was reflected in widespread feelings of anxiety and worry.

The emotional toll of social media

- Three quarters (74%) of Australian Jews felt upset, more than half (54%) felt offended and more than a third (38%) felt frightened by social media content about the war on a 'daily basis'.

Reactions of non-Jewish friends and colleagues

- Six out of ten Jewish people (60%) were concerned or upset by the reactions of their non-Jewish friends since 7 October.

- And almost half (48%) were concerned or upset by the reactions of their non-Jewish colleagues.
- On the other hand, a large majority (83%) of Australian Jews said that non-Jewish friends and acquaintances had reached out to them with messages of sympathy.

Mental health strain

- 44% of Jewish people felt nervous, anxious or on edge on a 'daily basis' since the war had begun, and a further 38% felt this way frequently.
- 31% said they had not been able to stop or control worrying on a 'daily basis' and a further 36% felt this way frequently.

Concern for the lives of Israelis and Palestinians

Australian Jews in Australia expressed concern for the lives of Israels as well as the lives of Palestinians living in Gaza.

- A large majority (91%) of Australian Jews felt 'very much' concerned for the lives of the Israelis.
- Eight out of ten Australian Jews (79%) felt 'somewhat' or 'very much' concerned about the lives of Palestinians in Gaza.

Antisemitism

The high level of concern that Australian Jews expressed about antisemitism in Australia during this period was almost certainly unprecedented. The data show that the experience of antisemitism in the five-week period following 7 October was broad, whether or not these incidents ended up being recorded in official statistics. Many Australian Jews felt the need to hide their Jewish identity in public.

- 64% of Australian Jews felt that antisemitism was 'very much' a big problem in Australia. This was ten times higher than in 2017 when a similar question was asked of Australian Jews in more peaceful times.
- Since the beginning of the war, i.e., over a period of about 40 days, one in five (20%) Jewish adults in Australia said they had personally experienced an insult or harassment because they are Jewish, rising to 43% among those aged 18 to 29 years.
- 71% of these victims said they had not reported the antisemitic incident to any authority.
- Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, one in five (22%) Jewish people in Australia had been less open about their Jewish identity in public.

Hostility towards Israel at universities

Jewish students were asked about their experiences on Australian campuses during this five-week period.

- More than two-thirds (68%) of Jewish students studying at Australian universities had personally encountered hostility towards Israel from other students at their university by this point.
- Half of all students (51%) had encountered hostility towards Israel from their own close friends at university.
- 46% had experienced hostility towards Israel from university lecturers and staff.

Attachment to Israel

The data highlight that most Jewish people in Australia feel a very strong emotional attachment to Israel and most have multiple personal connections through their family members and friends who live and work there. Almost all Jewish people in Australia have visited Israel and many have lived there themselves. Five weeks after 7 October, Australian Jews reported widespread charitable support directed towards Israel.

Close attachment to Israel

- Three quarters (75%) of Jewish people said they were 'very' emotionally attached to Israel and a further 16% said they were 'somewhat' attached. Therefore 91% of Australian Jews felt at least somewhat emotionally attached to Israel.
- 87% said they felt 'a special alarm' given that Israel had been put in danger. 37% said they were so alarmed 'it is almost as if my own life was in danger.' In 2017, in more peaceful times, the equivalent proportion was 16%, meaning it was almost 2.5 times higher at this point.
- A very large proportion (82%) of Jewish people in Australia have personal social connections to Israel through close family members and friends who live there.
- The vast majority (93%) of Jewish people in Australia have visited Israel. Indeed, most have visited more than once and one in five (20%) has either lived there or was born there.

Charitable support

- In the 40-day period since the start of the war, almost three quarters (73%) of Australian Australian Jews had made charitable contributions because of the conflict.
- Over half (52%) had contributed to an Israel-based charity.
- Almost half (46%) had contributed to an Australian-based charity focused on Israel.
- By contrast, 11% had donated to Australian-based Jewish charities.

Introduction

Australian Jews in the shadow of war (AJSW) is a survey that was conducted by the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation (ACJC) at Monash University, Melbourne in conjunction with the charity JCA in Sydney, Australia. This study was funded by JCA and the Loti and Victor Smorgon Family Foundation, in partnership with Australian Jewish Funders. The study employed post-hoc population weights developed out of an analysis of the 2021 Australian Census and a separate Jewish congregational census, to make the data more representative of Australia's Jewish population.

The tumultuous events which occurred in Israel on the 7th of October 2023 and the subsequent war between Israel and Hamas—which was still in its early stages as the survey was being conducted—had ramifications not only for the warring parties but also for Australian Jews around the world. We were primarily motivated to provide an empirical basis of understanding about the emotional impact of these events on Australian Jews in Australia and their personal experiences. The main areas of interest were the views of Australian Jews about the Israel-Hamas war itself, their attitudes towards Israel and their personal connections to the Jewish State, and their perceptions and experiences of antisemitism in the wake of this war.

In doing so, we sought to take a balanced and scientifically rigorous approach to this work whilst acknowledging first, that this was a survey of Jewish people and not of others who may have been affected by the war, and second, that there are a multitude of perspectives on the Middle East conflict within the Jewish community and there is always a risk that bias may be perceived, regardless of these efforts.

Specifically, the study sought to:

- Understand the attitudes of Australian Jewish people towards—and experience of living during—the Israel-Hamas war, including opinions about the actions of Israel and Hamas; media and social media access; confidence in their familiarity with the situation in Israel; feelings and actions in response to the war; philanthropic activity; reactions to responses by non-Australian Jews in their lives.
- Examine the nature of Australian Jews' Israel attachment, including their familial and social connections in Israel, and their visits to Israel.
- Capture perceptions of and experiences with antisemitism.
- Detail Australian Jews' views about how Australian political leadership has performed in response to the events in Israel and Australia.
- Explore effects on Australian Jews' mental health.
- Contextualise current attitudes by comparing responses at this moment, with responses gathered in 2017 during a 'normal' period.

The survey was conducted in the early days of the war between the 10th and 17th of November 2023, closing on the 41st day of the conflict. The final dataset contained complete responses from 7,611 self-identifying Australian Jews aged 18 and above from across Australia.

Australian Jewry: demographic context

There has been a Jewish community continually present in Australia since the landing of the First Fleet in 1788. In 2021, the size of the Jewish population was estimated to be 116,967,[1] which is just under 0.5% of total

[1] This estimate is larger than the enumerated 2021 Australian Census figure of 99,956 as it takes into account estimated Jewish non-response to the census's voluntary religion question and those who identified as Jewish in the Australian population. The estimated size of the Jewish population aged 18 and above is 92,300. The Jewish population is highly concentrated in a very small number of urban areas: 83% of all Australian Jews live in either Greater Melbourne or Greater Sydney, and a further 8% live in either Greater Perth or Greater Brisbane. While 57% of Australian Jews are Australian born, this is a smaller proportion than for the general population at 71%. Just over an estimated 8,000 Australian Jews living in Australia were born in Israel.[2] ancestry question but not in the religion question. See further Graham, D. 2024. (forthcoming). The Jewish population of Australia: Key findings from the 2021 Census, JCA Sydney.

[2] Australian Bureau of Statistics, 2021. 2021 Australian population census. https://www.abs.gov.au/statistics/people/population/population-census/2021

Survey Results

News consumption

Following news about the war

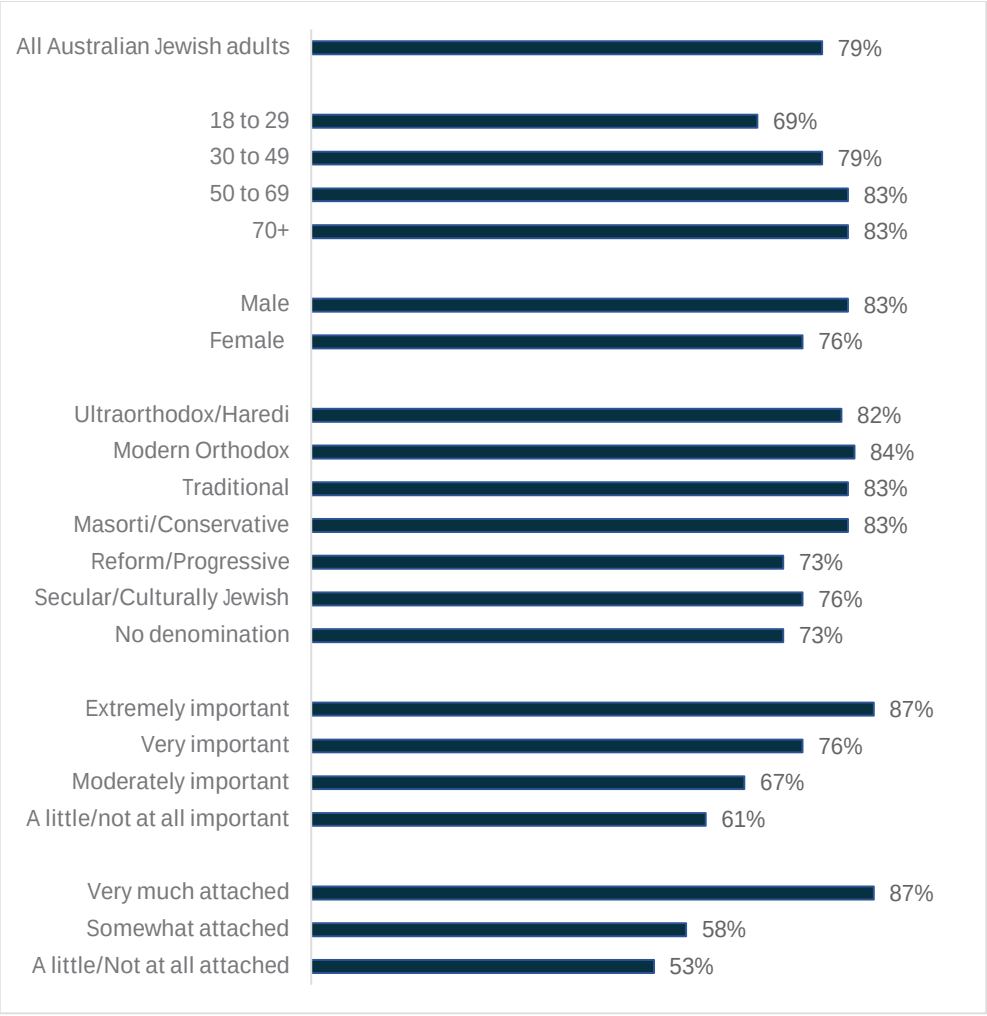
Almost 8 out of 10 Australian Jewish adults (79%) were following news about the Israel-Hamas war very closely (Figure 1). A further 19% were following it fairly closely. In other words, almost all (98%) Jewish adults in Australia were highly motivated in gathering information about this conflict. Indeed, even among those who are not at all attached to Israel, 62% are following the news at least fairly closely.

Figure 1. How closely have you been following the news about the Israel-Hamas war? – Very closely



In 2017, the last time a survey of Australian Jews in Australia was conducted,[3] 30% said they followed news on Israel 'a lot'. In the present survey a similar, but not identical, question was asked which we believe is sufficiently comparable provide reliable contextualisation. This showed that 79% of Jewish adults had been following the news about the Israel-Hamas war 'very closely' (Figure 2). The substantial rise in consumption of news about Israel by Australian Jews is striking.

Figure 2. Following news about Israel Gen17 (2017) and AJSW (2023) compared Question asked in AJSW 2023: How closely have you been following the news about the Israel-Hamas war? Very closely, Fairly closely, Not very closely, Not at all Question asked in Gen17 2017: To what extent do you keep up with current events which involve Israel? Would you say... A lot, Quite a lot, A little, Not at all

Discussing the war with friends and family in Australia

More than eight out of ten (81%) Australian Jews were talking about the war with friends and family in Australia on a daily basis (Figure 3), which accords with the above finding about engagement with news about the war. A further 15% were having such conversations every few days. Therefore, the vast majority of Australian Jewish adults (96%) were talking almost daily with family and friends in Australia about the war.

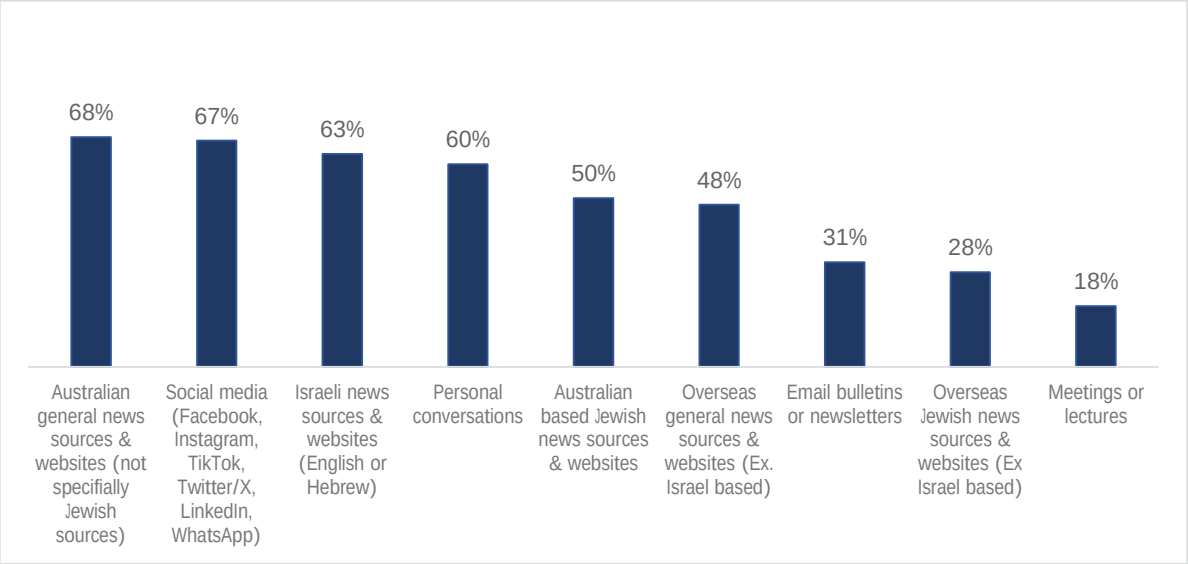
[3] See Graham, D. and Markus, A. 2018. Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey. Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation and JCA. https://www.monash.edu/__data/assets/pdf_file/0009/1531791/gen17-initial-findings-report-online-version-final-22_3.pdf

Figure 3. How often have you had conversations with your friends and family in Australia about the Israel-Hamas war?

Main sources of information about the war

Jews in Australia were obtaining information about the war from a very wide variety of sources. Figure 4 shows the news sources which were read, watched or engaged with by Australian Jews most frequently. About two-thirds of Australian Jewish adults most frequently consumed Australian general news sources (i.e., that were not specifically Jewish) (68%), social media (67%), Israeli news sources (63%) and through personal conversations (60%). And half consumed Australian-based Jewish news sources (50%) and overseas general (i.e. not specifically Jewish) news sources (48%).

Figure 4. Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, which news sources have you read or watched or engaged in most frequently? (Check all that apply) – Frequently



In 2017, Jewish people in Australia were asked what their main sources of information were about the Jewish world and Israel.[4] Comparing those 2017 responses with those during the Israel-Hamas war allows us to gain some understanding about how this particular moment had impacted Jewish peoples' behaviour when it comes to news consumption (Figure 5). In proportionate terms, the largest changes were increases in personal conversations, the consumption of Israeli news sources and the consumption of overseas general (i.e., not specifically Jewish) news sources.

Figure 5. News sources accessed for following news about Israel, Gen17 (2018) and AJSW (2023) compared*

[4] Graham, D. and Markus, A. 2018. Op. cit.

* Question in Gen17: What are your main sources of information about the Jewish world and Israel?; Question in AJSW 2023: Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, which news sources have you read or watched or engaged in most frequently?

About two-thirds of Australian Jews said that the news sources which they read, watched or engaged in most frequently were Australian general news sources and websites (68%), social media (Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, Twitter/X, LinkedIn, WhatsApp, 67%), Israeli news sources and websites (in English or Hebrew, 63%) or personal conversations (60%). Half of Australian Jews also said that they read, watched or engaged in Australian-based Jewish news sources and websites (50%). The types of news sources that Jewish people were accessing are closely related to demographic and identity profiles. For example, news source consumption significantly differs by age group, especially in terms of social media which was consumed far more by younger people (84% of those aged 18 to 29) than older people (42% of those age 70 and older). In contrast, Australian general news sources were consumed more by older people (75% of those aged 70 and above) than younger people (65% of those aged 18 to 29). Compared with Jewish men, Jewish women were more likely to use social media (72% vs 61%) and have personal conversations about the war (65% women vs 54% men). Israeli news sources were far more likely to be read by those who feel very much attached to Israel (71%) compared to those who felt a little or not at all attached (33%) to Israel. Israeli news sources were also far more likely to be read by those who were Haredi and Modern Orthodox (70% and 71%), compared with those who had no denomination (53%).

Use of social media during the war

The vast majority of Jewish people in Australia (89%) had used social media during the war and 65% of these people had changed their viewing habits in the five weeks since the start of the war (Table 1). More than half of Australian Jewish adults had increased their use of social media (57%), and a small minority had decreased their use (8%). Younger people were more likely to change their habits than older people and Jewish women were more likely to have done so than Jewish men. Those who are more Orthodox, more emotionally attached to Israel and for whom being Jewish is important were all more likely to have increased their social media use.

Table 1. Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, has your use of social media….?

| | I haven't used social media at all (n=879) (%) | Decreased (n=581) (%) | Stayed the same (n=1,771) (%) | Increased (n=4,303) (%) | Total (n=7,534) (%) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Australian Jewish adult total | 11 | 8 | 24 | 57 | 100 |
| Age | | | | | |
| 18 to 29 | 2 | 14 | 24 | 60 | 100 |
| 30 to 49 | 5 | 10 | 20 | 64 | 100 |
| 50 to 69 | 9 | 6 | 26 | 59 | 100 |
| 70+ | 29 | 2 | 28 | 40 | 100 |
| Sex | | | | | |
| Male | 14 | 6 | 29 | 51 | 100 |
| Female | 8 | 10 | 21 | 62 | 100 |
| State | | | | | |

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| New South Wales | 12 | 7 | 25 | 56 | 100 |
| Victoria | 9 | 9 | 23 | 59 | 100 |
| Rest of Australia | 9 | 8 | 26 | 56 | 100 |
| | | | | | |
| Denomination | | | | | |
| Ultraorthodox/Haredi | 8 | 13 | 17 | 62 | 100 |
| Modern Orthodox | 9 | 8 | 19 | 64 | 100 |
| Traditional | 9 | 6 | 20 | 65 | 100 |
| Masorti/Conservative | 10 | 9 | 31 | 50 | 100 |
| Reform/Progressive | 16 | 12 | 30 | 43 | 100 |
| Secular/Culturally Jewish | 10 | 8 | 27 | 54 | 100 |
| No denomination | 16 | 7 | 31 | 46 | 100 |
| | | | | | |
| Being Jewish is… | | | | | |
| Extremely important | 9 | 8 | 18 | 65 | 100 |
| Very important | 13 | 9 | 26 | 53 | 100 |
| Moderately important | 11 | 7 | 33 | 48 | 100 |
| A little/not at all important | 14 | 5 | 43 | 38 | 100 |
| | | | | | |
| Israel attachment | | | | | |
| Very much attached | 10 | 7 | 20 | 63 | 100 |
| Somewhat attached | 13 | 11 | 34 | 42 | 100 |
| A little/Not at all attached | 11 | 10 | 45 | 34 | 100 |

How social media was being used by Australian Jews in Australia

Among the 89% of Jewish people who had been using social media since the start of the war, they were far more likely to share content or react to other people's content than post their own thoughts about the situation (Figure 6). Half (50%) had posted, shared or forwarded content about the situation on social media at least every few days and almost half had reacted or commented on other people's posts by this stage.

Figure 6. Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, how often have you...?

Emotional impact of social media content about the war on Jewish people in Australia

It is evident that the emotional impact of social media content about the war had been very substantial on Jewish people living in Australia (Figure 7). Three quarters (74%) of Australian Jews had felt upset on a daily basis. More than half (54%) said they had felt offended by social media content on a daily basis. 38% said they had felt frightened daily or more often when viewing social media and a further 27% had felt this way every few days. But a similar proportion found themselves frequently feeling proud on viewing social media, daily or more often (35%).

Figure 7. Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, when viewing content on social media, how often have you found yourself feeling…

The effect of the war on Jewish people in Australia

Jewish peoples' feelings about the war

Five weeks into the war, a large majority (91%) of Australian Jews said they felt very much concerned for the lives of Israelis (Figure 8), and almost as many felt they wanted to support Israel (85%) and felt proud to be connected to Israelis (75%). But it is also noteworthy that despite the deep concern that they felt for Israel and Israelis, almost eight out of ten of Australian Jews in Australia (79%) were somewhat or very concerned about the lives of Palestinians in Gaza at this stage.

Figure 8. Thinking about the Israel-Hamas war, to what extent have you felt...?

Jewish people's attitudes towards the actions of the IDF and Hamas

Five weeks into the war, the vast majority (90%) of Jewish people in Australia felt the actions of the Israel Defence Force (IDF) had been justified (Figure 9). Indeed, a majority (59%) said that the actions of the IDF were completely justified. By contrast, hardly any Jewish people (4%) felt the actions of Hamas had been justified.

Figure 9. In the current war between Israel and Hamas, how justified or unjustified, do you think each side's actions have been?

How well do Jewish people feel they understand the current situation in Israel?

Considering the complexity of the situation it is striking that 93% of Jewish people in Australia agreed that they felt confident in their understanding of the current situation in Israel (Figure 10).

Figure 10. To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statement? I feel confident that I understand the current situation in Israel – strongly agree

Showing support for Israel

In the five-week period since the start of the war, more than half (57%) of Australian Jews had demonstrated support or solidarity with Israel by attending a rally or event, putting up a sign, flag, poster or ribbon. Support was more likely to be expressed in this way by Australian Jews who are more Orthodox, feel more attached to Israel and who are more likely to say that being Jewish is important to them.

Openness about Jewish identity in public

Almost two out of five Australian Jews (38%) had chosen to change the way they displayed their Jewish identity in public as a result of the war (Figure 11). Overall, more Jewish people had chosen to be less open than more open about their Jewish identity in public in Australia. Change of any kind was more likely among younger Jewish people, Jewish women, those who are more closely attached to Israel, those who are more Orthodox and those for whom being Jewish is more important.

Figure 11: As a Jewish person living in Australia, since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, would you say you have…

Charitable donations made since the start of the war

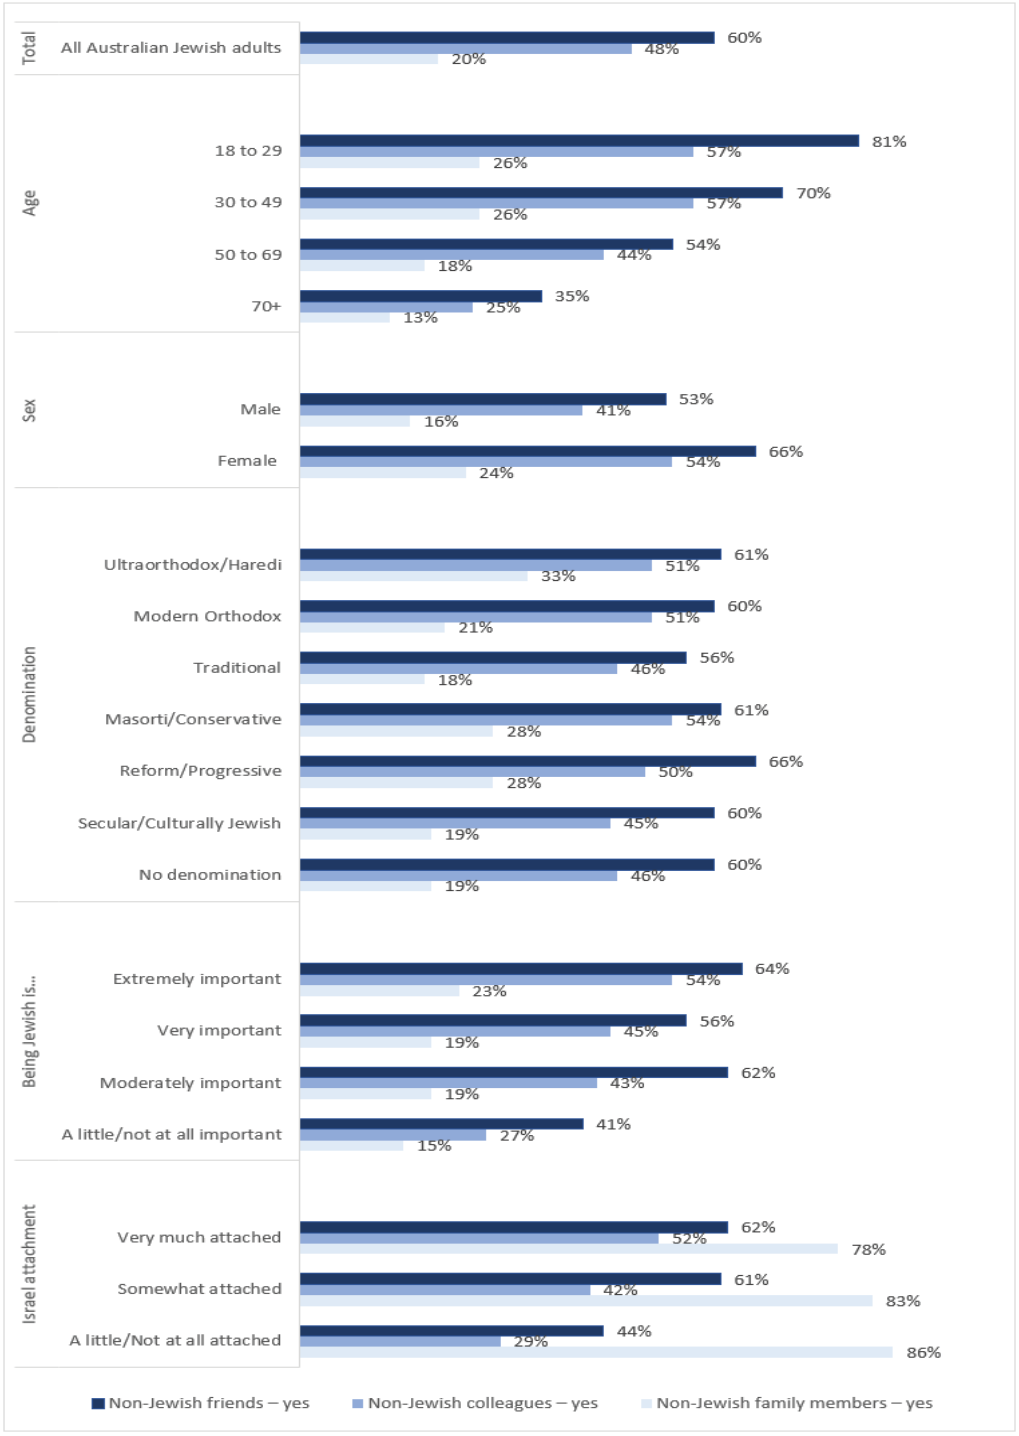
During the five-week period since the start of the war, almost three quarters (73%) of Australian Jews said they had made charitable contributions. Over half (52%) had contributed to an Israel-based charity and almost half (46%) had contributed to an Australia-based charity focused on Israel. Relatively few Jewish people (11%) had contributed to Australian-based Jewish charities (despite the role these play in combatting antisemitism in Australia). Older Jewish people were less likely to have made a charitable contribution than younger Jewish people. Similarly, those who are more Orthodox, who feel greater attachment to Israel, and those for whom being Jewish is more important to their identity were more likely to have made charitable donations than those who are more secular, who have a weaker attachment to Israel and for whom being Jewish is less important. Separately, 4% of Jewish people had contributed to a charity focused on helping Palestinians in Gaza.

Jewish people's feelings about the reaction of non-Jewish friends and colleagues to the war

While Australian Jews are highly integrated into Australian society, 60% had been concerned or upset by the reactions of their non-Jewish friends to the war, 48% had been concerned or upset by non-Jewish colleagues and 20% had been concerned or upset by non-Jewish family members (Figure 12).

The younger people are, the more likely they were to say that they felt concerned or upset by the reactions of their non-Jewish friends and colleagues. The younger Jewish people are, the more likely they were to have close non-Jewish friends (not shown in Figure 12) and it is conceivable they were, therefore, at greater risk of experiencing adverse reactions. Indeed, 81% of people aged 18-29 had been concerned or upset by the reactions of non-Jewish friends, and 70% of those aged 30-49 had been similarly concerned. More than half (57%) of those under the age of 50 had been concerned or upset by the reactions of non-Jewish colleagues, and about a quarter of people (26%) the same age had been concerned or upset by the reactions of non-Jewish family members.

Figure 12: Since the beginning of the Israel-Hamas war, have you been concerned or upset by the reactions of any of your…



On the other hand, in the first five weeks of the war, 83% of Australian Jews said that non-Jewish friends and acquaintances had reached out to them with messages of sympathy, either frequently (14%) or sometimes (68%). The younger Jewish people are, the more likely they were to say that their non-Jewish friends and acquaintances had not reached out to them since the start of the war. This was the case for one-quarter (24%) of Australian Jews aged under 30 which is also the group with the largest proportion of non-Jewish friends. Australian Jews with the weakest levels of attachment to Israel and for whom being Jewish is less important to them—also subgroups with the largest proportions of close non-Jewish friends—were the most likely to say that their non-Jewish friends had not reached out to them. This reflects how even the most peripherally attached Australian Jews had been adversely impacted by the war.

Connections to Israel

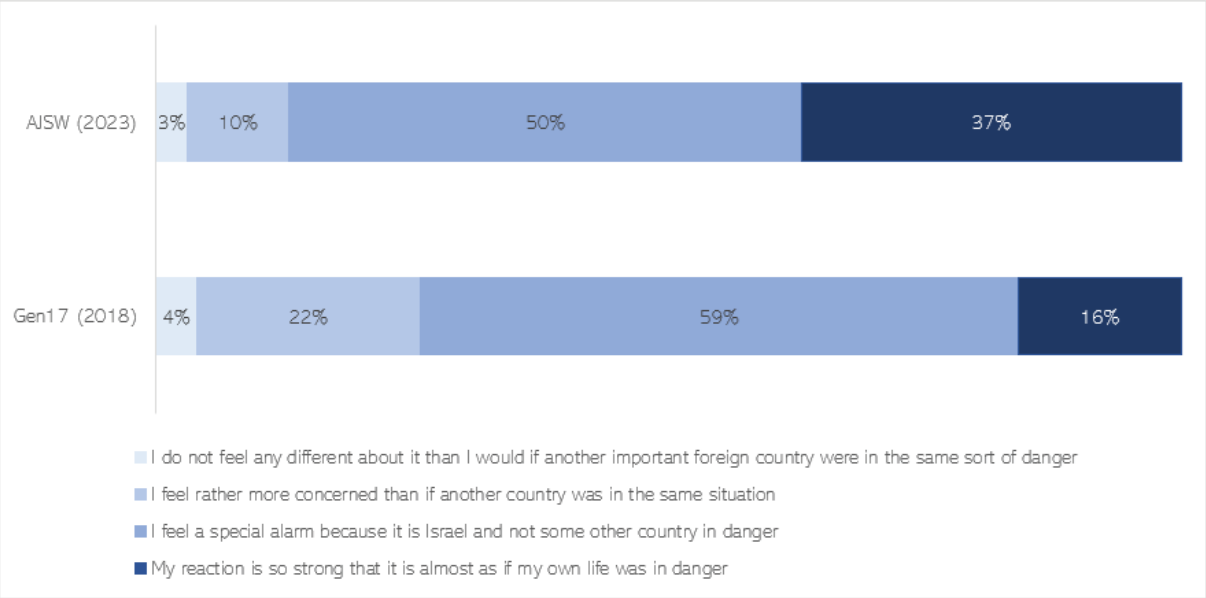
Jewish peoples' emotional attachment to Israel

Levels of emotional attachment to Israel were extremely high at the time of the survey, almost certainly far higher than they would have been prior to the conflict. Three quarters (75%) of Australian Jews said they were very much attached to Israel and a further 22% said they were either somewhat (16%) or a little (6%) attached to Israel. Therefore 91% of Australian Jews felt at least somewhat emotionally attached to Israel at this time.

Jewish people's attitudes about Israel when it is put in danger

To obtain a clearer understanding of how the war had affected Jewish people's attitudes towards Israel at this stage, Australian Israel were asked how they feel when Israel is in danger, a question that had been posed in several earlier Australian Jewish community studies (Figure 13). Nearly two out of five (37%) people said when Israel is in danger 'my reaction is so strong that it is almost as if my own life was in danger.' A further 50% said 'I feel a special alarm because it is Israel and not some other country in danger.' These results are directly comparable with data obtained prior to the war in 2017 during a relatively peaceful period for Israel. At that earlier point, 16% said it was 'almost as if my own life was in danger,' meaning that the proportion reporting the highest level of concern about Israel being in danger was almost 2.5 times higher in the immediate7 October aftermath, compared with 2017.

Figure 13. As the current war has put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel? Gen17 (2017) and AJSW (2023) compared*



*Note: In Gen17, this question was posed hypothetically: "When international events put Israel in danger, which one of the following best describes how you feel?" Response options as per chart.

Personal connections to Israel among Australian Jews

A very large proportion (82%) of Jewish people in Australia have personal, social connections with people living in Israel who are either close family members, close friends or both of these (Figure 14). The younger people are, the more likely it is that they have such personal connections. Having such personal connections with Israel was less likely among those who are less emotionally attached to Jewish, less Orthodox and those who say that Jewish is less important.

Figure 14. Do you have any close family or close friends living in Israel?

Discussing the war with friends and family in Israel

As noted above, 82% of Australian Jews have close family and friends living in Israel. Of these people, about two-thirds (64%) had been in contact with them every few days (42%) or daily (22%) since the war had begun. An additional 32% said they had been in touch with family and friends in Israel occasionally. In other words, Jewish people in Australia were likely to be getting information about the war directly from their personal contacts in Israel. In addition, this again highlights how war in Israel is a very personal experience for Australian Jews living as far away as Australia.

Whether Australian Jews have visited Israel

The vast majority (93%) of Jewish people in Australia have visited Israel. Indeed, the vast majority of Australian Jewish adults have visited the Jewish State more than once (60%) and one in five (20%) have either lived in the country or were born there. An additional 13% have visited once, and 7% have not visited Israel.

Likelihood that Jewish people in Australia would choose to live in Israel

Despite the overwhelming evidence shown here of a very close relationship between Australian Jews in Australia with Israel, it is nevertheless the case that, five weeks into the war, relatively few (13%) Jewish people said that it would even be fairly likely that they would choose to live permanently in Israel in the future (8% fairly likely, 5% very likely).

Australian Jews were also asked this question in 2017, in more peaceful times for Israel, and we see that the proportion of Jewish people saying they may live in Israel in the future was rather similar (11% were fairly or very likely to live permanently in Israel in the future compared with 13% in the current survey) (Figure 15). This suggests that the war has not changed people's attitudes about 'aliya', immigrating to live in Israel. However, it is also the case that the proportion who said they 'don't know' almost tripled from 5% to 13%, so perhaps the feelings of vulnerability and insecurity were having an impact on how Australian Jews view aliya.

Figure 15. How likely is it that you will choose to live permanently in Israel in the future? Gen17 (2017) and AJSW (2023) compared

Antisemitism and perceptions of personal safety

Jewish people's perceptions of the prevalence of antisemitism

There is a strong historical link between conflicts in Israel and waves of antisemitism in countries around the world.[5] In 2017, a relatively peaceful period for Israel, a very small minority (6%) of Jewish people in Australia said that they felt antisemitism was a very big problem in Australia. In the present survey, a similar question asked 'how big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism in Australia today' finding that, five weeks into the war, 64% of Australian Jews felt that antisemitism was very much a big problem (Figure 16). These results are directly comparable and show that Jewish people's concern that antisemitism was a problem in Australia at that point was about 10 times higher than in 2017.

[5] Eilam, S. and Enshed, T. 2021. Increased Antisemitism in the United States Following Operation Guardian of the Walls: Permanent or Short-Lived? The Institute for National Security Studies. Tel-Aviv University. https://www.inss.org.il/publication/antisemitism-and-guardian-of-the-walls/

Figure 16. How big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism in Australia today, Gen17 (2017)* and AJSW (2023) compared * Question asked in Gen17: In your opinion, how big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism in Australia today? A very big problem, A fairly big problem, Not a very big problem, Not a problem at all.

We also asked respondents about their perception of antisemitism in other places and contexts (Figure 17). It is apparent that they felt antisemitism was worse on Australian university campuses than in Australia generally. And notably, 82% said antisemitism was very much a big problem around the world compared with 64% saying this was the case in Australia.

Figure 17. How big a problem, if at all, is antisemitism today…

Jewish peoples' experience of antisemitism since the beginning of the war

Since the beginning of the war, a period of about five weeks, one in five (20%) Jewish adults in Australia said they had personally experienced an insult or harassment because they are Jewish (Table 2). This rises to 43% for Jewish people aged 18 to 29. A majority of these incidents were experienced via social media although 11% more experienced such incidents in person. Among Jewish people aged 18 to 29, 22% had experienced an insult or harassment in person since the beginning of the war because they are Jewish. Fifteen percent of Australian Jews living in states and territories outside of Victoria and New South Wales had also experienced an insult or harassment in person since the beginning of the war because they are Jewish.

Less than 1% of people (n=34) said that they had experienced a physical attack, in that five-week period, because they are Jewish. (Not shown in Table 2 for reasons of confidentiality).

Table 2. Since the Israel-Hamas war began, have you personally experienced any of the following because you are Jewish? (Choose all that apply)

| | Insult or harassment on social media (n=1,365) (%) | Insult or harassment in person (n=711) (%) | None of these (n=5,783) (%) |
|---|---|---|---|
| Australian Jewish adult total | 20 | 11 | 75 |
| Age | | | |
| 18 to 29 | 35 | 22 | 57 |
| 30 to 49 | 25 | 13 | 68 |
| 50 to 69 | 15 | 7 | 80 |
| 70+ | 5 | 3 | 93 |
| Sex | | | |
| Male | 18 | 12 | 76 |
| Female | 22 | 9 | 74 |
| State | | | |
| New South Wales | 17 | 8 | 79 |
| Victoria | 22 | 11 | 72 |
| Rest of Australia | 22 | 15 | 70 |
| Denomination | | | |
| Ultraorthodox/Haredi | 24 | 31 | 55 |
| Modern Orthodox | 22 | 15 | 71 |
| Traditional | 20 | 8 | 76 |
| Masorti/Conservative | 19 | 10 | 76 |
| Reform/Progressive | 20 | 9 | 76 |
| Secular/Culturally Jewish | 19 | 8 | 77 |
| No denomination | 14 | 9 | 80 |
| Being Jewish is… | | | |
| Extremely important | 24 | 13 | 70 |
| Very important | 17 | 8 | 79 |
| Moderately important | 16 | 9 | 79 |
| A little/not at all important | 10 | 6 | 84 |
| Israel attachment | | | |
| Very much attached | 22 | 12 | 72 |
| Somewhat attached | 15 | 7 | 81 |
| A little/Not at all attached | 9 | 5 | 89 |

Reporting antisemitic incidents

Of those who mentioned having at least one of the three aforementioned forms of antisemitic experiences—verbal, physical and social media—71% did not report their experience(s) to any authority (Figure 18).

Most of those who did do so, told the Community Security Group (CSG) (37%), a Jewish non-profit organisation that works with the authorities to ensure the safety of Jewish people at public gatherings. There were no significant differences across age, sex, state, denomination, Israel attachment, or Jewish identity traits in those who did not report antisemitic experiences.

Figure 18. To whom did you report this [antisemitic incident]?

Australian Jewish university students

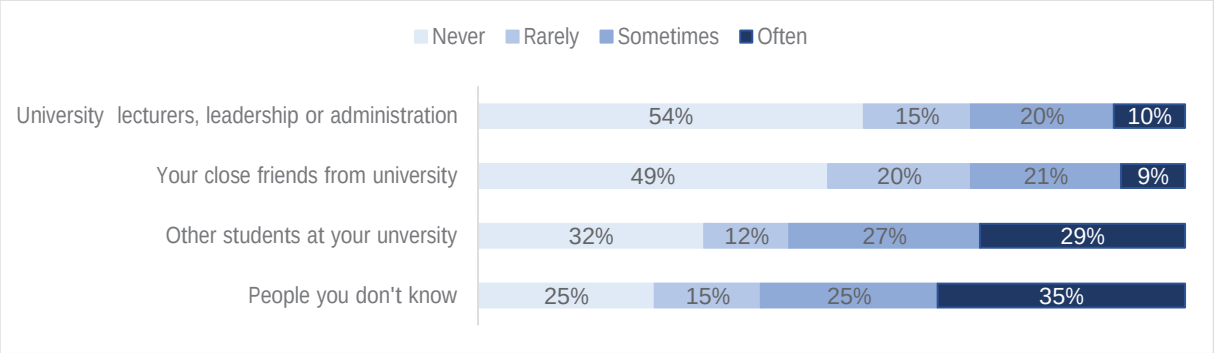
Experiences of Australian Jewish university students

The following two figures focus on the experiences of the 562 respondents who were university students during the 2023 academic year.

It is notable that at this stage, university students regarded antisemitism as being slightly less of a problem on campus than other Australian Jews. 60% of university students said antisemitism was very much a problem on university campuses, compared with 70% of other Australian Jews.

In the five weeks since the war started, more than two-thirds (68%) of Jewish students studying at Australian universities said they had personally encountered hostility towards Israel from other students at their university (Figure 19). Half of all students (51%) had experienced hostility from their own close friends at university. And 46% had experienced hostility towards Israel from university lecturers, leadership or administration.

Figure 19. Since the Israel-Hamas war began, how often have you personally encountered (either in person or on social media) hostility toward Israel from…?



Ninety four percent of university students had seen graffiti, posters or fliers that included Nazi imagery or antisemitic slogans on social media since the war began, 35% of whom had seen this all the time (Figure 20). More than half (58%) had seen these forms of Nazi imagery or antisemitic slogans personally, 7% saying they saw it all the time. Close to three-quarters (72%) said that they felt people accused or blamed them for anything done by the Israeli government because they are Jewish, 16% said this occurred all the time.

Figure 20. Since the Israel-Hamas war began, have you…? (Jewish university students)

Mental Heath

The Generalised Anxiety Disorder 2-item scale (GAD-2) is an established measure used in Australia and internationally for measuring the frequency of symptoms of anxiety.[6] Five weeks into the war, respondents were asked to estimate how often they had felt worried or anxious since the war had started, with summed scores of 3 or above (i.e. 'daily' for at least one of the two questions) meeting the threshold for anxiety.[7]

[6] See, for example, Staples, L. et al. 2019. Psychometric properties and clinical utility of brief measures of depression, anxiety, and general distress: The PHQ-2, GAD-2, and K-6. General Hospital Psychiatry, 56, 13-18. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.genhosppsych.2018.11.003

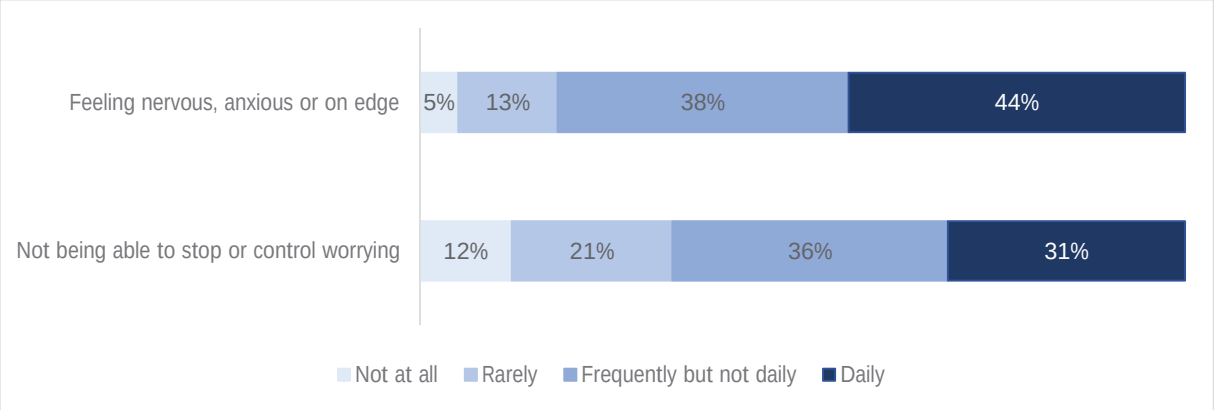
Overall at this point, 44% of Jewish people said they had felt nervous anxious or on edge on a daily basis since the war had begun and 31% said they had not been able to stop or control worrying on a daily basis (Figure 21). When these scores are summed, 47% of Australian Jews can be said to have experienced symptoms of anxiety based on the GAD scale. We do not have any comparable data from earlier Jewish community studies, and while this cannot be considered a clinical diagnosis, when this scale has been used in questionnaires (i.e., self-assessment rather than by a clinician), 10-15% of the general population report that they have experienced symptoms of GAD in the past 7 days.[8] This suggests that the proportion of Australian Jews who were experiencing anxiety at this time were multiple times higher than would be expected using the general Australian population as a baseline.

Figure 21. Since the Israel-Hamas war began, how often have you been bothered by …?



Jewish women are far more likely to report having felt nervous, anxious or on edge than Jewish men and they were also far more likely to have been severely worried on a daily basis (Figure 22). The more important being Jewish is to a person's identity, the more likely they were to have experienced anxiety and worry. Similarly, the more emotionally attached Jewish people are to Israel, the more likely they were to have felt anxious and worried.

Anxiety and worry were greater among those who had been upset by the reaction of their non-Jewish friends and colleagues and family members.

Interestingly, those who had changed their social media usage, either increasing or decreasing it, were more likely to say they were anxious or worried compared with those who had not changed their social media usage. Similarly, those who had changed how open they were about their Jewish identity in public (by being either more or less open about it) were more likely to say that they were anxious or worried, compared to those who had not changed their Jewish identity in public (not shown in Figure 22). Both findings suggest that change in behaviour is associated with heightened anxiety, but further analysis is required to better understand these relationships.

[7] The GAD-2 original categories are Not at all, Several days, More than half days, Nearly every day. See Kroenke K. et al. 2007. Anxiety disorders in primary care: prevalence, impairment, comorbidity, and detection. Ann Intern Med. 2007;146:317-25. https://doi.org/10.7326/0003-4819-146-5-200703060-00004

[8] Personal correspondence with Professor Hans-Ulrich Wittchen. See Wittchen, H. -U., and Jurgen H. 2001. Generalized anxiety disorder: Nature and course. Journal of Clinical Psychiatry 62 (Suppl11): 15-19. https://www.psychiatrist.com/read-pdf/7719/

Figure 22. Since the Israel-Hamas war began, how often have you been bothered by …?

Your experiences as a Jewish Australian: Qualitative reflections

Anticipating that respondents might wish to share their views on topics not fully covered, the survey closed with the following open-ended question: "Is there anything else you would like to share about your experiences relating to the Israel-Hamas war as a Jewish person living in Australia?" There were 3,565 respondents (47%) who answered this question (Table 3). Collectively, there were close to 250,000 words in these responses, itself a reflection of the huge emotional impact of the war.

The following table shows a summary of the responses we received by topic (for all items mentioned by at least 50 people). By far the most common item discussed (by 2,599 respondents or 36% of the total) related to antisemitism. Unlike the preceding sections, these responses have not been weighted to be representative of the entire Jewish community.

Table 3: Qualitative reflections by theme

| Theme | Explanation | Number of codes | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Antisemitism | Australian experiences of antisemitism; Reflections on the impact of feeling a loss of safety; hiding Jewish identity as a consequence of antisemitism | 1614 | |
| | Australian's parents' fears for their children's safety; children's experiences of antisemitism at school | 214 | |
| | Antisemitism in Australian workplaces – including the arts, business, law, medicine, sport and academia | 207 | |
| | Global Antisemitism in the world/global/other specific places (not including Israel) | 564 | 2,599 |
| Australian leadership and law enforcement | Government: Gratitude/thanks for support | 21 | |
| | Government: Criticism for insufficient support | 669 | |
| | Police: Gratitude and thanks for protection | 23 | |
| | Police: Criticism of police for insufficient protection | 314 | 1027 |
| Thinking about Israel | Israel attachment: Feelings of connection to Israel; support for the Israeli people / IDF; Israel as refuge | 519 | |
| | Hostages: Concern for their welfare; prayers/demands for their immediate return | 347 | 866 |
| Media and social media | Media: Praise of specific media outlets and journalists for fair coverage | 55 | |
| | Media: Criticism of specific media outlets and general bias in mainstream media | 537 | |
| | Social media: Observations of bias; role in fomenting antisemitism | 166 | 758 |
| Mental health | Mental health: Explicit reference to anxiety, nightmares and poor mental health post October 7 | 252 | |
| | Holocaust connections: Identifies self as a survivor or child/grandchild of a survivor and attributes current feelings to Holocaust trauma; antisemitism stirring fears of another Holocaust | 251 | 503 |
| Australian Jewish community | Comfort and pride in community coming together; pride in feeling more connected to the community | 166 | |
| | Pride in and gratitude for organisations & leadership (including some feedback for how leadership could continue to help people at these times) | 237 | 403 |
| Interactions with non-Jewish Australian friends and colleagues | Non-Jewish friends and colleagues who reach out to support and listen | 56 | |
| | Silence is deafening' - silence from non-Jewish friends or work colleagues; loss of friendships as a direct result of October 7 and the aftermath | 119 | |
| | Betrayal by the left' - social justice activists (LGBT, Indigenous, interfaith, etc.) who have rejected them for being Jewish, despite/after years of shared social activism | 114 | 289 |

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Opportunities for change | Importance of education, for improved understanding of the Israel-Hamas war and experience of Australian Jews | 287 | 287 |
| Other | Observations about the situation not categorised above, but too small in number to appear on their own above. These include, but are not limited to, the importance of Jewish-Muslim dialogue, yearnings for peace, and concerns about social cohesion in Australia. | | 435 |
| Total | | | 7167 |

Thinking about Israel

Considering the high proportion of Australian Jews who have family and friends in Israel (noted earlier), it is unsurprising that 866 people mentioned Israel in their responses. Of those, 519 discussed their feelings of connection to Israel and their support of the Israeli people and Israeli Defence Forces. Others elaborated on the idea that, for them, Israel represents a refuge which they feel is critical to their sense of safety in Australia. These responses reflect Jewish people's feelings and opinions five weeks into the war.

My extended family has had two family members murdered and four taken hostage by Hamas. On the other side of the family, another was killed. We are beyond devastated. – Female, 50-69

My eldest brother is living there. Bombs fly over his head every day, with him hiding in the bomb shelters scared for his life. I have been affected greatly. – Male, 18-29

I have a close relative who miraculously escaped the massacre at the music festival on 7 October. I have gratitude and relief but also survival guilt and rage on behalf of those who did not escape. – Female, 70+

I have participated as a reservist in [redacted names of wars in Israel]. I am worried sick for all the reservists in this current war and their families. All news about Israeli soldiers lost are like live bullets in my chest. I hope they all come home safely. – Male, 70+

In my lifetime, the existence of Israel has always sat alongside our identity as this comfort - a place that we can go that we will be safe. That will come rescue us if our country turns against us … It's impossible to explain but the existence of this tiny piece of land and an army that will come get us if we need is as fundamental to my identity as being female or a [profession redacted] or even now as a mum. For my entire life of studying the atrocities of the Holocaust in every class or discussion where we were taught about what happened and shown images of ghostly emaciated bodies and gas chamber walls covered in scratches, the teacher would always temper our horror with something along the lines of "but don't worry children, this will never happen to us because now we have Israel." It's the Jewish version of "but in the end they all lived happily ever after." – Female, 30-49

I am especially heartened by the increase in unity amongst Australian Jews and Israelis. I believe that Israel needs to do what it needs to do, and we need to support them to do that, despite the increase in risk everywhere. Australian Jews do not need go like sheep to the slaughter no matter how inconvenient that is for anyone else. – Male, 30-49

Among those who mentioned Israel, there were 347 who specifically mentioned the Israelis who were captured and held hostage in Gaza. Some explained that they were personally related to these hostages, others noted that the plight of the hostages was causing them considerable concern, while some observed the lack of outrage regarding the hostages' continued captivity.

Fear for hostages. Seven [redacted close relatives] feared to be hostages and had 3 murdered, making it very personal. – Male, 70+

How quickly most have forgotten the massacred Israelis and the hostages. Some people's total lack of empathy for these Israelis/Australian Jews (and others) has been palpable and unexpected. – Female, 70+

I weep every night for those poor Israeli girls kidnapped by sadists whose only aim is to rape and maim and the babies and children put in cages and taunted by Hamas… the frightened Israelis still reeling from one of the most egregious in human history and frightened Australian Jews worldwide who feel the collective, falsely legitimised, unleashing of antisemitism here and around the world. – Female, 30-49

Until the hostages are returned, there is an open wound in the soul of all Australian Jews which causes daily anguish and pain. – Male, 70+

I feel I'm living in an alternate universe where the entire world can no longer discern good from pure evil. Where is the outcry over the 240+ hostages of over 30 nations and of several different faiths? – Female, 50-69

Media and social media

There were 758 people who mentioned the media or social media in their responses. Of these, there were 55 people who singled out particular newspapers and news programs, praising them for their coverage and support. Again, these responses reflect Jewish people's feelings and opinions five weeks into the war.

I am shocked by the lack of information and distortion of historical fact in the reporting of this war in Australian media, with notable exception The Australian newspaper. – Female, 50-69

I am very disappointed in the Australian media as their reporting is one sided and promotes antisemitism. There is no fact checking from them, just blind belief in the propaganda Hamas spew. Ray Hadley and Ben Fordham [Radio 2GB] as well as Sky News Australia are the exception. – Female, 50-69

Lots of praise to 3AW Neil Mitchell and Tom Elliot. – Female, 30-49

I am heartened by the news presentation in The Herald Sun. – Male, 70+

The reportage of the media was criticised, however, in many more responses (537). Many shared their despair with bias and lack of fact-checking. Others aired concerns that reportage was contributing to the increase in antisemitism. Some even shared that the coverage by mainstream media had motivated them to seek news elsewhere, including the Israeli media.

Overall, the standard of journalism about the Middle East is biased and poor. Very simplistic and unrealistic. All the expectation is centred on Israel without expecting reciprocal accountability on the Palestinians. – Male, 70+

The bias in the media reporting even for children is revolting (watch episode 30 of BTN from ABC which is shown to school-aged children). They didn't even acknowledge the attack from Hamas. – Female, 30-49

The amount of blatant propaganda being spread online is absurd. Most people take anything they see at face value and don't put in time or research to verify anything. I have spoken with many Pro-Palestine campaigners and from my experience half of them don't know very much about this situation at all. – Male, 18-29

It is the first time in my life I have felt so frightened by the obvious antisemitism so blatantly displayed by our national broadcaster ABC and its attempts to stir up controversy … Media has a responsibility to not encourage antisemitism within Australia and the daily showing of Palestinians war cry "from the river to the sea" is not being outed as a vile trope. – Female, 50-69

I am furious with the editorial policies of The Age newspaper and have cancelled my subscription. In my view The Age is participating in fomenting hatred of Australian Jews in its misinformation and one-sided reporting, and in allowing the rewriting of history go unchallenged in its letters pages. – Female, 70+

I am deeply offended by the pro-Palestinian slant of most of the Australian news media. We mostly watch/listen to the ABC or SBS, but we believe that they are now actively biased against Israel. As a consequence, we've been tuning into [Israeli news channel] i24 and reading Times of Israel, Jerusalem Post or Haaretz. – Female, 70+

Socia media was also raised in the open-ended responses (166). Many shared their concerns about inaccuracy, the ignorance of those reposting information, the emotional toll of social media consumption and concerns for the vulnerability of children. Some shared their frustrations with the lack of social media regulation and the need for legislation to curb hate speech.

It's extremely difficult to navigate. Having many non-Jewish friends, it's an extremely uncomfortable situation given that everyone is picking a side. Mostly with very limited knowledge … A good friend of mine posted something on Insta last night about a ceasefire … I couldn't sleep last night. I wasn't sure how to manage it. [Redacted details of resources used to inform friend about her/his perspective] She apologised for the post and admitted she was ill informed and really wasn't coming from a bad place - which I knew, as I know her well. It was just so disheartening… so many 'affluent' and 'ignorant' people are being so vocal without much thought or real knowledge … I don't know how we fix this … my heart is so heavy today. – Female, 30-49

Another issue is that Facebook has not removed a single one of my reports against hate speech including one that claimed that Australian Jews had murdered more people than anyone else. Then there's trolls commenting on Jewish sites. It's toxic. I actually removed the Facebook app from my phone last week because of the toxic nature which was significantly impacting on my well-being. – Male, 30-49

I have tried hard to escape my echo chamber and listen to other stories. For me social media is a binary screaming match fuelling hate - no one is listening to each other. Peace is abstract unless we listen and understand the pain of another. – Female, 50-69

Social media has been a big problem . It allows people who are so uneducated and yearn to spread misinformation and don't understand the repercussions by posting. – Male, 18-29

There is so much misinformation circulating on social media and teenagers are particularly vulnerable to it especially as they have no knowledge of history, couldn't find Israel on a map, and don't understand what radical Islamists are and what they are doing or how Iran is involved and determined to destroy the west - which includes them. – Female, 50-69

Social media has exaggerated and prioritised the views of the most ill-informed and fostered hate and misinformation to the extent that it is causing hurt and distress and feelings of danger to Australian citizens - it should, in my view, require closer attention and even control by government and legal and social institutions. – Male, 70+

Mental health

The toll of the Israel-Hamas war on the mental health of Australian Jews five weeks into the war was mentioned by 503 people. Of those, 252 people made explicit reference to anxiety, nightmares and other signs of poor mental health post-7 October. Most mentioned the events of 7 October, lack of support from friends or government, or caustic social media as triggering their poor mental health

The bottom line is I'm absolutely not okay. Nightmares, weight loss, hair loss, and inability to focus at work. Generally, feel dissociated from life - and not truly supported by government - they are weak and haven't visited Israel and are too influenced by votes or anti-Semitic beliefs rather than by what is moral. – Female, 50-69

I am a psychologist [specialisation redacted], in my work having to support more clients who are presenting with symptoms of acute stress disorder. There is an increasing sense of isolation and lack of support from those outside the community. To have people justify the slaughtering of Jewish people or for the head of the UN to use words like "it hasn't occurred in a vacuum" makes the world seem unsafe. – Female, 30-49

The lies and deception are so palpable that my anxiety and stress is at the complete lack of morality in society. – Female, 50-69

I'm much more conscious of people knowing I'm Jewish or my Israeli parents. Especially at work or at non-Jewish friends' gatherings. I feel I need to hide my identity out of fear, and this makes me really sad. – Female, 18-29

I got off social media (Instagram) around 3 weeks into the War and it has made a big positive impact on my mental health. – Female, 18-29

I actually feel like I have a form of PTSD. I am in a constant state of anxiety, and I constantly fear for the safety of my kids at school and us in general from a potential antisemitic attack. It's a horrible time. – Female, 30-49

There were also 251 people who mentioned how their personal connections to the Holocaust made the events of 7 October and the aftermath even more traumatic. Some of the responses were offered by Holocaust survivors themselves; others, the children and grandchildren of survivors explained how they had also felt traumatised by current events, as a consequence of generational Holocaust trauma.

I am a child survivor of the Holocaust. When news of the Hamas attack came through, I felt traumatised to a degree that I have never felt before. – Male, 70+

I never thought that I would have to worry about antisemitism in Australia. It has been a very disappointing experience. Being a holocaust survivor, I know what evil looks like and we have stared it in the face lately. – Male, 70+

I came here as a 2-year-old from a displaced persons camp with my [redacted family members] and my Holocaust survivor parents. This was the lucky country. No antisemitism, just the most beautiful friendly Aussies. Now we are considering leaving. The hate and vile behaviour have made us realise it's not safe for us here... Our grandchildren's schools have to have guards with guns. Our synagogues have guards, Yesterday, there was a huge police presence outside our synagogue. We are peaceful people. – Female, 70+

As a child of Holocaust survivors, I am deeply, deeply triggered by Palestinian rallies in Sydney where they are chanting, 'Gas the Australian Jews," The police are standing next to the crowd to ensure the rally is "peaceful", and not enforcing any laws on racial vilification. This puts me into a tailspin of anxiety. – Female, 50-69

"I am the grandchild of Holocaust survivors. I think the nature and degree of inter-generational antisemitic trauma plays a significant role in people's response to the current war." – Female, 30-49

Australian Jewish community

The wellbeing of the Australian Jewish community was also foremost in people's minds (403). Within those responses, there were 166 people who reflected upon the support and comfort they have derived from the Jewish community and their sense of pride in feeling more connected to the community and their sense of Jewish identity.

The community has come together in the most amazing way … The generosity of the community has been overwhelming and what this shows is that we are strong and resilient and will not be beaten. – Female, 50-69

Overwhelmed by the way Jewish people have come together and organised practical things that we can do to help the people of Israel. Pride in the dignified manner in which we carry ourselves. Pride in the emotional, Bring Them Home rallies. Proud that my non-Jewish husband is brimming with anger and emotion. Very aware in the way I am now prouder and louder in being a Jew. – Female, 50-69

Prior to October 7th I did not see myself as particularly Jewish or Israeli. I was an Australian born into a Jewish family. Now I see myself as an Australian-Israeli-Jew and this has honestly been a major shift in my identity which I am still grappling with. – Female, 18-29

I dug out my Magen David [which I received] from my bat-mitzvah and have been wearing it since October 7, having hardly worn it in previous years. My 3-year-old is engaging with it and loves seeing it and commenting on family and friends' Magen-Davids also ... I feel lucky to live in an area with Jewish neighbours. – Female, 30-49

Completely heartbroken… but silver lining in all of this is seeing the "Jewish warrior" coming out of so many friends who were very quietly Jewish. – Female, 50-69

An additional 237 people complimented Jewish communal leaders on the ways in which they have supported Australian Jews, through events, resources and support.

Huge appreciation for the NSW Jewish Board of Deputies for their leadership and the organising of events and webinars and relevant information to help keep us connected. Also great appreciation for UIA, JNF, Zionist Federation of Australia, etcetera, for their support. – Female, 50-69

The response of the Australian Jewish Community has felt unified, supportive and affirming. Our Jewish leadership (Board of Deputies, UIA, etc) have been so active and their work had made me feel safer. A special acknowledgement to … CSG whose presence at Synagogue and Jewish events has been very reassuring. – Female, 30-49

Excellent Jewish community leadership and unity has been a source of reassurance and hope during a difficult time. – Female, 30-49

The Jewish community and all its representatives and organisations have been supportive and active in every way for Israel and the local Jewish community which gives us the strength and resilience to continue proudly as Australian Jews and in support of Israel. – Female 70+

I am feeling so proud to be a Jewish person in the Sydney Jewish community and getting a lot of comfort attending all the communal events. – Female, 50-69

Interactions with non-Jewish Australian friends and colleagues

Australian Jews are well-integrated into Australian society, most having non-Jewish Australian friends and work colleagues, which were reflected on by 289 people. Of those, 56 noted with gratitude the non-Jewish friends and colleagues who reached out to offer support.

I have also been blown away by a few non-Jewish friends who have been a source of light and security. – Female, 30-49

Many of my non-Jewish friends, colleagues, and relatives have reach out to check how we are, offer support, and learn more. Despite my constant worry about our family in Israel, I have felt comforted knowing that other Australians care and reject antisemitism. – Female, 50-69

I have a number of non-Jewish friends and colleagues. They are most likely left voters. They have known me for a long time and know I am Jewish. I have reached out to them personally and have shared my experiences. They are respectful and supportive. – Female, 30-49

Had the most supportive conversation with my Christian Lebanese neighbour who is anti-Hamas, anti-Hezbollah 100% supports Israel and the Jewish people. Christian Lebanese are an endangered minority there too. – Female, 30-49

There were more people, however, who shared their disappointment in non-Jewish friends and colleagues for not being supportive in the aftermath of 7 October (119). "Silence is deafening" was a refrain in these shared reflections, some hurt by the absence of support, others by hurtful comment, while some shared that they had lost friends over the events of 7 October.

It has made me understand what people mean when they say that silence is deafening. – Female, 18-29

I am particularly worried about the silence in academia where I work as a lecturer. Had close to no support from colleagues and managers, yet it is the silence that is more deafening than any outright form of antisemitism. – Female, 30-49

The reaction of my non-Jewish friends, which is most of them, has been incredibly saddening and disappointing. I feel I cannot rely on them for any support. – Female, 18-29

The majority of our family friend groups are not Jewish and the response to our situation has been underwhelming to say the least. It's often along the lines of 'How awful for you, but Israel shouldn't have...' The feelings of decades-long friends have been distressing in itself. – Female, 50-69

It's awful. I feel like we are calling out and no one is listening. No one cares. We all feel so isolated. I've lost friends over this, they won't speak to me because of who I am. – Female, 18-29

There were 114 people whose reflections details feelings of betrayal by the left, social justice activists with whom they had worked on common causes, but who had rejected them for being for being Jewish, despite years of shared volunteer work in social activist spaces.

I don't understand what I did wrong. I've stood up for everyone in need. I've donated money I didn't have to try and make the lives better of refugees, the Indigenous community, the LGBTQIA+ community. I have fought for the environment, the homeless and those struggling. I call out racism and bigotry ... The only way that I can get through the day is by blocking it all out and pretending it isn't happening ... but even that is not enough. I live my life with light and kindness, compassion and empathy ... but I don't have much left. – Female 30-49

As a left-wing person I feel dismayed and almost betrayed by the left in Australia and around the world. The lack of empathy shown to Israel, the lack of criticism of Hamas verging on support for its aims, the cynical or ignorant misappropriation and twisting of words like "genocide" and "ethnic cleansing", the blindness to Hamas efforts to kill their own people. It has felt very lonely being Jewish in Australia. – Male, 30-49

The penny has dropped for me, about the relationship between antizionism and antisemitism. Before Oct 7 I would usually be very careful and nuanced on such matters and allow a space for critique of Israeli politics. But what I have seen since I cannot unsee; there is a level of passionate irrationality in those who are hostile to Israel, very severe moral inconsistency, and I see a very clear link to Soviet era antisemitic propaganda, which the modern left has blindly adopted. One of the hardest parts of this for me has been the feeling of being excommunicated from the left, for something I have no real agency over. This is racism, pure and simple, and it is being performed by the high priests of anti-racism. – Male, 30-49

It frustrates me that all diversity and inclusion initiatives and or reporting about minorities don't seem to count Australian Jews. It's a massive blind spot. Australian Jews are seen as too privileged to be a minority. At work we spend so much time doing DEI initiatives but being Jewish doesn't count at all here. – Male, 30-49

I have never, in all my life, been so horrified by the silence of most Australians. I work in the social service sector, and I am consumed with rage by the lack of comment or support from Australians and the not-for-profit community. Australian Jewry has been exceptionally generous to this country and are disproportionately philanthropic. I think that this is a huge wake up call for Australian Jewry, and that there needs to be a serious re-think into the time, money and effort which is given to the non-Jewish charity sector. – Female, 30-49

Opportunities for change

There were 287 people who mentioned ignorance as an obstacle to understanding and dialogue, calling for a greater Jewish communal focus on educational resources – both for community members and for Australians more broadly. Many respondents shared quiet frustrations at their own inability to succinctly advocate for Australian Jews in Australia and Israel; they expressed the desire for the assistance of communal leadership in providing resources to support them when communicating with their non-Jewish friends and work colleagues. Others highlighted the need for greater advocacy within the general Australian community, calling on leaders to fill those roles.

> Would be wonderful if there were some key messages/points that could be issued to the community which could be used when discussing the topic with non-Jewish colleagues or friends, especially when chatting with people who might not quite understand what is going on and only rely on what they hear in local media or socials for their information. – Female, 30-49

> I graduated in [date redacted] from a private Jewish day school and I feel that the school did not prepare us enough to face these challenges or have difficult conversations about Israeli history OR arm us with enough resources to be confident to debate or inform a neutral party (i.e., prepare us to have the argument with someone say pro-Palestinian). I would like to create an initiative to further educate students and alumni and would love help. – Male, 30-49 > keep sharing any information I receive with all my FB friends. The problem is they are mostly Jewish, so I am only preaching to the converted, so to speak. The information, the truth needs to be circulating with the general population of Australia because most of the media as we all know is biased against Israel. In other words, we need a better PR system. The Palestinian/ Muslim population seem to have the upper hand when it comes to PR and press releases, and it has always been this way. Time for this to change somehow. – Female, 70+

> My non-Jewish friends are naive at no fault of their own. They don't understand what is happening and I don't blame them. It is too abstract for them to comprehend. They are not stakeholders on the issue. Education on the matter needs to be highly prioritized. We need people to see for themselves the beauty and multi-cultural nature of Israel. We need to send more politicians and students there to see it for themselves. - Male, 18-29

> A massive education program is needed regarding antisemitism and Australian values . It has to be routed out of Australian culture at a grass roots level. – Female, 50-69

Appendix A. Methodological Appendix

Methodology overview

This study is based on an analysis of data collected between the 10th and 17th of November 2023. The final sample size was 7,611. The survey was open to anyone who was at that time living in Australia, aged 18 or above, and who considered themselves to be Jewish in any way at all. Fieldwork commenced during the fifth week of the Israel-Hamas war. The survey was carried out online and a link was circulated by Jewish communal organisations across Australia to their membership lists, which was further circulated by participants to other Australian Jews via private messaging. The survey was anonymous and promotion of the survey on public platforms and social media was strongly discouraged to minimise the potential risk of sabotage.

While the size of sample is extremely large by any comparable measure, and to have obtained it in one week is unprecedented,[9] it is also a convenience sample (that is, non-random). The most important criterion for any sample is for it to accurately represent the total Jewish population in Australia as closely as possible. Fortunately, there are excellent sources of baseline data about Australian Jews that can be utilised in this regard. The national census is carried out every five years by the Australian Bureau of Statistics and contains data on religion[10], age, sex, and geographical location. This provides a highly reliable baseline to weight (that is, to statistically align) the survey data and make it more representative of the Jewish population. However, another biasing factor in any Jewish survey is Jewish identity, since participating in such surveys is more likely to be attractive to more engaged Jewish people than less engaged Jewish people. To address this, a national synagogue membership survey was carried out in November 2023 and these data were used to weight data collected in the survey for this purpose.[11] Synagogue membership data are the only whole population baseline source available that provides data on Jewish identity.

There are, however, limits to what can be achieved with survey weighting. Systematic sampling bias can occur when a survey is more likely to be of interest to one group than another. In the present case, a survey about Israel is likely to be of less interest to those who feel less strongly about the country than those who feel more strongly about it. If the two groups differ systematically then weighting is less likely to overcome this.

Questionnaire design

The survey instrument draws on three main sources. First is the Gen17 Australian Jewish Community Survey, a national study conducted of the Jewish community across Australia in 2017.[12] A sample of questions was drawn from that survey to track possible changes in attitudes and behaviours vis-à-vis Jewish identity, Israel, politics and antisemitism. The second source is a series of university student-focused surveys conducted contemporaneously by the Cohen Center for Modern Jewish Studies, Brandeis University (https://www.brandeis.edu/cmjs/research/antisemitism/hotspots-2023-report1.html). A sample of questions

[9] The authors interpret this overwhelming response, obtained without the need for any survey incentive, as an additional expression of the impact of the war; Jewish people wanted to have their voice heard.
[10] The religion question is voluntary and is adjusted by the community using multiple data sources to take account of Jewish non-response.
[11] This provides data on those who belong to Orthodox synagogues, those who belong to non-Orthodox synagogues and those who do not belong to any synagogue, the latter calculated by subtracting the affiliated totals from the Jewish population count in the census.
[12] Graham, D. and Markus, A. 2018. Op. cit.

was drawn from that survey to track opinions about and responses to the Israel-Hamas war, Israel attachment and antisemitism. The third source is a series of novel questions developed by the survey team.

The Monash University Human Research Ethics Committee granted approval for this research (Project number 40944). The survey was programmed and administered using the Qualtrics survey platform.

Sampling procedure

There were several limitations in terms of sampling procedure. First, there is no list from which to sample Jewish people. Second, no polling company holds a sufficiently large sample from which a statistically useful Jewish sample could be extracted. Third, there was a time constraint—during the first few weeks post-7 October, the situation was evolving rapidly and the aim of the survey was to capture opinion before a substantive change in the situation had occurred. Fourth, there were security concerns given the sensitive nature of the topics dealt with in the survey. These factors necessitated the building of a convenience sample and as short a field period as possible.

Jewish community organisations received a copy of the invitation to participate, which contained a web-link to the online survey instrument. The survey was launched at 9am on Friday 10th of November 2023, when these organisations emailed this invitation to their respective lists. The instruction was given that the survey link was not to be promoted publicly on social media platforms but could be shared on private networks with friends and family in Australia.

While in theory anyone could have completed the survey if they had chosen to be dishonest about the screening question, comparing key demographic and Jewish identity distributions from the survey with previous surveys carried out on the Jewish community show very close correspondence giving us high confidence that the vast majority of people, if not all, were eligible respondents. Theoretically multiple responses may also have been submitted from the same individual. However, since the survey software, Qualtrics, is designed to prevent multiple responses from the same IP address, this is unlikely to have occurred.

Survey recruitment in NSW and ACT was managed by JCA. In Victoria, which has the largest Jewish population in Australia, there is no comparable centralised body, the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation (ACJC) at Monash University and a range of community organisations promoted the survey to their member lists. The survey was extensively promoted in other states and territories through local Jewish organisations and the Executive Council of Australian Jewry (ECAJ).

The survey was in the field for one week across all states and territories and was closed at 11.59pm on Thursday 16th of November 2023 Australian Eastern Standard time.

Response diagnostics

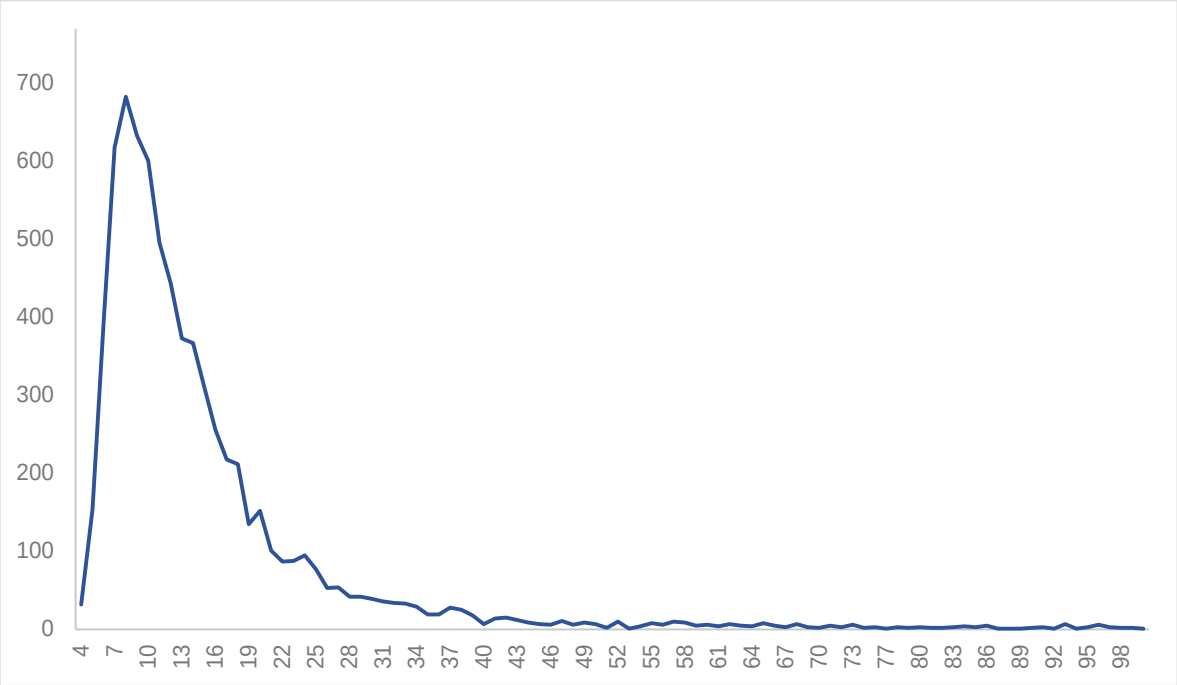
Figure 23 plots the total time taken to complete the survey by frequency. This shows that most respondents completed it in about 10 minutes; the modal[13] time taken was 8 minutes. It also shows a long tail (truncated at 100 minutes in the graph) mainly due to people completing the survey in multiple sittings and not necessarily logging out of the system between sessions. It may also be due to people writing lengthy and considered responses to the open-ended question. The median[14] time taken to complete the survey was 12 minutes.

Figure 23. Time taken to complete the questionnaire*



* This chart shows 97% of the data. For reasons of space we have not shown the long tail of data beyond 100 minutes (see text).

[13] The mode is the point in a distribution where the highest frequency occurs (in other words 'the most').
[14] The median of a distribution is the point where half the population is below the point and half is above.

Sample evaluation

It was the intention of the survey team to achieve a very large sample in order to facilitate more detailed statistical analyses and indeed this was achieved. The final sample size of 7,611 Australian Jewish adults was similar to Gen17's 8,621 respondents and larger than Gen08's 5,840[15] despite the significant constraints on the sampling procedure for the survey. Since there were an estimated 92,300 Jewish people aged 18 and above in Australia in 2021, and assuming minimal demographic change between August the 2021 Census and October 2023, the sample represents over 8% of the entire adult Jewish population of Australia. The sheer size of the sample means that detailed sub-group analyses can be carried out that are simply not feasible using smaller sample sets. By way of contextualisation, the Pew Research Center's Jewish Americans in 2020 study contains a sample of 5,881 respondents[16] for an estimated population of 6-7.5 million Australian Jews.

Unless otherwise stated, percentage data in this report present weighted survey findings and can be extrapolated to the entire Australian Jewish population. N values are unweighted counts from the survey.

Demographic subpopulation variables and sample size

The following data present demographic, geographic, denominational and identity metrics for the sample comparing unweighted and weighted results. The data are presented to aid the reader when interpreting survey results.

Age

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| 18 to 29 | 792 | 11 | 17 |
| 30 to 49 | 2,302 | 31 | 32 |
| 50 to 69 | 2,677 | 36 | 30 |
| 70+ | 1,651 | 22 | 21 |
| Total | 7,422 | 100 | 100 |

Sex

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Male | 2,953 | 39 | 46 |
| Female | 4,517 | 60 | 54 |
| Other | 34 | <1 | <1 |
| Total | 7,504 | 100 | 100 |

[15] Markus, A., Jacobs, N. and Aronov, T. 2009. The Gen08 Survey: Preliminary findings: Melbourne and Sydney (Report 1). Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University. https://www.monash.edu/__data/assets/pdf_file/0007/1676473/gen08-report1-preliminary-findings.pdf

[16] The Pew Research Center's total sample was 5,881. This included respondents who identified themselves as Jewish—either by religion (n=3,836) or of no religion (n=882)—as well as respondents who were categorised as having a Jewish background (n=802) or Jewish affinity (n=361). Only the former 2 self-identifying groups were deemed Jewish for the purpose of that study, thereby yielding a Jewish sample of 3,737. See Pew Research Center. 2021. Jewish Americans in 2020. https://www.pewresearch.org/religion/2021/05/11/jewish-americans-in-2020/

State

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Queensland | 163 | 2 | 3 |
| New South Wales | 3,476 | 46 | 42 |
| Victoria | 3,304 | 44 | 44 |
| Western Australia | 366 | 5 | 7 |
| ACT, NT, TAS & SA comb.* | 225 | 4 | 4 |
| Total | 7,534 | 100 | 100 |

*Australian Capital Territory, Northern Territory, Tasmania and South Australia were combined to protect anonymity

Denomination

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Ultraorthodox/Haredi | 249 | 3 | 3 |
| Modern Orthodox | 1,975 | 27 | 23 |
| Traditional | 1,707 | 23 | 22 |
| Masorti/Conservative | 326 | 4 | 3 |
| Reform/Progressive | 784 | 11 | 8 |
| Secular, Culturally Jewish | 1,889 | 25 | 33 |
| No denomination, just Jewish | 510 | 7 | 9 |
| Total | 7,440 | 100 | 100 |

How important is being Jewish to how you think about yourself?

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Extremely important | 3,905 | 51 | 47 |
| Very important | 2,443 | 32 | 33 |
| Moderately important | 895 | 12 | 15 |
| A little important | 221 | 3 | 4 |
| Not at all important | 70 | <1 | 1 |
| Total | 7,534 | 100 | 100 |

How emotionally attached are you to Israel?

| | Unweighted frequencies | Unweighted % | Weighted % |
|---|---|---|---|
| Very much attached | 5,841 | 78 | 75 |
| Somewhat attached | 1,102 | 15 | 16 |
| A little attached | 398 | 5 | 6 |
| Not at all attached | 193 | 3 | 3 |
| Total | 7,534 | 100 | 100 |

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-6" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW)

Unlawful conduct

24

CONSULTATION PAPER

May 2025

NSW Law Reform Commission

© New South Wales Law Reform Commission, Sydney, 2025

Copyright permissions

You may copy, distribute, display, download and otherwise freely deal with this publication for any personal or non-commercial purpose, on condition that you include proper acknowledgment on all uses.

However, you must obtain permission from the NSW Law Reform Commission if you wish to:

- charge others for access to the publication (other than at cost)
- include all or part of the publication in advertising or a product for sale, or
- modify the publication.

Disclaimer

While this publication has been formulated with due care, the NSW Law Reform Commission does not warrant or represent that it is free from errors or omission, or that it is exhaustive.

This publication deals with the law at the time it was first published and may not necessarily represent the current law.

Readers are responsible for making their own assessment of this publication and should verify all relevant representations, statements and information with their own professional advisers.

Other publication formats

The NSW Law Reform Commission is committed to meeting fully its obligations under state and Commonwealth anti-discrimination legislation to ensure that people with disability have full and equal access to our services.

This publication is available in alternative formats. If you require assistance, please contact the Commission on email nsw-lrc@dcj.nsw.gov.au.

Acknowledgement of Country

The NSW Law Reform Commission acknowledges the Traditional Custodians of the lands where we work and live. We celebrate the diversity of Aboriginal peoples and their ongoing cultures and connections to the lands and waters of NSW.

We pay our respects to Elders past, present and emerging and acknowledge the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people that have contributed to this review.

Contact details

NSW Law Reform Commission
Locked Bag 5000
Parramatta NSW 2124 Australia

Email: nsw-lrc@dcj.nsw.gov.au.

Website: www.lawreform.nsw.gov.au

Cataloguing-in-publication

Cataloguing-in-publication data is available from the National Library of Australia.

ISBN 978-1-922254-70-2

Table of contents

Participants viii

Terms of reference ix

Questions x

1. Introduction 1

Background to this review 2

Our process so far 3

About this consultation paper 4

Chapter overview 5

Accessible alternatives 5

How to have your say 6

What to include in a submission 6

You can email your submission to us 6

You can complete our community survey 7

Next steps 7

2. Background and context 9

An introduction to the ADA 9

Equality and non-discrimination 10

The international human rights context 11

Equality and non-discrimination and the ADA 12

The wider Australian context 16

Australian discrimination laws 16

Workplace protections 18

Other potential complaints mechanisms 19

Criminal vilification offences 19

3. Tests for discrimination 21

Direct discrimination 22

The comparator test 23

Causation 25

Indirect discrimination 27
The comparative "disproportionate impact" test 27
The "inability to comply" element 30
The "reasonableness" standard 31
Indirect discrimination based on characteristics 33
The burden of proof 34
Direct discrimination 35
Indirect discrimination 35
Some overarching issues 36
Overlapping forms of discrimination 36
Intersectional discrimination 37
Intended future discrimination 39

4. Discrimination: protected attributes 41
Age 43
Carer's responsibilities 44
Whether the attribute should be defined 44
Options for different definitions of "carer" 45
Other forms of relationships could be recognised 46
Disability discrimination 46
The language used to define "disability" 47
Options for expanding the ADA's coverage 49
Recognising the rights of people with assistance animals 50
Discrimination based on genetic information 51
The public health exception 52
Homosexuality 53
Marital or domestic status 55
Race 56
Some potential gaps in coverage 56
Recognising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples 58
Sex discrimination 59
Gender discrimination and sex discrimination 59
Binary and non-binary language 59

Discrimination based on pregnancy or breastfeeding 60
Transgender grounds 61
"Gender identity" as a potential alternative 61
Redefining "transgender grounds" 62
Extending existing protections 63
Past or future attributes 63
Relatives and associates of people with protected attributes 63

5. Discrimination: potential new protected attributes 65
Principles that could guide reform 66
Identifying the guiding principles 66
Identifying gaps between federal and state law 67
Some options for new protected attributes 70
Irrelevant criminal record 70
Domestic and family violence 72
Health status and irrelevant medical record 73
Industrial activity or political belief or activity 75
Physical features or appearance 77
Religious belief or activity 79
Sex characteristics 82
Sex work, lawful sexual activity and occupation 83
Socio-economic status 86
An alternative approach: an open-ended list 88

6. Discrimination: Areas of public life 91
Discrimination in work 93
Issues relating to coverage 94
Exceptions to discrimination in work 96
Education 103
Issues relating to coverage 103
Exceptions to discrimination in education 104
The provision of goods and services 106
Issues relating to coverage 106

Exceptions for superannuation services and insurance 109
Other exceptions to discrimination in goods and services 113
Accommodation 114
Issues relating to coverage 114
Exceptions to discrimination in accommodation 115
Registered clubs 117
Issues relating to coverage 117
Exceptions to discrimination by registered clubs 118
Protecting all attributes in all areas 120
Other potential protected areas 121
A broader application to all areas of public life 121
Disposal of interests in land 122
Government functions and the administration of laws 123
Requests for information 123
Sport and other competitions 124
Strata committees and owners' corporations 126

7. Wider exceptions 129
Religious bodies 130
Training and appointing religious personnel 132
Appointing any other person in any capacity 133
Other acts or practices of religious bodies 135
Harassment, vilification and victimisation by religious bodies 140
Adoption services 141
Private educational authorities 142
The exceptions cover a wide range of educational bodies 144
Discrimination in work 145
Discrimination in education 150
Sport 154
Sex discrimination exception 154
Transgender discrimination and vilification exception 155
Disability discrimination exception 156
Age discrimination exception 157

Racial discrimination and vilification exception 158
Charitable benefits 159
Voluntary bodies 160
Aged care accommodation providers 161
Acts done under statutory authority 162

8. Civil protections against vilification 165
Protections against vilification: an overview 167
NSW protections against vilification 167
Federal protections 168
The protected attributes: civil vilification 169
How the protected attributes are expressed and defined 170
Other potential protected attributes 172
The test for vilification 179
An overview of the ADA's incitement-based test 179
A harm-based test 180
Other options for reform 183
The definition of public act 184
The ADA takes a broad approach to "public act" 184
Options for clarifying the definition 186
Exceptions 188
"Fair report" and "absolute privilege for defamation" exceptions 188
The public interest exceptions 189
Religious vilification protections 192
The definition of religious belief, affiliation and activity 193
Other concerns about the religious vilification protections 193

9. Harassment 195
The test for sexual harassment under the ADA 196
The ADA's four-step test for sexual harassment 197
Differences to the Sex Discrimination Act 198
Other sex-based conduct 200
Tests for other sex-based conduct 200

Benefits of prohibiting sex-based conduct 201
Concerns about prohibiting sex-based conduct 201
Areas in which sexual harassment is unlawful 203
Overview of the ADA's approach 204
Comparisons with the Sex Discrimination Act 204
Workplace-related laws also regulate sexual harassment 207
Prohibiting sexual harassment in other areas of life 208
The private accommodation exception 210
Harassment based on protected attributes 211
Arguments for and against new prohibitions 211
Conduct that could be considered attribute-based harassment 212
Harassment on the ground of other attributes and areas of life 213

10. Other unlawful acts and liability 215
Victimisation 215
When victimisation occurs 216
Options to expand or clarify the coverage of this prohibition 216
Unlawful advertisements 218
Liability for unlawful behaviour 218
Forms of liability 219
Exceptions for employers or agents 220
Liability and artificial intelligence 222

11. Promoting substantive equality 223
Adjustments 224
The current model in the ADA 224
Models for a new requirement to provide adjustments 225
Attributes that could be covered 227
Special measures 229
The ADA's approach 229
Options for a potential new "special measures" section 232
The relationship with exemptions and certifications 234
A duty to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct 235

Arguments for and against a positive duty 235
Options for a positive duty 237
A duty to promote equality 240

Appendix A: Preliminary submissions 243

Appendix B: Preliminary consultations 247

Participants

Commissioners

The Hon Tom Bathurst AC KC (Chairperson)

The Hon Justice Anna Mitchelmore (Deputy Chairperson)

Kate Eastman AM SC

Law Reform Commission and Sentencing Council Secretariat

Jamie Cheeseman, Intern (June – July 2024)

Dr Nikki Edwards, Senior Policy Officer

Alexandra Hammond, Senior Policy Officer (from January 2024)

Dr Jackie Hartley, Policy Manager

Carol Hoang, Policy Officer (from February 2025)

Sienna Mackey, Summer Clerk (February 2025)

Vyvyan Nguyen, Project Officer (from February 2025)

Sophie Sauerman, Senior Policy Officer (to January 2025)

Laura Schultz, Senior Policy Officer

Rajiv Sharndil, Intern (May – October 2024)

Alex Sprouster, Policy Manager (to February 2024)

Juwariya Syed, Intern and Graduate Policy Officer (May 2024 – April 2025)

Madison Thompson, Policy Officer (to July 2024)

Rebecca Wahl, Intern and Graduate Policy Officer
(May – August 2024, December 2024 – January 2025)

Anna Williams, Research Support Librarian

Rebecca Winder, Policy Officer (from February 2025)

Terms of reference

Pursuant to section 10 of the Law Reform Commission Act 1967 (NSW), the NSW Law Reform Commission is asked to review and report on the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA).

In undertaking this review, the Commission is to consider matters including, but not limited to:

1. whether the Act could be modernised and simplified to better promote the equal enjoyment of rights and reflect contemporary community standards
2. whether the range of attributes protected against discrimination requires reform
3. whether the areas of public life in which discrimination is unlawful should be reformed
4. whether the existing tests for discrimination are clear, inclusive and reflect modern understandings of discrimination
5. the adequacy of protections against vilification, including (but not limited to) whether these protections should be harmonised with the criminal law
6. the adequacy of the protections against sexual harassment and whether the Act should cover harassment based on other protected attributes
7. whether the Act should include positive obligations to prevent harassment, discrimination and vilification, and to make reasonable adjustments to promote full and equal participation in public life
8. exceptions, special measures and exemption processes
9. the adequacy and accessibility of complaints procedures and remedies
10. the powers and functions of the Anti-Discrimination Board of NSW and its President, including potential mechanisms to address systemic discrimination
11. the protections, processes and enforcement mechanisms that exist in other Australian and international anti-discrimination and human rights laws, and other NSW laws
12. the interaction between the Act and Commonwealth anti-discrimination laws
13. any other matters the Commission considers relevant to these Terms of Reference.

[Dated 19 June 2023]

Questions

3. Tests for discrimination

Question 3.1: Direct discrimination

Could the test for direct discrimination be improved or simplified? If so, how?

Question 3.2: The comparative disproportionate impact test

Should the comparative disproportionate impact test for indirect discrimination be replaced? If so, what should replace it?

Question 3.3 Indirect discrimination and inability to comply

What are your views on the "not able to comply" part of the indirect discrimination test? Should this part of the test be removed? Why or why not?

Question 3.4: Indirect discrimination and the reasonableness standard

(1) Should the reasonableness standard be part of the test for indirect discrimination? If not, what should replace it?

(2) Should the ADA set out the factors to be considered in determining reasonableness? Why or why not? If so, what should they be?

Question 3.5: Indirect discrimination based on a characteristic

Should the prohibition on indirect discrimination extend to characteristics that people with protected attributes either generally have or are assumed to have?

Question 3.6: Proving indirect discrimination

(1) Should the ADA require respondents to prove any aspects of the direct discrimination test? If so, which aspects?

(2) Should the ADA require respondents to prove any aspects of the indirect discrimination test? If so, which aspects?

Question 3.7: Direct and indirect discrimination

(1) How should the relationship between different types of discrimination be recognised?

(2) Should the ADA retain the distinction between direct and indirect discrimination? Why or why not?

Question 3.8: Intersectional discrimination

(1) Should the ADA protect against intersectional discrimination? Why or why not?

(2) If so, how should this be achieved?

Question 3.9: Intended future discrimination

Should the tests for discrimination capture intended future discrimination? Why or why not? If so, how could this be achieved?

4. Discrimination: protected attributes

Question 4.1: Age discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "age"?

(2) What changes, if any, should be made to the age-related exceptions?

Question 4.2: Discrimination based on carer's responsibilities

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "responsibilities as a carer"?

(2) Should the ADA separately protect against discrimination based on someone's status of being, or not being, a parent?

Question 4.3 Disability discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "disability"?

(2) Should a new attribute be created to protect against genetic information discrimination? Or should this be added to the existing definition of disability?

(3) What changes, if any, should be made to the public health exception?

Question 4.4: Discrimination based on homosexuality

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "homosexuality"?

Question 4.5: Discrimination based on marital or domestic status

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "marital or domestic status"?

Question 4.6: Racial discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "race"?

(2) Are any new attributes required to address potential gaps in the ADA's protections against racial discrimination?

Question 4.7: Sex discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "sex"?

(2) Should the ADA prohibit discrimination based on pregnancy and breastfeeding separately from sex discrimination?

Question 4.8: Discrimination on transgender grounds

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "transgender grounds"?

Question 4.9: Extending existing protections

(1) Should the ADA protect people against discrimination based on any protected attribute they have had in the past or may have in the future?

(2) Should the ADA include an attribute which protects against discrimination based on being a relative or associate of someone with any other protected attribute?

5. Discrimination: potential new protected attributes

Question 5.1: Guiding principles

What principles should guide decisions about what, if any, new attributes should be added to the ADA?

Question 5.2: Potential new attributes

(1) Should any protected attributes be added to the prohibition on discrimination in the ADA? If so, which what should be added and why?

(2) How should each of the new attributes that you have identified above be defined and expressed?

(3) If any of new attributes were to be added to the ADA, would any new attribute-specific exceptions be required?

Question 5.3: An open-ended list

Should the list of attributes in the ADA be open-ended to allow other attributes to be protected? Why or why not?

6. Discrimination: Areas of public life

Question 6.1: Discrimination at work — coverage

(1) Should the definition of employment include voluntary workers? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA adopt a broader approach to discrimination in work, like the way the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) approaches harassment? Why or why not?

(3) Should local government members be protected from age discrimination while performing work in their official capacity? Why or why not?

Question 6.2: Discrimination in work — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions to discrimination in work?

Question 6.3: Discrimination in education

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "education"?

(2) What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions relating to:

(a) single-sex educational institutions, and

(b) disability and age discrimination in educational institutions?

Question 6.4: The provision of goods and services — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "the provision of goods and services"?

Question 6.5: Superannuation services and insurance exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions applying to insurance and superannuation?

Question 6.6: The provision of goods and services — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions to sex, age and disability discrimination in relation to the provision of goods and services?

Question 6.7: Discrimination in accommodation — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "accommodation"?

Question 6.8: Discrimination in accommodation — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions for private households, age-based accommodation and charitable bodies in relation to discrimination in accommodation?

Question 6.9: Discrimination by registered clubs — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "registered clubs"?

Question 6.10: Discrimination by registered clubs — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions for registered clubs in relation to sex, race, age and disability discrimination?

Question 6.11: Discrimination based on carer's responsibilities

(1) Should discrimination based on carer's responsibilities be prohibited in all protected areas of public life? If not, what areas should apply and why?

(2) In general, should discrimination be prohibited in all protected areas for all protected attributes? Why or why not?

Question 6.12: Additional areas of public life

(1) Should the ADA apply generally "in any area of public life"? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA specifically cover any additional protected areas? Why or why not? If yes, what area(s) should be added and why?

7. Wider exceptions

Question 7.1: Religious personnel exceptions

(1) Should the ADA provide exceptions for:

  (a) the training and appointment of members of religious orders?

  (b) "the appointment of any other person in any capacity by a body established to propagate religion"?

(2) If so, what should these exceptions cover and when should they apply?

Question 7.2: Other acts and practices of religious bodies

Should the ADA provide an exception for other acts or practices of religious bodies? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Question 7.3: Exceptions for other forms of unlawful conduct

Should the general exceptions for religious bodies continue to apply across the ADA, including to all forms of unlawful conduct under the Act?

Question 7.4: Exceptions for providers of adoption services

Should the ADA have a specific exception for providers of adoption services? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Question 7.5: Private educational authorities employment exceptions

(1) Should the ADA contain exceptions for private educational authorities in employment? Should these be limited to religious educational authorities?

(2) If you think the Act should provide exceptions in this area:

  (a) what attributes should the exceptions apply to?

  (b) what requirements, if any, should duty holders meet before an exception applies?

Question 7.6: Discrimination against students and prospective students

(1) Should the ADA contain exceptions for private educational authorities in education? Should these be limited to religious educational authorities?

(2) If you think it is necessary for the ADA to provide exceptions in this area:

(a) what attributes should the exceptions apply to?

(b) should they apply to prospective students, existing students, or both?

(c) what requirements, if any, should duty holders meet before an exception applies?

Question 7.7: Exceptions relating to sport

Should the ADA provide exceptions to discrimination or vilification in sport? If so, what should they cover and when should they apply?

Question 7.8: The charities exception

Should the ADA provide exceptions relating to charitable benefits? If so, what should they cover and when should they apply?

Question 7.9: Voluntary bodies exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for voluntary bodies? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Question 7.10: Aged care accommodation providers exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for aged care accommodation providers? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Question 7.11: The statutory authorities exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for acts done under statutory authority? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

8. Civil protections against vilification

Question 8.1: Protected attributes

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the attributes currently protected against vilification?

(2) Should the ADA protect against vilification based on a wider range of attributes? If so, which attributes should be covered and how should these be defined?

Question 8.2: The test for vilification

(1) Should NSW adopt a "harm-based" test for civil vilification? If so, should this replace or supplement the existing "incitement-based" test?

(2) What, if any, other changes should be made to the incitement-based test for civil vilification?

Question 8.3: The definition of "public act"

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition of "public act" in the test for vilification in the ADA?

Question 8.4: Exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions to the vilification protections in the ADA?

Question 8.5: Religious vilification

What changes, if any, should be made to the protection against religious vilification in the ADA?

9. Harassment

Question 9.1: The definition of sexual harassment

(1) Should the reasonable person test be expanded to include the "possibility" of offence, intimidation or humiliation? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA expressly require consideration of an individual's attributes, or the relationship between the parties, in determining whether a person would be offended, humiliated or intimidated by the conduct? Why or why not?

(3) Does the ADA need to define "conduct of a sexual nature"? Why or why not?

Question 9.2: Other sex-based conduct

(1) Should harassment on the ground of sex be expressly prohibited by the ADA? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA prohibit workplace environments that are hostile on the ground of sex? Why or why not?

(3) Are there any other options or models to prohibit conduct which may fall in the gap between sex discrimination and sexual harassment? What could be the benefits of these options?

Question 9.3: Sexual harassment in the workplace

Should the ADA adopt the Sex Discrimination Act's approach of prohibiting sexual harassment in connection with someone's status as a worker or person conducting a business or undertaking? Why or why not?

Question 9.4: Workplace-related laws regulating sexual harassment

(1) Are workplace-related sexual harassment laws and the ADA currently working well together, in terms of the definitions of sexual harassment?

(2) Should the ADA and workplace-related sexual harassment laws be more aligned?

Question 9.5: Expanding the areas of life where sexual harassment is prohibited

(1) Should the ADA continue to limit the areas of life where sexual harassment is unlawful? Why or why not?

(2) Should sexual harassment be unlawful in other areas of life? For example:

(a) areas of life that are protected from discrimination

(b) all areas of public life, or

(c) any area of life, public or private?

Question 9.6: The private accommodation exception

Should sexual harassment be prohibited in private accommodation? Why or why not? If an exception for private accommodation is required, how wide should it be?

Question 9.7: Attribute-based harassment

If the ADA was to prohibit attribute-based harassment, which attributes and areas should it cover?

10. Other unlawful acts and liability

Question 10.1: Victimisation

(1) Should the prohibition of victimisation in the ADA expressly extend to situations where a person threatens to victimise someone? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA provide that victimisation is unlawful even if it was done for two or more reasons? If so, how best could this be achieved?

Question 10.2: Advertisements

Should it be a defence to publishing an unlawful advertisement that the person reasonably believed publication was not unlawful? Why or why not?

Question 10.3: The forms of liability

What, if any, concerns or issues are raised by the ADA's approach to the various forms of liability?

Question 10.4: The exceptions for liability

Should the ADA continue to provide two exceptions to vicarious liability (that is, the "reasonable steps" and "unauthorised acts" exceptions)? Or is a single "reasonable steps" exception sufficient?

Question 10.5: Liability and artificial intelligence

Does the use of AI challenge the ADA's approach to liability? If so, how could the ADA be amended to address this?

11. Promoting substantive equality

Question 11.1: Adjustments

(1) Should the ADA impose a duty to provide adjustments? If so, what attributes should this apply to?

(2) Should this be a separate duty, form part of the tests for discrimination, or is there another preferred approach?

(3) Should a person with a protected attribute first have to request an adjustment, before the obligation to provide one arises?

Question 11.2: Special measures

(1) Should the ADA generally allow for special measures? Why or why not?

(2) If so, what criteria for a special measure should the ADA apply?

(3) If a general special measures section is added to the ADA, should it replace the existing exemption and certification processes? Why or why not?

Question 11.3: A positive duty to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct

(1) Should the ADA include a duty to take reasonable and proportionate measures to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct? Why or why not?

(2) If so:

  (a) What should duty holders be required to do to comply with the duty?

  (b) What types of unlawful conduct should the duty cover?

  (c) Who should the duty holders be?

  (d) What attributes and areas should the duty apply to?

1. Introduction

In brief

This is the first of two consultation papers in which we will invite you to share your views on the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA). In this paper, we consider issues relating to the tests for discrimination, who is protected, the areas in which discrimination is prohibited and exceptions. We also consider harassment, civil vilification and other unlawful acts, as well as liability and measures to promote substantive equality. We ask if any of these aspects of the ADA should change and, if so, how.

Content warning: This consultation paper deals with content that some people may find distressing. This includes discrimination, sexual harassment, and vilification (including hate speech). We also refer to concepts and language used in the ADA that can be offensive or upsetting. The ADA project page on our website lists some free services you can contact if you need support.

Background to this review 2

Our process so far 3

About this consultation paper 4

Chapter overview 5

Accessible alternatives 5

How to have your say 6

What to include in a submission 6

You can email your submission to us 6

You can complete our community survey 7

Next steps 7

1.1 The NSW Attorney General has asked us to review the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA). Among other things, we have been asked to consider whether the ADA "could be modernised and simplified to better promote the equal enjoyment of rights and reflect contemporary community standards".[1]

1.2 This is the first of two consultation papers that we will release in this review. In this consultation paper, we focus on the conduct that is (or should be) unlawful under the ADA. In summary, we seek your views on:

1. The terms of reference for this review are set out at page ix of this consultation paper.

- the types of acts and conduct that should be prohibited, and the circumstances in which the prohibitions should apply
- the people and groups who should be entitled to the ADA's protections
- the people and organisations who should be held responsible for unlawful conduct, and when (if ever) their actions should be exempt from the ADA, and
- whether the ADA should do more to promote substantive equality.

1.3 Our second consultation paper will consider the procedural aspects of the ADA, including complaint pathways, enforcement options, remedies and options for preventing unlawful conduct.

Background to this review

1.4 The ADA was groundbreaking when it was enacted almost 50 years ago. As the first broad discrimination Act in Australia, it prohibited discrimination based on race, sex and marital status. When the legislation was introduced into the NSW Parliament, the Premier said "I am confident that this legislation is the most enlightened, and will be the most effective, legislation in this field in Australia".[2]

1.5 Much has changed in NSW since 1977. By the 1990s, there were concerns that the ADA had not stood the test of time. This led to the NSW Government asking the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) to review the ADA in 1991. As the NSWLRC explained in it its final report:

> The legislation as it currently exists tends to reflect the political and social climate at the time of its enactment. Although the ADA has been amended several times to reflect changing community values, these amendments have been piecemeal. ... Taking into account the length of time that has elapsed since the introduction of the ADA, and the law's inability to deal once and for all with constantly evolving social, political and legal conditions, it is appropriate that there be a comprehensive review of the legislation.[3]

1.6 Our predecessors' 8-year review of the ADA was indeed comprehensive. The NSWLRC's 1999 report made 161 recommendations and contained a Draft Anti-Discrimination Bill. While some recommendations were implemented, most were not.

1.7 In the years since 1999, there have been many changes to discrimination laws across Australia. Other states and territories have reviewed their discrimination laws. Some of these reviews have led to significant legislative reform. There have

---

2. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Assembly, Second Reading Speech, 23 November 1976, 3347.
3. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [1.9].

been developments in employment law and reviews of discrimination laws at the federal level too.[4]

1.8 In 2021, there were renewed calls by community and legal groups for a comprehensive review of the ADA.[5] In announcing this review in 2023, the NSW Attorney General recognised that:

> There have been monumental shifts in society, demographics and attitudes since the Act came into force nearly half a century ago. … It is essential to conduct reviews of this nature to ensure our laws represent who we are today as a community.[6]

1.9 It could still be said, as the NSWLRC did in 1999, that many aspects of the ADA continue to "reflect the political and social climate at the time of its enactment". In addition to concerns about its substantive content, many believe the ADA uses outdated and offensive language, and its style and structure is difficult for the community to navigate.

1.10 Our role in this review is to examine the ADA thoroughly and, where necessary, make recommendations to ensure that this law serves our community effectively.

Our process so far

1.11 We received the terms of reference for this review in June 2023. Since that time, we have conducted significant research into the operation of the ADA and into discrimination laws elsewhere.

1.12 We called for preliminary submissions on 20 July 2023. We received 98 preliminary submissions, many of which are available on our website. Appendix A to this consultation paper contains a list of the preliminary submissions we received. They were immensely helpful in identifying the key issues of community concern, as well as areas for further research and consideration.

---

4. For an overview, see Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 46–49. More recent reviews include Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022); Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023); Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2024).
5. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Leader to Laggard: The Case for Modernising the NSW Anti-Discrimination Act (2021); Public Interest Advocacy Centre and others, Open Letter to the NSW Attorney General, 5 August 2021.
6. NSW Government, "NSW Government Commissions Review of Anti-Discrimination Law" (Media Release, Attorney General, 20 July 2023).

1.13 We also conducted targeted preliminary consultations with agencies and academics to help clarify issues about the operation of the ADA. Appendix B contains a list of these preliminary consultations.

1.14 From February to September 2024, we completed a separate review into the effectiveness of s 93Z of the Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) in addressing religious and racial vilification. Our report on this review was tabled in Parliament and released on 21 November 2024.[7]

1.15 We received 69 submissions during that review, and we consulted a wide range of individuals and groups. This included judicial officers, bodies that represent the legal profession, community legal centres, police and prosecutors, academic experts, groups representing Aboriginal people, religious groups, multicultural groups, and groups advocating on behalf of members of LGBTQIA+ communities and people living with HIV/AIDS.

1.16 While the s 93Z review was limited to examining serious racial and religious vilification, submissions and consultations raised many related issues about the ADA. These included concerns about the ADA's civil vilification protections and the effectiveness of complaint mechanisms. The views expressed in those submissions and consultations have also assisted us in preparing this consultation paper.

About this consultation paper

1.17 This paper seeks your views on the ADA, focusing on the conduct that it prohibits. We provide information to explain the current law. We also set out some possible options for reform, drawn from our research and suggestions made in preliminary submissions.

1.18 We emphasise that these options and issues are presented in this consultation paper for the purpose of discussion only. We have not yet formed a position or developed any recommendations in this review.

1.19 Many of the options in this paper are informed by developments in discrimination law in other states, territories and at the federal level. These include reviews conducted by other law reform agencies. Many of these reviews led to legislative amendments that have reshaped discrimination laws elsewhere. We refer to these developments throughout this consultation paper.

1.20 In doing so, we recognise that the law in this area is changing rapidly. At the time of writing, for example, there is uncertainty about the future of recent discrimination law reforms in the Northern Territory and Queensland.[8] We acknowledge this in the consultation paper where relevant.

7. NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151 (2024).

Chapter overview

1.21 In this consultation paper:

- Chapter 2 outlines the background and context to the ADA
- Chapter 3 sets out the tests for discrimination
- Chapter 4 considers the attributes that are currently protected from discrimination
- Chapter 5 considers other attributes that some say should also be protected from discrimination
- Chapter 6 sets out the areas of public life in which discrimination is prohibited, some area-specific exceptions, and related issues
- Chapter 7 considers the wider exceptions in the ADA, some of which apply across the whole Act
- Chapter 8 focuses on the civil vilification protections in the ADA
- Chapter 9 discusses the ADA's prohibition on sexual harassment and whether other forms of harassment should also be prohibited
- Chapter 10 considers other unlawful behaviours under the ADA (including victimisation) and how liability for unlawful behaviours works under the ADA
- Chapter 11 sets out options for possible mechanisms to promote substantive equality, such as adjustments, special measures and positive duties to prevent discrimination and unlawful conduct
- Appendix A lists the preliminary submissions received
- Appendix B lists the preliminary consultations conducted

Accessible alternatives

1.22 On our website, we have published accessible alternatives to this consultation paper:

---

8. M Garrick, "NT's CLP Government Confirms Plans to Scrap Labor's Hate Speech Changes" (2 March 2025) ABC News <www.abc.net.au/news/2025-03-02/nt-anti-discrimination-hate-speech-laws-repealed/104991288> (retrieved 9 April 2025); D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 2 April 2024). On 30 April 2025, the Queensland Parliament passed amendments to delay the commencement to a date to be fixed by proclamation. However, as of 9 May 2025, this had yet to receive assent: Crime and Corruption (Restoring Reporting Powers) Amendment Bill 2025.

- a short community summary of this consultation paper, which outlines key issues in our review in simpler language, and
- an Easy Read consultation paper.[9]

How to have your say

1.23 We invite you to share your thoughts on the issues raised in this consultation paper. The diverse views, experiences, and perspectives of individuals and groups within our community are vital to this review.

1.24 If you would like to have your say, you can

- make a submission
- complete our online survey, or
- answer the questions in our Easy Read consultation paper.

1.25 The due date for submissions, survey responses, and answers to our Easy Read questions is 15 August 2025.

1.26 Submissions and Easy Read responses can be emailed to us at adareview@dcj.nsw.gov.au.

What to include in a submission

1.27 This consultation paper includes questions that can help guide your response to the issues raised.[10]

1.28 However, you do not need to answer all the questions. We also encourage you to raise other issues and options that we have not covered in this consultation paper.

1.29 For further information, please visit our web page on how to make a submission.[11]

You can email your submission to us

1.30 When emailing your submission to us, please let us know if you would like your submission to be kept confidential or anonymous. Our general policy is to publish the submissions we receive on our website, unless they are confidential or unsuitable for publication. We may also refer to them in our final report.

---

9. NSW Law Reform Commission, Anti-Discrimination Act review <https://lawreform.nsw.gov.au/current-projects/anti-discrimination-act-review.html>.
10. A list of questions is available at page x of this consultation paper.
11. NSW Law Reform Commission, How to make a submission <lawreform.nsw.gov.au/contribute-to-law-reform/submission.html>.

1.31 You can find our privacy and information management policy on our website.[12]

You can complete our survey

1.32 Instead of making a submission, you may prefer to complete our online survey. Our community summary of this consultation paper can help you complete the survey.

1.33 If you prefer, you can download the survey from our website in Word or PDF, and email your responses to adareview@dcj.nsw.gov.au. Please write "ADA Survey Response" as the subject.

1.34 Please tell us if you want your responses to remain confidential or anonymous.

Next steps

1.35 Once submissions on this first consultation paper have closed, we will release a second consultation paper. This will consider issues relating to the procedures for enforcing the ADA, such as complaint processes and other options for addressing unlawful conduct.

1.36 We will gather more input through submissions and consultations. We will continue to research and develop options for reform.

1.37 We will present our recommendations to the NSW Attorney General in a final report. Your input and our research will inform our recommendations.

1.38 The Attorney General must table the report in both Houses of Parliament within 14 sitting days of Parliament. Once that happens, we will publish the report on our website.

1.39 After that, it is up to the NSW Government to decide how to respond.

1.40 Our website has more information on our process, including a short video that explains what we do.[13]

---

12. NSW Law Reform Commission, Privacy and Information Management Policy <lawreform.nsw.gov.au/about-us/policy-documents/privacy-information-management.html>.
13. NSW Law Reform Commission, What We Do <lawreform.nsw.gov.au/about-us/what-we-do.html>.

2. Background and context

In brief

This chapter situates our review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) in the international and Australian legal context. It explains key concepts including the human rights to equality and non-discrimination, and the concepts of formal and substantive equality.

An introduction to the ADA 9

Equality and non-discrimination 10

The international human rights context 11

Equality and non-discrimination and the ADA 12

The wider Australian context 16

Australian discrimination laws 16

Workplace protections 18

Other potential complaints mechanisms 19

Criminal vilification offences 19

2.1 In this consultation paper, we invite you to share your views on, and experiences with, the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA). The various chapters explain the specific protections and exceptions in the ADA, compare them to discrimination laws and other related laws in force elsewhere, and set out some possible reform options. We also provide some questions that you may wish to respond to.

2.2 Before we address the specific substantive aspects of the ADA, this chapter sets the scene. We explain some foundational concepts relevant to the rights to equality and non-discrimination that underpin discrimination laws in Australia. We outline how the ADA approaches these concepts.

2.3 We also introduce the broader context of state, territory and federal laws that deal with discrimination, harassment and vilification. The ADA operates within a complex, intersecting system of laws. There are many gaps, overlaps and unresolved issues across this system.

An introduction to the ADA

2.4 The NSW Parliament enacted the ADA in 1977. The Act initially protected against direct discrimination based on race, sex and marital status.

2.5 The ADA has been amended over the years to protect people with other attributes, to cover other forms of conduct, and to expand the protections to additional areas. Today, it prohibits four main categories of conduct: discrimination, vilification, sexual harassment and victimisation. It defines who is entitled to be protected from such conduct and who can be held responsible for it.

2.6 The ADA also defines the specific circumstances, relationships and areas of life in which this conduct is unlawful. In general, discrimination law is concerned with how people are treated in the public sphere. The ADA does not apply to personal or family relationships or private interactions that occur, for example, at home.

2.7 However, the coverage is not consistent across the categories of unlawful conduct. While there is some overlap, each category protects different attributes and applies to different duty holders. There is also a complex web of exceptions — some apply to certain forms of conduct, others to certain areas or attributes, and some apply across the whole Act.

2.8 The ADA also provides for a system of complaint handling and dispute resolution. It sets out the roles and functions of the NSW Anti-Discrimination Board (now known as Anti-Discrimination NSW – or ADNSW for short). Among other things, a key function of ADNSW is to conciliate complaints under the ADA. If this is unsuccessful, complainants can apply to the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal.

Equality and non-discrimination

2.9 The rights to equality and non-discrimination are the foundation of discrimination law. From the 1970s, parliaments across Australia began to enact anti-discrimination and equal opportunity laws to give effect to Australia's international human rights obligations in relation to these rights.[1]

2.10 In this section, we outline the core treaties that articulate the rights to equality and non-discrimination. We also reflect on the way the ADA seeks to give effect to these rights and introduce some concepts that appear throughout this consultation paper.

1. An earlier South Australian Act provided more limited protection against racial discrimination in certain areas, including the provision of services, accommodation and employment: Prohibition of Discrimination Act 1966 (SA) s 3–8, repealed by Racial Discrimination Act 1976 (SA) s 2.

The international human rights context

2.11 Human rights are indivisible, interdependent and interrelated — the enjoyment of one human right is closely related to the enjoyment of others.[2] The rights to equality and non-discrimination are part of a wider array of such rights. They are among the "cornerstones" of the concept of human rights articulated in human rights treaties.[3]

2.12 Australia is party to seven core international human rights treaties. These treaties set out obligations for the States that have agreed to be bound by them.

2.13 The first of these treaties is the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD). It requires States Parties to prohibit racial discrimination "by any persons, group or organization".[4]

2.14 The ICERD defines "discrimination" as > any distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference based on race, colour, descent, or national or ethnic origin which has the purpose or effect of nullifying or impairing the recognition, enjoyment or exercise, on an equal footing, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural or any other field of public life.[5]

2.15 The first federal discrimination law, the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) (Racial Discrimination Act), uses this definition.[6]

2.16 Two other human rights treaties are the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

2.17 States Parties to these treaties must ensure the equal enjoyment of rights without discrimination of any kind. This includes discrimination based on race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.[7] This is known as the principle of non-discrimination.

---

2. World Conference on Human Rights, Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, UN Doc A/CONF.157/23 (25 June 1993) [5], endorsed by United Nations General Assembly, World Conference on Human Rights, GA Res 48/121, UNGAOR, UN Doc A/48/49 (20 December 1993) [5].
3. D Moeckli, Human Rights and Non-Discrimination in the War on Terror (Oxford University Press, 2008) 57.
4. International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, 660 UNTS 195 (entered into force 4 January 1969) art 2(d).
5. International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, 660 UNTS 195 (entered into force 4 January 1969) art 1(1).
6. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 9(1).
7. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 2(1); International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976) art 2(2).

2.18 The ICCPR also contains a standalone right to equality before the law. This provides that "[a]ll persons are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to the equal protection of the law". Parties to the ICCPR must prohibit, and guarantee effective protection against, discrimination "on any ground such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status".[8]

2.19 Another treaty focuses on sex discrimination — the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW).[9] It defines discrimination in similar terms as the ICERD.[10] One of the objects of the federal Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act) is to give effect to aspects of CEDAW.[11]

2.20 Two more recent treaties focus on the human rights of children, and people with disability.[12] The Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities goes further than other treaties in addressing equality and non-discrimination. Like the ICCPR, it refers to the right to the "equal protection of the law". But it also refers to the right to "equal benefit of the law".[13] This aspect of the right requires States Parties to take positive actions, such as by providing reasonable accommodation and ensuring accessibility.[14]

Equality and non-discrimination and the ADA

2.21 Throughout this consultation paper, we refer to different ways of understanding and giving effect to the rights to equality and non-discrimination. These understandings have evolved since the ADA was enacted and may continue to do so. A significant issue in this review is whether the ADA has kept pace with these changes, and whether it appropriately addresses issues of intersecting and competing rights.

---

8. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 26.
9. Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 1249 UNTS 13 (entered into force 3 September 1981).
10. Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 1249 UNTS 13 (entered into force 3 September 1981) art 1. See also Human Rights Committee, General Comment No 18 on Non-Discrimination (10 November 1989) [7].
11. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 3(a).
12. Convention on the Rights of the Child, 1577 UNTS 3 (entered into force 2 September 1990); Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008).
13. Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008) art 5(1).
14. Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, General Comment No 6 on Equality and Non-Discrimination, UN Doc CRPD/C/GC/6 (26 April 2018) [16].

Formal and substantive equality

2.22 Two common understandings of equality are "formal" and "substantive" equality.

2.23 As originally enacted, the ADA promoted what is known as "formal equality". This reflects the view that equality involves treating people the same way. It is also known as equality of opportunity.[15]

2.24 While it does not contain a specific objectives clause, the long title of the ADA indicates the purpose of the Act. This has remained unchanged since the ADA was enacted in 1977: "An act to render unlawful racial, sex and other types of discrimination in certain circumstances and to promote equality of opportunity between all persons".

2.25 Formal equality also underpins the ADA's test for "direct discrimination". In summary, this recognises that it is discriminatory to treat someone less favourably compared to someone else because of an aspect of their identity (known as an attribute).

2.26 However, equal treatment does not always result in equal outcomes. Another concept of equality — "substantive equality" — recognises that some people need to be treated differently to promote an equal outcome or equal access to opportunities.[16] This requires an approach which extends beyond comparing the treatment of individuals, and addresses the adverse impact of broader practices, cultural norms, customs and attitudes, and unconscious bias. Addressing these barriers to equality means treating people or groups in a way that achieves equal outcomes or access to equal opportunities.

2.27 In 1981, the ADA was amended to also prohibit indirect discrimination. In doing so, the ADA moved towards addressing substantive equality. Indirect discrimination looks at the adverse outcome of a seemingly neutral requirement or condition (in effect, the same treatment) for people with different attributes. The requirement may have an unequal effect on certain groups, which is not reasonable. People with certain attributes may be unable to comply with that requirement, but people without those attributes can.[17]

2.28 Take, for example, a requirement that all job applicants attend an interview in a building that is only accessible by stairs. While the requirement applies equally to all applicants, this would not result in an equal outcome for an applicant who uses a

---

15. D Allen, "An Evaluation of the Mechanisms Designed to Promote Substantive Equality in the Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic)" (2020) 44 Melbourne University Law Review 459, 464.
16. S Fredman, "Substantive Equality Revisited" (2016) 14 International Journal of Constitutional Law 712, 718–20.
17. D Allen, "An Evaluation of the Mechanisms Designed to Promote Substantive Equality in the Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic)" (2020) 44 Melbourne University Law Review 459, 464.

wheelchair. They would not be able to comply with this requirement without adjustments such as a lift, but other applicants who do not use wheelchairs may be able to comply.

2.29 Some people think the ADA could do more to help achieve substantive equality. For instance, some other Australian discrimination laws express the objective of > promoting and facilitating the progressive realisation of equality, as far as reasonably practicable, by recognising that ... the achievement of substantive equality may require the making of reasonable adjustments, reasonable accommodation and the taking of special measures.[18]

2.30 Examples of mechanisms to promote substantive equality include:

- requiring duty holders to provide adjustments for some people with protected attributes
- enabling duty holders to adopt "special measures" for groups who have experienced disadvantage, which allow them to be treated differently to best promote their rights, and
- imposing a positive duty to prevent discrimination and other unlawful conduct.

2.31 We consider these potential options for reform in chapter 11.

When exceptions may be justified

2.32 Across several chapters, we refer to the ADA's complex and extensive exceptions that allow duty holders to engage in what would otherwise be unlawful conduct. One of the most controversial issues in this review is whether these exceptions remain appropriate.

2.33 International human rights law recognises that the right to non-discrimination can be limited in certain circumstances. Generally, a policy or practice will not be considered discriminatory if it pursues a legitimate aim, and is appropriate, necessary and proportionate to that aim.[19] A recent review considered that duty holders should meet similar tests before they can access an exception.[20] An example is the requirement in the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) that discrimination must be "reasonable, proportionate and justifiable in the circumstances" for a respondent to be able to rely on an exception.[21]

---

18. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 4(d); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 3(d)(iii).
19. OHCHR and the Equal Rights Trust, Protecting Minority Rights: A Practical Guide to Developing Comprehensive Anti-Discrimination Legislation, 2023, 51.
20. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 99. See also ACT, Legislative Assembly, Yoursay Listening Report: Discrimination Law Reform (2022) 4.
21. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 33C(b).

2.34 In its 1999 report on the ADA, the New South Wales Law Reform Commission observed that "because discrimination law protects fundamental human rights, the prohibitions should not be lightly displaced. There must be good justification for any genuine exception".[22]

2.35 Throughout this report, we invite consideration of whether the existing exceptions in the ADA meet this description.

Intersectionality

2.36 Another important concept is "intersectionality". The ADA only prohibits discrimination, vilification and harassment that occurs because of a limited range of protected attributes. It does not prohibit unlawful conduct that is based on more than one, or a combination of, protected attributes.

2.37 However, this does not always reflect the realities of how discrimination, vilification and harassment are experienced. Nor does it acknowledge that people may have more than one attribute.

2.38 Some have argued that the ADA needs to recognise and address "intersectional" forms of discrimination, vilification and harassment. This is conduct that occurs because of more than one attribute that a person identifies with.

Systemic discrimination

2.39 The concept of "systemic discrimination" focuses on the structural aspects and causes of discrimination. It regards discrimination as a social, rather than simply an individual issue, to address. This moves beyond examining an individual's experiences of discrimination to consider the policies, practices and patterns of behaviour which create or perpetuate disadvantage for people with certain attributes.[23]

2.40 Some other discrimination laws express the objective of encouraging "the identification and elimination of systemic causes of discrimination", sexual harassment and victimisation.[24] Victoria recently enacted changes to its vilification laws, with one of the purposes being "to protect Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and others experiencing systemic injustice and structural oppression".[25]

---

22. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.2].
23. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 52.
24. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 3(c); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 4(c).
25. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 1(ab).

2.41 One issue is whether the ADA's individual complaints model can address these wider structural causes of discrimination and other unlawful conduct. Some say more proactive, regulatory mechanisms are needed.

2.42 For example, the Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) has the power to inquire into any matter that may relate to "systemic unlawful discrimination". This means unlawful discrimination that affects a class or group of people, and is continuous, repetitive or forms a pattern.[26] We will examine these issues in our second consultation paper.

The wider Australian context

2.43 The ADA cannot be considered in isolation from other protections against discrimination, vilification and sexual harassment that exist across Australia. While some laws cover the same or similar conduct, there are important differences in coverage.

2.44 It can be extremely difficult to determine which laws, protections and processes apply in different situations. Where there are similarities or overlaps, it can be challenging to choose the most appropriate forum for bringing a complaint.

2.45 It is important to consider the interactions between these laws when considering reforms to the ADA's coverage. Throughout this consultation paper, we compare the ADA to other relevant laws. We ask if the way they define the scope of the various categories of unlawful conduct could inform any changes to the ADA.

2.46 In our second consultation paper in this review, we will consider the various NSW and federal complaint pathways in greater detail.

Australian discrimination laws

2.47 The ADA is part of the system of anti-discrimination and equal opportunity laws that apply across Australia.

Federal law

2.48 Four federal discrimination laws operate concurrently with the ADA:

- Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth)
- Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)
- Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth), and

26. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 35L.

- Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth).[27]

2.49 A person can make a complaint under these Acts to the AHRC. If it is not resolved by conciliation at the AHRC, the person may seek a judicial remedy in the Federal Court of Australia or the Federal Circuit and Family Court of Australia.[28]

2.50 This consultation paper highlights gaps and overlaps between the ADA and federal law. Sometimes, the same or similar conduct is covered by both federal law and the ADA. When that happens, people can choose whether to seek a remedy through federal discrimination law or the ADA. The ADA does not prevent a person from making a complaint under the ADA just because they have made a complaint based on the same facts elsewhere.[29]

2.51 For example, depending on the circumstances, a person may be able to make a complaint alleging racial discrimination to the AHRC under the Racial Discrimination Act. Or they may make a complaint to ADNSW under the ADA.[30]

2.52 In some areas, there are differences in coverage between the ADA and federal discrimination law. For example, some attributes, such as bisexuality and gender identity, are protected under the Sex Discrimination Act but not the ADA.[31] This will affect where a complaint can be made.

2.53 Other mechanisms of making a complaint to the AHRC exist, but these do not provide a pathway to a judicial remedy. The AHRC has separate powers to inquire into, and attempt to conciliate, complaints alleging:

- discrimination in employment and occupation, as part of its functions relating to equal opportunity in employment[32]
- systemic discrimination,[33] and
- acts or practices of the Commonwealth that breach particular human rights.[34]

---

27. Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 12(2); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 13(3); Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 6A(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 10(3).
28. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 11(1)(aa), s 46PO.
29. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 88B(1).
30. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 15; Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 8.
31. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "gender identity", definition of "sexual orientation", s 5A, s 5B.
32. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 31.
33. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 35L.
34. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 11(1)(f).

2.54 These powers cover a wide range of attributes recognised in international human rights law and labour law instruments, many of which are not covered in federal discrimination law or the ADA.[35]

Other states and territories

2.55 Other states and territories in Australia have their own discrimination laws.[36] There are similarities in coverage between them. However, many of these laws offer more protections and apply more widely (including by protecting more attributes and covering more areas) than the ADA. We provide examples of the approaches adopted in other states and territories in this consultation paper.

2.56 The ACT, Victoria and Queensland have human rights legislation that exists alongside dedicated discrimination legislation. These Human Rights Acts recognise, protect and promote the rights to equality and non-discrimination.[37] However, they also cover a much wider range of human rights recognised in international human rights treaties than discrimination laws do.

2.57 There is no such Act in NSW or federally, although a parliamentary committee recently recommended the enactment of a federal Human Rights Act.[38] Additionally, the Australian Constitution provides limited rights protection.[39]

2.58 Whether NSW should have a Human Rights Act is beyond the scope of our review of the ADA.

Workplace protections

2.59 The ADA also operates alongside specific employment law protections against discrimination and sexual harassment at work.

2.60 In particular, the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (Fair Work Act) protects against adverse action in employment, and against the termination of employment, based on a wide

---

35. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3(1) definition of "discrimination", definition of "human rights"; Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6.
36. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA).
37. Human Rights Act 2019 (Qld) s 8; Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Vic) s 15; Human Rights Act 2004 (ACT) s 8.
38. Parliament of Australia, Parliamentary Joint Committee on Human Rights, Inquiry into Australia's Human Rights Framework (2024) rec 1.
39. See generally G Williams and D Hume, Human Rights under the Australian Constitution (Oxford University Press, 2nd ed, 2013).

range of protected attributes.[40] It also protects against sexual harassment at work.[41]

2.61 The Fair Work Act applies across Australia, including to many workplaces in NSW. However, it does not apply to the NSW public sector and local government.[42] Other limits also apply to some forms of protection, as we explain in chapter 5.

2.62 In NSW, the Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) prohibits workplace discrimination based on a person's work health and safety activities. It requires employers to make workplaces safe, including to manage risks from hazards that can cause psychological harm, by eliminating or minimising reasonably foreseeable hazards.[43] Harassment and unfair decision-making are recognised as common hazards.[44]

Other potential complaints mechanisms

2.63 In the second consultation paper, we will outline other complaint pathways in related legal areas. For instance, complaints of unfair treatment or discrimination by NSW Government agencies, local councils, and government-funded service providers can be made to the NSW Ombudsman.[45]

Criminal vilification offences

2.64 NSW has both civil and criminal protections against vilification. The ADA protects against public acts that incite hatred, serious contempt or severe ridicule towards a person or group, based on specific protected attributes.

2.65 The ADA's civil protections operate alongside the criminal law. Section 93Z of the Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) makes it an offence to publicly threaten or incite violence based on specific protected attributes. NSW Parliament recently passed amendments to create a new offence of inciting racial hatred by public act, but this offence has not come into effect yet.[46]

---

40. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 342, s 351, s 772(1).
41. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 527D.
42. Industrial Relations (Commonwealth Powers) Act 2009 (NSW) s 6(c), s 6(f). See, eg, AB [2014] FWC 6723.
43. Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 19; Work Health and Safety Regulation 2017 (NSW) cl 55D.
44. SafeWork NSW, Code of Practice: Managing Psychosocial Hazards at Work (2021) 8.
45. NSW Ombudsman "Complaints We Can Help You With" (2025) <www.ombo.nsw.gov.au/complaints/complaints-we-can-help-you-with> (retrieved 3 April 2025).
46. Crimes Amendment (Inciting Racial Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93ZAA (uncommenced).

2.66 Federal vilification offences, and the civil protections in the Racial Discrimination Act, also operate to protect people in NSW.[47]

2.67 One issue in this review is whether there should be greater alignment between the NSW civil and criminal vilification laws in terms of the attributes they protect and certain aspects of their tests. We consider this, along with other issues about the ADA's vilification protections, in chapter 8.

47. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2A, s 80.2B; Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18C.

3. Tests for discrimination

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) prohibits direct and indirect discrimination. We ask if the tests for discrimination are working as they should and, if not, how they could be changed. We also consider the burden of proof and whether the distinction between direct and indirect discrimination should remain. Finally, we ask if the ADA should cover intended future discrimination and intersectional discrimination.

Direct discrimination 22

The comparator test 23

Causation 25

Indirect discrimination 27

The comparative "disproportionate impact" test 27

The "inability to comply" element 30

The "reasonableness" standard 31

Indirect discrimination based on characteristics 33

The burden of proof 34

Direct discrimination 35

Indirect discrimination 35

Some overarching issues 36

Overlapping forms of discrimination 36

Intersectional discrimination 37

Intended future discrimination 39

3.1 In the previous chapter, we consider the different concepts of equality. We now build on that discussion by outlining the two ways the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) defines discrimination.

3.2 The ADA prohibits what is commonly known as "direct discrimination" and "indirect discrimination" (although the ADA does not use these expressions). The ADA sets out the tests for these types of discrimination. These tests have multiple steps or "elements".

3.3 Even if these tests are satisfied, discrimination is only unlawful if the conduct in question is based on a protected attribute and occurs in one of the areas in which the ADA prohibits discrimination. Certain exceptions may also apply, permitting what would otherwise amount to unlawful discrimination. We discuss these aspects of the ADA in later chapters.

3.4 There are mixed views on the tests for discrimination in the ADA. Some think they are appropriate, while others think they are too complicated and outdated.

3.5 In this chapter, we ask for your views about:

- whether the tests to prove direct or indirect discrimination should be changed
- who should prove that discrimination occurred
- whether the ADA should also capture intersectional and future discrimination, and
- whether the distinction between direct and indirect discrimination should remain.

3.6 Throughout this chapter, we use the term "complainant" to mean a person with a protected attribute who is making a discrimination complaint. We use the term "respondent" to mean the person or organisation who is responding to a discrimination complaint about them.

Direct discrimination

3.7 In summary, direct discrimination happens when someone is treated less favourably compared to how someone else is treated because they have a protected attribute. Protected attributes are characteristics about a person or group that are protected from discrimination, such as race, sex and age. We consider the existing protected attributes in chapter 4.

3.8 An example of direct discrimination is where an employer decides an employee will not be trained to work on new machinery because they say the employee is too old to learn new skills.[1] It is unlawful for an employer to discriminate against an employee by preventing them from accessing training opportunities because of their age, if the employer prefers younger workers and the employee's age is a reason for the decision.[2]

3.9 Direct discrimination relates to the concept of formal equality, which we explain in chapter 2.

---

1. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(1).
2. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYB(2)(b).

3.10 Under the ADA, direct discrimination has two elements: the comparator test and the causation test. Discrimination laws in some other parts of Australia have a similar test for direct discrimination.[3]

3.11 The test for direct discrimination based on race is slightly different. In addition to the standard test, the ADA covers a situation where, based on their race, someone is segregated, or separated, from people of a different race.[4]

3.12 Direct discrimination also occurs when someone is treated less favourably because of a protected attribute of their relative or associate.[5] However, this does not apply where the discrimination is based on an individual's responsibilities as a carer.[6]

The comparator test

3.13 To show direct discrimination has occurred, a complainant must prove they were, or would have been, treated differently compared to another person without that attribute (the "comparator").

3.14 The different treatment must be less favourable, in the sense of being undesirable, disadvantageous or unfair. The focus is on the treatment, not how a person feels when they believe they have been treated less favourably.

3.15 The comparison of the treatment must be undertaken by considering a comparator in the same, or mostly the same, circumstances. Where there is no real person to be a comparator, a hypothetical person in those same circumstances may be used.[7]

Concerns about the comparator test

3.16 There are mixed views about the comparator test. Some think it is objective and appropriate. However, others think it is confusing, outdated, difficult to prove and complex.

3.17 One reason for these concerns is that it can be hard to identify an appropriate comparator. For example, treating a woman unfavourably because she is pregnant can be a form of unlawful sex discrimination.[8] But it is unclear whether the

---

3. See, eg, Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 5(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 5(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 14; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 8–10A; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 6(3); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 14(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 10(1).
4. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1)(b).
5. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1)(a)–(b), s 24(1)(a), s 38B(1)(a), s 49B(1)(a), s 49ZG(1)(a), s 49ZYA(1)(a).
6. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49T.
7. Boehringer Ingelheim Pty Ltd v Reddrop [1984] 2 NSWLR 13, 19, EOC 92-108, 76,052–76,053; Commissioner of Police v Mohamed [2009] NSWCA 432 [25]–[26].
8. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 24(1B).

appropriate comparator in this case would be a non-pregnant woman, a menopausal woman, or a man.[9]

3.18 It may be especially difficult to prove someone was treated less favourably than someone else in the same or mostly the same circumstances. The circumstances focus on the context of the treatment given, or to be given, to the person with the protected attribute. This is a factual exercise. The circumstances are all the objective features which surround the actual or intended treatment of the person with the particular attribute. The circumstances cannot be hypothetical.[10]

3.19 Once these circumstances have been identified, a comparison must be made with the treatment that was or would have been given to a person without the attribute in circumstances that were the same, or not materially different. The question is what would have been done in those circumstances if the person concerned did not have that attribute.

An "unfavourable treatment" test

3.20 One option to address these concerns could be to replace the comparator test with an "unfavourable treatment" test. Victoria and the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) take this approach.[11] In 2024, Queensland enacted reforms to introduce an unfavourable treatment test. Along with other reforms to Queensland's discrimination law, this change was due to commence on 1 July 2025.[12] However, the Queensland Government decided to postpone the commencement of the amendments to conduct further consultations.[13]

3.21 Instead of comparing the treatment of a complainant with another person, this test asks if the complainant was treated unfavourably because they have one or more protected attributes.[14] This allows the effect or consequences of the treatment to be taken into account.

---

9. See, eg, Thomson v Orica Australia Pty Ltd [2002] FCA 939, 116 IR 186 [121]–[122]; Mayer v Australian Nuclear Science and Technology Organisation [2003] FMCA 209 [58].
10. Purvis v New South Wales [2003] HCA 62, 217 CLR 92 [222]–[224].
11. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(1).
12. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7B, amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 10 (uncommenced).
13. See D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 4 April 2024).
14. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(2). The Victorian test only considers whether the treatment was because of a single attribute: Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(1). See, eg, Re Prezzi and Discrimination Commissioner (1996) 39 ALD 729 [24], EOC 92-803 [24].

3.22 Many reviews of discrimination laws in Australia have recommended replacing the comparator test with an unfavourable treatment test.[15] In 1999, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) similarly recommended a test that focused on whether the conduct caused detriment based on an attribute.[16]

3.23 Some say this test is simpler, as it avoids the need to find a comparator. A simpler test, that is easier to understand, could improve access to justice. It could also account for intersectional discrimination, which we discuss below.[17]

3.24 Adopting this test would make the ADA inconsistent with the law in some other states and territories and in some federal laws. However, this may not be an issue if the recommendations of the other law reform bodies, mentioned above, are implemented.

Causation

3.25 A complainant must also prove that a reason they received the less favourable treatment was because they either had

- a protected attribute, or
- a characteristic that people with that attribute have or are presumed to have.[18]

3.26 In summary, the issues are:

- Why did the less favourable treatment occur?
- Did it occur because of the person's attribute (or related characteristic)?

3.27 It does not matter if there was more than one reason why the complainant was treated unfavourably, some of which do not amount to unlawful discrimination. It is

---

15. Australia, Senate, Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Effectiveness of the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 in Eliminating Discrimination and Promoting Gender Equality (2008) rec 5; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 279, 342; Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", rec 4.23; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 95; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 5.
16. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [3.31], [3.51]–[3.52], rec 3.
17. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.1.2]; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 95.
18. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1)(a), s 7(2), s 24(1)(a), s 24(1A), s 38B(1)(a), s 38B(2), s 39(1)(a), s 39(1A), s 49B(1)(a), s 49B(2), s 49T(1)(a), s 49T(2), s 49ZG(1)(a), s 49ZG(2), s 49ZYA(1)(a), s 49ZYA(2).

enough if one the reasons for the treatment amounts to unlawful discrimination, even if this is not the "dominant or a substantial reason".[19]

3.28 Causation can be hard to prove. The complainant may experience and feel they have been treated less favourably, and genuinely believe it must be because of their personal attribute. However, the test is not subjective. It requires objective proof of the reason for the treatment.

3.29 This does not mean the complainant has to prove a respondent deliberately discriminated or intended to discriminate. Rather, the complainant must prove that their attribute was a reason for the treatment. The central question is: "why was the person with the attribute treated as they were?".[20]

3.30 The complainant often does not have evidence to prove why the respondent treated them this way and may have to rely on an inference being drawn. Later in this chapter, we discuss this issue in relation to the burden of proof.

3.31 Also, many people are not fully aware of the factors that influence the decisions they make.[21] This might cause difficulties in proving discrimination if the respondent's actions are influenced by unconscious bias.

3.32 The ADA does not say whether the respondent must have made a conscious decision to treat the complainant less favourably. Potentially, this could be clarified by adopting an aspect of the Victorian approach to causation.

3.33 Victorian discrimination law states that it is not relevant whether the respondent was aware of the discrimination or if they considered the treatment to be unfavourable.[22] It may still be discrimination if the respondent acted out of unconscious bias, but did not intend to discriminate.[23]

Question 3.1: Direct discrimination

Could the test for direct discrimination be improved or simplified? If so, how?

19. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4A.
20. Purvis v New South Wales [2003] HCA 62, 217 CLR 92 [236].
21. N Rees, S Rice and D Allen, Australian Anti-Discrimination and Equal Opportunity Law (Federation Press, 3rd ed, 2018) [3.2.28].
22. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(2)(a), s 10.
23. Austin Health v Tsikos [2023] VSCA 82, 324 IR 1 [71], [84]–[85].

Indirect discrimination

3.34 "Indirect discrimination" was added to the ADA in 1981.[24] Other discrimination laws across Australia also prohibit indirect discrimination, but use slightly different and more contemporary tests.

3.35 Indirect discrimination occurs when a rule or requirement that applies to everyone, unfairly disadvantages a person or group with a protected attribute. This moves beyond formal equality and towards substantive equality. We discuss these concepts in chapter 2.

3.36 To prove indirect discrimination, the complainant must show that:

- a requirement or condition was imposed on them by the respondent
- they are unable to comply with a requirement or condition (the "unable to comply" test)
- a substantially higher proportion of people who do not have the attribute can comply with it (the "disproportionate impact" test), and
- the requirement or condition is not reasonable having regard to the circumstances of the case (the "reasonableness" test).[25]

3.37 An example of indirect discrimination is where a store requires all customers to produce photo identification in the form of a driver licence to collect an order. This may disadvantage someone with a visual impairment who is not eligible to hold a driver licence.[26]

The comparative "disproportionate impact" test

3.38 The complainant must also show that a substantially higher proportion of people without an attribute can comply with a condition or requirement, compared to people with that attribute.

3.39 This means identifying all the people on whom the requirement or condition is imposed. This becomes the base group.

---

24. Anti-Discrimination (Amendment) Act 1981 (NSW) sch 5 cl 4.
25. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1)(c), s 24(1)(b), s 38B(1)(b), s 39(1)(b), s 49B(1)(b), s 49T(1)(b), s 49ZG(1)(b), s 49ZYA(1)(b).
26. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9. See generally Waters v Public Transport Corporation (1991) 173 CLR 349, 406.

3.40 After identifying this group, the next step is to ask which of those people who have the attribute can comply, and which of the people who do not have the attribute can comply. Then a comparison is made.[27]

3.41 This can be illustrated by an example involving a cinema that requires patrons to enter the premises using stairs. Assume, over a particular period, 100 people want to watch a movie at the cinema. This is the base group.

3.42 In this example, the base group of 100 patrons includes a wide range of people, including:

- 80 people without disability, all of whom can use the stairs, and
- 20 people with a mobility disability, 5 of whom can use the stairs.

3.43 A comparison is made between the people without disability who can comply with the stairs requirement, and those with disability who can comply with this requirement. In this example:

- 100% (80 out of 80) of the people without disability can comply with the requirement to use the stairs, and
- 25% (5 out of 20) of the people with a mobility disability can comply.

3.44 This means a substantially higher proportion of people without disability can comply with the requirement, compared with the proportion of people with mobility disability who can comply.

3.45 Concerns about the disproportionate impact test include that it:

- is unnecessarily complex and technical
- can be difficult to identify an appropriate comparator group
- is hard to prove, often requiring complex evidence, such as statistics and data, which a complainant is unlikely to have access to
- can be difficult to apply if the relevant groups are small, as the comparisons between proportions can be distorted, and
- is particularly challenging for complainants with limited resources or legal knowledge.[28]

---

27. See, eg, Bonella v Wollongong City Council [2001] NSWADT 194 [76]–[77] citing Sackville J in Commonwealth Bank of Australia v Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (1997) 80 FCR 78, 118–121.

28. See, eg, Victorian Department of Justice, An Equality Act for a Fairer Victoria: Equal Opportunity Review, Final Report (2008) [5.28], rec 42; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.2.1]; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 98.

3.46 One option could be to refocus the test. In several parts of Australia, the test for indirect discrimination does not assess disproportionate impact by reference to a comparator group. Instead, the issue is whether a requirement or condition disadvantages a person with a protected attribute.[29]

3.47 For example, the ACT test focuses on the following questions:

- Has a condition or requirement been imposed, or is there a proposal to impose a condition or requirement?
- Does the condition or requirement have the effect of disadvantaging a person because they have a protected attribute(s)?
- Is the condition or requirement reasonable?[30]

3.48 Recent reviews in Western Australia (WA) and Queensland also recommended replacing the disproportionate impact test with a disadvantage test.[31] In 2024, Queensland enacted amendments to implement this reform. The amendments were due to commence on 1 July 2025 but, for the reasons explained above, it is now uncertain when they will commence.[32]

3.49 In 1999, the NSWLRC acknowledged the complexities created by the disproportionate impact test. However, it concluded that some assessment of proportionality may be necessary to establish a link between the detriment and the attribute.[33]

Question 3.2: The comparative disproportionate impact test

Should the comparative disproportionate impact test for indirect discrimination be replaced? If so, what should replace it?

---

29. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(1); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(3); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 15(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7B.
30. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(3)–(4).
31. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 101; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 9, [4.1.2.1].
32. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7B, amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 11 (uncommenced). But see D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 7 April 2024).
33. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [3.99]–[3.100]. See Bonella v Wollongong City Council [2001] NSWADT 194 [94].

The "inability to comply" element

3.50 To prove indirect discrimination, complainants need to show that they do not, or cannot, comply with the requirement or condition. Some other discrimination laws in Australia also require this.[34]

3.51 However, some recent reviews concluded that this is an unnecessary requirement.[35] Generally, the fact that a complainant does not comply with a requirement or condition can be assumed. Anyone who does comply would be unlikely to seek to challenge it.[36]

3.52 The Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) was concerned that the term "not able to comply" might be interpreted literally. This could exclude complainants who are capable of complying but choose not to because the requirement would be detrimental to them.[37]

3.53 This requirement is not part of the test for indirect discrimination in the ACT, Victoria, Tasmania or the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth).[38]

3.54 This may be another argument in support of a "disadvantage" test, which does not require complainants to prove they are unable to comply with a requirement or condition.[39]

Question 3.3: Indirect discrimination and inability to comply

What are your views on the "not able to comply" part of the indirect discrimination test? Should this part of the test be removed? Why or why not?

---

34. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 6(1)(b); Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 9(1A)(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 11(1)(a); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 9(2)(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 29(2a)(b). But see Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7B, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 11A (uncommenced).
35. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.2.3], rec 11; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 98; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 296, 339.
36. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.2.3].
37. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 98.
38. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(3)–(4); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 15(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7B. But see Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7B, amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 10 (uncommenced).
39. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(3)–(5); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9.

The "reasonableness" standard

3.55 To prove indirect discrimination, the complainant must also show that the requirement is "not reasonable having regard to the circumstances of the case".[40]

3.56 Other Australian discrimination laws, even those that use a disadvantage test, incorporate a reasonableness element. But, unlike the ADA, many other discrimination laws place the onus on the respondent to prove that a requirement it imposed was reasonable.[41]

3.57 We have heard concerns about the use of a reasonableness test, including that it is ambiguous and insufficiently stringent. Other reviews have also questioned its use, finding that it is vague and open to different interpretations.[42] We set out some reform options, for consideration, below.

Factors relevant to "reasonableness"

3.58 To address this, an option could be to list factors to consider when determining whether a requirement is reasonable.

3.59 The ADA does not list such factors. Under the ADA, whether a requirement is reasonable depends on the circumstances. However, some NSW tribunal decisions have indicated factors that may be relevant in a particular case.[43] For example, this may include the:

- financial or economic circumstances of the respondent
- ability of the respondent to accommodate the needs of the complainants, and
- the availability of alternative approaches which would achieve the objectives of the respondent, in a less discriminatory way.[44]

---

40. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1)(c), s 24(1)(b), s 38B(1)(b), s 39(1)(b), s 49B(1)(b), s 49T(1)(b), s 49ZG(1)(b), s 49ZYA(1)(b).
41. Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 15(2); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 6(4); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7C; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 70; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 205.
42. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 296; Australia, Senate, Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Effectiveness of the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 in Eliminating Discrimination and Promoting Gender Equality (2008) rec 6, [11.13], [11.17].
43. See, eg, Bonella v Wollongong City Council [2001] NSWADT 194 [95–111]; Gardiner v WorkCover Authority of NSW [2004] NSWADTAP 1 [24]–[41].
44. Bonella v Wollongong City Council [2001] NSWADT 194 [95]–[97].

3.60 Other discrimination laws give more guidance.[45] In Victoria, whether a requirement, condition or practice is reasonable depends on all the relevant circumstances, including:

- the nature and extent of the disadvantage resulting from its imposition, or proposed imposition
- whether the disadvantage is proportionate to the result sought by the duty-holder who seeks or proposes to impose it
- the cost of any alternative
- the financial circumstances of the duty-holder imposing it, or proposing to, and
- whether reasonable adjustments or reasonable accommodation could be made to reduce the disadvantage caused.[46]

3.61 A recent review in WA recommended an approach modelled on Victoria.[47] The NSWLRC also supported a similar approach in 1999.[48]

A proportionality test

3.62 Another option could be to replace reasonableness with a proportionality test. This would assess whether a requirement or condition is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim. Some think a proportionality test is a better way of balancing the interests of someone with a protected attribute, and the legitimate activities of organisations.

3.63 The Equality Act 2010 (UK) has a proportionality test. It requires an assessment of whether a requirement or a condition is "a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim".[49]

3.64 Some reviews of federal discrimination law have also supported consideration of a "legitimate and proportionate" test. The Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) stated that it "would enable more rigour and specificity" than the reasonableness test.[50]

---

45. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(5); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(3); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7B(2).
46. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(3).
47. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 10, [4.1.2.2].
48. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 6, [3.104].
49. Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 19.
50. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 296. See also Australia, Senate, Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Effectiveness of the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 in Eliminating Discrimination and Promoting Gender Equality (2008) rec 6, [11.17].

3.65 However, the QHRC recommended against introducing proportionality into the test for indirect discrimination. It considered that proportionality would be too onerous and complex for respondents to understand and apply.[51]

Systemic discrimination

3.66 The reasonableness standard does not address systemic discrimination. Whether a requirement is reasonable is measured at a particular point in time and for a specific group. But some argue that a failure to change systemic barriers or practices should itself be considered a form of discrimination.

3.67 This could be addressed by requiring duty holders to take steps to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct, including discrimination. We discuss this in chapter 11.

Question 3.4: Indirect discrimination and the reasonableness standard

(1) Should the reasonableness standard be part of the test for indirect discrimination? If not, what should replace it?

(2) Should the ADA set out the factors to be considered in determining reasonableness? Why or why not? If so, what should they be?

Indirect discrimination based on characteristics

3.68 As we note above, the test for direct discrimination protects against discrimination based on characteristics that people with a protected attribute either generally have or are presumed to have. However, this does not apply to indirect discrimination.

3.69 Some other states and territories do not make this distinction.[52]

3.70 To address this, an option could be to change the way protected attributes are defined. In the ACT, for example, a protected attribute is defined to include "a characteristic that people with the attribute generally have" and "a characteristic that people with the attribute are generally presumed to have".[53] The Law Reform Commission of WA (LRCWA) recommended a similar approach. In its view, it should never be lawful to discriminate based on attributes or characteristics.[54]

---

51. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 103.
52. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 7(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 8.
53. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(2)(a)–(b).
54. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 65.

Question 3.5: Indirect discrimination based on a characteristic

Should the prohibition on indirect discrimination extend to characteristics that people with protected attributes either generally have or are assumed to have?

The burden of proof

3.71 In NSW, complainants – not respondents – must prove each part of the tests for discrimination. That means the complainants have the "burden of proof".

3.72 Discrimination claims must be proved on the balance of probabilities, like all civil claims. This means that the evidence must show it is more likely than not that the discrimination occurred.

3.73 It can be hard for complainants to gather the evidence they need. They often do not have clear evidence that discrimination occurred, as they do not know why the respondent treated them that way. Instead, they must rely on circumstantial evidence and ask the court to draw an inference of discrimination.[55]

3.74 This can be particularly complex where, for instance:

- the discrimination was due to unconscious bias or stereotypical views about people with particular attributes, and/or
- where the respondent does not realise their actions or requirements are discriminatory.

3.75 For instance, it can be hard to prove causation when only the respondent knows why they acted a certain way or made a certain decision.[56]

3.76 It is also particularly difficult for people without legal representation. This can be a barrier to justice and could deter them from making a claim.

3.77 Considering this, some argue the law should change so that respondents bear the burden of proving some aspects of the tests for discrimination. We set out some options for consideration, below.

---

55. D Allen, "Reducing the Burden of Proving Discrimination in Australia" (2009) 31 Sydney Law Review 579, 583.
56. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.8]; D Allen, "Reducing the Burden of Proving Discrimination in Australia" (2009) 31 Sydney Law Review 579, 583; ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 142.

Direct discrimination

3.78 The Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (Fair Work Act) provides one model for consideration. Under this Act:

- the employee must prove their employer subjected them to adverse action, which can include being treated unfavourably, and
- the employer must then prove that the treatment was not for a prohibited reason, being the employee's attribute such as sex, race or disability.[57]

3.79 The Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability supported this approach in its recommendations to reform the Disability Discrimination Act 1994 (Cth).[58]

3.80 Queensland has recently implemented another model, which applies more generally to complaint proceedings (including direct discrimination or indirect discrimination complaints). The respondent will be taken to have unlawfully discriminated against the complainant if:

- the complainant proves facts from which it could be decided, without any other explanation, that the respondent unlawfully discriminated against them, and
- the respondent does not prove, on the balance of probabilities, that they did not unlawfully discriminate against the respondent.[59]

3.81 This is like the model in the Equality Act 2010 (UK).[60] The AHRC and the LRCWA have recommended reforms based on this model.[61]

Indirect discrimination

3.82 The ADA also requires complainants, rather than respondents, to prove each part of the test for indirect discrimination. However, in some other parts of Australia, the respondent has the burden of proving that a requirement is reasonable.[62]

---

57. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351, s 361.
58. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 302, rec 4.23.
59. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 204.
60. Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 13(1), s 136.
61. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) [3.4]; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 97.
62. Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 15(2); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 6(4); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7C; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 70; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(2).

3.83 The NSWLRC recommended this in 1999, as did the LRCWA in 2022.[63]

3.84 If this were applied in NSW, with no other changes to the indirect discrimination test, the complainant would have to prove:

- they have an attribute protected by the ADA
- they are unable to comply with a requirement or condition, and
- that a substantially higher proportion of people who do not have a protected attribute can comply.

3.85 The respondent would then have to prove that the requirement or condition was reasonable, in the circumstances.

Question 3.6: Proving indirect discrimination

(1) Should the ADA require respondents to prove any aspects of the direct discrimination test? If so, which aspects?

(2) Should the ADA require respondents to prove any aspects of the indirect discrimination test? If so, which aspects?

Some overarching issues

3.86 We also invite you to consider three overarching issues. Preliminary submissions raised concerns that the ADA's tests do not:

- recognise that direct and indirect discrimination can overlap
- protect against intersectional discrimination, or
- protect against intended future discrimination.

Overlapping forms of discrimination

3.87 A fundamental issue is whether the ADA should continue to treat direct and indirect discrimination separately. Under the ADA, discrimination can be either direct or indirect — but not both.[64]

3.88 It can be hard to differentiate between direct and indirect discrimination. Some conduct could constitute either form of discrimination. This can be illustrated by the example of denying women opportunities because there are inadequate toilet facilities. This could be direct discrimination. It involves treating a woman less favourably compared to how a man is treated because they are a woman and need

63. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 6; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 97.

64. Waters v Public Transport Corporation (1991) 173 CLR 349, 392–393.

their own toilet facilities. Or it could be indirect discrimination, as it involves a requirement that applies to everyone (that is, that all employees use male bathrooms). But this unfairly disadvantages women.[65]

3.89 Some think the ADA should acknowledge that direct and indirect discrimination can overlap. For example, the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) states that "discrimination occurs when a person discriminates either directly or indirectly, or both, against someone else".[66]

3.90 This was based on recommendations of the ACT Law Reform Advisory Council. In its view, the change would reduce confusion by clarifying that the two concepts are not mutually exclusive.[67]

3.91 In another approach, one preliminary submission suggested adopting a single definition that does not include the concepts of direct and indirect discrimination.[68]

Question 3.7: Direct and indirect discrimination

(1) How should the relationship between different types of discrimination be recognised?

(2) Should the ADA retain the distinction between direct and indirect discrimination? Why or why not?

Intersectional discrimination

3.92 Another issue is whether the ADA should protect against discrimination that is based on more than one attribute. This is known as "intersectional discrimination".

3.93 In the ADA, separate sections set out the tests for discrimination for each attribute. It does not provide for discrimination based on more than one attribute. It could be said that this does not reflect how discrimination occurs in real life.[69]

3.94 People can experience discrimination based on more than one attribute. For example, Aboriginal women may experience discrimination based on both race and sex. Discrimination of this kind can expose individuals to unique and compounding types of disadvantage.[70]

---

65. Australian Iron and Steel Pty Ltd v Banovic (1989) 168 CLR 165, 176–177.
66. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(1).
67. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 31.
68. NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21, 14.
69. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.3]; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 50.
70. Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, General Comment No 6 on Equality and Non-Discrimination, UN Doc CRPD/C/GC/6 (26 April 2018) [19].

3.95 Across Australia, reviews of discrimination laws have recommended changes to protect against intersectional discrimination.[71] International human rights bodies have recommended this too.[72]

3.96 Currently, only the ACT provides some protection from intersectional discrimination. Under the ACT law, discrimination occurs if a person is treated unfavourably because of "1 or more protected attributes".[73]

3.97 However, the ACT test may not protect against discrimination based on the combined effect of multiple attributes.[74] For example, an employer might refuse to employ women of colour but employ men of colour and white women. This could be described as discrimination based on a combination of attributes (sex and race), rather than discrimination based separately on sex and race.[75] This may not be captured by the ACT test.

3.98 To avoid uncertainty, another approach might be to prohibit discrimination based on the combined effect of two or more protected attributes. The AHRC, LRCWA, and QHRC supported this approach.[76] Queensland enacted reforms to do this, although at the time of writing it is uncertain when they will commence.[77]

3.99 Some other countries address discrimination based on more than one protected attribute, or on a combination of attributes. For example, the Canadian Human Rights Act protects against discrimination on "one or more prohibited grounds ... or

---

71. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) [4.7(c)]; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 3.2; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 13.

72. Human Rights Committee, Concluding Observations on the Sixth Periodic Report of Australia, UN Doc CCPR/C/AUS/CO/6 (1 December 2017) [18]; Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, Concluding Observations on the Combined Second and Third periodic Reports of Australia, UN Doc CRPD/C/AUS/CO/2–3 (15 October 2019) [10].

73. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(2)–(3).

74. A Blackham and J Temple "Intersectional Discrimination in Australia: An Empirical Critique of the Legal Framework" (2020) 43 UNSW Law Journal 773, 781.

75. See Victoria, Commission for Gender Equality in the Public Sector, "Applying Intersectionality" (11 February 2022) <www.genderequalitycommission.vic.gov.au/applying-intersectionality> (retrieved 7 April 2025).

76. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) [4.7(c)]; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 13; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 3.2.

77. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7A, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 8(2) (uncommenced). But see D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 7 April 2024).

on the effect of a combination of prohibited grounds".[78] The UK legislation contains a section to address "combined" discrimination, although it has not entered into force.[79]

3.100 Protecting against intersectional discrimination could more accurately reflect the many ways discrimination can occur. It could also mean the ADA covers more instances of discrimination. On the other hand, allowing complaints to be based on overlapping attributes may increase complexity.[80]

Question 3.8: Intersectional discrimination

(1) Should the ADA protect against intersectional discrimination? Why or why not?

(2) If so, how should this be achieved?

Intended future discrimination

3.101 Some Australian discrimination laws protect against intended future discriminatory conduct.[81] The ADA does not do this. The ADA generally cannot be used to prevent discrimination.[82] However, there is a prohibition on advertisements that indicate an intention to do something unlawful under the ADA. We consider this in chapter 10.

3.102 This could be addressed by extending the test for direct discrimination to include when a duty holder "proposes to treat" someone unfavourably. This has been done in the ACT, Victoria, the Northern Territory, Queensland and in the Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) (Age Discrimination Act).[83]

3.103 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended that the test for direct discrimination should include future discrimination. This would mean that a potential victim could make a complaint if they were aware of intended discrimination.[84]

---

78. Canadian Human Rights Act 1985 (Canada) s 3.1.
79. Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 14.
80. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [4.1.3].
81. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(2)–(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(1), s 9(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 10(1), s 11(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 14, s 15(1).
82. Woods v Wollongong City Council (1986) EOC 92-174.
83. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 8(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 10(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 14.
84. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [3.58], rec 4.

3.104 The test for indirect discrimination could also cover when someone proposes to impose a requirement, condition, or practice, which effectively captures intended future indirect discrimination. This applies in the ACT, Victoria, Queensland, and the Age Discrimination Act.[85]

Question 3.9: Intended future discrimination

Should the tests for discrimination capture intended future discrimination? Why or why not? If so, how could this be achieved?

85. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 8(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 9(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 11(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 15(1).

4. Discrimination: protected attributes

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) only protects against discrimination that is based on certain, specified attributes. We seek your views on the definitions and descriptions of the existing protected attributes, and on certain attribute-specific exceptions.

Age 43

Carer's responsibilities 44

Whether the attribute should be defined 44

Options for different definitions of "carer" 45

Other forms of relationships could be recognised 46

Disability discrimination 46

The language used to define "disability" 47

Options for expanding the ADA's coverage 49

Recognising the rights of people with assistance animals 50

Discrimination based on genetic information 51

The public health exception 52

Homosexuality 53

Marital or domestic status 55

Race 56

Some potential gaps in coverage 56

Recognising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples 58

Sex discrimination 59

Gender discrimination and sex discrimination 59

Binary and non-binary language 59

Discrimination based on pregnancy or breastfeeding 60

Transgender grounds 61

"Gender identity" as a potential alternative 61

Redefining "transgender grounds" 62

Extending existing protections 63

Past or future attributes 63

Relatives and associates of people with protected attributes 63

4.1 The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) makes it unlawful to discriminate based on certain features or "attributes" that can form part of someone's identity. Listed in alphabetical order, the ADA prohibits discrimination based on:

- age
- carer's responsibilities
- disability
- homosexuality
- marital or domestic status
- race
- sex (including pregnancy and breastfeeding), and
- transgender status (referred to as "transgender grounds" in the ADA).

4.2 It is unlawful to discriminate against someone based on one of these attributes. It is also unlawful to discriminate based on a characteristic that people with a protected attribute either have or are presumed to have. This protects against discrimination that stems from stereotypical views.

4.3 For someone to discriminate based on an attribute, they must have knowledge of the attribute.[1] It can be difficult to prove that a person has an attribute, particularly where an attribute is not visible (such as a hidden disability).

4.4 The ADA also prohibits direct discrimination against someone based on a protected attribute of their relative or associate. But this does not cover discrimination based on carer's responsibilities. Also, relatives and associates of people with any attributes are not protected from indirect discrimination.

4.5 In preliminary submissions, we heard concerns that the language used to describe and define existing protected attributes is outdated and, sometimes, offensive. Many also argued that other protected attributes should be added to the ADA.

4.6 In this chapter, we ask if the way the existing protected attributes are expressed or defined should change. We also set out some attribute-specific exceptions that limit the scope of the protections in certain circumstances. We consider other exceptions in chapters 6 and 7.

4.7 We set out some options for reform suggested by preliminary submissions and our research. But we encourage you to raise other issues and make other suggestions.

---

1. Tate v Rafin [2000] FCA 1582 [65].

4.8 In the next chapter, we build on this discussion by asking if it should be unlawful to discriminate based on other protected attributes.

4.9 The ADA also prohibits vilification based on certain protected attributes, some of which are also protected against discrimination. While we focus on discrimination in this chapter, we note where the definitions of protected attributes apply to vilification too. Chapter 8 provides more detail on the law about vilification.

Age

4.10 The ADA protects people against discrimination based on their age, and the age of their relatives or associates. Age includes "age group".[2] It also covers discrimination based on the characteristics that people of a particular age or age group generally have or are thought to have.[3]

4.11 We did not receive any options in preliminary submissions for changing the definition or scope of this attribute. However, we welcome any suggestions.

4.12 The ADA also separately protects against compulsory retirement due to age. This does not apply to judges or certain other office holders.[4] In 1999, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) recommended that this be merged with the prohibition against age discrimination, to align their coverage.[5]

4.13 The ADA contains exceptions that allow otherwise unlawful age discrimination. These include exceptions in relation to credit applications, some compulsory retirement and laws about the legal capacity or welfare of people under 18 years old.[6]

4.14 An exception applies to certain acts relating to driver licences. Where done to meet safety considerations that are reasonable in the circumstances, it is not unlawful to discriminate based on age relating to:

- the manner in which fitness to control a vehicle is assessed, or
- the terms and conditions on which, and length of time during which, a licence to drive or ride a vehicle is provided or made available.[7]

---

2. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYA(2).
3. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYA.
4. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYK, s 49ZV, s 49ZX.
5. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.111].
6. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYU, s 49ZX, s 49ZYQ.
7. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYV.

4.15 In 1999 the NSWLRC recommended the repeal of this exception. It thought the same objective could be achieved through the general exception relating to compliance with statutory requirements (which we consider in chapter 7).

4.16 The ADA also allows for the creation of regulations to declare any otherwise unlawful age discrimination lawful.[8] For example, the Anti-Discrimination Regulation 2019 (NSW) makes it lawful for a registered club to give a benefit to a member based on age.[9]

Question 4.1: Age discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "age"?

(2) What changes, if any, should be made to the age-related exceptions?

Carer's responsibilities

4.17 The ADA protects against discrimination based on someone's responsibilities as a carer. This covers responsibilities to care for or support:

- their child or stepchild, who is dependent on them or in need of care or support
- any child or adult in need of care or support, if they are an authorised carer or guardian, or have parental responsibility under legislation, or
- any immediate family member (as defined) in need of care or support.[10]

4.18 The ADA also protects against discrimination based on past and/or future carer's responsibilities. This includes responsibilities that someone is thought to have currently, has had previously, or will have in future.[11]

4.19 An issue is whether this attribute, as currently defined, sufficiently reflects the diversity of cultures and relationships in our community. If not, there are a range of other options to consider.

Whether the attribute should be defined

4.20 The widest approach could be to leave the attribute undefined. This could allow its meaning to change with time and respond to diverse family structures.[12]

---

8. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYX.
9. Anti-Discrimination Regulation 2019 (NSW) cl 4.
10. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49S(1), s 49S(3)–(4).
11. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49S(2).
12. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 308, 311, rec 26.

4.21 In 2024, the Queensland Parliament enacted reforms to:

- remove the existing attribute, and definition, of "family responsibilities", and
- replace it with a new attribute of "family, carer or kinship responsibilities", without defining its scope.[13]

4.22 These changes, along with other reforms to Queensland's discrimination law, were due to commence on 1 July 2025. However, the current Queensland Government decided to postpone the commencement of the reforms to conduct further consultations.[14]

4.23 If the ADA's definition was repealed, but not replaced, it is unclear how courts or tribunals would interpret it. Questions may arise as to whether the attribute should be interpreted differently to the former statutory definition. This could lead to uncertainty.

Options for different definitions of "carer"

4.24 Some might prefer that the legislation provide more guidance, without being too narrow. One option could be to use a wider definition of "carer" that does not depend on specific categories. For instance, the Victorian discrimination law does not use categories. It defines a "carer" as a person on whom someone is wholly or substantially dependent for ongoing care and attention, generally excluding commercial arrangements.[15]

4.25 A different idea could be to align the ADA with the Carers (Recognition) Act 2010 (NSW).[16] This defines a carer as someone who provides ongoing personal care and assistance to a person with disability, or a person who needs care because of a medical condition, mental illness or old age.[17]

4.26 If this were adopted, consideration should be given to including other existing aspects of the ADA definition. For instance, the definition in the carer's legislation does not cover caring for other children or adults that need care or support.

---

13. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3)(p), amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(p) (uncommenced).
14. D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 4 April 2024).
15. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(i), s 4 definition of "carer". See also Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(l) dictionary definition of "carer".
16. Carers NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD71, 2.
17. Carers (Recognition) Act 2010 (NSW) s 5(1).

Other forms of relationships could be recognised

4.27 Another option could be to expressly recognise certain other relationships. For instance, discrimination law in the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) recognises the attribute of "parent, family, carer or kinship responsibilities".[18] This could encompass a variety of family, caring and kinship relationships, including kinship connections among Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities.[19] It could also include kinship responsibilities of other Indigenous peoples and cultural groups.

4.28 Some other discrimination laws also separately protect against discrimination based on "parental status". This includes the status of being or not being a parent.[20] The ADA does not currently recognise the status of "not" being a parent.

Question 4.2: Discrimination based on carer's responsibilities

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "responsibilities as a carer"?

(2) Should the ADA separately protect against discrimination based on someone's status of being, or not being, a parent?

Disability discrimination

4.29 The ADA protects against discrimination based on someone's disability, or the disability of their relative or associate.[21] As we discuss in chapter 8, the ADA does not protect against disability vilification. However, it does protect against vilification against a person, or group of persons, with HIV/AIDS.[22]

4.30 The ADA defines "disability" as

> (a) total or partial loss of a person's bodily or mental functions or of a part of a person's body, or
>
> (b) the presence in a person's body of organisms causing or capable of causing disease or illness, or
>
> (c) the malfunction, malformation or disfigurement of a part of a person's body, or
>
> (d) a disorder or malfunction that results in a person learning differently from a person without the disorder or malfunction, or

18. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(l).
19. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 73, rec 11.
20. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4 definition of "parental status", s 6(i); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "parental status", s 16(i); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(d), sch 1 definition of "parental status".
21. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) pt 4A.
22. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) pt 4F.

(e) a disorder, illness or disease that affects a person's thought processes, perception of reality, emotions or judgment or that results in disturbed behaviour.[23]

4.31 This is similar to the definition in the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) (Disability Discrimination Act).[24] However, we note some differences below.

4.32 Although it does not use these terms, the ADA's definition is broad enough to include a range of conditions including physical disability, cognitive impairment, mental illness, learning differences and people living with illnesses such as HIV and hepatitis. "Disability" also includes past, future and presumed disability.[25]

4.33 It is also unlawful to discriminate against someone based on characteristics that a person with that disability generally has or is generally thought to have. Among other things, this includes conduct based on a person having:

- an assistance dog, where the disability relates to vision, hearing or mobility (which we discuss below)
- a palliative or therapeutic device, or mechanical equipment, to help them, or
- an interpreter, reader, assistant or carer who provides interpretive, reading or other services.[26]

The language used to define "disability"

4.34 We have heard concerns about the language the ADA uses to define disability. Many think the definition is outdated and overly limited.

Negative or deficit-based language

4.35 Discrimination laws across Australia, including the ADA, define disability with reference to negative or deficit-based terms. These terms include "disorder", "malfunction", "malformation", "disfigurement" and "disturbed behaviour".[27] This is because they mostly align with the definition in the Disability Discrimination Act.

4.36 It may be possible to replace them with more inclusive alternatives, while keeping the essence of the definition in the Disability Discrimination Act. For instance, there have been proposals to:

---

23. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "disability".
24. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4 definition of "disability".
25. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49A.
26. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49B(3)–(3A).
27. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4 definition of "disability"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "disability"; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 5 definition of "disability"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "impairment"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4 definition of "disability"; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 5AA definition of "disability".

- refer to "disfigurement of part of the body", but delete the references to "malfunction" and "malformation",[28] or
- replace "the malfunction, malformation or disfigurement of a part of a person's body" with "an impairment or disturbance in the structure or functioning of the person's body or a part of the person's body".[29]

4.37 Alternative words might be "restriction" or "limitation". These words are used, for example, in the World Health Organization's International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health and medical or census definitions.[30]

A social model of disability

4.38 Another issue is whether the definition should reflect a social model or a human rights model of disability.

4.39 The definitions in the ADA, the Disability Discrimination Act and other Australian discrimination laws reflect a "medical model" of disability. This views disability as a deficit, abnormality or medical problem requiring a cure.[31] It does not account for external factors that may cause, worsen or alleviate disability.

4.40 The social model is the "response to, and rejection of" the medical model.[32] It argues that people are disabled by social and environmental barriers to participation, including physical and communication barriers, and discriminatory attitudes. It also includes the failure to give people with disability the adjustments they need to participate in society.[33]

4.41 A human rights approach or model can identify structural, policy and legal changes to enable people with disability to have full and equal access to their rights.[34]

---

28. Anti-Discrimination and Crimes Legislation Amendment (Disability) Bill 2024 (NSW) sch 1 [1].
29. Draft Anti-Discrimination Bill 2024 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "disability".
30. See, eg, Australian Bureau of Statistics, "Disability" (27 November 2023) <www.abs.gov.au/statistics/detailed-methodology-information/concepts-sources-methods/personal-safety-survey-user-guide/2021-22/disability> (retrieved 21 March 2025); World Health Organization, "International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health (ICF)" (2025) <www.who.int/standards/classifications/international-classification-of-functioning-disability-and-health> (retrieved 21 March 2025).
31. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Executive Summary (2023) "Our Vision for an Inclusive Australia and Recommendations", 17.
32. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Executive Summary (2023) "Our Vision for an Inclusive Australia and Recommendations", 18.
33. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Interim Report (2020) 346.
34. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Executive Summary (2023) "Our Vision for an Inclusive Australia and Recommendations", 18.

4.42 The Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) is sometimes described as representing both approaches.[35] The CRPD states:

> Persons with disabilities include those who have long-term physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairments which in interaction with various barriers may hinder their full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others.[36]

4.43 In NSW, a private member's bill proposes to implement aspects of the CRPD definition. This would retain aspects of the current ADA definition but incorporate aspects of the CRPD definition.[37]

4.44 One preliminary submission proposed another definition:

> disability is any impairment, including a physical, mental, intellectual, cognitive, neurological, learning, communication, or sensory impairment, or a functional limitation whether permanent, temporary, or episodic in nature, whether evident or not, that, in interaction with a barrier, hinders a person's full and equal participation in society.[38]

4.45 There may be benefits in keeping the ADA definition consistent with other Australian discrimination laws. However, the ADA could reflect the social and human rights models in other ways, including underpinning a new proactive requirement to provide adjustments, which we consider in chapter 11.

Options for expanding the ADA's coverage

4.46 The ADA definition is broad. It does not specify particular disabilities or require any severity of symptoms. It covers physical, mental and cognitive impairments, and certain illnesses.

4.47 However, some think the definition should more clearly include psychosocial disability, mental illness or addiction. For instance, the Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) noted concerns that the Queensland definition might not cover people who experience episodic mental conditions, or who do not meet diagnostic criteria.[39]

4.48 Another issue is whether the definition should expressly refer to addiction to alcohol or other drugs. Currently, addiction can fall within the definition of disability if characterised as affecting:

---

35. Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008); Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 44.
36. Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008) art 1.
37. Anti-Discrimination and Crimes Legislation Amendment (Disability) Bill 2024 (NSW) sch 1 [1].
38. Dementia Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD17, 5.
39. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 267.

- bodily and mental functions, and/or
- thought processes, perception of reality, emotions or judgment or disturbed behaviour.[40]

4.49 The ADA's prohibition on disability discrimination at work does not apply if the disability relates to a person's addiction to a prohibited drug.[41] We discuss concerns about this exception in chapter 6.

4.50 Whether an addiction falls within the definition depends on each particular case. It is possible that a gambling addiction could be covered by the definition also. However, tribunals have not yet confirmed this in NSW.[42]

4.51 No other Australian discrimination law explicitly covers addiction in the definition of disability. However, the QHRC recommended that the definition should clearly include addiction.[43]

4.52 An alternative could be to protect against discrimination based on "health status", separately from disability. This could cover health conditions that fall outside the definition of disability, or conditions not considered to be disability by those who experience them. We discuss this option in chapter 5.

Recognising the rights of people with assistance animals

4.53 Another concern, raised in preliminary submissions, relates to the way the ADA refers to assistance animals. The ADA treats the use of an assistance dog as a "characteristic" that is generally held by people with disability relating to vision, hearing or mobility.[44] Discrimination based on this characteristic is a form of disability discrimination.

4.54 However, under the ADA there is no protection for someone who has:

- an assistance animal other than a dog, or
- disability that does not relate to vision, hearing or mobility.

4.55 People with disabilities that are unrelated to vision, hearing or mobility often also use assistance dogs. For instance, they can be used to support people who have a psychosocial disability, mental illness or who experience seizures. Also, animals

---

40. Marsden v HREOC [2000] FCA 1619 [54]; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.92].
41. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49PA.
42. Hinder v Salvation Army (NSW) Property Trust (No 3) [2017] NSWCATAD 16 [77]–[80]. See also McDougall v Kimberley-Clark Australia Pty Ltd [2006] VCAT 2211.
43. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 21.4.
44. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49B(3).

other than dogs assist people with disability. For example, horses are used during equine therapy for people with psychosocial support needs.

4.56 The Disability Discrimination Act is broader than the ADA. It protects all people with disability when they use an assistance animal, defined as any animal:

- accredited under state or territory law to assist people with disability
- accredited by a prescribed animal training organisation, or
- trained to assist people with disability.[45]

4.57 There are also differences between the ADA and the Companion Animals Act 1988 (NSW). This Act contains rules about when assistance animals must be allowed in NSW. It uses the Disability Discrimination Act definition of an assistance animal.[46]

4.58 Recent reviews in Western Australia (WA) and Queensland supported the approach in the Disability Discrimination Act.[47] However, this has not been implemented in either state. By contrast, discrimination legislation in the Northern Territory (NT), ACT and South Australia recognises other accredited assistance animals (as well as dogs).[48]

Discrimination based on genetic information

4.59 With advances in technology, the use of genetic information is of increasing concern. For instance, should employers be allowed to screen potential employees for genetic predisposition to disability?[49]

4.60 In some cases, the ADA can protect against discrimination based on genetic information, because it covers discrimination based on a possible future disability.[50] However, there may benefits of an express protection.

---

45. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 8, s 9(2).
46. Companion Animals Act 1988 (NSW) s 5 definition of "assistance animal".
47. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 21.3; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 18. See also Anti-Discrimination and Crimes Legislation Amendment (Disability) Bill 2024 (NSW) sch 1 [1].
48. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 5 definition of "assistance animal"; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 5AA(3) definition of "assistance animal"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4A definition of "assistance animal".
49. See, eg, L Heap, No Blood-No Job: Australia's Privacy Laws and Workers' Rights (Australia Institute, 2024) 13, 17–18.
50. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49A.

4.61 One option could be to include "a genetic predisposition" to disability in the definition of disability. The Disability Discrimination Act states that a possible future disability includes a genetic predisposition to that disability.[51]

4.62 Another option could be to add "genetic information" as a separate protected attribute, like the ACT.[52] This could cover situations in which genetic information is used for purposes other than predicting disability.[53] For example, it could prevent employers basing employment decisions on genetic information that suggests certain behavioural characteristics.

The public health exception

4.63 It is not unlawful to discriminate based on disability if the disability is an infectious disease, and the discrimination is reasonably necessary to protect public health.[54] As the NSWLRC noted in 1999, this exception is based on the view that it is necessary to control the spread of infectious disease.[55]

4.64 The Disability Discrimination Act and discrimination laws of the ACT, NT and Queensland have similar exceptions.[56]

4.65 However, in 1999 the NSWLRC recommended changes to make the exception more targeted. It recommended the exception apply where:

- the disability involves a condition that is transmissible in circumstances that might arise if a certain act is not done, and
- the act is based on medical or expert opinion, upon which it is reasonable to rely in the circumstances, and
- the act is proportionate to the risks.[57]

---

51. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4 definition of "disability". See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 22; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 264, 266; Anti-Discrimination and Crimes Legislation Amendment (Disability) Bill 2024 (NSW) sch 1 [1], [3].
52. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(h).
53. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Inquiry into the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report, (2015) 60.
54. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49P.
55. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.272].
56. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 48; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 56; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 55; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 107.
57. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 66.

4.66 The NSWLRC also recommended an exception for acts done to comply with the Public Health Act 1991 (NSW) or the Mental Health Act 1990 (NSW).[58]

Question 4.3: Disability discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "disability"?

(2) Should a new attribute be created to protect against genetic information discrimination? Or should this be added to the existing definition of disability?

(3) What changes, if any, should be made to the public health exception?

Homosexuality

4.67 The ADA prohibits both discrimination and vilification based on "homosexuality". It protects "homosexual persons" and anyone thought to be a "homosexual person". "Homosexual" is defined as a "male or female homosexual".[59]

4.68 However, this attribute does not include other sexual orientations, like asexuality, bisexuality and heterosexuality. Many preliminary submissions told us that this leaves a significant gap in protection.

4.69 Across Australia, laws use other expressions such as "sexual orientation" or "sexuality". They are defined to recognise the rights of a wider range of people. These laws provide a range of options to consider.

4.70 For instance, s 93Z of the Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) (Crimes Act) currently makes it an offence to threaten or incite violence based on "sexual orientation", among other attributes. Like the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act), the Crimes Act defines this to include sexual orientation towards people of:

- the same sex,
- a different sex, or
- the same sex and a different sex.[60]

58. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 66. See Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW), repealing Mental Health Act 1990 (NSW).

59. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZF, s 49ZG, s 4(1) definition of "homosexual".

60. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5) definition of "sexual orientation"; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4 definition of "sexual orientation". See also NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 36.

4.71 Other discrimination laws use a definition based on principles developed by international human rights law experts.[61] For example, Victoria defines sexual orientation as:

> A person's emotional, affectional and sexual attraction to, or intimate or sexual relations with, persons of a different gender or the same gender or more than one gender.[62]

4.72 The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) and QHRC recommended a similar definition.[63] In 2024, Queensland enacted reforms to include this definition in their discrimination law but, as we explain above, it is uncertain when these changes will commence.[64]

4.73 Another issue is whether the definition should include asexuality. The Queensland and WA reviews also recommended including people who do not have attraction to, or intimate sexual relations with, other people in the definition of sexual orientation.[65]

4.74 Queensland has enacted reforms to include protection for a "lack of capacity, for emotional, affectional and sexual attraction to, or intimate or sexual relation" with others.[66] It is also unclear when this will commence.

4.75 The ACT and Tasmania provide a further, flexible option. There, sexuality/sexual orientation is defined as "including" heterosexuality, homosexuality and bisexuality.[67] This word "including" was added to the ACT law to protect a wider understanding of sexuality.[68]

4.76 In 2023, a NSW private member's bill, the "Equality Bill", originally proposed to replace the ADA definition of "homosexuality" with "sexuality". It proposed to

---

61. The Yogyakarta Principles: Principles on the Application of International Human Rights Law in Relation to Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity (2007) 8.
62. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4 definition of "sexual orientation". See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4 definition of "sexual orientation".
63. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 54; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 23.1.
64. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(2), s 52(2), amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(n), sch 1 definition of "sexual orientation"(uncommenced).
65. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 285, rec 23.2; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 117.
66. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7, s 52(2) amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(n), sch 1 definition of "sexual orientation"(uncommenced).
67. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "sexuality"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "sexual orientation", s 16.
68. Explanatory Statement and Human Rights Compatibility Statement, Justice Legislation Amendment Bill 2020 (ACT) 13–14.

define this to include homosexuality, bisexuality or asexuality.[69] This, along with other reforms to the ADA, were not ultimately enacted in the Equality Act 2024 (NSW).

4.77 However, some who supported the original Equality Bill said an attribute of "sexual orientation" was their preferred option. In their view, the changes proposed in the original Equality Bill were intended only as an interim measure. They were designed to fit within the ADA's existing tests and structure (including the comparator test), which they thought required wider reform.[70] We explain the existing tests and structure in chapter 3.

Question 4.4: Discrimination based on homosexuality

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "homosexuality"?

Marital or domestic status

4.78 "Marital or domestic status" is another protected attribute under the ADA. This includes being single; married; married but living separately from one's spouse; divorced; widowed; or in a de facto relationship (that is, two people who live together as a couple).[71]

4.79 One issue is whether this definition should recognise other forms of relationships. For instance, other Australian discrimination laws also recognise:

- de facto partners who live separately[72]
- former de facto partners and the surviving de facto partner of someone who has died,[73] and
- civil partnerships.[74]

69. Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW) First Print, sch 1 [23].
70. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission No 17 to Legislative Assembly Committee on Community Services, Inquiry into Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (12 April 2024) 4–5.
71. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 39, s 4(1) definition of "marital or domestic status"; Interpretation Act 1987 (NSW) s 21C.
72. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4 definition of "marital or relationship status".
73. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4 definition of "relationship status".
74. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "relationship status"; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 2, dictionary definition of "relationship status"; Legislation Act 2001 (ACT) s 169.

4.80 Some of these discrimination laws use the expression "relationship status".[75] Some people may consider this to be a more inclusive and modern expression.

Question 4.5: Discrimination based on marital or domestic status

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "marital or domestic status"?

Race

4.81 The ADA protects against both discrimination and vilification based on race. The ADA defines race to include colour, nationality, descent, ethnic origin, ethno-religious origin, and national origin.[76] While this is a broad definition, preliminary submissions identified some areas that it either does not cover or only covers indirectly.

4.82 We address the issue of "ethno-religious" origin when considering religious discrimination in chapter 5.

Some potential gaps in coverage

4.83 Some suggest amending the definition of race to expressly prohibit discrimination based on caste, immigrant status and language (including someone's accent).

4.84 The ADA does not protect against caste discrimination.[77] Caste is a codified, socio-religious hierarchical class system, which affects people of South Asian backgrounds in Australia.[78]

4.85 Nor does the ADA expressly protect against discrimination based on immigrant status. However, the definition of race includes the related concept of "nationality" which has been interpreted as meaning citizenship.[79] Nationality in terms of citizenship is different from "national origin".[80] The definition of "race" in the ADA also includes "national origin", which refers to where someone was born, the nation

---

75. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(s); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(e).
76. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "race".
77. Coalition Against Caste Discrimination, Preliminary Submission PAD28, 13. See also Periyar Ambedkar Thoughts Circle Australia, Submission SV06, 1; Australian Muslim Advocacy Network, Submission SV19, 3–4.
78. Australian Human Rights Commission, National Anti-Racism Framework Scoping Report 2022 (2022) 73. See also Periyar Ambedkar Thoughts Circle Australia, Submission SV06.
79. SUPRA v Minister for Transport Services [2006] NSWADT 83 [63].
80. SUPRA v Minister for Transport Services [2006] NSWADT 83 [62], citing Macabenta v Minister for Immigration and Multicultural Affairs (1998) 90 FCR 202, 211.

or nations their parents are connected to, and where their parents have made their home.[81]

4.86 In some cases, the race attribute indirectly covers language as a "characteristic" of race.[82] But an express protection could arguably be clearer.[83]

4.87 Reform options could include:

- expanding the definition of "race" to clearly include caste, immigrant status and/or language, or
- creating standalone protected attributes.

4.88 The approach in other states and territories varies. For example:

- In 2024 Queensland passed amendments to add "caste" discrimination to the definition of "race", but the commencement of this change is now uncertain.[84]
- The NT and Tasmania protect immigrant status as part of the definition of race, and Queensland will soon also, although the date of commencement for this change is uncertain. However, the ACT recognises it as a standalone protected attribute.[85]
- The NT recognises "language" as a separate protected attribute. This has the benefit of including "signed language" within its scope.[86]

4.89 It may be clearer to add distinct attributes to cover these issues. On the other hand, the risk of overlap and duplication may increase if additional, related attributes are added to the ADA.

4.90 If immigration status was added as a standalone attribute, or to the definition of race, another issue is whether any specific exceptions would be required. In the ACT, it is lawful to discriminate based on immigration status if the discrimination is

---

81. Ealing London Borough Council v Race Relations Board [1972] AC 342, 346; SUPRA v Minister for Transport Services [2006] NSWADT 83 [57]; Macabenta v Minister for Immigration and Multicultural Affairs (1998) 90 FCR 202, 210.
82. See, eg, Hamzy v Commissioner of Corrective Services NSW [2022] NSWCA 16, 107 NSWLR 544 [55].
83. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 108–109.
84. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 52, amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "race" (uncommenced).
85. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4 definition of "race"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "race"; Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 52, amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "race" (uncommenced); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 84, rec 31.
86. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(ab).

reasonable, having regard to any relevant factors.[87] This allows an employer to consider a person's visa status when offering employment. However, the ACT Government intended that it would not be lawful to refuse someone access to services because they are a refugee.[88]

4.91 In Queensland, a broad exception allows some government bodies to require individuals to have a certain citizenship or visa status to receive assistance, services or support.[89] The QHRC thought it was important to keep this exception.[90]

Recognising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples

4.92 Another issue is whether the definition of race should specifically recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. The Western Australian Law Reform Commission recommended this option should be considered, subject to consultation with First Nations people.[91]

4.93 This might not change the law in a significant way. Aboriginal peoples are already considered a "race" under discrimination law. Protections under both the ADA and the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) extend to them.[92]

4.94 However, a specific reference to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples could be an important statement of community standards. It could also clearly affirm their right to be free from racial discrimination. However, such an amendment should only be made after consultation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Question 4.6: Racial discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "race"?

(2) Are any new attributes required to address potential gaps in the ADA's protections against racial discrimination?

87. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57P.
88. Explanatory Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2016 (ACT) 14.
89. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 106B.
90. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 25.3.
91. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 108.
92. Eatock v Bolt [2011] FCA 1103, 197 FCR 261 [314].

Sex discrimination

4.95 The ADA prohibits sex discrimination. Preliminary submissions suggested changes to the way the ADA describes this attribute and defines its scope.

Gender discrimination and sex discrimination

4.96 One view is that it would be more accurate, and inclusive, for the ADA to refer to "gender" discrimination rather than "sex" discrimination.[93] The Australian Government's Guidelines on Sex and Gender explain the distinction as follows:

- "sex refers to the chromosomal, gonadal and anatomical characteristics associated with biological sex", and
- "gender is part of a person's personal and social identity" and "refers to the way a person feels, presents and is recognised within the community".[94]

4.97 However, the language of sex discrimination has been well-established in Australian law. Only Tasmania lists "gender" as a protected attribute.[95] The QHRC recently recommended against adding a gender attribute, as it thought that separating the concepts of sex and gender could create uncertainty.[96]

Binary and non-binary language

4.98 Another question is whether the ADA should continue to use binary concepts to define sex discrimination.

4.99 The ADA does not define "sex" directly. However, it defines "man" and "woman" as being members of the male sex and female sex, respectively.[97] The tests for sex discrimination also adopt a binary approach, requiring comparisons with "a person of the opposite sex".[98]

4.100 On the other hand, the ADA also recognises the existence of persons of "indeterminate sex".[99] In light of the use of this phrase in the ADA, the High Court concluded that another NSW law "recognises that a person may be other than male or female".[100]

---

93. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 7.
94. Australian Government Guidelines on the Recognition of Sex and Gender (2015) [11], [13] (emphasis omitted).
95. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16.
96. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 272, 280.
97. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 23.
98. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 24(1).
99. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38A(c).
100. NSW Registrar of Births, Deaths and Marriages v Norrie [2014] HCA 11, 250 CLR 490 [18], [46].

4.101 Following amendments in 2013, the Sex Discrimination Act refers to people of a "different sex" instead of people of the "opposite sex".[101] Recent reviews in WA and Queensland recommended against the use of terms such as "opposite gender" or male and female.[102] Despite recent amendments, the Queensland Act still contains references to "male" and "female".[103]

Discrimination based on pregnancy or breastfeeding

4.102 The ADA does not list pregnancy and breastfeeding as distinct protected attributes. Instead, they are dealt with as part of the test for sex discrimination.

4.103 Among other things, the test for direct discrimination covers acts based on:

- someone's sex, or
- a characteristic that people of that sex generally either have or are generally presumed to have.[104]

4.104 The fact that a woman is or may become pregnant, is breastfeeding or may breastfeed, is treated as a "characteristic" that women generally have. In this way, discrimination based on pregnancy or breastfeeding is considered a form of sex discrimination against women. The ADA provides that granting a woman rights or privileges in connection with pregnancy, childbirth or breastfeeding does not constitute sex discrimination against a man.[105]

4.105 Another approach could be to clearly recognise pregnancy and breastfeeding as separate attributes, not tied to sex discrimination. The NSWLRC recommended this in 1999. The NSWLRC thought it would make the law clearer and thought there was wide support for it.[106] Other discrimination laws across Australia include pregnancy as a separate attribute.[107] Some recognise breastfeeding as a separate attribute.[108]

---

101. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 5, s 4 definition of "sexual orientation".
102. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 30; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 280.
103. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 98, s 111.
104. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 24(1)–(1A).
105. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 35.
106. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 31, [5.40], [5.42].
107. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(o); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 10; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(g); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(f); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85T(4).
108. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7AA; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(d); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(l); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(e); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 10A; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(h); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(h); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85T(5), s 87B(1).

Question 4.7: Sex discrimination

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "sex"?

(2) Should the ADA prohibit discrimination based on pregnancy and breastfeeding separately from sex discrimination?

Transgender grounds

4.106 The ADA prohibits discrimination and vilification on "transgender grounds". It defines a transgender person as someone:

- who identifies "as a member of the opposite sex" by living or seeking to live as such
- who has identified "as a member of the opposite sex" by living as such, or
- who, "being of indeterminate sex, identifies as a member of a particular sex by living as a member of that sex".[109]

4.107 This applies whether or not they are a "recognised transgender person", that is, a person whose record of sex has been altered under the relevant law. The reference to a "transgender person" also includes a person being thought of as transgender, whether or not they are "in fact a transgender person".[110]

"Gender identity" as a potential alternative

4.108 Aside from NSW and WA, discrimination laws across Australia include gender identity as a protected attribute.[111]

4.109 The Sex Discrimination Act and s 93Z of the Crimes Act use the expression "gender identity". Both define it as:

> the gender related identity, appearance or mannerisms or other gender related characteristics of a person (whether by way of medical intervention or not), with or without regard to the person's designated sex at birth.[112]

4.110 Courts have found this is broad enough to cover:

---

109. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38A.

110. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "recognised transgender person", s 38A.

111. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 5B; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6; Anti-discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 29; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16; Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 28, rec 29.

112. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4.

- transgender identity (when a person's current gender differs from their assigned sex at birth)
- cisgender identity (when a person's gender corresponds to the sex registered for them at birth), and
- "other kinds and aspects of gender identification".[113]

4.111 Queensland takes another approach, defining gender identity as being:

> (a) the person's internal and individual experience of gender, whether or not it corresponds with the sex assigned to the person at birth; and
>
> (b) without limiting paragraph (a), includes—
>
> (i) the person's personal sense of the body; and
>
> (ii) if freely chosen — modification of the person's bodily appearance or functions by medical, surgical or other means; and
>
> (iii) other expressions of the person's gender, including name, dress, speech and behaviour.[114]

4.112 This aligns with human rights law principles on sexual orientation and gender identity, which were developed by international legal experts.[115]

4.113 One issue is how an attribute of "gender identity" would operate alongside the comparator test for direct discrimination, if this remains.[116] The Federal Court dealt with this in a recent case by defining the "comparator" as a person who identifies as a "different gender identity" to the complainant.[117] However, as we outline in chapter 3, some think the comparator test is too complicated and should be removed.

Redefining "transgender grounds"

4.114 A less far-reaching option could be to keep the expression "transgender grounds", but to redefine it. The original Equality Bill proposed to remove the concept of a "recognised transgender person" from the ADA. It also proposed to redefine "transgender person" as someone who:

- lives as a member of another sex, or
- who identifies as a particular sex that is not exclusively male or female by living as a member of that sex.[118]

---

113. Tickle v Giggle for Girls Pty Ltd (No 2) [2024] FCA 960, 333 IR 296 [74].
114. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "gender identity".
115. The Yogyakarta Principles: Principles on the on the Application of International Human Rights Law in Relation to Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity (2007) 6. See also Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 276–276, rec 22.1.
116. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 5.
117. Tickle v Giggle for Girls Pty Ltd (No 2) [2024] FCA 960, 333 IR 296 [74].
118. Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW) First Print, sch 1 [1], [3]–[5].

4.115 However, as we note above, some advocates of the original Equality Bill intended this to only be an interim measure of protection. More broadly, they expressed a preference for an attribute of "gender identity".[119]

Question 4.8: Discrimination on transgender grounds

What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the protected attribute of "transgender grounds"?

Extending existing protections

4.116 Another related question is whether the existing attributes should be extended in the ways described below.

Past or future attributes

4.117 One reform option could involve extending a feature that already applies to disability and carer discrimination. As noted above, the ADA protects against discrimination based on someone's past or future disability, or their past or future carer's responsibilities.[120] But this only applies to disability and carer discrimination and not generally across all attributes.

4.118 Some other Australian discrimination laws more broadly protect against discrimination based on an attribute that someone had in the past.[121] The LRCWA also recommended protecting against discrimination based on an attribute that someone is planning, or proposing, to adopt in the future.[122]

Relatives and associates of people with protected attributes

4.119 Another option could be to extend protections to relatives and associates of people with a recognised attribute, in all cases. As we explain in chapter 3, the ADA generally protects someone against direct discrimination based on a protected attribute that they, or that their relative or associate, has.[123] However, this does not apply to direct discrimination based on carer's responsibility. And it does not form part of the test for indirect discrimination for any attribute.

---

119. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Assembly, Second Reading Speech, 24 August 2023, 9145; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission No 17 to Legislative Assembly Committee on Community Services, Inquiry into Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (12 April 2024) 5.
120. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49A(c), s 49A(d), s 49S(2).
121. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 7(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 8; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(2).
122. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 14.
123. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 7(1), s 24(1), s 38B(1)(a)–(b), s 49B(1), s 49ZG(1), s 49ZYA(1).

4.120 Adding a specific protected attribute could address this. Other discrimination laws identify being an "associate" of someone with a protected attribute, as a protected attribute itself.[124] This covers relatives and associates under both the direct and indirect discrimination tests. This might more clearly, and generally, protect against discrimination based on having a relationship with someone with a protected attribute.

Question 4.9: Extending existing protections

(1) Should the ADA protect people against discrimination based on any protected attribute they have had in the past or may have in the future?

(2) Should the ADA include an attribute which protects against discrimination based on being a relative or associate of someone with any other protected attribute?

124. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 50.

5. Discrimination: potential new protected attributes

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) only protects against discrimination and vilification based on certain, specified attributes. In this chapter we ask if the ADA should recognise and protect against discrimination based on other attributes.

Principles that could guide reform 66

Identifying the guiding principles 66

Identifying gaps between federal and state law 67

Some options for new protected attributes 70

Irrelevant criminal record 70

Domestic and family violence 72

Health status and irrelevant medical record 73

Industrial activity or political belief or activity 75

Physical features or appearance 77

Religious belief or activity 79

Sex characteristics 82

Sex work, lawful sexual activity and occupation 83

Socio-economic status 86

An alternative approach: an open-ended list 88

5.1 In the previous chapter, we explain that the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) prohibits discrimination based on a limited range of recognised protected attributes. Many preliminary submissions argued that other protected attributes should be recognised.

5.2 In its 1999 review of the ADA, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) thought that changes to the protected attributes would "inevitably follow from changing social attitudes and practice".[1] This can be important to ensure the ADA responds to societal changes and recognises the rights of those most at risk of discrimination.

1. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.8].

However, no new protected attributes have been recognised since discrimination based on carer's responsibilities was added in 2000.

5.3 Discrimination laws in other parts of Australia have been amended more recently to expand the range of protected attributes. Other discrimination and employment laws protect a far wider range of attributes than the ADA. This has led to uneven protection across Australia and significant gaps in protection in NSW.

5.4 In this chapter, we consider whether the ADA should prohibit discrimination based on other attributes. We set out a range of options that we have drawn from preliminary submissions and our research. Other options, that relate closely to existing protected attributes, are profiled in the previous chapter.

5.5 In presenting these options for consideration, we recognise they may not be the only possible options. We welcome suggestions of other attributes that could be added to the ADA's discrimination protections.

Principles that could guide reform

5.6 Before outlining some reform options, we invite you to comment on the principles that could guide consideration of potential new protected attributes. An important consideration is whether there are gaps in protection in state and federal laws.

Identifying the guiding principles

5.7 In its recent review of Queensland's discrimination law, the Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) provided some principles that might also assist to guide reform in NSW. It grouped the attributes protected in Queensland into three main categories. In summary, these protected attributes:

- relate to immutable characteristics, that is, traits a person cannot change
- relate to the characteristics of historically marginalised groups, and/or
- are based on attributes protected under international human rights instruments.[2]

5.8 The QHRC then identified criteria and questions, summarised below, that it thought should guide decisions about whether an attribute should be protected.

2. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 310.

Table 5.1: Possible criteria for including new attributes[3]

| Criteria | Questions |
|---|---|
| Whether there is a gap in protection | ▪ Is there sufficient information to show that people with a particular characteristic need the protection of the Act?▪ Are they already protected under an existing attribute?▪ Are they already protected by other legislation, eg employment legislation? |
| Whether the proposed attribute is comparable to those already covered by the Act | ▪ Is the group of a comparable nature to people represented by the attributes already recognised by the Act?▪ Is the group experiencing discrimination that cannot be reasonably and objectively justified?▪ Is the group vulnerable, having suffered and continuing to suffer marginalisation? |

5.9 We invite your views on whether these criteria are appropriate for NSW, or if other criteria should influence decisions about which attributes to include in the ADA.

Identifying gaps between federal and state law

5.10 One of the issues identified by the QHRC is whether an attribute is already protected by other legislation.

5.11 In our second consultation paper, we will address the issue of federal and state complaint pathways and procedures in detail. However, the relationship between federal and state laws is also important to consider when assessing the extent of any gaps in protected attributes in NSW. The complex relationship means that people with some attributes may be unable to obtain an effective remedy under either NSW or federal discrimination law.

The federal unlawful discrimination jurisdiction

5.12 Under federal discrimination law, "unlawful discrimination" refers to discrimination that breaches the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth), Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act), Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) or the Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth). Together, these Acts cover discrimination based on age, race, colour, descent, national or ethnic origin, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital or relationship status, pregnancy, breastfeeding, family responsibilities or disability.

---

3. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 309–310.

5.13 The Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) can attempt to conciliate complaints of unlawful discrimination. If this is unsuccessful, the complainant can seek a judicial remedy in the Federal Court of Australia or Federal Circuit and Family Court of Australia.[4]

5.14 Someone in NSW who experiences discrimination may be able to make a complaint under either state or federal discrimination law, depending on their respective coverage (including any relevant exceptions).

5.15 There are differences between the coverage of the ADA and federal discrimination law. Sometimes, there are overlaps. Other times, federal law covers a gap in the ADA. An example is bisexuality, which is protected by the federal definition of sexual orientation, but which is not protected by the ADA.

Other federal complaint pathways

5.16 The AHRC has separate powers to inquire into, and attempt to conciliate, complaints alleging:

- discrimination in employment and occupation, as part of its functions relating to equal opportunity in employment
- systemic discrimination, and
- acts or practices of the Commonwealth that breach particular human rights.[5]

5.17 These powers cover a wide range of attributes recognised in international human rights and labour law instruments, many of which are not covered in federal discrimination law. For instance, the equal opportunity jurisdiction includes the power to inquire into complaints about discrimination based on attributes such as religion, political opinion, medical record, irrelevant criminal record and trade union activity.[6]

5.18 Where there is a gap in the attributes protected by the ADA or in federal discrimination law, people in NSW may be able to use these pathways to complain to the AHRC. But there are limits to what they can achieve in terms of seeking an effective remedy.

5.19 This is because such complaints cannot be taken to court if conciliation is unsuccessful. Instead, the AHRC can report to the Minister if it considers the act or

---

4. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 11(1)(aa), s 46PO.
5. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3(1) definition of "discrimination", s 31(b), s 35L, s 11(1)(f); Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6.
6. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3(1) definition of "discrimination"; Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6.

practice constitutes discrimination or is inconsistent with, or contrary to any human right.[7]

Adverse action in employment under the Fair Work Act

5.20 Another gap is created by the interplay of the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (Fair Work Act) and the ADA. The Fair Work Act protects against "adverse action" in employment based on a broader range of personal attributes than the ADA or federal discrimination law. That is:

> race, colour, sex, sexual orientation, breastfeeding, gender identity, intersex status, age, physical or mental disability, marital status, family or carer's responsibilities, subjection to family and domestic violence, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin.[8]

5.21 Adverse action includes a range of conduct against an employee, such as:

- dismissing them
- injuring them in their employment
- altering their position to their prejudice, and
- discriminating between them and other employees.[9]

5.22 However, an exception provides that this does not apply to conduct that is not unlawful under any anti-discrimination law in force where the conduct occurs.[10] If neither the ADA nor federal discrimination law prohibits discrimination based on these attributes, people in NSW cannot use the Fair Work Act to complain about certain forms of adverse action in employment based such attributes either. For instance, neither the ADA nor federal discrimination law covers discrimination based on family and domestic violence, religion, political opinion and social origin.

5.23 This means people in NSW can be doubly disadvantaged compared to people in other states and territories in which these attributes are protected.

5.24 Adding certain attributes to the ADA might enliven the employment protections under the Fair Work Act relating to that attribute (subject to any exceptions). This will need to be considered carefully to avoid further complexity and inconsistency between the jurisdictions. We will return to this issue in our second consultation paper.

5.25 This exception does not apply to other related protections in the Fair Work Act. This includes the prohibition on taking adverse action against someone because they:

---

7. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 11(1)(f), s 20A, s 31(b), s 31(e), s 32A.
8. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1).
9. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 342(1) item 1.
10. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(2), s 723. See McIntyre v Special Broadcasting Services Corporation [2015] FWC 6768; Krcho v University of NSW [2021] FWCFB 350.

- are or are not a member of an industrial association, or
- engage, propose to engage, or do not engage, in industrial activity.[11]

5.26 In addition, the exception does not apply to the prohibition on the termination of employment based on the broad list of attributes we mention above.[12]

Question 5.1: Guiding principles

What principles should guide decisions about what, if any, new attributes should be added to the ADA?

Some options for new protected attributes

5.27 In preliminary submissions, we received a range of suggestions for possible new protected attributes. We outline these below, highlighting potential considerations relating to their expression, definitions and exceptions drawn from other laws and law reform processes. We encourage you to comment on these options and to suggest others.

Irrelevant criminal record

5.28 In preliminary submissions, we heard concerns that discrimination based on irrelevant criminal record can make it hard to enter the workforce. This form of discrimination can affect some groups disproportionately, such as Aboriginal people, sex workers and gender diverse communities, due to their high level of contact with the criminal justice system.[13]

5.29 Discrimination based on irrelevant criminal record is unlawful in the Australian Capital Territory (ACT), the Northern Territory (NT) and Tasmania.[14] The AHRC says this should be unlawful under federal discrimination law too, with judicial remedies available.[15] Currently, the AHRC can inquire into and try to conciliate complaints of discrimination at work based on irrelevant criminal record.[16] However, as we note above, judicial remedies are not available for such complaints.

---

11. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 346.
12. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 772(1)(f).
13. See, eg, HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 10; Inner City Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD40, 2; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 266.
14. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(q); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(k); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(q).
15. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 262.
16. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 31(b); Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6(a)(iii).

5.30 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended against including lapsed criminal convictions as an attribute. It said there was no reason for the ADA to cover criminal records, as other laws dealt with spent convictions and when a criminal record must be disclosed.[17]

5.31 In 2024, the Queensland Parliament enacted reforms to add "irrelevant criminal record" as a protected attribute. This, and other amendments to Queensland's discrimination law, was due to commence on 1 July 2025.[18] However, the current Queensland Government decided to defer the commencement of all these amendments to conduct further consultations. It expressed concerns that the attribute of "irrelevant criminal record" could affect government decision-making on issues such as weapons licensing, police protection notices or security provider licensing.[19]

Models for defining the scope

5.32 If NSW was to recognise irrelevant criminal record as a protected attribute, other states and territories might provide models. For instance, the ACT defines "irrelevant criminal record" to include:

- a record relating to an alleged offence where the proceedings were not finalised
- a record relating to an alleged offence where the individual was acquitted
- instances where the individual was served with an infringement notice
- instances where the individual had a conviction for an offence, but the circumstances of the offence were not directly relevant to the situation in which discrimination arose, and
- spent convictions (which includes extinguished homosexual convictions).[20]

5.33 An issue is how the ADA might deal with discrimination based on expunged convictions for homosexuality offences, which have now been repealed. One option is to treat extinguished or expunged homosexual convictions as "irrelevant criminal records", as in the ACT, the NT and Tasmania.[21]

---

17. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) Report 92 (1999) [5.236]. See also Criminal Records Act 1991 (NSW) s 8, s 9, s 12.
18. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(pe) (uncommenced).
19. D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 7 April 2024).
20. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 2, dictionary definition of "irrelevant criminal record"; Spent Convictions Act 2000 (ACT) pt 3A.
21. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 2, dictionary definition of "irrelevant criminal record"; Spent Convictions Act 2000 (ACT) pt 3A; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "irrelevant

5.34 Alternatively, "expunged homosexual conviction" could be recognised as a distinct attribute, as in Victoria.[22] The former Queensland Government preferred this approach because expunged homosexual offence convictions should never have existed. This differentiates them from other convictions.[23]

Possible exceptions

5.35 Another issue is whether exceptions to discrimination based on "irrelevant criminal record" are needed to balance competing interests. For instance, exceptions apply elsewhere relating to:

- employment that involves working with vulnerable people, if the discrimination is reasonably necessary to protect their wellbeing[24]
- employment that involves working with children if the discrimination is reasonably necessary to protect children's wellbeing,[25] or
- providing accommodation, where it is reasonably necessary to protect the wellbeing of nearby residents.[26]

Domestic and family violence

5.36 We heard that victim-survivors of domestic and family violence can experience a range of discriminatory practices. This includes in the areas of accommodation, work and education.[27]

5.37 South Australia, the ACT and the NT protect against discrimination based on domestic or family violence.[28] It is also covered by the Fair Work Act, but this criminal record", s 19(1)(q); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "irrelevant criminal record", s 16(q). See also Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 316–317, rec 29.1; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 90, rec 36.

---

22. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(pa), s 6(pb).
23. Queensland Parliament, Community Safety and Legal Affairs Committee, Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Bill 2024, Report No 13 (2024) 7, rec 29; Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(pd)–(pe) (uncommenced).
24. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 37(1).
25. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 50.
26. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 19, rec 89.
27. See, eg, Law Society of NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD31, 9; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 15.
28. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85T(8); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(x); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(jb). See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 55, 124.

protection against discrimination does not extend to NSW (as we discuss above).[29] The Queensland Parliament passed amendments in 2024 to add this attribute but, as we note above, the commencement date is now uncertain.[30]

5.38 Federally, the AHRC broadly supported a new prohibition against discrimination based on domestic and family violence. However, it thought the framing of any such prohibition needed further consideration.[31]

5.39 Another option is to include protections for people who have been subjected to sexual violence more generally.[32] This could go beyond the domestic and family violence context. It could protect a wider range of people who may be vulnerable to experiencing discrimination.

Health status and irrelevant medical record

5.40 Two other potential protected attributes are "health status" and "irrelevant medical history". These could be added to the ADA separately from the disability attribute, which we outline in chapter 4. While this could expand protections, another view is that it might lead to overlaps with disability discrimination.

Health status

5.41 A new "health status" attribute might cover discrimination based on a range factors, for instance mental health status, blood borne virus status, and/or sexually transmissible infection status. Some argue this could:

- be a more appropriate way of recognising the rights of people with HIV/AIDS, who may not consider having HIV/AIDS to be a disability, and
- protect people who experience episodic mental health issues, which may not be covered clearly by the definition of disability.[33]

5.42 Another view is that a "health status" attribute should protect people who use drugs and/or alcohol, regardless of their degree of use, to address the discrimination and stigma they face.[34]

5.43 In NSW, the ADA's definition of disability likely covers the first three of these conditions. It is also broad enough to capture drug or alcohol addiction, in some

---

29. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1).
30. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(pa) (uncommenced).
31. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 271.
32. Full Stop Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD70, 3.
33. See, eg, HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 8.
34. NSW Users and AIDS Association, Preliminary Submission PAD52, 6.

cases.[35] This suggests that a new "health status" attribute may lead to a degree of overlapping coverage. The QHRC recently recommended against a separate health status attribute because such overlaps could create further complexity.[36]

Irrelevant medical record

5.44 Some instances of discrimination based on medical history may also be considered disability discrimination. This could happen where, for example, someone's medical history involves records about a disability they either had or were thought to have, or they may have in the future.[37]

5.45 However, an "irrelevant medical record" attribute may provide clearer protections. It could also protect against discrimination that goes beyond disability discrimination.

5.46 This is recognised as a protected attribute in discrimination law in Tasmania and the NT.[38] The AHRC can inquire into employment discrimination based on this attribute as part of its equal opportunity function.[39] However, as we note above, judicial remedies are not available for such complaints.

5.47 The Queensland Parliament passed amendments in 2024 to cover discrimination based on medical records that are "not directly relevant to the situation in which the record or part of the record is being considered".[40] However, the commencement date is now uncertain.

5.48 The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) similarly recommended adding this attribute to WA's discrimination law and considered it should also cover workers' compensation history. In its view, people may be reluctant to make valid workers' compensation claims if they think the claims may be disclosed to future employers.[41]

---

35. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "disability"; Marsden v HREOC [2000] FCA 1619 [54]; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.92]. But see Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49PA.
36. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 271.
37. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of disability, s 49A.
38. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(r); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(p).
39. Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6(a)(ii); Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 31(b).
40. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3), s 52(2), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(pf), sch 1 definition of "irrelevant medical record" (uncommenced).
41. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 93, rec 37–38.

Industrial activity or political belief or activity

5.49 Another idea could be to protect against discrimination based on industrial activity, and/or political belief or activity. We heard this could prevent people being targeted at work because of their involvement in such activities.[42]

Industrial activity

5.50 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended against adding industrial activity or trade union membership to the ADA as a protected attribute. It concluded this was already protected by industrial laws.[43]

5.51 However, discrimination laws in most other states and territories prohibit discrimination based on:

- industrial activity[44]
- trade union activity,[45] or
- trade union or employer association activity.[46]

5.52 Federally, the AHRC can inquire into complaints about discrimination based on trade union activity as part of its functions relating to equal opportunity in employment.[47] However, federal judicial remedies do not apply.

5.53 As we note above, the Fair Work Act also protects against adverse action against someone because they:

- are or are not a member of an industrial association, or
- engage, propose to engage, or do not engage, in industrial activity.[48]

5.54 In the discrimination laws of other states and territories, this attribute generally covers a range of activities, including:

- being a member of an organisation, as well as proposing or refusing to join one
- establishing or forming, or being involved in establishing or forming, an organisation

---

42. Unions NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD90, 4–5.
43. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.221]–[5.222].
44. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(f); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(l); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(j).
45. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(k).
46. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(k).
47. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 31(b); Australian Human Rights Commission Regulations 2019 (Cth) reg 6(a)(viii).
48. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 346.

- participating in, organising, encouraging, assisting or promoting lawful industrial activity (or proposing to)
- not participating in, or refusing to participate in, lawful industrial activity, and
- representing or advancing the views, claims or interests of members of an industrial organisation or industrial association.[49]

5.55 Tasmania specifically permits discrimination in employment based on industrial activity if it is based on a genuine occupational requirement relating to a particular position.[50]

Political belief, opinion or activity

5.56 International human rights law prohibits discrimination based on political or other opinion.[51] Some laws in Australia also protect against this:

- While the expressions vary, some other states and territories protect against discrimination based on political belief or activity.[52]
- The AHRC can receive complaints of discrimination in employment based on this attribute as part of its equal opportunity jurisdiction.[53] However, judicial remedies do not apply.
- The Fair Work Act also protects against adverse action based on political opinion.[54] An exception to this currently applies in NSW, for the reasons we note above.

5.57 Although the definitions in these laws differ, this attribute generally includes:

- having, or not having, a political conviction, belief, opinion or affiliation, and
- engaging, or not engaging in, political activity.[55]

---

49. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "industrial activity"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "industrial activity"; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary, definition of "industrial activity". See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 85–86, rec 33.
50. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 49.
51. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 2(1); International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976) art 2(2).
52. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(j); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(m)–(n); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(k); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(n); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(n); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 53.
53. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3 definition of "discrimination", s 31(b).
54. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1).
55. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(n), dictionary definition of "political conviction". See also Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "political belief or activity"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "political belief or affiliation"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(5), s 19(1)(n).

5.58 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended including "political opinion" as a protected attribute in the ADA.[56]

5.59 If NSW was to recognise this as a protected attribute, one issue is what kinds of beliefs or opinions should be protected. For instance:

- the ACT Tribunal found that "political" means "concerned with the 'processes of government'" or "bearing on government"[57]
- the NSWLRC recommended defining "political opinion" as opinions about the role of the state and state power,[58] and
- Victoria confines the protection to a "lawful political belief" and "lawful political activity".[59]

5.60 Some laws permit discrimination based on this attribute in relation to employment in political roles (such as ministerial advisors or employees of political parties).[60] However, the LRCWA said this should only apply when:

- holding or not holding a political conviction, or engaging (or failing to engage) in any lawful political activities, is an inherent requirement of the job
- the person cannot comply with the requirement because of their political conviction, and
- it is reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances.[61]

5.61 Victoria has two additional exceptions, which apply to clubs established principally for a political purpose and local councillors.[62] In 1999, the NSWLRC supported these exceptions.[63]

Physical features or appearance

5.62 Another option is to protect against discrimination based on physical features or appearance.

---

56. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 39.
57. Kovac v Australian Croatian Club Ltd [2014] ACAT 41 [70].
58. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 39.
59. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "political belief or activity".
60. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 45; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 66(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 53; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 27.
61. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 201–202, rec 92.
62. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 66A, s 73–74.
63. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 82, rec 83.

5.63 While this may overlap with existing protections against disability discrimination, it could also go beyond them. For instance, a new attribute could apply more generally to protect against discrimination based on height, weight, size or other bodily features.[64]

5.64 In Victoria, this attribute has been interpreted broadly to include characteristics that a person has from birth or that emerge later in life. It also protects against discrimination based on physical features that come from deliberate bodily alterations, such as tattoos.[65]

5.65 However, an issue is whether the law should prohibit discrimination against someone based on physical features they have chosen to adopt. The QHRC concluded it was not necessary to protect against discrimination based on chosen alterations. It said that people with tattoos, certain hairstyles or cosmetic procedures do not experience broader structural disadvantage, unless this aspect of their appearance relates to another existing attribute (such as race).[66] The recent Queensland amendments take a similar approach but, as we note above, the commencement of these changes is uncertain.[67]

5.66 Some other exceptions could also be considered. For instance, discrimination based on physical features or appearance is allowed elsewhere if:

- it is necessary to protect health, safety, or property[68]
- there is a genuine occupational requirement, for example, in forms of employment such as modelling,[69] or
- welfare services are being provided to people with particular physical features.[70]

5.67 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended against including this attribute in the ADA. It said the concept could not be articulated clearly.[71]

---

64. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "physical features"; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "physical features".
65. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 327.
66. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 30, 328. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 99, rec 41–42.
67. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 52(2), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) dictionary, definition of "physical appearance" (uncommenced).
68. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57R; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 86(1).
69. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 26(4).
70. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 203, rec 93.
71. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.230].

Religious belief or activity

5.68 International human rights law contains a right to non-discrimination based on religion.[72] In most Australian states and territories, it is unlawful to discriminate based on religious belief, conviction and/or activity.[73] Federally, the AHRC can inquire into complaints based on religious discrimination in work as part of its equal opportunity function, but judicial remedies are not available.[74]

5.69 The ADA does not contain a protected attribute that addresses religious discrimination. The Fair Work Act's protections against adverse action based on religion do not apply in NSW, for the reasons we outline above.[75] Many think this creates a significant gap in protection in NSW.

Existing religious protections

5.70 In the ADA, the definition of racial discrimination provides limited and indirect protections for religion. Discrimination based on "ethno-religious origin" is a form of racial discrimination. This term was added to the ADA to clarify that ethno-religious groups, such as members of the Jewish, Islamic and Sikh faiths, are protected against racial vilification and discrimination.[76]

5.71 However, "ethno-religious origin" has been interpreted inconsistently. One view is that it protects against discrimination based on being a Muslim from a particular national grouping, but not against discrimination based on being a member of that religion generally.[77] Other Tribunal decisions have not drawn this clear line, making it hard for Anti-Discrimination NSW to advise the public clearly about their rights.[78]

5.72 The complex system of exceptions is another way the ADA indirectly protects freedom of religion. For instance, religious organisations and private schools have broad exceptions from the ADA. We outline these in chapter 7.

---

72. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 2(1); International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976) art 2(2).
73. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(n); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(i); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(o); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(m); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(t); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 53.
74. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3(1) definition of "discrimination", s 31(b).
75. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1).
76. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Council, Second Reading Speech, 4 May 1994, 1827.
77. See, eg, Khan v Commissioner of Corrective Services [2002] NSWADT 131 [20]; Ekermawi v Nine Network Australia Pty Ltd [2019] NSWCATAD 29 [32], [102].
78. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 9.

5.73 Previous reviews have recommended that specific protections against religious discrimination should be introduced in NSW and federal law.[79] However, attempts at enacting such protections have so far been unsuccessful.

Defining any new protected attribute

5.74 If NSW were to protect against religious discrimination, other parts of the ADA and other laws provide examples of approaches that could be adopted or adapted.

5.75 While the ADA does not prohibit religious discrimination, it does prohibit religious vilification. It is unlawful to publicly incite hatred towards, serious contempt for or severe ridicule of an individual or a group of people based on their:

- religious belief or affiliation (or lack of), or
- engagement, or lack of engagement, in religious activity.[80]

5.76 The ADA does not define "religious belief", "religious affiliation" or "religious activity". As we discuss in chapter 8, we heard many concerns about this approach.

5.77 Some preliminary submissions suggest that the ADA's religious vilification protection should use the definitions in s 93Z of the Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) instead.[81] Section 93Z makes it an offence to publicly threaten or incite violence based on a specific religious belief or affiliation. This is defined as "holding or not holding a religious belief or view". It appears to be narrower than the protection offered in the ADA. It only includes affiliation with a religious group if this amounts to holding a religious belief or view and does not include engaging in a religious activity.

5.78 Other states and territories may also provide models. Their protections against discrimination based on religious belief and/or activity, or religious conviction generally cover:

- holding or not holding a religious belief, and
- engaging, or not engaging, in religious activity.[82]

---

79. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) 95, rec 16; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 38; Parliament of NSW, Joint Select Committee, Inquiry into the Anti-Discrimination Amendment (Religious Freedoms and Equality) Bill 2020, Report (2021) 2–3, rec 1.
80. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZE(1).
81. See, eg, Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 11. See also Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 4, rec 1.
82. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "religious belief or activity"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "religious activity", definition of "religious belief"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "religious activity", definition of "religious belief or affiliation"; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "religious conviction".

5.79 Some laws only prohibit discrimination based on "lawful" religious activities and/or beliefs.[83] The ADA's prohibition on religious vilification does not have this qualification. However, one view is that this is unnecessary, as lawfulness is part of the well-established judicial definition of "religion".[84]

5.80 Developing this new attribute could also provide an opportunity to recognise the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. The ACT recognises the cultural heritage and distinct spiritual practices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. In the NT, "religious belief or activity" includes "Aboriginal spiritual belief or activity".[85] In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended that a similar form of recognition be part of a new religious belief attribute.[86]

5.81 Other characteristics related to religion could also be protected. For instance, the LRCWA recently recommended expressly protecting against discrimination based on religious appearance or dress.[87]

5.82 An alternative could be to add a broader attribute that protects freedom of thought, conscience and religion. The AHRC recommended adding this to federal discrimination law.[88] This is the approach in the UK, where the protected attribute of "religion or belief" includes philosophical beliefs.[89]

The relationship with race discrimination

5.83 If new protections against religious discrimination are added, it might not be necessary to keep "ethno-religious origin" in the definition of race. The NSWLRC recommended in 1999 that it be removed, preferring to expressly protect against religious discrimination instead.[90]

5.84 But there may be benefits in keeping "ethno-religious" origin in the definition of "race". Arguably, having both could provide broad protections to people of faith.[91]

---

83. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(n), s 4(1) definition of "religious belief or activity"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(i), sch 1 definition of "religious activity".
84. Church of the New Faith v Commissioner of Pay-Roll Tax (Vic) (1983)154 CLR 120, 136.
85. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "religious conviction"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(4).
86. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 38.
87. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 112, rec 51. See also Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85ZN.
88. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 261–262.
89. Explanatory Notes, Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 10(2), [51]–[52].
90. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.14], rec 30.
91. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 106–107.

Exceptions

5.85 If NSW adds a new protected attribute, the question of exceptions will need to be carefully considered. The interaction between any new protections against religious discrimination and other protected attributes, such as sex, sexual orientation and gender identity, is likely to be complicated.

5.86 Given this, we consider the existing exceptions relating to religious belief in greater detail in chapter 7. These include exceptions for private educational authorities, charities, adoption services and religious bodies.

Sex characteristics

5.87 Unlike most other Australian discrimination laws, the ADA does not protect against discrimination or vilification based on having innate variations of sex characteristics.[92] Many preliminary submissions told us it should. We heard that people with innate variations of sex characteristics regularly experience discrimination, including in employment and schools.[93]

5.88 The criminal vilification offence in the Crimes Act provides one option for expressing and defining this attribute. Under s 93Z of the Crimes Act, it is an offence to publicly threaten or incite violence towards an individual or group because they are of intersex status. This is defined as having physical, hormonal or genetic features that are:

- neither wholly female nor wholly male
- a combination of female and male, or
- neither female nor male.[94]

5.89 For consistency with the criminal law, this definition could be adopted in the ADA. The Sex Discrimination Act and the Fair Work Act also use it.[95]

5.90 However, other expressions and definitions may be more widely accepted by people entitled to this protection. In particular, the attribute of "sex characteristics"

---

92. See Equal Opportunity Act (2010) (Vic) s 6(oa); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(v); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 5C; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 29; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(eb); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(ca); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(o). See also Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1).
93. Intersex Human Rights Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD02, 18.
94. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5) definition of "intersex status".
95. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4 definition of "intersex status", s 5C; Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 12 definition of "intersex status", s 351(1), s 772(1)(f).

reflects the terminology and definitions developed by international human rights law experts.[96]

5.91 Several other states and territories already protect against discrimination based on sex characteristics. They define this as "a person's physical features relating to sex", including:

- genitalia and other sexual and reproductive parts of the person's anatomy, and
- the person's chromosomes, hormones and secondary physical features emerging as a result of puberty.[97]

5.92 However, the interaction between a protected attribute of "sex characteristics" and the existing test for direct discrimination, if unchanged, might cause complications. As everyone has sex characteristics, it might be hard to identify an appropriate comparator. As such, some argue the ADA may not effectively protect people with innate variations of sex characteristics if the comparator test is kept.[98]

5.93 As first introduced, the Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW) (Equality Bill) proposed to protect people with "a variation of sex characteristics", or those thought to have this. This would have been defined as "a person who has an innate variation of primary or secondary sex characteristics that differ from norms for female or male bodies".[99] This was not enacted. Other reforms were passed that refer to "variations of sex characteristics", without defining this term.[100]

Sex work, lawful sexual activity and occupation

5.94 Sex work has been mostly decriminalised in NSW for almost 30 years. However, we heard that sex workers regularly experience discrimination in many areas of life, including accommodation, employment, and accessing financial services.[101]

---

96. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 315, citing The Yogyakarta Principles Plus 10 (adopted 10 November 2017, Geneva) 7. See also Intersex Human Rights Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD02, 8.
97. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(v) dictionary definition of "sex characteristics"; Equal Opportunity Act (2010) (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "sex characteristics"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "sex characteristics"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "sex characteristics"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "sex characteristics". See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 116, rec 52, rec 53.
98. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 8.
99. Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW), First Print, sch 1 [13].
100. See, eg, Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Act 2024 (NSW) sch 2 [1], amending Children and Young Persons (Care and Protection) Act 1998 (NSW) s 9(2)(b) (to commence 1 July 2025).
101. See, eg, Respect Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD57, 2, 4.

5.95 Discrimination laws in other states and territories could provide models for reform. Options include prohibiting discrimination based on sex work, lawful sexual activity or, more broadly, based on profession, trade, occupation or calling.

Protections specifically for sex workers

5.96 The first option could be to specifically prohibit discrimination against sex workers. Queensland defines "sex work activity" to cover adults who provide, for payment or reward, services that involve:

- participating in a sexual activity with another person, or
- the use or display of their body for the sexual arousal or gratification of another person.

This includes people who currently provide such services or who have done so in the past.[102]

5.97 This is not confined to "lawful" sex work activity. This word was avoided to include people who work outside the licenced sector.[103]

5.98 In NSW, the Equality Bill originally proposed to prohibit discrimination based on being, or previously being, a sex worker (that is, a "person who provides sexual services on a commercial basis").[104]

Protections for lawful sexual activity

5.99 Another approach, from Tasmania and Victoria, could be to prohibit discrimination based on lawful sexual activity. This includes engaging, not engaging or refusing to engage in lawful sexual activity.[105] This would also protect against discrimination based on any other forms of lawful sexual activity, in addition to sex work.

5.100 An issue is whether there should be any exceptions to this prohibition. As part of sex worker decriminalisation processes, Victoria and Queensland recently repealed exceptions that allowed a person to refuse accommodation to someone who intended to use it for lawful commercial sexual activity.[106] Victoria did this to

---

102. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(l), sch 1 definition of "sex work activity". See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "sex work", s 19(1)(ec).
103. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 290.
104. Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW), First Print, sch 1 [39].
105. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "sexual activity"; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 4(1) definition of "lawful sexual activity".
106. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 62, repealed by Sex Work Decriminalisation Act 2022 (Vic) s 36; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 106C, repealed by Criminal Code (Decriminalising Sex Work) and Other Legislation Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 5.

address discrimination against sex workers in accommodation settings.[107] Queensland made the change because it is consistent with decriminalisation, and it sought to reduce the stigma and discrimination experienced by sex workers.[108]

5.101 In 2022 the LRCWA considered that such an exception remained necessary in WA, where sex work is generally unlawful.[109]

A wider protection: profession, trade, occupation or calling

5.102 Prohibiting discrimination based on profession, trade, occupation or calling would be an even wider option. The ACT and Victoria have this model.[110] This attribute could apply generally, protecting a wide range of people against discrimination based on the work they do.

5.103 Although it has a wide application, Victoria added this specifically to protect sex workers.[111] As we note above, it also has a "lawful sexual activity" attribute that protects other forms of sexual activity in addition to lawful sex work. If NSW introduced an attribute to protect profession, trade, occupation or calling, it could clarify in a definition that sex work is an occupation.

5.104 While this is a broad protection, some exceptions may be necessary. For instance, Victoria permits discrimination in employment based on this attribute if:

- experience in a particular profession is a genuine occupational requirement, and
- it is reasonable to discriminate, on that basis, in the circumstances.[112]

5.105 The ACT permits discrimination based on profession, trade, occupation or calling if:

- the profession is relevant to the "transaction", and
- the discrimination is reasonable in the circumstances.[113]

---

107. Explanatory Memorandum, Sex Work Decriminalisation Bill 2021 (Vic) cl 36.
108. Queensland Law Reform Commission, A Decriminalised Sex-Work Industry for Queensland, Report (2023) vol 1 [4.95], [4.97].
109. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 94. But see Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 39, rec 90.
110. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(la); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(p).
111. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 6(la); Explanatory Memorandum, Sex Work Decriminalisation Bill 2021 (Vic) cl 34.]
112. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 26(5).
113. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57N.

Socio-economic status

5.106 Some other Australian states and territories prohibit discrimination based on certain features relating to socio-economic status. Adding this to the ADA could help protect the rights of some of the most vulnerable members of the community.

Homelessness or accommodation status

5.107 Discrimination based on "accommodation status" is unlawful in the ACT and the NT. Broadly speaking, this covers:

- tenants, boarders, lodgers or licensees
- people experiencing homelessness or transient forms of accommodation, and
- residents in aged care facilities, or in disability or supported care accommodation.[114]

5.108 In recommending this protection, the ACT Law Reform Advisory Council acknowledged the experiences of people with no fixed address or secure accommodation. For example, the Council reported that some people have been told that they cannot make a doctor's appointment until they have a permanent address.[115]

5.109 However, there may be scope for some exceptions to this protection. In the ACT, it is it not unlawful to discriminate based on accommodation status where this is reasonable, having regard to any relevant factors.[116] This was added to allow certain conduct, like looking at someone's rental history when deciding whether to rent accommodation to them.[117]

5.110 The Queensland amendments will, upon commencement, prohibit discrimination based on "homelessness".[118] The narrower approach was taken to clearly protect this disadvantaged group.[119]

---

114. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "accommodation status", s 19(1)(ea); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7(1)(a) dictionary definition of "accommodation status". See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 67–68, rec 15, rec 16, rec 17.
115. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 79.
116. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 26(2). See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 195, rec 86.
117. Explanatory Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2016 (ACT) cl 22.
118. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 7(3), inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7(pb) (uncommenced).
119. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 337–338, rec 32.

Employment status

5.111 The ACT and the NT also prohibit discrimination based on employment status. This includes:

- being unemployed
- receiving a pension or another social security benefit
- receiving compensation
- being employed on a part-time, casual or temporary basis, and
- undertaking shift or contract work.[120]

5.112 The LRCWA also recommended introducing this protection. Among other reasons, it recognised that the growing reliance on non-standard work arrangements, such as gig economy work, could increase opportunities for discrimination.[121]

5.113 However, exceptions may also be required to balance different interests. The ACT permits discrimination against applicants and employees based on employment status where reasonable, having regard to any relevant factors.[122] For example, if an agent looked at an applicant's work history when assessing their suitability for employment.[123]

Social origin or status

5.114 International human rights law also contains a right to non-discrimination based on social origin.[124] We received some suggestions that the ADA should prohibit discrimination based on social origin or status.[125] This could apply, for instance, where former students of exclusive schools receive preferential treatment in hiring decisions.[126]

5.115 Discrimination based on social origin is addressed in a limited way under federal laws. The Fair Work Act prohibits adverse action because of "social origin" but, as

---

120. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "employment status"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "employment status".
121. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 75–76, rec 23, rec 24.
122. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57O. See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 35A.
123. Explanatory Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2016 (ACT) cl 27.
124. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 2(1); International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976) art 2(2).
125. See, eg, M Thornton, Preliminary Submission PAD59, 1–2; Women's Legal Service NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD55, 4; HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 12.
126. Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 18–19.

we explain above, this does not apply in NSW currently.[127] While complaints can be made to the AHRC about discrimination in employment based on social origin, this does not include access to judicial remedies.[128]

5.116 However, discrimination based on social origin is not prohibited by other states and territories. Reviews in other states have not supported adding it as a protected attribute. Their reasons include that the attribute is too broad and uncertain, there is not enough evidence about what it is designed to address, and it lacks community support.[129]

5.117 In 1999, the NSWLRC considered that social status should not be added as an attribute on the basis that there was no evidence that discrimination based on social origin was occurring.[130]

Question 5.2: Potential new attributes

(1) Should any protected attributes be added to the prohibition on discrimination in the ADA? If so, what should be added and why?

(2) How should each of the new attributes that you have identified above be defined and expressed?

(3) If any of new attributes were to be added to the ADA, would any new attribute-specific exceptions be required?

An alternative approach: an open-ended list

5.118 Currently, discrimination is only unlawful under the ADA if it is based on a recognised attribute. The only way to protect against other forms of discrimination is if NSW Parliament enacts legislation to change the ADA. This can take time, and may mean that the law does not keep up with changing community attitudes.

5.119 A more flexible alternative could be to enact a non-exhaustive list of attributes. This might prohibit discrimination based on:

- the protected attributes specifically recognised in the legislation, and
- any other attributes that meet certain criteria.

---

127. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(1). But see the protections against termination: s 772(1)(f).
128. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 3(1) definition of "discrimination", s 31(b).
129. Victoria, Department of Justice, An Equality Act for a Fairer Victoria: Equal Opportunity Review, Final Report (2008) rec 47, 95–98; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 337; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, R*eview of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA)*, Project 111, Final Report (2022) 118–119.
130. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.248].

5.120 In South Africa, for instance, discrimination is prohibited based on race, gender, sex, pregnancy, marital status, ethnic or social origin, colour, sexual orientation, age, disability, religion, conscience, belief, culture, language, birth or HIV/AIDS status. The legislation also prohibits discrimination based on any other attribute, where discrimination based on that attribute:

- causes or perpetuates systemic disadvantage
- undermines human dignity, or
- adversely affects the equal enjoyment of rights and freedoms in a serious manner that is comparable to discrimination based on the attributes set out above.[131]

5.121 Similarly, international human rights law prohibits discrimination based on an undefined category of "other status".[132]

5.122 On the other hand, recent reviews of other discrimination laws have not supported the concept of an open-ended list. Their concerns included that this approach could be uncertain and complex, particularly for duty holders.[133]

Question 5.3: An open-ended list

Should the list of attributes in the ADA be open-ended to allow other attributes to be protected? Why or why not?

131. See, eg, Promotion of Equality and Prevention of Unfair Discrimination Act 2000 (South Africa) s 1(1)(xxii) definition of "prohibited grounds".

132. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 2(1); International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976) art 2(2).

133. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 311; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 271; ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 56.

6. Discrimination: Areas of public life

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) defines the areas of public life in which discrimination is unlawful. It also includes exceptions that apply to specific protected areas. We ask if the scope of any of these existing areas should change and if any new areas should be recognised.

Discrimination in work 93

Issues relating to coverage 94

Exceptions to discrimination in work 96

Education 103

Issues relating to coverage 103

Exceptions to discrimination in education 104

The provision of goods and services 106

Issues relating to coverage 106

Exceptions for superannuation services and insurance 109

Other exceptions to discrimination in goods and services 113

Accommodation 114

Issues relating to coverage 114

Exceptions to discrimination in accommodation 115

Registered clubs 117

Issues relating to coverage 117

Exceptions to discrimination by registered clubs 118

Protecting all attributes in all areas 120

Other potential protected areas 121

A broader application to all areas of public life 121

Disposal of interests in land 122

Government functions and the administration of laws 123

Requests for information 123

Sport and other competitions 124

Strata committees and owners' corporations 126

6.1 Discrimination can happen anywhere — it is not limited to specific relationships, places or events. However, it can be hard to define who should have a duty to not discriminate, and where and when that duty should apply to make discrimination unlawful.

6.2 The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) only prohibits discrimination that happens in specific areas of activity, relationships and places. Broadly, these areas are:

- work
- education
- the provision of goods and services
- the provision of accommodation, and
- certain activities of registered clubs.

6.3 These protected areas operate in what can be loosely termed as "public life". The ADA does not apply to personal or family relationships or private interactions that occur, for example, at home. In its 1999 review of the ADA, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) said this distinction was important to protect personal and private choice, thought and expression.[1]

6.4 However, the ADA does not cover all areas of public life. Also, many exceptions limit the scope of each protected area. These exceptions do not apply consistently. Some apply across multiple areas, while others are limited to specific areas or attributes. Some exceptions are limited to discrimination and/or vilification, while others apply to all conduct prohibited by the ADA.

6.5 There is a view that the ADA has not kept pace with societal changes. These changes include the rise of the gig economy, such as ridesharing, which challenges traditional employment relationships. The ADA's coverage should be relevant and effective today, and flexible enough to respond to future challenges.

6.6 In this chapter, we outline the protected areas of public life and the exceptions that are specific to particular areas. We discuss wider exceptions, including those applying to multiple areas, in chapter 7.

6.7 We ask if the scope of these areas should change, and if the ADA should prohibit discrimination in other areas too. We also outline possible options for reform, drawn from our research and preliminary submissions. We welcome other suggestions too.

---

1. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.2].

Discrimination in work

6.8 The ADA prohibits discrimination in work. This covers all protected attributes and a wide range of work-related scenarios. The protected area includes a wide range of subcategories of work-related situations, as set out in the table below.

Table 6.1: Discrimination prohibited in work

| Discrimination by | Discrimination against | Summary of coverage |
|---|---|---|
| An employer | Applicants and employees | ▪ Offering employment, and the terms and conditions▪ Promotion, transfer, training, other benefits▪ Dismissal or other detriment |
| A principal | Commission agents, or potential commission agents | ▪ Engaging a commission agent, and the terms and conditions▪ Promotion, transfer, training, other benefits▪ Termination or other detriment |
| A principal | Contract workers | ▪ Terms of work▪ Not allowing them to work▪ Access to benefits▪ Any other detriment |
| Partnerships (6 or more partners) or people proposing to form a partnership | Partners and potential partners | ▪ Offering a partnership role and the terms▪ Benefits arising from firm membership▪ Expulsion or any other detriment |
| Local government councillors | Another member of the council | ▪ While performing official functions |
| Industrial organisations | Non-members and members | ▪ Admission to membership and terms▪ Access to benefits▪ Varying terms or depriving membership▪ Any other detriment |
| Qualifying bodies (for a profession, trade or occupation) | Persons qualified or seeking to be qualified | ▪ Conferring, renewing or extending authorisation or qualification▪ Withdrawing, or varying the terms, of the authorisation or qualification |
| Employment agencies | People seeking its services | ▪ Whether it provides its services▪ How it provides its services |

6.9 As we note in chapter 4, the ADA also protects against compulsory retirement due to age.[2] This does not apply to judges or certain other office holders.[3]

Issues relating to coverage

6.10 The ADA prohibits discrimination in many work situations, but there may be gaps in its coverage.

Unpaid workers and volunteers

6.11 The ADA's definition of "employment" includes "work under a contract for services". It is unclear if this includes unpaid work or volunteering. In contrast, the ADA expressly protects volunteers and unpaid trainees from sexual harassment.[4]

6.12 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended protecting volunteers, trainees and unpaid workers against discrimination.[5] More recent discrimination law reviews made similar recommendations, including because excluding unpaid work may discourage volunteering, and these roles can be important for young people.[6]

6.13 Some other discrimination laws in Australia clearly protect volunteers.[7] In Queensland, for instance, the definition of "work" includes voluntary or unpaid work, work experience, vocational placement, and apprenticeships.[8]

Gig economy workers

6.14 Another potential gap relates to gig economy workers. In this type of work, mobile apps and websites connect people providing services with consumers.[9]

6.15 Gig economy workers could be covered under the ADA in some situations. For example, in some cases they may be regarded as "contract workers". Under the ADA, contract workers perform work for an employer or, if there is no contract of

---

2. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) pt 4E.
3. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZX.
4. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "employment", s 22B(6), s 22B(9) definition of "workplace participant".
5. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 9, [4.42].
6. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 59, 131–133; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 253, 255.
7. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) dictionary definition of "employment"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "work"; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 5 definition of "employee"; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "work".
8. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "work".
9. Australia, Fair Work Ombudsman, "Employee-Like Workers" <www.fairwork.gov.au/find-help-for/independent-contractors/regulated-workers/employee-like-workers> (retrieved 1 April 2025).

employment, a "principal".[10] It is unlawful for an employer to discriminate against an employee, and for a principal to discriminate against a contract worker.

6.16 But it is not always clear who the employer or principal is when it comes to the gig economy. For example, an online platform could argue that a gig economy worker is not performing work for them, but for the consumer using the platform. If this is the case, the worker would not be able to complain or seek a remedy from the online platform for discrimination occurring on its platform.

A possible broader approach to discrimination at work

6.17 Some think we need to reconsider who is held responsible for discrimination in work contexts. Currently, like other Australian discrimination laws, the ADA covers situations where a person with authority at work discriminates against someone without that authority. However, some say the focus should be on how and whether someone has been discriminated against at work. It should not focus on whether they have a particular relationship with the person who discriminated against them.[11]

6.18 For example, the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act) prohibits sexual harassment by any person if it is in connection with either the complainant's or respondent's status at work.[12]

6.19 There may be benefits to applying this approach to discrimination as well, including that it could be simpler for complainants. This is because it would not require them to establish a specific work relationship with the person who discriminated against them. It might also capture more instances of discrimination, like where a customer, patient or visitor to a business discriminates against staff.[13]

6.20 Any change to this area needs to be considered carefully, as it could make more people responsible for discrimination. For example, an employee could be found to have unlawfully discriminated against a colleague, or their employer. Other issues include whether this would overlap with other forms of unlawful conduct, including vilification and harassment.

---

10. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "contract worker", definition of "principal".
11. A Blackham, "'We are All Entrepreneurs Now': Options and New Approaches for Adapting Equality Law for the 'Gig Economy'" (2018) 34 International Journal of Comparative Labour Law and Industrial Relations 431, 433.
12. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28B(5)–(6).
13. NSW Nurses and Midwives' Association, Preliminary Submission PAD50, 3.

Local government and age discrimination

6.21 The ADA prohibits discrimination by local government members against fellow members while performing official functions.[14] This was introduced to protect local government members who perform unpaid work in their official capacity.[15]

6.22 It applies to all attributes, except age. It is unclear why age discrimination was excluded from this protection. It could be time to revisit this exclusion.

Question 6.1: Discrimination at work — coverage

(1) Should the definition of employment include voluntary workers? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA adopt a broader approach to discrimination in work, like the way the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) approaches harassment? Why or why not?

(3) Should local government members be protected from age discrimination while performing work in their official capacity? Why or why not?

Exceptions to discrimination in work

6.23 The ADA has many exceptions to its discrimination protections. We consider the exceptions specific to the area of work, below. Other, wider exceptions apply to this area too (as we discuss in chapter 7).

Employment for private household purposes

6.24 The protections against discrimination for applicants and employees do not apply to employment for a private household.[16] Most other discrimination laws in Australia contain a similar exception.[17]

6.25 The NSWLRC did not recommend significant changes to this in 1999. It said the purpose of the exception was to protect privacy, and discrimination law should not intrude into someone's decision about who enters their home. It also thought the exception would not have a widespread impact due to the low number of people employed in private households.[18]

---

14. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 10B, s 27B, s 38G, s 42B, s 49H, s 49Z, s 49ZKA.
15. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Council, Second Reading Speech, 4 May 1994, 1830.
16. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 8(3), s 25(3)(a), s 49D(3)(a), s 49ZYB(3), s 38C(3)(a), s 49ZH(3)(a), s 40(3)(a), s 49V(3)(a).
17. See, eg, Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 24(1); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 24; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 11(3); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 26(1); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 15(3); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 18(3); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 14(3).
18. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.88]–[4.89].

6.26 However, the NSWLRC recommended that the exception only apply to work in a dwelling occupied by the employer or their relative. It said the expression "employment for the purposes of a private household" was unclear and could lead to the exception being applied widely. For instance, it could allow discrimination by employment agencies that provide private household workers.[19]

6.27 The Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) has raised concerns about similar exceptions in federal discrimination laws. It suggested these exceptions could be limited to the selection of the worker and not to treatment that occurs during employment.[20]

Employment by small businesses

6.28 Another exception applies to employers with five or less employees. This covers all protected attributes except for race and age.[21] In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended removing this exception. It said small businesses provide significant employment opportunities, which should be available to everyone. In the NSWLRC's view removing the exception would not intrude on personal relationships significantly.[22]

Discrimination by small partnerships

6.29 The prohibitions against discrimination by partnerships only apply to firms of six or more partners.[23] Many other discrimination laws in Australia have a similar exception.[24]

6.30 The NSWLRC recommended removing this exception. It said small partnerships were like small businesses, so the same considerations applied.[25]

Persons addicted to prohibited drugs: disability discrimination

6.31 The protections against disability discrimination do not apply if:

- the disability relates to addiction to a prohibited drug, and

---

19. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 9, [4.90]–[4.92].
20. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 278.
21. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 25(3)(b), s 38C(3)(b), s 40(3)(b), s 49D(3)(b), s 49V(3)(b), s 49ZH(3)(b).
22. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 14, [4.99].
23. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 10A, s 27A, s 38F, s 42A, s 49G, s 49Y, s49ZK, s 49ZYE.
24. See, eg, Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 16, s 17; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 31; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 14; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 18; Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 21; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 17.
25. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 15, [4.102].

- the person who is being discriminated against is addicted to a prohibited drug at that time.

This applies to all subcategories of work except for local government councillors, industrial organisations and qualifying bodies.[26]

6.32 It could be argued that this exception:

- discourages people from accessing harm reduction and treatment services, and
- allows discrimination based on addiction, rather than encouraging decisions to be made based on whether someone is able to perform the job requirements.

6.33 An option could be to address concerns about work suitability or performance through the inherent requirements exceptions, which we discuss next.

The "inherent requirements" and "unjustifiable hardships" exceptions

6.34 The ADA allows some duty holders to discriminate against someone who is unable to carry out the "inherent requirements" of the role. This only applies to discrimination based on disability and carer's responsibilities.

6.35 This also applies if someone:

- requires services, facilities or arrangements to carry out those inherent requirements, which people without that attribute do not require, and
- it would cause the duty holder "unjustifiable hardship" to provide them.

6.36 A related exception applies to discrimination by industrial organisations in the provision of benefits. The ADA permits discrimination based on disability or carer's responsibilities where someone:

- requires the benefit to be provided in a special manner, and
- the industrial organisation cannot provide it in this manner without "unjustifiable hardship".

6.37 One or more of these exceptions applies to the subcategories of "work" aside from discrimination of local government councillors.[27]

6.38 Several factors must be considered to assess someone's ability to carry out the inherent requirements of a role. These include:

- their past training, qualifications and experience relevant to the role
- their performance (as relevant), and

---

26. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49PA(1).
27. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49D(4), s 49E(3), s 49F(2), s 49G(3), s 49I(3), s 49J(2), s 49K(2), s 49V(4), s 49W(3), s 49X(2), s 49Y(3), s 49ZA(3), s 49ZB(2), s 49ZC(2).

- all other factors that are reasonable to take into account.[28]

6.39 All relevant circumstances are to be considered in working out if there would be unjustifiable hardship. These include:

- the nature of the likely benefit or detriment to anyone concerned
- the effect of the person's disability or responsibilities as a carer, and
- the financial circumstances of the duty holder and the amount of expenditure required.[29]

6.40 The Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (Fair Work Act) also contains an "inherent requirements" exception to its protections against adverse action and being terminated because of a protected attribute.[30]

6.41 The Disability Royal Commission criticised the "inherent requirements" exception in the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) (Disability Discrimination Act). The Royal Commission found the exception does not encourage employers to discuss adjustments. Also, a lack of information about the inherent requirements of a job may discourage people with disability from applying for it.[31]

6.42 The Royal Commission recommended employers should be required to consider two more factors in determining whether a person with disability is able to meet a role's inherent requirements. These are:

- the nature and extent of any adjustments made, and
- the extent of consultation with the person with disability.[32]

6.43 An option could be to link the inherent requirements exception with a duty to make adjustments. We discuss the concept of adjustments in chapter 11. However, in summary, this option could involve:

- requiring duty holders to make an adjustment to accommodate another person's needs arising from a protected attribute, and
- permitting employers to discriminate if the person cannot meet the inherent requirements of the role, despite any adjustments able to be made by the employer.[33]

---

28. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49D(4), s 49E(3), s 49F(2), s 49G(3), s 49J(2), s 49K(2), s 49V(4), s 49W(3), s 49X(2), s 49Y(3), s 49ZB(2), s 49ZC(2).
29. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49C(c), s 49U(c).
30. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(2)(b), s 772(2)(a).
31. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 7, "Inclusive Education, Employment and Housing" Part B, 389.
32. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 7, "Inclusive Education, Employment and Housing" Part B, rec 7.26, 438.
33. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 74, s 33C.

6.44 The Australian Capital Territory (ACT) takes this approach. There, discrimination must be reasonable, proportionate and justifiable in the circumstances for the inherent requirements exception to apply.[34]

6.45 A further issue is whether the exception should apply to attributes other than disability and carer's responsibilities. The ACT model applies to all protected attributes. This could reduce concerns inherent requirements exceptions are used specifically to permit discrimination against people with disability and carers.

6.46 We discuss adjustments more in chapter 11, and the option of a targeted inherent requirements exception for religious employment in chapter 7.

Exceptions based on "genuine occupational qualifications"

6.47 Broad exceptions apply in relation to certain attributes that are considered an occupational qualification. The ADA permits discrimination based on race, sex or age including

- for "authenticity", in entertainment, art, performance, or the provision of food or drink, or
- to provide welfare or similar services to people of that same race, sex or age.[35]

6.48 In 1999, the NSWLRC thought the "authenticity" exceptions to racial discrimination were appropriate, as they were likely to benefit minority races.[36] However, it recommended changes to other aspects of the genuine occupation qualification exceptions.

6.49 In relation to sex discrimination, the ADA lists situations in which being of a particular sex will be a genuine occupational qualification for a job. Among other things, this includes where the job requires physical strength or stamina, or involves fitting clothes, conducting searches, or entering a bathroom or change room.[37]

6.50 The NSWLRC thought two situations should be removed from this list. That is, where the job:

- is one of two to be held by a married couple, or

---

34. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 33C.
35. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 14, s 31, s 49ZYJ.
36. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.151].
37. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 31(2)(a)–(i).

- involves providing people of a particular sex with personal services relating to welfare or education, and they might object to someone of an opposite sex doing that.[38]

6.51 The NSWLRC also recommended the removal of a regulation-making power, which can be used to extend the exception to age and sex discrimination to other jobs, or classes of jobs. It could see no need for making the exception any wider. Finally, the NSWLRC said employers should be required to act in good faith when using the genuine occupational requirement exceptions for sex discrimination.[39]

6.52 The ACT provides a different model, in which a single broad exception covers genuine occupational qualifications. This exception applies to discrimination based on any protected attribute, except religious conviction. It provides that discrimination is not unlawful if:

- it is a genuine occupational qualification that the position be filled by a person with a particular protected attribute, and
- the discrimination is reasonable, proportionate and justifiable.[40]

6.53 The ACT legislation provides the following examples of a genuine occupational qualification:

- employing a female carer to provide personal care services for a woman due to privacy or modesty
- selecting someone of a particular race for a role in a theatrical performance based on authenticity, aesthetics or tradition, and
- preferencing people with lived experience of family and domestic violence for peer support positions in a women's crisis centre.[41]

6.54 Requiring employers to show the act is "reasonable, proportionate and justifiable" could provide more protection than the ADA. Also, a single exception could be easier to navigate.

6.55 However, the NSWLRC recommended against this approach. It thought it was unclear, as it does not spell out the situations in which the exception applies in the same detail as the ADA.[42]

---

38. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 31(2)(h)–(i); NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 55, rec 56.
39. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.180], [6.323], rec 55, rec 57, rec 73.
40. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 33B(1)(a).
41. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 33B.
42. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.150].

Discrimination against young people

6.56 Other exceptions to age discrimination apply to the employment of people under 21 years old. For example, it is not unlawful under the ADA to pay young workers lower wages. This exception can be removed by proclamation.[43]

6.57 In 1999, the NSWLRC said this exception was hard to justify and should be removed by December 2000. But it did not recommend immediate repeal, as the issue of junior wages was being considered federally.[44]

6.58 Another option could be to limit the exception to circumstances where the young worker is being offered a lower wage in accordance with an industrial award or agreement. This is the approach in SA, WA and the ACT.[45]

6.59 Under the Fair Work Act, modern awards can include minimum wages, including wage rates for junior employees. An award does not discriminate against junior employees simply because it provides a minimum wage for all junior employees or a class of employees.[46]

Discrimination in favour of married couples

6.60 It is not unlawful to discriminate based on marital or domestic status, if a job is one of two to be held by a married couple.[47] The NSWLRC recommended this should also include couples in a domestic relationship, but that this exception should only apply where there is a reasonable need.[48]

6.61 Other discrimination laws have similar exceptions, which also apply to people in de facto relationships.[49]

Employment outside NSW

6.62 The prohibitions on race discrimination do not apply if someone:

- is not normally a resident of NSW, and they are employed to learn skills to be used entirely outside NSW, or

---

43. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYI.
44. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.321].
45. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85F(4)(b); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 66ZS(1)(b); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57B.
46. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 139(1), s 153(3).
47. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 46.
48. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 63, [6.248].
49. See, eg, Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 35; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 29; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 31.

- was engaged outside NSW to be employed on a ship or aircraft in NSW.[50]

6.63 The Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) (Racial Discrimination Act) contains a similar exception in relation to employment on a non-Australian ship or aircraft if engaged outside Australia.[51]

6.64 The NSWLRC recommended removing these exceptions, describing them as inappropriate. The exceptions also cover situations that could, in its view, be addressed by an exemption application to the Anti-Discrimination Board. We describe this procedure in chapter 11.[52]

Question 6.2: Discrimination in work — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions to discrimination in work?

Education

6.65 "Education" is another protected area. It is unlawful for an "educational authority" to discriminate against students and people applying to be students. This applies to discrimination based on all protected attributes, except carers' responsibilities.

6.66 This area includes situations where an educational authority:

- refuses or fails to accept someone's application for admission as a student
- accepts someone's application on discriminatory terms
- denies or limits a student's access to any benefit, or
- expels a student or subjects them to another detriment.[53]

Issues relating to coverage

6.67 An issue is whether the prohibition should apply more broadly to other institutions. The ADA definition of "educational authority" includes a person or body administering a school, college, university or other institution at which education or training is provided.[54]

6.68 The Disability Discrimination Act is broader. It extends duties to other "education providers", such as organisations whose purpose is to develop or accredit

---

50. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 15, s 16.
51. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 9(3).
52. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 54, [6.164]–[ 6.166].
53. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 17, s 31A, s 49L, s 49ZYL, s 38K, s 49ZO, s 46A.
54. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "educational authority".

curricula.[55] The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) recently supported this approach, as these bodies set rules for curricula and exams that could discriminate against students.[56]

6.69 Another issue is whether the ADA covers all relevant conduct. The LRCWA recommended the education area in WA discrimination law should expressly cover discrimination in selecting or evaluating student applications. While the LRCWA thought this may already be unlawful, it preferred setting it out in legislation.[57] The WA discrimination legislation is like the ADA in its coverage of the education area.[58]

Exceptions to discrimination in education

6.70 A range of exceptions limit the discrimination protections in education. These apply to sex, disability, and age discrimination.

6.71 We consider wider exceptions that apply to discrimination in education, and to other areas and forms of unlawful conduct, in chapter 7. These include the exceptions for private educational authorities, which apply in the work and education area in relation to most protected attributes.

Single-sex educational institutions

6.72 The prohibition against sex discrimination does not apply to single-sex educational institutions. This includes both public and private schools. An institution is considered single-sex even if it admits transgender people who identify with the sex the institution is conducted for. Single-sex educational institutions can lawfully refuse, or fail to accept, an application from someone of the opposite sex.[59]

6.73 One issue is whether this exception can be used to exclude transgender students from single-sex schools that are consistent with their gender identity. Some argue this exception should clearly state that it does not allow discrimination against transgender students.[60]

---

55. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "education provider".
56. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 127, rec 57.
57. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 128, rec 58.
58. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 18, s 35AJ, s 35I, s 35W, s 44, s 61, s 66ZD.
59. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 31A(3)(b), s 31A(4).
60. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 63–64.

Disability discrimination exceptions

6.74 The ADA also provides an exception for schools, colleges, universities, or other institutions that are run solely for students with a particular disability. They can refuse or fail to accept applications by people without the same disability.[61]

6.75 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception. It described it as "obscure". The NSWLRC thought that students with disability could benefit from associating with students with different disabilities.[62]

6.76 Other exceptions apply. These include where a person with disability requires services or facilities not required by students who do not have a disability, or a benefit to be provided in a "special manner". It is not unlawful to discriminate where these cannot be provided without causing the educational authority "unjustifiable hardship".[63]

6.77 An option for reform is to instead require educational authorities to provide adjustments. We consider this option in chapter 11.

Age discrimination exceptions

6.78 The ADA includes exceptions which allow schools to refuse to enrol children under 6 years old. It also allows educational institutions to only provide education or training for students above a particular age and to provide age-based benefits, including concessions, to students.[64]

6.79 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended replacing this with exceptions for:

- age discrimination relating to the provision of educational services up to and including secondary school
- a minimum age requirement on a particular educational program, and
- quotas in relation to students of different ages.

6.80 In the NSWLRC's view, it may be appropriate for an educational authority to impose a maximum admission age in some cases. However, the NSWLRC thought they should apply to the Anti-Discrimination Board for an exemption to do so.[65] We consider exemptions in chapter 11.

---

61. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49L(3)(b).
62. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.280]–[6.285], rec 67.
63. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49L(4)–(5).
64. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYL(3)(a), s 49ZYL(4)–(5).
65. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 74, [6.336].

Question 6.3: Discrimination in education

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "education"?

(2) What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions relating to:

(a) single-sex educational institutions, and

(b) disability and age discrimination in educational institutions?

The provision of goods and services

6.81 The ADA prohibits discrimination in the provision of goods and services. This covers:

- refusing to provide goods or services, and
- discriminating in the terms on which goods or services are provided.[66]

6.82 The ADA does not define "goods". It defines "services" to include services:

- relating to banking, insurance and the provision of grants, loans, credit or finance
- relating to entertainment, recreation or refreshment
- relating to transport or travel
- of any profession or trade
- provided by a council or public authority, and
- consisting of access to, and the use of any facilities in, any place or vehicle that the public, or section of the public, is entitled or allowed to enter (whether or not for payment).[67]

6.83 We outline some issues relating to the coverage of this area, including the exceptions that apply to superannuation services and insurance, below. We consider the related issue of discrimination in the administration of state laws and programs later in this chapter.

Issues relating to coverage

The manner in which goods and services are provided

6.84 The ADA prohibits discrimination in the terms on which someone is provided with goods or services. This only applies to the terms and conditions initially offered. It does not prohibit discrimination in the manner, or the way, in which the good or service is provided after the terms and conditions are agreed.

---

66. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 19, s 33, s 49M, s 49ZYN, s 38M, s 49ZP, s 47.

67. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "services".

6.85 In one case, for example, a transgender person was allowed to board a public bus on the same terms as everyone else. The driver insulted them after they boarded the bus. The Tribunal said there was a gap in the law because it only covered the terms and conditions on which services were offered but not the manner in which they were provided.[68]

6.86 Other discrimination laws prohibit discrimination in the manner, or way, goods and services are provided.[69] Some make it unlawful to subject someone "to any other detriment" or treat them "less favourably in any way" in connection with the supply of goods and services.[70]

6.87 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended the ADA should prohibit discrimination in the "manner" in which goods and services are provided. It preferred this expression because it is used elsewhere in Australia and provides broad protection.[71]

The receipt of goods and services

6.88 Unlike NSW, the Northern Territory (NT) makes it unlawful for someone who receives goods, services or facilities to discriminate against someone in the way they receive those goods, services or facilities.[72] This was added in 2022 to address discrimination by customers against staff in pubs, and race-based discrimination against taxi drivers by passengers.[73] It might also protect gig economy workers who may experience discrimination in providing goods and services to app users.

6.89 However, it could be said that this goes beyond the traditional reach of discrimination law. It imposes obligations on people who receive goods and services — not just those who provide them. This may have unintended consequences. For example, questions arise as to whether it might capture consumer boycotts. Without specific exceptions, it could also apply to customers receiving goods and services in their homes.

---

68. Turner v State Transit Authority [2004] NSWADT 89 [71]–[73].
69. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 46; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 41; Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 28(c); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 24(c); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 20(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 66K(c); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 22(c).
70. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 44(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 41.
71. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 17, [4.140]–[4.143], [4.152], [4.163].
72. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 41.
73. Northern Territory, Department of the Attorney-General and Justice, Modernisation of the Anti-Discrimination Act, Discussion Paper (2017) 19–20.

Access to premises

6.90 Another issue is whether the ADA should more clearly prohibit discrimination relating to someone's ability to access and use premises. This particularly affects people with disability.

6.91 One option could be to extend the ADA's definition of "services". As we note above, this currently includes "services consisting of access to, and the use of any facilities".[74] In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended a wider definition to prohibit discrimination relating to:

- someone's access to any place, vehicle or facility that members of the public are entitled to use
- the terms on which access is allowed
- the provision of means of access, and
- the requirement to leave or stop using any place, vehicle or facility.[75]

6.92 Another option is to add "access to premises" as a separate, protected area. Under the Disability Discrimination Act, it is unlawful to discriminate against someone:

- by refusing to allow them to access or use premises, or its facilities, that the public can enter or use (whether or not for payment)
- in the terms and conditions of their access or use of those premises or facilities
- in relation to providing means of access to those premises, or
- by requiring them to leave the premises or stop using the facilities.[76]

6.93 Victoria has a similar approach.[77] A Victorian review found that treating access to premises as a subset of "goods and services" led to patchy and unclear rules.[78]

6.94 However, in 1999 the NSWLRC thought that a new "access to premises" area could be confusing. It noted that the provision of a service often includes providing access to premises too. The NSWLRC preferred to expand the definition of services.[79]

---

74. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "services".
75. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.198], rec 23.
76. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 23.
77. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 57(2) definition of "premises".
78. Victoria, Department of Justice, An Equality Act for a Fairer Victoria: Equal Opportunity Review, Final Report (2008) [5.73], rec 45.
79. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.198], rec 23.

Question 6.4: The provision of goods and services — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "the provision of goods and services"?

Exceptions for superannuation services and insurance

6.95 The ADA does not recognise superannuation or insurance as distinct, protected areas. However, services relating to insurance are mentioned specifically in the definition of "services". Superannuation may also fall within this broad and non-exhaustive definition.[80]

6.96 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended that superannuation should be listed as part of the definition of "services".[81] Some other discrimination laws in Australia take this approach, including the Disability Discrimination Act and the Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth).[82]

6.97 Another option could be to recognise superannuation as a separate area of public life in the ADA. Several states and territories have taken this approach.[83]

6.98 Under either option, or even if there is no change, there remain questions about what — if any — exceptions should be provided to insurers and superannuation funds. Currently, the ADA provides both with broad exceptions in relation to certain attributes.

6.99 It should be noted that insurance and superannuation is regulated by federal legislative schemes.[84] Under the Australian Constitution, federal law prevails over inconsistent state law and state law is invalid to the extent of the inconsistency.[85] The High Court has found certain protections against discrimination in the ADA invalid to the extent of inconsistency with federal life insurance legislation.[86] This indicates that the relationship between federal and state law will require careful

---

80. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.149].
81. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 18.
82. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "services"; Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 5 definition of "services". See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 3 definition of "services"; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 4(1) definition of "services".
83. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) pt 4 div 5; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 35AR, s 66P, s 66ZL; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 63, s 78; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 48; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 28.
84. See, eg, Life Insurance Act 1995 (Cth).
85. Australian Constitution s 109.
86. Australian Mutual Provident Society v Goulden (1986) 160 CLR 330, 339–340. See also McNally v Resolution Life Australasia Ltd [2024] NSWCATAD 388.

consideration before any decision is made to change the ADA's approach to superannuation and insurance.

Exceptions for insurance services

6.100 The ADA permits sex, age and disability discrimination in relation to insurance terms and conditions.[87]

6.101 Sex and age discrimination in the terms on which insurance is offered or may be obtained is permitted when the discrimination is:

- based on actuarial or statistical data on which it is reasonable to rely, and
- reasonable, having regard to the data and other relevant factors.

The insurer must disclose the source on which the data is based if the Tribunal requires it.[88] For age discrimination, the insurer must also disclose any relevant factors relied upon, if required.[89]

6.102 The exception for discrimination based on disability is similar. However, a key difference is that the discriminatory terms and conditions do not need to be based on actuarial or statistical data if this data is not available and cannot reasonably be obtained. In this scenario, the terms and conditions must be reasonable having regard to any other relevant factors.[90]

6.103 Some have observed the disability discrimination exception has been misused to deny or excessively limit cover, or to increase premiums such that a person with disability cannot afford insurance.[91] There may be a lack of evidence to support the discriminatory decision, but people can face barriers when seeking to challenge the insurer's decision. This can include poor communication by insurers about the complex review options, and a lack of affordable specialised legal assistance for insured people.[92] The exception may also discourage people from seeking diagnosis and treatment for conditions.[93]

6.104 In 1999, the NSWLRC was concerned about the exception relating to sex discrimination. It did not consider sex to be a reliable basis on which to assess risk for insurance premiums, without compelling evidence. It recommended an

---

87. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 37, s 49Q, s 49ZYT.
88. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 37(b), s 49Q(b), s 49ZYT(b).
89. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYT(b).
90. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49Q(b).
91. Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 40; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Mental Health Discrimination in Insurance (2021) 14–15.
92. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Mental Health Discrimination in Insurance (2021) 15, 72, 74.
93. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 389.

exception like the one found in the Sex Discrimination Act, which requires discrimination to be based on reasonable actuarial or statistical data that is presented to the consumer on request.[94]

Superannuation exceptions

6.105 Currently, superannuation funds are permitted to discriminate in their terms and conditions based on sex, marital or domestic status, age or disability. Generally this applies if the terms or conditions:

- are based on actuarial or statistical data on which it is reasonable to rely, and
- are reasonable having regard to the data and any other relevant factors.

6.106 If no such data is available and cannot be reasonably obtained, the terms or conditions must be reasonable having regard to any other relevant factors.[95]

6.107 For sex, marital or domestic status, and disability, the source of any data and other relevant factors must be disclosed to the Tribunal, if the Tribunal requires it.[96]

6.108 For age, discrimination is also permitted if:

- it occurred because of other specific legal requirements under NSW or federal superannuation laws, or
- it is based on an existing condition and the person became a member of the scheme before, or within 12 months of, the exception being introduced, or the discrimination happened within 12 months of the exception being introduced.[97]

6.109 In 1999, the NSWLRC expressed concerns about the breadth of the exceptions relating to sex and what was then known as "marital status".[98]

6.110 The NSWLRC considered the onus should instead be on superannuation funds to obtain an exemption if they could justify discrimination based on sex or marital or domestic status (chapter 11 outlines the exemption process). It also recommended that existing funds that discriminate based on sex or marital or domestic status

---

94. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 62, [6.239]–[6.241].
95. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 36, s 49, s 49Q, s 49ZYS(1)(c)–(e).
96. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 36, s 49, s 49Q, s 49ZYS(2).
97. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYS(1)(a)–(b), s 49ZYS(1)(f).
98. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 64, [6.254], [6.216]–[6.222], [6.228].The attribute was expanded to include "domestic status" in 2008: Miscellaneous Acts Amendment (Same Sex Relationships) Act 2008 (NSW) sch 1 [1], [5], [6].

could continue if they did not accept new members and offered existing members an option to transfer into another fund.[99]

6.111 The NSWLRC considered that the ADA exception relating to disability offered better protection than the equivalent federal exception.[100] This allows people to be refused insurance cover or membership of a superannuation fund and does not require disclosure of the source that is relied on.[101]

6.112 The ADA also permits superannuation funds to treat a transgender person as being "of the opposite sex from the sex with which the transgender person identifies".[102] In preliminary submissions, we heard concerns that this perpetuates harm and the practice of misgendering.[103]

6.113 The NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception. It could not see any justification for the exception, and thought its removal would not affect superannuation providers significantly.[104]

Alternatives to the ADA's insurance and superannuation exceptions

6.114 NSW could look to other Australian discrimination laws for alternative models. For instance, the ACT allows superannuation providers (and insurers) to discriminate against a person with any protected attribute if:

- the discrimination is based on actuarial or other statistical data, or other relevant documents
- it is reasonable to rely on that data or documents, and
- the discrimination is reasonable, proportionate and justifiable in the circumstances.[105]

6.115 The insurer or superannuation provider must also provide the customer with the data or other documents, or a "meaningful explanation" of them, in writing, upon request.[106]

---

99. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 61, rec 64, rec 65, [6.230], [6.270].
100. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.289].
101. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 46(1).
102. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38Q.
103. ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 10; NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [109].
104. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.402], rec 80.
105. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 28(2).
106. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 28(3). See also Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 41(1)(e).

6.116 Another option, supported by the Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC), is to include a non-exhaustive list of factors to guide consideration of whether it is reasonable to rely on the actuarial or statistical data. This would include factors such as whether the data is up-to-date and from a reasonable source.[107]

Question 6.5: Superannuation services and insurance exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions applying to insurance and superannuation?

Other exceptions to discrimination in goods and services

6.117 There are specific exceptions relating to sex, age and disability which limit the protections against discrimination in "goods and services". These are in addition to the wider exceptions that apply more generally across areas (chapter 7).

6.118 It is not unlawful for someone to exercise a skill in relation to men or women only, when they commonly exercise that skill in a different way for men and for women.[108]

6.119 In addition, it is not unlawful age discrimination to:

- offer or provide holiday tours to people of a particular age or age group
- discriminate based on age in disposing of goods or services by gift or will, or
- provide benefits, including concessions, to someone because of their age.[109]

6.120 The NSWLRC thought the first two age-related exceptions should be repealed. It recommended the exception relating to benefits and concessions should be replaced with a narrower exception to allow the provision of benefits or services at concessional, age-based rates.[110]

6.121 Another exception applies where the provision of goods and services to a person with disability would impose "unjustifiable hardship" on the provider.[111] We consider this exception, and alternatives to it, in chapter 11.

Question 6.6: The provision of goods and services — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions to sex, age and disability discrimination in relation to the provision of goods and services?

---

107. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 41.
108. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 33(2).
109. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYN(2)–(3).
110. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 74, [6.337]–[6.338].
111. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49M(2).

Accommodation

6.122 Accommodation is another protected area. It is unlawful for a principal or agent to discriminate against someone, based on any protected attribute:

- by refusing or deferring their application for accommodation, or giving them lower priority than other applicants
- in the terms on which they are offered accommodation
- by denying or limiting access to benefits associated with their accommodation, or
- evicting or subjecting them to any other detriment.[112]

Issues relating to coverage

6.123 The definition of "accommodation" includes residential or business accommodation.[113] In 1999, the NSWLRC said it should more clearly cover caravans and mobile homes.[114] Other types of accommodation could be specified, too.

6.124 Another issue is whether the coverage of this area should more clearly reflect the rights of people with disability. For example, in Victoria, accommodation providers must allow a person with disability to make reasonable alterations to accommodation if certain conditions are met. Failure to allow this could amount to discrimination.[115]

6.125 Similar requirements about reasonable alterations exist in Queensland, the NT and under the Disability Discrimination Act.[116] In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended the ADA should also include a similar protection as it aligns with these other discrimination laws.[117]

6.126 In Victoria, it is also unlawful to refuse accommodation to a person with disability because they have an assistance dog. It is unlawful to make them keep their dog elsewhere or pay an extra charge because of the dog.[118]

---

112. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20(1)–(2), s 34(1)–(2), s 49N(1)–(2), s 49ZYO(1)–(2), s 38N(1)–(2), s 49ZQ(1)–(2), s 48(1)–(2).
113. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "accommodation".
114. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.218], [4.219], rec 24.
115. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 55(1).
116. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 84; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 39; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 25(2)(d).
117. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.221]–[4.222], rec 25.
118. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 54(1)–(2).

6.127 If NSW were to take this approach, consideration could be given to whether other assistance animals should also be included. As we discuss in chapter 4, people with disability may use assistance animals other than dogs.

6.128 Currently, the ADA provides an exception to the prohibition on disability discrimination if:

- a person with disability requires special services or facilities, or requires a benefit to be provided in a special manner, and
- it would impose "unjustifiable hardship" on the accommodation provider to provide these services or facilities, or the benefit in that manner.[119]

6.129 Refusing to allow reasonable alterations or assistance dogs could already be unlawful in NSW, if the test for direct or indirect disability discrimination is met and the accommodation provider cannot prove that doing so would cause unjustifiable hardship.[120] However, it could be argued that the Victorian approach is clearer. We consider the option of an obligation to provide adjustments in chapter 11.

Question 6.7: Discrimination in accommodation — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "accommodation"?

Exceptions to discrimination in accommodation

6.130 Several other exceptions apply specifically to discrimination in accommodation, which we discuss below. Certain wider exceptions also apply, which we discuss in chapter 7.

Exceptions for private households

6.131 There are exceptions for private households. These apply if the accommodation is for six people or less, and the person providing the accommodation, or their near relative, lives there.[121]

6.132 In 1999, the NSWLRC broadly supported such an exception. It said deciding who to live with is a personal choice. However, it thought an exception should only apply to accommodation in the main home. This would clarify that a self-contained granny flat would not be exempt.[122] This was based on the NT approach.[123]

---

119. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49N(4), s 49N(6).
120. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49B(3), s 49N(6).
121. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20(3), s 34(3), s 38N(3), s 49N(3), s 48(3), s 49ZQ(3), s 49ZYO(3)(a)–(b).
122. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 26, [4.227].
123. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 40(1).

6.133 Other discrimination laws also exempt private households, although Tasmania only applies the exception to discrimination based on gender.[124] Some limit the exception to accommodation for no more than 3 people, other than the provider or their near relatives.[125] Others do not limit the number of people.[126]

6.134 The NSWLRC noted the limit of up to 6 people in accommodation was intended to ensure business activities were not exempt from the ADA. It did not recommend changing the NSW approach.[127]

Exceptions for age-based accommodation

6.135 Another exception applies to age-based accommodation. This permits discrimination in the provision of accommodation if a concession is provided in good faith to a person because of their age.[128]

6.136 The NSWLRC recommended that this exception be removed. It thought a new, general special measures "exception" would be a better way of addressing the issues raised by age-based accommodation.[129] We discuss the concept of special measures in chapter 11.

6.137 As we detail in chapter 7, a related exception applies across the ADA. This exception allows establishments that provide "housing accommodation for aged persons" to limit admission to people of a particular sex, marital or domestic status or race.[130]

Exception for charitable bodies – disability discrimination

6.138 Another exception allows charitable bodies that provide accommodation to people with a particular disability to discriminate based on disability. This also applies to other bodies that do not distribute profits to members.[131] Chapter 7 has more detail on general exceptions for charitable bodies.

---

124. Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 29(3); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 25(3)(a); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 23(3)(a); Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 12(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 59; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 21(3). But see Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(e), s 27(1)(e).
125. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 23(3)(a)(ii); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 29(3)(b); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 25(3)(a)(ii); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 59(1)(b); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 21(3)(a)(ii).
126. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 12(3); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 40(1).
127. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.226].
128. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYO(3)(c).
129. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 76.
130. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 59.
131. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49N(5).

Question 6.8: Discrimination in accommodation — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions for private households, age-based accommodation and charitable bodies in relation to discrimination in accommodation?

Registered clubs

6.139 The ADA prohibits discrimination by registered clubs.[132] A club is a "registered club" if it has a club licence under the Liquor Act 2007 (NSW).[133]

6.140 Under the ADA, it is unlawful for registered clubs to discriminate against potential members, based on a protected attribute:

- by refusing or failing to accept a membership application, or
- in the terms on which it is prepared to accept them as a member.

6.141 It is also unlawful for registered clubs to discriminate against members based on a protected attribute by:

- denying or limiting access to club benefits
- removing membership or varying the terms of their membership, or
- subjecting them to any other detriment.

6.142 In December 2024 there were around 1250 registered clubs in NSW. This included, for instance, bowling clubs, golf clubs and RSL clubs.[134]

Issues relating to coverage

6.143 One question is whether this protected area is too limited. Limiting the duty holders to clubs that hold a liquor licence may be a way to distinguish between larger public or commercial clubs and smaller, private groups.[135] But there may be other ways to ensure that the ADA covers groups that are "public" in nature.

6.144 In 1999, the NSWLRC said the ADA should instead prohibit discrimination by "clubs and associations". This would include incorporated associations and registered

---

132. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20A(1)–(2), s 34A(1)–(2), s 38O, s 48A, s 49O(1)–(2), s 49ZR, s 49ZYP(1)–(2).
133. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "registered club"; Registered Clubs Act 1976 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "registered club".
134. Liquor and Gaming NSW, "Licenced Premises Data" (2025) <www.liquorandgaming.nsw.gov.au/resources/licensed-premises-data> (retrieved 28 February 2025).
135. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 142.

corporations whose membership is open to the public. The NSWLRC said this would identify the "public" groups that should be covered by the ADA more accurately.[136]

6.145 Another option is to use the definition of club from the Disability Discrimination Act. This defines a "club" as an association of people

- who associate for social, literary, cultural, political, sporting, athletic or other lawful purposes, and
- which provides and maintains its facilities using the funds of the association.[137]

6.146 This distinguishes between the private and public sphere by treating any association that has its own facilities and raises funds to maintain them, as public.

6.147 The definition in the Sex Discrimination Act additionally requires that clubs have 30 or more members, and that they sell or supply liquor.[138]

6.148 The QHRC supported the Disability Discrimination Act definition. It thought that providing or maintaining facilities indicates that a club has "more of a public, rather than private character", and that the sale of alcohol was an irrelevant criterion.[139] However, this recommendation was not implemented in recent discrimination law reforms in Queensland.

6.149 If the ADA was to include a broader definition of "club", the existing general exception for "voluntary bodies" must also be considered.[140] In its current form, this broad exception may exempt certain clubs that might otherwise be covered by a broader definition of "club". We discuss this exception in chapter 7.

Question 6.9: Discrimination by registered clubs — coverage

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition and coverage of the protected area of "registered clubs"?

Exceptions to discrimination by registered clubs

6.150 Exceptions in the ADA allow registered clubs to discriminate lawfully in certain situations. Below, we discuss two that apply specifically to registered clubs. Other wider exceptions also apply. We discuss these in chapter 7.

---

136. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 27, [4.269], [6.88].
137. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "club".
138. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "club". Neither the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) nor the Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) defines "club".
139. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 358–359, rec 35.
140. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 57.

Clubs that provide benefits to certain groups of people

6.151 There is an exception for registered clubs whose principal object is to provide benefits to people of a particular race or age, or who have a particular disability.[141] They can discriminate against people of other races, disabilities or ages, including in relation to who they accept as members. However, the relevant race cannot be defined by colour.[142]

6.152 The NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception. But it supported a new exception to race discrimination for clubs that operate principally to either reduce the disadvantage of people of a particular culture or to preserve a minority culture. The exception would allow such clubs to exclude applicants who do not share that cultural identity. The NSWLRC said this should operate in addition to a new special measures "exception", as not all such clubs would meet the tests for a special measure.[143]

6.153 If religion was added as a protected attribute, the NSWLRC recommended an exception to permit religious discrimination by clubs established for people of a particular religion or belief. It thought they should have the same protections as cultural groups.[144]

6.154 The ACT takes a different approach. It allows clubs to discriminate against someone with any protected attribute, but only if:

- the club is established to benefit people who share a protected attribute, and
- the discrimination is reasonable, proportionate and justifiable.[145]

Exceptions to sex discrimination

6.155 If membership of a registered club is only available to members of one sex, an exception to sex discrimination allows the club to exclude someone of the opposite sex. A registered club for members of one sex can admit a transgender person who identifies as that sex without affecting its status as a registered club for people of the same sex only.[146]

---

141. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20A(3), s 49O(3), s 49ZYP(3)(a).
142. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20A(3).
143. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.157].
144. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.436].
145. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 31.
146. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 34A(3), s 34A(3A).

6.156 The NSWLRC said this exception was discriminatory and recommended its repeal. In its view, organisations should apply to the Anti-Discrimination Board for an exemption from the ADA instead.[147]

6.157 A further exception relates to club benefits. Registered clubs can discriminate against members based on sex if it is not practicable to offer the club's benefit or services to men and women simultaneously or to the same extent.[148] The NSWLRC recommended keeping this exception. It thought there could be legitimate reasons for applying it, including where it would be inappropriate for women and men to share facilities at the same time.[149]

Exception to disability discrimination

6.158 The ADA provides an exception to disability discrimination where a person with disability requires a benefit to be provided in a special manner, and this cannot be done without causing "unjustifiable hardship" to the registered club.[150] We discuss the reform option of a duty to provide adjustments in chapter 11.

Question 6.10: Discrimination by registered clubs — exceptions

What changes, if any, should be made to the exceptions for registered clubs in relation to sex, race, age and disability discrimination?

Protecting all attributes in all areas

6.159 So far in this chapter, we have set out the areas of public life in which discrimination is prohibited. But not all attributes are protected in all the protected areas. The ADA protects people who have a protected attribute in all areas of public life, except for carers. It only prohibits discrimination based on carer's responsibilities in work and not in any other area.

6.160 Federal discrimination law has a similar gap. The Sex Discrimination Act only prohibits discrimination based on family responsibilities at work.[151] Some other discrimination laws protect all attributes in all areas (unless an exception applies).[152]

147. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 59, [6.194].
148. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 34A(4).
149. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.197].
150. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49O(5).
151. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) pt 2 div 1.
152. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 7; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16.

6.161 In its 1999 report, the NSWLRC supported limiting the protections for carers. It was only aware of discrimination based on caring responsibilities in the work context. However, it said the law should be revised if discrimination against carers became a problem in other areas.[153]

6.162 It could be time to revise this assessment.[154] The AHRC supported prohibiting discrimination based on family responsibilities in all protected areas of public life. In its view, this would be more consistent and less complex than having different protections for different attributes.[155] The LRCWA also recommended consistency across the protected attributes, unless an exception applies.[156]

Question 6.11: Discrimination based on carer's responsibilities

(1) Should discrimination based on carer's responsibilities be prohibited in all protected areas of public life? If not, what areas should apply and why?

(2) In general, should discrimination be prohibited in all protected areas for all protected attributes? Why or why not?

Other potential protected areas

6.163 Many preliminary submissions suggested that the ADA should cover additional areas of public life. We outline some options below. First, we set out one option to ensure the ADA is flexible enough to respond to new areas as they arise.

A broader application to all areas of public life

6.164 Like most Australian discrimination laws, the ADA does not apply to all conduct that occurs "in public". It only applies in the areas we outline above.

6.165 A different approach could be a non-exhaustive list that prohibits discrimination in any area of public life. This might enable the ADA to evolve to meet society's needs, without requiring legislative change each time another area is identified.

6.166 The Racial Discrimination Act provides one model. It prohibits racial discrimination "in the political, economic, social, cultural or any other field of public life". Without limiting that definition, the Act specifically prohibits discrimination in relation to

153. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [5.219]–[5.220].

154. See, eg, Carers NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD71, 3.

155. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 256.

156. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 56, 125–126.

land, housing and other accommodation, access to places and facilities, the provision of goods and services, the right to join trade unions, and employment.[157]

6.167 Proposals to change other laws to prohibit discrimination in "any area of public life" have been unsuccessful.[158] Concerns have been raised that this approach is less clear than identifying specific areas of application.[159] A related view is some emerging areas may not fit neatly in the public or private spheres.[160]

6.168 The NSWLRC did not support this approach. It preferred the ADA's approach of prohibiting discrimination in defined areas, rather than in all areas of public life.[161]

Disposal of interests in land

6.169 Some other state and territory discrimination laws prohibit discrimination in the disposal of interests in land, including the sale or transfer of property.[162]

6.170 The ADA does not cover this area. However, people in NSW are protected by federal discrimination law under which it is unlawful to discriminate based on disability, sex or age:

- by refusing or failing to distribute an interest in land, or
- in the terms or conditions on which the interest in land is offered.[163]

6.171 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended adding disposal of interests in land to the ADA as an area of public life. It warned that permitting discrimination in this area could enable apartheid.[164]

---

157. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 9(1), s 11–15.
158. See, eg, Exposure Draft, Human Rights and Anti-Discrimination Bill 2012 (Cth) cl 22; ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 52, rec 6.1.
159. ACT Legislative Assembly, Yoursay Listening Report: Discrimination Law Reform (2022) 4; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 347; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 125; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.26]–[4.29].
160. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia*, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA),* Project 111, Final Report (2022) 125.
161. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.29].
162. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 50; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 38(1), s 60(1), s 75(1), s 85J, s 85ZF(1)–(2); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 21A(1), s 35AN(1), s 35ZA(1), s 47A, s 66ZH(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 77.
163. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 26(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 24(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 30(1).
164. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.289], rec 28.

Government functions and the administration of laws

6.172 The ADA only protects against discrimination in state laws and programs when these are considered a "service" under the "provision of goods and services" area.[165] However, some preliminary submissions said it is sometimes unclear when a government agency is providing a "service" for this purpose.[166]

6.173 For example, police conducting the initial investigation of a complaint has been found to be a "service" to victims. But whether the later stages of an investigation, including decisions about whether to arrest or prosecute, are "services" depends on each case.[167]

6.174 Some think the ADA should expressly protect against discrimination in the administration of state laws and programs.[168] Many other discrimination laws do this.[169] The ADA itself prohibits sexual harassment in the administration of state laws and programs.[170]

6.175 Similarly, in 1999, the NSWLRC said that the government should have to comply with its own discrimination standards. It recommended the ADA prohibit discrimination in the administration of state and local government laws and programs, and the functions and powers of local government.[171]

6.176 Another option could be to expand the definition of services to clearly include the administration of state and local government laws and programs.

Requests for information

6.177 The ADA does not protect against discriminatory requests for information. Some other states and territories do.[172] For example, in Queensland, requesting a birth

---

165. See, eg, New South Wales v Whiteoak [2014] NSWCATAP 99.
166. Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 24; NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, Preliminary Submission PAD27, 9.
167. Commissioner of Police v Mohamed [2009] NSWCA 432 [87]–[88].
168. See, eg, Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 19; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 24; NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, Preliminary Submission PAD27, 9; Sex Workers Outreach Project NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD77, 5; Law Society of NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD31, 10.
169. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23C; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 101; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 29; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 26; Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 31. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 60.
170. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22J.
171. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 29, [4.302]–[4.303].
172. See, eg, Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124(1); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 26.

date in a job application form has been found to be unlawful if it would be sufficient to ask if an applicant is over 18.[173]

6.178 This area is also covered in federal discrimination law in relation to age, disability, and sex discrimination. This provides a measure of protection for people in NSW, but only in relation to those attributes. Under federal law, it is unlawful for a duty holder to request information from someone with a protected attribute if the duty holder:

- requires the information in connection with an act that constitutes unlawful discrimination
- needs the information to discriminate against that person, and
- would not request the information from someone without that attribute in the same circumstances.[174]

6.179 The ACT provides another approach. The ACT prohibits requests for information in connection with an act that constitutes unlawful discrimination.[175] However, unlike federal law, the ACT does not require a comparison with what the duty holder would have done to someone without that attribute. This might make the test simpler and easier to prove.

6.180 Queensland takes a broader approach. It is unlawful to request information on which discrimination "might" be based. However, it is a defence if the respondent can prove the information was reasonably required for a non-discriminatory purpose.[176]

6.181 This approach can capture a wider range of conduct than the federal law. This is because there is no requirement that the information be intended to be used for a discriminatory purpose. The LRCWA supported this model.[177]

Sport and other competitions

6.182 The ADA does not expressly include sport as an area of public life in which discrimination is prohibited. This is different to sexual harassment, in which the ADA's protections extend to people engaged in sporting activities.[178]

---

173. Willmott v Woolworths Ltd [2014] QCAT 601 [37].
174. Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 32; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 27(1); Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 30(1)–(2).
175. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23. See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 26(1).
176. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124(1), s 124(3).
177. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 65, 144–145.
178. Anti-Discrimination 1977 (NSW) s 22I.

6.183 In relation to discrimination, participation in sport may be covered indirectly by other areas of public life in some cases. For instance, when it is a benefit provided by a registered club.[179]

6.184 Also, sport may also be considered a "service" if it relates to "entertainment, recreation or refreshment".[180] Similar terms in the Sex Discrimination Act have been found to include the facilitation of participation in a sailing event.[181]

6.185 However, there could be benefits to expressly clarifying that sport is a protected area. One option could be to expressly list sports as a "service", which forms part of the goods and services area of public life. The NT and Queensland take this approach.[182]

6.186 Another option could be to recognise sport as a distinct protected area. The ACT, Victoria and the Disability Discrimination Act take this approach.[183] In the ACT, for example, people responsible for running "formally organised" sporting activities cannot discriminate against someone with a protected attribute in relation to their participation in those activities.

6.187 Examples of "formally organised" sporting activities include basketball competitions organised by a private school, and dodgeball league matches. It does not cover informally organised sport, such as a backyard cricket match.[184]

6.188 Other discrimination laws do not distinguish between formal and informal sporting activities. In Victoria, a person must not discriminate against someone by:

- refusing or failing to select them in a sporting team, or
- excluding them from participating in a sport activity.[185]

6.189 A related issue is whether non-sporting competitions should be recognised as a protected area. Only the ACT prohibits discrimination in other, formally organised competitions. Examples of this might include a radio singing contest, a children's chess competition or a not-for-profit short film festival.[186]

---

179. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.236]. See, eg, Umina Beach Bowling Club v Ryan [1984] 2 NSWLR 61.
180. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "services".
181. Coady v Yachting Victoria Inc [2019] FCCA 2095 [160].
182. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 4(1) definition of "services", s 41; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) sch 1 definition of "services", s 46.
183. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23A; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 71; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 28.
184. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23A.
185. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 71.
186. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 23B.

6.190 The ADA currently excludes certain conduct relating to sport from the protections against discrimination (and where relevant, vilification).[187] Exceptions for sport also apply in other discrimination laws across Australia, including those that expressly protect against discrimination in sport. We consider exceptions relating to sport in more detail in chapter 7.

Strata committees and owners' corporations

6.191 The ADA does not cover the acts of strata committees and owners' corporations, unless they are a "service".[188] While some of their functions may be considered a service, no court or tribunal has said that general strata management is a service.[189] No other state, territory or federal discrimination law provides a general protection against discrimination by strata committees or owners' corporations.

6.192 Some argue this should be addressed in the ADA. Many people own or live in strata and community-titled property. Strata committees and owners' corporations can have a significant impact on people's lives. Owners' corporations control the common property in a strata titled property, which includes shared areas, entrance ways and stairs.

6.193 A person with disability may require an alteration to common property to get to their apartment, like a ramp or a device to open a door automatically. Currently, alterations to common property must be agreed through a special resolution. This requires the support of 75% of voters.[190] But because owners' corporations are not generally subject to the ADA, failing to provide an adjustment is not considered unlawful discrimination.

6.194 In Victoria, owners' corporations must allow an owner or an occupier with a disability to make reasonable adjustments to common property to meet their needs, if certain conditions are met.[191] However, this only protects people with disability and not people with other attributes. For example, it would not address issues with body corporates banning breastfeeding on common property, children from using a shared swimming pool, or owners from displaying gay pride flags on their balconies.[192]

---

187. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22, s 38, s 38P(1), s 49R, s 49ZYW(1).
188. C Sherry, Preliminary Submission PAD01, 1.
189. C Sherry, "Does Discrimination Law Apply to Residential Strata Schemes?" (2020) 43 UNSW Law Journal 307, 333; Hulena v Owners Corporation Strata Plan 13672 [2009] NSWADT 119.
190. Strata Schemes Management Act 2015 (NSW) s 108(1)–(2), s 5(1)(b)(i). An amendment to the Act will, upon commencement, lower the threshold for passing a special resolution in relation to accessibility infrastructure. Such a resolution will pass if less than 50% of votes cast are against it: Strata Schemes Legislation Amendment Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1 [2].
191. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 56(1)–(2).
192. C Sherry, "Does Discrimination Law Apply to Residential Strata Schemes?" (2020) 43 UNSW Law Journal 307, 338.

6.195 One way the ADA could address this gap would be to extend its coverage to services and facilities associated with land and accommodation. This could include services provided by strata schemes to owners and residents. This would go further than the Victorian approach and would apply to individually owned lots too.[193] It could also protect people with other attributes, not just disability.

Question 6.12: Additional areas of public life

(1) Should the ADA apply generally "in any area of public life"? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA specifically cover any additional protected areas? Why or why not? If yes, what area(s) should be added and why?

193. C Sherry, "Does Discrimination Law Apply to Residential Strata Schemes?" (2020) 43 UNSW Law Journal 307, 336.

7. Wider exceptions

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) contains many exceptions, some of which apply across the Act. Others only apply to discrimination, but across a range of protected areas and attributes. We ask if these exceptions are appropriate and outline some possible reform options.

Religious bodies 130

Training and appointing religious personnel 132

Appointing any other person in any capacity 133

Other acts or practices of religious bodies 135

Harassment, vilification and victimisation by religious bodies 140

Adoption services 141

Private educational authorities 142

The exceptions cover a wide range of educational bodies 144

Discrimination in work 145

Discrimination in education 150

Sport 154

Sex discrimination exception 154

Transgender discrimination and vilification exception 155

Disability discrimination exception 156

Age discrimination exception 157

Racial discrimination and vilification exception 158

Charitable benefits 159

Voluntary bodies 160

Aged care accommodation providers 161

Acts done under statutory authority 162

7.1 In the previous chapter, we consider the areas in which the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) makes it unlawful to discriminate based on a protected attribute. The coverage is not absolute, even within these areas. The protections in the ADA are limited by exceptions that make otherwise unlawful acts, lawful.

7.2 The exceptions in the ADA are complex. Some apply specifically to certain attributes. We discuss most of these attribute-specific exceptions in chapter 4. Other exceptions apply to protected areas in which discrimination would otherwise be unlawful, like work. We address most of these in chapter 6.

7.3 The ADA contains broader exceptions too. Some of these apply across the entire ADA, including to the prohibitions on discrimination, vilification, harassment, victimisation and unlawful advertisements. Some apply to both discrimination and vilification. Others only apply to discrimination, but across a range of protected areas and attributes.

7.4 In this chapter, we consider the exceptions relating to:

- religious bodies and faith-based organisations
- adoption services
- private educational authorities, including religious educational authorities
- sport
- charities
- voluntary bodies
- aged care accommodation, and
- acts done under statutory authority.

Religious bodies

7.5 One of the most controversial issues in discrimination law is whether and, if so when, religious bodies should be granted exceptions that allow them to discriminate.

7.6 The ADA provides broad exceptions for religious bodies. Section 56 of the ADA states:

> Nothing in this Act affects:
>
> (a) the ordination or appointment of priests, ministers of religion or members of any religious order,
>
> (b) the training or education of persons seeking ordination or appointment as priests, ministers of religion or members of a religious order,
>
> (c) the appointment of any other person in any capacity by a body established to propagate religion, or
>
> (d) any other act or practice of a body established to propagate religion that conforms to the doctrines of that religion or is necessary to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of the adherents of that religion.

7.7 These exceptions apply to the whole ADA, not just the prohibition of discrimination. This means the exceptions also permit religious bodies to engage in other forms of otherwise unlawful conduct (including sexual harassment and vilification).

7.8 In some circumstances, certain religious bodies will be able to access other exceptions. This includes the exceptions for private educational authorities, adoption service providers, voluntary bodies, charitable benefits, and aged care accommodation providers, which are each outlined later in this chapter.

7.9 This is a complex and sensitive area, which raises issues about the best way to accommodate intersecting human rights. These include the right to non-discrimination (including based on sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital or relationship status, pregnancy, race, or religion). They also include the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion.[1]

7.10 As we discuss in chapter 2, international human rights law recognises that the right to non-discrimination can be limited in some cases.[2]

7.11 International human rights law also recognises that some, but not all, aspects of the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion can be limited. There are two aspects to this right: freedom of belief, and freedom to manifest that belief. Freedom of belief means adopting a religion or belief of one's choice. This right cannot be limited because no one can be compelled to reveal what they believe in their own mind.[3]

7.12 The freedom to manifest beliefs, such as through worship, observance, practice and teaching, includes the freedom to choose religious leaders and teachers, and to establish religious schools.[4] Under international human rights law, this aspect of the right can be limited in certain circumstances, including to protect other people's human rights.[5] United Nations guidance explains that freedom of religion or belief should never be used to justify ends that are inconsistent with any human rights instruments.[6]

7.13 We received a range of views in preliminary submissions about the ADA's religious exceptions. Most generally accepted that, in a diverse society, religious exceptions in some form are important to respect freedom of religion. We heard that religious

---

1. See International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 18(1); International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, 660 UNTS 195 (entered into force 4 January 1969) art 5(d)(vii).
2. OHCHR and Equal Rights Trust, Protecting Minority Rights: A Practical Guide to Developing Comprehensive Anti-Discrimination Legislation (2023) 51.
3. Human Rights Committee, General Comment No 22: Article 18: Freedom of Thought, Conscience or Religion, UN Doc CCPR/C/21/ Rev 1/Add 4 (30 July 1993) [3].
4. Human Rights Committee, General Comment No 22: Article 18: Freedom of Thought, Conscience or Religion, UN Doc CCPR/C/21/ Rev 1/Add 4 (30 July 1993) [4].
5. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 18(3).
6. A Shaheed, Report of the Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion or Belief: Gender-Based Violence and Discrimination in the Name of Religion or Belief, UN Doc A/HRC/43/48 (24 August 2020) [60].

exceptions are needed to allow churches and other religious bodies to operate according to their convictions, doctrines, tenets and beliefs.[7]

7.14 But there is disagreement about how wide the exceptions should be, who they should apply to, and under what conditions. As we outline below, questions have been raised about whether the breadth of the ADA's exceptions for religious bodies is appropriate.

Training and appointing religious personnel

7.15 Two of the exceptions relate to the training and appointment of members of religious bodies.[8] These are closely tied to the exercise of religious freedom. For example, s 56(a) allows a church to discriminate based on any protected attribute when appointing a priest.

7.16 Most other Australian discrimination laws have similar exceptions about appointing and training members of religious orders.[9] Preliminary submissions generally supported exempting the appointment and education of religious leaders from the discrimination prohibitions. This view was shared by some who were concerned about the breadth of other religious exceptions.[10]

7.17 The Australian Law Reform Commission (ALRC) considered that an identical exception to sex discrimination in the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act) should be amended so that it better reflects the diversity of descriptions of religious leaders across religions.[11]

7.18 In 1999, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) also thought that s 56(a) and (b) should not focus on the Christian faith alone. It proposed a revised exception to discrimination regarding the selection, ordination or appointment of persons to perform functions in relation to a religion. It would also cover training or education

---

7. Presbyterian Church of Australia in New South Wales, Preliminary Submission PAD56, 3, 6; Catholic Archdiocese of Sydney, Preliminary Submission PAD37, 2; Catholic Schools NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD80, 3.
8. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(a)–(b).
9. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 37(1)(a)–(b); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 52(a)–(c); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 32(1)(a)–(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 51(a)–(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 72(a)–(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 109(1)(a)–(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 50(1)(a)–(b).
10. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 15. See also Anonymous, Preliminary Submission PAD89, 27; NSW, Office of the Advocate for Children and Young People, Preliminary Submission PAD78, 17; Rainbow Families, Preliminary Submission PAD36, 15–16.
11. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 2. See also NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 46.

for religious appointments. For the exception to apply, the discrimination must be necessary to comply with the doctrines, tenets or belief of that religion.[12]

Appointing any other person in any capacity

7.19 A more controversial exception relates to the appointment of other personnel. Section 56(c) covers the appointment of "any other person in any capacity by a body established to propagate religion".

7.20 The ADA does not explain what a "body established to propagate religion" is, and much will depend on the facts of a particular case. It has, however, been found to include charitable institutions established by churches (as we explain below).[13]

7.21 There is also a view that similar wording in the Sex Discrimination Act is broad enough to potentially include religious educational institutions.[14] There may be some overlaps with the exceptions for private educational authorities, which we consider below.

7.22 The exception in the ADA is wide enough to cover appointments to roles that do not have a religious character.[15] If this exception is considered too broad, there are a range of ways it could be changed.

Inherent requirements, reasonableness and proportionality tests

7.23 One option could be to only allow discrimination in employment if the teaching, observance or practice of religion is an inherent requirement of the position or a genuine occupational requirement. As we mentioned in chapter 5, the NSWLRC recommended making religious belief and practices a protected attribute. It also recommended adding a new exception to allow religious discrimination in employment where religious belief is a genuine occupational qualification.[16]

7.24 There is a view, however, that further safeguards are needed. Some argue that such an exception could indirectly allow discrimination against LGBTQIA+ people, their supporters, and others who do not adhere to a particular religion's beliefs on marriage, sexuality and gender. For instance, it could be argued that adherence to these beliefs is a genuine occupational requirement of the role.[17]

---

12. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.70], Appendix A: Draft Anti-Discrimination Bill 1999, cl 66.
13. OV v QZ (No 2) [2008] NSWADT 115 [69]–[70].
14. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) [4.166].
15. OV v Wesley Mission Council [2010] NSWCA 155, 79 NSWLR 606 [70].
16. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 84.
17. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 76–77, reforms 12, 13.

7.25 Some discrimination laws have additional requirements that religious bodies must meet. For example, religious bodies in Victoria can discriminate based on religious belief or activity if:

- conformity with the doctrines of the religion is an inherent requirement of the position, and
- the discrimination is reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances.[18]

7.26 In Victoria, this exception applies to the whole work relationship, not just at the point of appointment. If this model is considered for NSW, an option could be to confine the exception to appointments (as the ADA does currently).

7.27 The Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) similarly recommended that religious organisations should only be able to discriminate based on religious belief or activity in relation to work if:

- it was reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances, and
- participation in the teaching, observance or practice of a particular religion was a genuine occupational requirement.[19]

Adherence to religious beliefs and/or practices

7.28 An alternative option could be to allow religious institutions (potentially including religious educational institutions) to discriminate by preferring a candidate or refusing to hire them, or in the allocation of duties and responsibilities, depending on whether they:

- adhere to the religious beliefs and practices of the institution, or
- conduct themselves consistently with the religious beliefs and practices of the institution.[20]

7.29 As a safeguard, it has been suggested that the law could require institutions to have a written policy. Employers would only be allowed to terminate employees under this exception if they breach a written agreement to conduct themselves in accordance with the ethos of the institution.[21]

7.30 The Australian Capital Territory (ACT) takes a similar approach. There, religious bodies can discriminate in employment, but only on the ground of religious conviction:

---

18. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82A(1). See also Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 33C.
19. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 39.1–39.2.
20. S C Derrington, "Of Shields and Swords: Let the Jousting Begin!" (Paper presented at Freedom19 Conference, Sydney, 4 September 2019) 8–9.
21. S C Derrington, "Of Shields and Swords: Let the Jousting Begin!" (Paper presented at Freedom19 Conference, Sydney, 4 September 2019) 8–9.

- where this conforms to the doctrines, tenets or beliefs of the body's religion, and
- when the discrimination is necessary to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of adherents of the religion, and the body has published an employment policy.[22]

7.31 The exception does not apply to employment at a religious educational institution, or to a religious body whose sole or main purpose is commercial.[23] The ACT Law Reform Advisory Council recommended amending this exception so it only permits discrimination where it is reasonably justified.[24]

Duties relating to religious observance or practice

7.32 A narrower option could be to exempt only the selection or appointment of people to perform duties or functions in relation to "religious observance or practice". Many other discrimination laws in Australia contain this exception.[25] In 2023, a private members' Bill (the Equality Bill) proposed to add a similar exception to the ADA.[26] This aspect of the Bill was not enacted.

Question 7.1: Religious personnel exceptions

(1) Should the ADA provide exceptions for:
   (a) the training and appointment of members of religious orders?
   (b) "the appointment of any other person in any capacity by a body established to propagate religion"?

(2) If so, what should these exceptions cover and when should they apply?

Other acts or practices of religious bodies

7.33 A related issue is whether religious bodies should be permitted to discriminate in relation to any other acts and practices.

7.34 Section 56(d) contains a wide exception for any body "established to propagate religion". Nothing in the ADA applies to the acts or practices of such bodies that either:

- conform to the doctrines of that religion, or

22. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 32(1)(e).
23. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 32(2)–(3).
24. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) rec 19.2.
25. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 37(1)(c); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 52(c); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 32(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 51(c); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 72(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 109(1)(c).
26. Equality Legislation Amendment (LGBTIQA+) Bill 2023 (NSW), First Print, sch 1 [40].

- are necessary to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of the adherents of that religion.[27]

7.35 As we note above, the ADA does not define what a "body established to propagate religion" is. However, it has been found to include charitable institutions that are established by churches.[28] For example, it applied to a foster care service provided by the Wesley Mission.[29]

7.36 An almost identical exception in the Sex Discrimination Act permitted aged care services run by religious organisations to discriminate against same sex couples.[30]

7.37 The ALRC observed that the Sex Discrimination Act exception could also apply to religious educational institutions. It recommended expressly excluding them.[31]

7.38 The Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) contains a similar exception to its protection against termination because of one or more protected attributes. An exception applies if the person is a staff member of an institution that is conducted in accordance with the doctrines, tenets, beliefs or teachings of a particular religion or creed. The termination must be in good faith and "to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of adherents of that religion or creed".[32]

7.39 The ALRC recommended amending this exception in relation to religious educational institutions. It considered the exception should be no broader than the ALRC's recommended exceptions under the Sex Discrimination Act.[33]

7.40 As discussed above, some submissions supported retaining the current religious exceptions because they safeguard freedom of thought, conscience and religion.[34] However, some think s 56(d) is too broad and argue it prioritises religious freedom over other human rights.[35]

---

27. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(d).
28. OV v QZ (No 2) [2008] NSWADT 115 [69]–[70].
29. OW v Wesley Mission Council [2010] NSWADT 293 [35].
30. Australia, Attorney-General's Department, Consolidation of Commonwealth Anti-Discrimination Laws: Human Rights and Anti-Discrimination Bill 2012, Explanatory Notes, Exposure Draft (2012) [190]; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 37(1)(d), s 37(2)(a). This exception was amended in 2013 to no longer apply to Commonwealth-funded aged care.
31. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 1, [4.165]–[4.166].
32. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 772(2)(b). See also Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 351(2)(c).
33. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 5.
34. See, eg, Catholic Archdiocese of Sydney, Preliminary Submission PAD37, 4.
35. See, eg, NSW Council for Civil Liberties Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [104]; Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 7; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 15; New South Wales Bar Association, Preliminary Submission PAD86 [40].

7.41 If this exception is considered too broad, there may be ways to limit its scope while respecting freedom of religion. We set out some possible options below.

Limit the exception to certain attributes

7.42 Currently, the exception in s 56(d) applies to all protected attributes. An option could be limit it to certain attributes.

7.43 In Victoria, a general exception for religious bodies only permits discrimination based on religious belief, sex, sexual orientation, lawful sexual activity, marital status, parental status or gender identity.[36] The exception does not permit discrimination based on other attributes, such as disability or race.

7.44 In 2018, a federal expert panel on religious freedom (the Religious Freedom Review) recommended that jurisdictions with exceptions for religious bodies with respect to pregnancy, disability, race or intersex status should review them.[37]

7.45 Alternatively, the exception could be limited to only allow religious bodies to discriminate based on religious belief or activity. The QHRC recommended this approach.[38]

Require reasonableness and proportionality

7.46 Another option could be to add further requirements into the exception. For example, Victoria allows a religious body to discriminate in most areas but only if it is reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances. Different rules apply to religious bodies that are employing people or providing services.[39]

7.47 The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) and the QHRC recommended a similar approach.[40] The QHRC also supported a non-exhaustive list of factors to help determine if the discrimination is reasonable and proportionate. These include the importance of the conduct in protecting the ethos of the religious organisation and the religious susceptibilities of adherents of that religion.[41]

---

36. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82(2).
37. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 1.
38. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 38.1.
39. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82(2).
40. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 75–76; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 38.1.
41. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 38.2.

Special rules for religious bodies providing public goods and services

7.48 Many religious bodies provide essential public services, including health and aged care, and they often receive public funding to deliver these services. One view is that churches that provide social services to the community need to have exceptions, so they can maintain the character of their organisation by only employing people who support their faith.[42]

7.49 However, some preliminary submissions suggested faith-based bodies should not be permitted to discriminate when providing public services or receiving public funding.[43] The right to non-discrimination in international law includes the right to have equal access to public services.[44]

7.50 In 2016, a South Australian review recommended clarifying that an existing exception does not apply to discrimination by religious bodies in the provision of public services, such as health and education.[45]

7.51 Another option could be to add specific requirements before religious bodies providing public services can lawfully discriminate. Victoria, for example, only allows religious bodies to discriminate in the provision of government-funded goods or services based on religious belief or activity (and not other attributes). The discrimination must:

- be reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances, and
- conform with the doctrines and beliefs of the religion or be necessary to avoid injury to the religious sensitivities of followers of the religion.[46]

7.52 The QHRC proposed factors to help determine if discrimination by a religious body is reasonable and proportionate when providing goods and services. These include:

- whether the religious organisation operates in a commercial manner
- the reasonable availability of alternative services, and
- whether the services are essential services.[47]

---

42. Presbyterian Church of Australia in New South Wales, Preliminary Submission PAD56, 6.
43. See, eg, NSW Council for Civil Liberties Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [105]; Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 7; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 13; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 12.
44. See International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 25(c).
45. South Australian Law Reform Institute, "Lawful Discrimination": Exceptions under the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) to Unlawful Discrimination on the Grounds of Gender Identity, Sexual Orientation and Intersex Status, Report (2016) rec 2.
46. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82(2), s 82B. See also Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 32(1).
47. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 38.2.

7.53 The Sex Discrimination Act also treats religious body exceptions differently when certain public services are involved. Although it has a broad exception for religious bodies, this does not apply to the provision of Commonwealth-funded aged care by a religious body, except in relation to employment.[48]

Replace the exception with area-specific exceptions

7.54 Another option could be to replace the broad exception in s 56(d) with more targeted, area-specific exceptions. This may be particularly important if the ADA is amended to prohibit religious discrimination.

7.55 As we outline in chapter 5, in 1999 the NSWLRC recommended adding religion as a protected attribute. It also recommended replacing s 56(d) with area-specific exceptions to allow:

- religious discrimination in employment where religious belief is a genuine occupational requirement
- educational institutions that operate according to religious principles to discriminate in employment based on sex, domestic status, sexuality, transgender status and religion
- educational institutions established for particular religious groups to discriminate based on religion, and
- discrimination based on religion in relation to accommodation established for religious purposes.[49]

7.56 It recommended, for instance, a new accommodation exception modelled on Queensland's discrimination law.[50] The Queensland exception applies where accommodation is controlled by a religious body and the discrimination is both:

- in line with the doctrine of their religion, and
- necessary to avoid "offending the religious sensibilities" of people of that religion.[51]

7.57 The ALRC offered another approach. It recommended that the Sex Discrimination Act should not permit religious educational institutions to discriminate in the provision of accommodation.[52]

---

48. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 37(2).
49. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.72], rec 16, rec 46, rec 84–85, rec 87.
50. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 87.
51. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 90.
52. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 1.

7.58 The NSWLRC also considered whether there should be an exception to religious discrimination in relation to access to sites of religious significance. However, it concluded this would be best addressed through a general "special measures" exception (we discuss this in chapter 11).[53]

7.59 Other states and territories have specific exceptions that allow access to significant sites to be restricted. The Northern Territory (NT) allows a person to restrict access to land, a building or a place of cultural or religious significance by people who are not of a particular sex, age, race or religion. This is an exception to discrimination in the area of goods, services and facilities. For the exception to apply, the restriction must be:

- in accordance with the culture or doctrine of the religion, and
- necessary to avoid offending cultural or religious sensitivities of people of that culture or religion.[54]

7.60 An almost identical Queensland exception to discrimination in goods and services permits people to restrict access to sites of cultural or religious significance. Another Queensland exception permits discrimination in the sale of land based on sex, age, race or religion, if the relevant interest in land is of cultural or religious significance.[55]

Question 7.2: Other acts and practices of religious bodies

Should the ADA provide an exception for other acts or practices of religious bodies? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Harassment, vilification and victimisation by religious bodies

7.61 As we note above, the exceptions for religious bodies in s 56 apply to all forms of unlawful conduct under the ADA, including discrimination, harassment, victimisation and vilification.

7.62 Another issue is whether these exceptions should instead be limited to discrimination, as the NSWLRC recommended in 1999. It stated that "this protection should not be something which religious groups are allowed to hide behind in cases where harassment or vilification of a particular group occurs".[56]

53. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 88.
54. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 43(1).
55. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 48, s 80.
56. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.71].

7.63 One view is that exceptions to harassment or victimisation are never permissible. This conduct cannot be justified under international human rights law.[57]

7.64 Aside from NSW, only Western Australia (WA), Queensland and the NT have exceptions for religious bodies that potentially extend to harassment or victimisation in some cases.[58] However, the LRCWA recommended narrowing the WA exception to only apply to discrimination.[59]

7.65 Section 56 of the ADA also applies to vilification. Some consider this important to protect genuine religious teaching and religious freedom.[60] It operates alongside the specific vilification exceptions for religious discussion and/or instruction. We discuss these vilification-specific exceptions in chapter 8.

7.66 Aside from NSW, only Queensland and the NT have exceptions allowing religious bodies and faith-based organisations to engage in vilification.[61] Victoria has an exception for genuine religious purposes, such as conveying or teaching a religion or proselytising.[62]

Question 7.3: Exceptions for other forms of unlawful conduct

Should the general exceptions for religious bodies continue to apply across the ADA, including to all forms of unlawful conduct under the Act?

Adoption services

7.67 The ADA contains an exception for faith-based organisations that provide adoption services. For the purposes of this exception, a "faith-based organisation" is an organisation established or controlled by a religious organisation, which is accredited under the Adoption Act 2000 (NSW) to provide adoption services.[63]

7.68 The prohibitions on discrimination and vilification based on homosexuality or transgender grounds do not apply to the policies and practices of such

57. OHCHR and Equal Rights Trust, Protecting Minority Rights: A Practical Guide to Developing Comprehensive Anti-Discrimination Legislation (2023) 53.
58. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 51; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 72; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 109.
59. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 74, rec 77.
60. Anglican Church Diocese of Sydney, Submission SV22 [23], [29]. See also Shia Muslim Council of Australia, Submission SV53 [59].
61. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 109; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 51.
62. Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 11(1)(b)(i), s 11(2).
63. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 59A(3) definition of "faith-based organisation".

organisations concerning the provision of adoption services. However, this does not permit discrimination against any child who is or may be adopted.[64]

7.69 There are conflicting views on this exception. Some argue it is important to faith-based adoption agencies, because same sex adoption is incompatible with some religious views about child raising.[65] Others argue that faith-based adoption services should not be allowed to discriminate in the provision of services for which they receive public funding.[66]

7.70 Any law reform efforts will require consideration of the interactions between this exception and the general exceptions for religious bodies in s 56 of the ADA. The general exception for the acts and practices of religious bodies in s 56(d) (outlined above) has been found to apply to foster care services provided by a faith-based organisation.[67] This suggests faith-based adoption service providers may be able to rely on the general exception, even if the specific adoption service exception is repealed.

7.71 There is also a view that the general exception in s 56(d) is wider than the adoption services exception. The adoption services exception does not permit discrimination against children — no such limitation applies to s 56(d).[68]

Question 7.4: Exceptions for providers of adoption services

Should the ADA have a specific exception for providers of adoption services? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Private educational authorities

7.72 The ADA has specific exceptions for "private educational authorities". These allow any "private educational authority" to discriminate in relation to work or education, based on almost any protected attribute.

7.73 These exceptions were introduced in 1981, when the ADA was amended to prohibit discrimination against staff or students in public schools. They were intended to

64. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 59A(1)–(2).
65. See, eg, Freedom for Faith, Preliminary Submission PAD25, 6–7.
66. See, eg, Rainbow Labor NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD30, 2; Rainbow Families, Preliminary Submission PAD36, 16.
67. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(d); OW v Wesley Mission Council [2010] NSWADT 293 [35].
68. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 85, referring to the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(d), s 59A(2).

address the concerns about private schools and mainstream churches about being subject to the ADA.[69]

7.74 One view is that that private schools are private communities, set up to create "distinct schooling environments".[70] Some preliminary submissions support exceptions for religious schools in particular, because the exceptions:

- protect the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion
- allow schools to maintain their ethos and identity in all aspects of school life, including by employing staff and preferring families whose values align with the school's ethos
- allow parents the freedom to choose a faith-based schooling environment for their child, that aligns with their religious and moral convictions, and
- allow schools to teach a distinctive worldview without having to deal with costly discrimination claims.[71]

7.75 Many other preliminary submissions argued that these exceptions are too broad.[72] Some are concerned that the exceptions apply unconditionally, without requiring duty holders to justify their conduct.[73] There are also specific concerns that the exceptions:

- can be used to permit discrimination against LGBTQIA+ people and their supporters[74]
- do not reflect contemporary community standards and provide people in NSW with less protections than in other parts of Australia,[75] and
- are outdated, unjustified and undermine inclusivity.[76]

---

69. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.104]–[4.105], [4.178], [4.181].
70. Australian Christian Lobby, Preliminary Submission PAD12, 8.
71. See, eg, David A W Miller, Preliminary Submission PAD15, 3; Freedom for Faith, Preliminary Submission PAD25, 5; Adventist Schools Australia, Australian Association of Christian Schools, Christian Schools Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD26, 4; Presbyterian Church of Australia in New South Wales, Preliminary Submission PAD56, 3, 7; Family First Party Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD65 [5.3.2]; Catholic Schools NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD80, 3.
72. See, eg, Respect Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD57, 7; Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 12; Independent Education Union of Australia NSW/ACT Branch, Preliminary Submission PAD19, 1; HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 18; Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 7; Sex Workers Outreach Project NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD77, 3; Unions NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD90, 12.
73. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 61, 68.
74. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 3.
75. Independent Education Union of Australia NSW/ACT Branch, Preliminary Submission PAD19, 1.
76. Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 3.

7.76 A recent parliamentary inquiry also noted that NSW is the only part of Australia that allows discrimination against school staff and students based on disability. It recommended that consideration be given to removing the exceptions which permit discrimination against people with disability in private schools.[77]

7.77 There is also a view that religious schools should be subject to secular laws as they receive public funding and tax benefits.[78]

7.78 In the following sections, we consider the scope of the exceptions for private educational authorities, and how they apply in employment and education.

7.79 We also raise some possible alternatives for consideration. In doing so, we note that any attempts to change these exceptions will need to consider the effects of the general exceptions for religious bodies (outlined above).[79] There are possible overlaps between these categories of exceptions, as the general exceptions potentially include religious educational institutions.

The exceptions cover a wide range of educational bodies

7.80 The ADA is the only Australian discrimination law with exceptions for "private educational authorities". Some other states and territories, and the Sex Discrimination Act, have more targeted exceptions for religious schools instead.

7.81 A preliminary issue is whether any such exceptions should extend to all private educational authorities. To the extent that exceptions are considered necessary, should they be limited to religious educational authorities?

7.82 In 1999, the NSWLRC observed the exceptions reflect the idea that the state should not interfere with education in the "private sphere". But it concluded there is no coherent rationale for the "extremely broad" exceptions and recommended replacing them with narrower exceptions specifically for religious schools.[80]

7.83 Under the ADA, a "private educational authority" includes any school, college, university or other institution at which education or training is provided, which is not public. It excludes any university established under an Act of incorporation.[81]

---

77. NSW, Legislative Council Portfolio Committee No 3, Children and Young People with Disability in New South Wales Educational Settings, Report 52 (2024) rec 24, [3.75].
78. See NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.119]; Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) [2.23].
79. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(c)–(d).
80. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 16, [4.104]–[4.106].
81. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "private educational authority".

However the definition includes any business colleges and other private post-secondary institutions that are not established under an Act of incorporation.[82]

7.84 Many NSW schools fit this definition. Most of these private schools have a religious affiliation. In 2023, 37.1% of NSW students were enrolled in non-government schools.[83] Eighteen percent of NSW students were enrolled in Catholic schools. Nineteen percent were enrolled in independent schools, 83% of which have a religious affiliation.[84]

7.85 In 2022–23, combined government funding (from both the Australian and NSW Governments) for non-government schools in NSW was $6.6 billion.[85]

7.86 The statistics indicate that limiting the exceptions to religious schools would confine the scope of the exception, but not significantly. Nor would it address the issue of whether the exceptions appropriately address the intersection between religious freedom and other rights in relation to work and education. Other issues require consideration.

Discrimination in work

7.87 Exceptions in the ADA allow private educational authorities to discriminate based on sex, disability, transgender grounds, homosexuality, or marital or domestic status in relation to employment.[86] For example, they can discriminate:

- in deciding who to employ and the terms of employment
- by denying or limiting access to promotions, transfers, training or other benefits, or
- by dismissing an employee or subjecting them to other detriment.[87]

7.88 Most other Australian discrimination laws contain specific work-related exceptions for religious educational authorities.[88] The Sex Discrimination Act, for example, has

---

82. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.106].
83. NSW, Centre for Education Statistics and Evaluation, Schools and Students: 2023 Statistical Bulletin (2024) 2.
84. Association of Independent Schools of NSW, Independent Schools in NSW Snapshot (2024) 2–3.
85. Australia, Productivity Commission, Report on Government Services 2025: Child Care, Education and Training, (part B) (2025) table 4A.2.
86. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 25(3)(c), s 38C(3)(c), s 40(3)(c), s 49D(3)(c), s 49ZH(3)(c).
87. See, eg, Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 25(2), s 25(3)(c).
88. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 38(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 51(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 83A; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 34(3); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 73(1)–(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 25.

a broad exception for any educational institution that is "conducted in accordance with the doctrines, tenets, beliefs or teachings of a particular religion".[89]

7.89 On the other hand, some discrimination laws do not contain this kind of exception.[90] In 2022, the NT Act was amended to remove an exception that permitted religious educational authorities to discriminate based on religious belief or activity, or sexuality, in employment.[91] The intention was to provide greater community inclusion.[92]

7.90 One option could be to repeal the existing private educational authority employment exceptions and introduce a more general employment exception. The NT, for instance, still allows discrimination if it is based on a genuine occupational qualification.[93] We outline this option in more detail in chapter 6.

7.91 However, the current NT Government has indicated that it plans to reintroduce the targeted religious educational authorities' employment exception, to "restore religious freedoms".[94]

7.92 In NSW, some may continue to support distinct employment exceptions for private educational authorities or for religious educational authorities, more specifically. This raises questions about what any such exceptions should cover. We set out some considerations, below.

The relevant attributes

7.93 The ADA's exceptions for private educational authorities permit discrimination in work based on sex, disability, transgender grounds, homosexuality, and marital or domestic status.

7.94 Some Australian discrimination laws are narrower and only permit religious educational institutions to discriminate in work based on religious belief or activity.[95] The ALRC supported this narrow application. It considered that if religious

---

89. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 38(1).
90. See, eg, Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth); Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT).
91. Anti-Discrimination Amendment Act 2022 (NT) s 17, repealing Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 37A.
92. Northern Territory Attorney-General's Department, "Modernising the Anti-Discrimination Act 1992" <agd.nt.gov.au/law-reform-reviews/law-reforms/modernising-the-anti-discrimination-act-1992> (retrieved 19 March 2025).
93. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 35(1)(b)(i).
94. M Garrick, "NT's CLP Government Confirms Plans to Scrap Labor's Hate Speech Changes" (2 March 2025) ABC News <www.abc.net.au/news/2025-03-02/nt-anti-discrimination-hate-speech-laws-repealed/104991288> (retrieved 9 April 2025).
95. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 51(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 83A.

discrimination is made unlawful at the Commonwealth level, there should be a limited exception for religious educational institutions.[96]

7.95 However, this may still raise issues about how to reconcile competing views. There is an argument that such an exception could permit a religious school to terminate an employee who refused to believe that marriage can only be between a man and a woman. This could be considered a form of discrimination based on religious belief (or lack of).[97] Opinions will differ on whether such an outcome would strike the right balance, with some arguing that certain safeguards should apply to limit the exception.

7.96 Others have supported allowing religious educational authorities to discriminate based on other attributes. The Religious Freedom Review concluded that religious educational authorities should be able to discriminate in employment based on sexual orientation, gender identity and relationship status. But they should not be able to discriminate based on race, disability, pregnancy or intersex status.[98]

7.97 In 1999 the NSWLRC concluded that religious educational authorities should be allowed to discriminate in employment based on sexual orientation, transgender status, domestic status, sex and pregnancy. It also recommended permitting religious discrimination in employment where religious belief is a genuine occupational requirement.[99]

The circumstances in which an exception applies

7.98 Another issue is whether the ADA should contain further requirements that must be met before any such exceptions to discrimination in work apply.

7.99 If an exception applies only to religious educational authorities, one approach could be to confine it to acts promoting or protecting the observance of religious beliefs.

7.100 The Sex Discrimination Act, for example, applies an exception to acts done in good faith to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of adherents of that religion.[100] However, the ALRC recommended repealing this exception.[101]

---

96. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 7(B).
97. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 9–10.
98. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 5– 6.
99. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 16, rec 84, appendix A: Draft Anti-Discrimination Bill 1999, cl 28(5).
100. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 38(1)–(2).
101. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 1.

7.101 Some other reviews have proposed that religious educational authorities should be able to discriminate in employment if:

- the discrimination is founded in the precepts of the religion,[102] or
- the school has a genuine belief that the discrimination is required to comply with the tenets of the religion.[103]

7.102 Another view is that the Sex Discrimination Act should allow religious institutions (including religious schools) to discriminate in employment by preferring a candidate, or refusing to hire them, depending on whether:

- they adhere to the institution's religious beliefs and practices, or
- their conduct is consistent with the institution's religious beliefs and practices.[104]

7.103 Employers would be allowed to terminate employees that breach a written agreement to conduct themselves in accordance with the ethos of the school.[105]

7.104 As an additional safeguard, some discrimination laws require educational authorities to publish a policy. The ACT requires the school to publish a readily accessible policy in relation to employment of staff and engagement of contractors.[106] South Australia requires a school to have a written policy stating its position in relation to the matter of the precepts of the religion as it relates to sexual orientation, gender identity or intersex status, which is provided on request.[107]

7.105 The Religious Freedom Review supported a similar requirement.[108] This can make prospective employees aware of the school's beliefs, and they can choose not to apply for roles at the school if this raises any concerns.

7.106 Other models apply further safeguards to confine the application of the exception. In Victoria, religious educational institutions may only discriminate against someone in relation to employment where:

- conformity with the doctrines of the religion is an inherent requirement of the position

---

102. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 5(a).
103. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 16.
104. S C Derrington, "Of Shields and Swords: Let the Jousting Begin!" (Paper presented at Freedom19 Conference, Sydney, 4 September 2019) 8–9.
105. S C Derrington, "Of Shields and Swords: Let the Jousting Begin!" (Paper presented at Freedom19 Conference, Sydney, 4 September 2019) 8–9.
106. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(4)–(5).
107. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 34(3).
108. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 5.

- the person cannot meet the inherent requirement because of their religious belief or activity, and
- the discrimination is reasonable and proportionate based on the circumstances.[109]

7.107 In determining the inherent requirements of the position, the nature of the religious body and the religious doctrines, beliefs or principles in accordance with which it is conducted must be considered.[110]

7.108 For example, the Victorian Attorney-General observed that, in most religious schools, conformity with the doctrines, beliefs or principles of the school's religion would be an inherent requirement of a religious education position. This is unlikely to be the case for support positions, such as school gardeners. Another safeguard in Victorian law is the requirement that the discrimination be reasonable and proportionate. The Attorney-General indicated that this may require consideration of factors such as:

- the nature of the role
- the nature and extent of the inconsistency of the employee's belief
- the consequences for both the employee and the employer should the discriminatory action happen or not happen, and
- whether there are any other responses available to the employer.[111]

7.109 Others have also suggested adding requirements of reasonableness and proportionality.[112] For example, the ALRC recommended only allowing religious educational authorities to discriminate based on religion and only when selecting staff. The discrimination must be:

- reasonably necessary to build a community of faith, and
- proportionate to the aim of building a community of faith, including considering any disadvantage or harm that may be caused to any person.[113]

---

109. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 83A(1).
110. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 82A(2).
111. Victoria, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Council, Second Reading Speech, 19 November 2021, 4646.
112. See, eg, Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 79; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 39.2; South Australian Law Reform Institute, "Lawful Discrimination": Exceptions under the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) to Unlawful Discrimination on the Grounds of Gender Identity, Sexual Orientation and Intersex Status, Report (2016) rec 3.
113. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 7B.

Question 7.5: Private educational authorities employment exceptions

(1) Should the ADA contain exceptions for private educational authorities in employment? Should these be limited to religious educational authorities?

(2) If you think the Act should provide exceptions in this area:

(a) what attributes should the exceptions apply to?

(b) what requirements, if any, should duty holders meet before an exception applies?

Discrimination in education

7.110 Other broad exceptions in the ADA allow private educational authorities to discriminate against students or potential students based on sex, disability, age, transgender grounds, homosexuality or marital or domestic status.[114] These institutions can discriminate based on these attributes by:

- refusing admission
- admitting students subject to certain terms
- denying or limiting access to benefits, or
- expelling students or subjecting them to any other detriment.[115]

7.111 For example, it is not unlawful discrimination for a private school to expel a student who identifies as transgender. Similarly, students with disability will not be protected by the ADA if they are expelled from a private school because of their disability.[116]

7.112 As discussed above, no other Australian laws contain exceptions for "private educational authorities". However, some other Australian discrimination laws have exceptions to discrimination in education that apply only to religious educational institutions.[117] As above, an option could be to similarly make these exceptions only available to religious educational institutions.

7.113 However, a more fundamental question is whether religious educational institutions should be able to access exceptions to discrimination in relation to students and prospective students. Some argue that religious educational authorities should

---

114. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 31A(3)(a), s 38K(3), s 46A(3), s 49L(3)(a), s 49ZYL(3)(b), s 49ZO(3).

115. See, eg, Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 31A.

116. NSW, Legislative Council Portfolio Committee No 3, Children and Young People with Disability in New South Wales Educational Settings, Report 52 (2024) ix.

117. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 38(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 39, s 61; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 51A; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(1); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85ZE(5); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 73(3); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 41.

never be permitted to discriminate against students or prospective students. This is because:

- discrimination is harmful to vulnerable students
- discriminating against students with protected attributes in the name of religion is inconsistent with international human rights obligations, and
- schools that are funded with public money should be safe for all students and accountable to community expectations.[118]

7.114 The ALRC recently recommended repealing the Sex Discrimination Act exception that allows religious schools to discriminate against students and prospective students.[119] If this option is pursued in NSW, consideration would need to be given to the overlapping operation of the exceptions for private educational authorities and the general exceptions for religious bodies in s 56.

7.115 However, as we acknowledge above, others argue that exceptions for religious schools are important to protect religious freedom, enable religious schools to uphold their ethos and values, and give families a choice of education for their children. On this basis, some may argue that the exceptions should be retained — at least in some form.

7.116 This raises further questions about what any such exceptions should cover. We set out some considerations, below.

The relevant attributes

7.117 The current exceptions in the ADA apply to discrimination in education based on sex, disability, transgender grounds, homosexuality, or marital or domestic status.

7.118 Other discrimination laws take a narrower approach. In Victoria, the ACT, Queensland and Tasmania, religious educational authorities can only discriminate in education based on religious belief. South Australia only allows discrimination based on religious appearance.[120]

7.119 Both the NSWLRC and the Religious Freedom Review recommended that religious educational authorities should also be permitted to discriminate based on domestic

---

118. See Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) [4.23]. See also NSW Council for Civil Liberties Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [101]–[102].
119. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 1.
120. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 39(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 51A(1), s 51A(4); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(1)–(2); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85ZE(5); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 41(a).

status, sexuality, and gender identity. In 1999, the NSWLRC also recommended the exception should permit sex discrimination.[121]

Application to prospective or existing students

7.120 Another question is: at what point in the educational relationship should the exceptions apply? Currently, as noted above, the exceptions apply across a wide range of points in the relationship between a student or prospective student, and a private educational authority.

7.121 Other Australian discrimination laws provide more limited exceptions. For example, some only allow discrimination against prospective students at admission, and not when students are already enrolled.[122] This would allow a school to refuse to admit a student because of their religious beliefs at the time of enrolment. But they could not discriminate against a student once they are enrolled.[123]

7.122 Similarly, the NSWLRC previously recommended an exception to religious discrimination relating to admission to educational institutions established for particular religious groups.[124]

The circumstances in which the exception should apply

7.123 Another issue is whether the ADA should contain further requirements that must be met before any such exceptions to discrimination in education will apply.

7.124 As with discrimination in work, one approach could be to link the exception to acts promoting or protecting the observance of religious beliefs. The Sex Discrimination Act, for instance, applies an exception in education to acts done in good faith to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of adherents of that religion.[125] However, as noted above, the ALRC has recommended repealing this exception.[126]

7.125 Another view is that religious educational authorities should be allowed to prefer or refuse to admit a student based on whether:

---

121. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 7; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 20, rec 22.
122. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 51A(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 41.
123. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 385.
124. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 85.
125. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 38(3). See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(d).
126. Australian Law Reform Commission, Maximising the Realisation of Human Rights: Religious Educational Institutions and Anti-Discrimination Laws, Report 142 (2023) rec 1.

- the student (or their parents) adheres to the religious beliefs and practices of the institution, and
- the student is recognised by the institution as either "having the relevant religious status" or conducting themselves in accordance with the religious beliefs and practices of the institution.

Under this model, the exception would only apply to conduct that is consistent with the religious beliefs and practices of the institution.[127]

7.126 Other reviews suggested other requirements, such as consideration of the best interests of the child. The Religious Freedom Review recommended that religious schools be allowed to discriminate against students, including enrolled students, if:

- the discrimination is founded in the precepts of the religion, and
- the school has regard to the best interests of the child as the primary consideration.[128]

7.127 The Religious Freedom Review also recommended that religious educational authorities should have to publish policies setting out their position.[129] This enables parents to choose not to enrol their child in a school if their beliefs are inconsistent with the school's policy.

7.128 This is currently required in Tasmania and the ACT. In Tasmania, the educational institution's admissions policy must demonstrate that the criterion for admission relates to the religious belief or affiliation, or religious activity of the prospective student, their parents or grandparents.[130] In the ACT, a religious educational institution must publish a widely accessible admissions policy.[131]

7.129 However, some argue that more safeguards are required. Even if religious schools are only permitted to discriminate based on religious belief, there is a view that this could still be used indirectly to discriminate against LGBTQIA+ students and their supporters. For example, it may still be open to a school to require students to adhere to a particular religion's teachings on gender and sexuality.[132]

7.130 Another option is to require religious schools to meet requirements of reasonableness and proportionality. Victoria permits religious educational

---

127. S C Derrington, "Of Shields and Swords: Let the Jousting Begin!" (Paper presented at Freedom19 Conference, Sydney, 4 September 2019) 7.
128. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 7.
129. P Ruddock, Religious Freedom Review: Report of the Expert Panel (2018) rec 7.
130. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) 51A(4).
131. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 46(3).
132. Equality Australia, Dismissed, Denied and Demeaned: A National Report on LGBTQ+ Discrimination in Faith-Based Schools and Organisations (2024) 65, reform 7.

institutions to discriminate based on religious belief or activity. However, the discrimination must be reasonable and proportionate in the circumstances. It must also either:

- conform with the doctrines, beliefs, or principles in accordance with which the religious educational institution is to be conducted, or
- be reasonably necessary to avoid injury to the religious sensitivities of adherents of the religion in accordance with which the religious educational institution is to be conducted.[133]

Question 7.6: Discrimination against students and prospective students

(1) Should the ADA contain exceptions for private educational authorities in education? Should these be limited to religious educational authorities?

(2) If you think it is necessary for the ADA to provide exceptions in this area:

  (a) what attributes should the exceptions apply to?

  (b) should they apply to prospective students, existing students, or both?

  (c) what requirements, if any, should duty holders meet before an exception applies?

Sport

7.131 The ADA also contains exceptions relating to discrimination in sport. These exceptions apply to discrimination based on race, sex, transgender grounds, disability and age.[134] Other exceptions may apply if, for example, the sporting organisation is a "voluntary body" (we outline this exception below).

7.132 The key issue is whether these exceptions for sport strike an appropriate balance between ensuring sporting competitions remain fair, while protecting the rights to equality and non-discrimination.

Sex discrimination exception

7.133 Under the ADA, it is lawful to exclude people of one sex from participating in any sporting activity. The exception does not include coaching or administration.[135]

7.134 Other discrimination laws have more limited exceptions for sex discrimination in sport, which only apply:

133. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 83(2). See also Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 39.

134. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22, s 38, s 38P, s 49R, s 49ZYW.

135. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38.

- to competitive sporting activities[136]
- where the strength, stamina or physique of competitors is relevant to the activity[137]
- to people over the age of 12,[138] and
- where the restriction is reasonable or "reasonable, proportionate and justifiable in the circumstances".[139]

7.135 The exception in the Sex Discrimination Act contains some of these safeguards. It allows someone to be excluded from participating in a competitive sporting activity because of their sex if the strength, stamina or physique of competitors is relevant. This does not apply to sporting activities for children under the age of 12.[140]

7.136 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended narrowing the exception to include criteria relating to strength, stamina and physique. But it thought the exception should continue to apply to children under the age of 12. Its view was there could still be sex-based differences in strength, stamina and physique in young children.[141]

Transgender discrimination and vilification exception

7.137 Another exception permits the exclusion of a transgender person from sporting activities, other than coaching or administration, "for members of the sex with which the transgender person identifies". The exception applies to the protections against discrimination and transgender vilification.[142]

---

136. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(1); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 41(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 29; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 48; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 35(1).
137. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 41(a); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1)(a); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 48(a); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 35(1).
138. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(2), Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 29; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(3).
139. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 41(1)(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1)(a).
140. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(2)(e).
141. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 60, [6.204].
142. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38P(1).

7.138 One view is that this exception is necessary to ensure that women's sport is kept fair and safe.[143] Others think the exception is too broad.[144] Some highlight that banning transgender people from participating in sport is stigmatising and damaging to health and wellbeing.[145]

7.139 If reform is considered necessary, one option could be to repeal the exception. For example, the ACT, NT, Tasmania and South Australia do not provide exceptions to discrimination in sport based on gender identity.

7.140 Another option could be to retain the exception but make it more targeted. Other discrimination laws have narrower exceptions. For example, some:

- prohibit discrimination against children under 12 years old[146]
- limit the exception to competitive sporting activities[147]
- only apply to the extent that the strength, stamina or physique of competitors is relevant to the sport (the NSWLRC recommended this also),[148] and
- provide that the exception does not apply to umpiring or refereeing.[149]

7.141 Another option could be to require that any discrimination against transgender athletes be reasonable and proportionate.[150]

Disability discrimination exception

7.142 Another exception allows the exclusion of people with disability from a sporting activity, if:

- they are not reasonably capable of performing the actions reasonably required

143. Family First Party Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD65 [5.2.1]–[5.2.9]; Feminist Legal Clinic Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD72 [8].
144. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 15; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 16; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 12–13; Anonymous, Preliminary Submission PAD89, 30–31; ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 10; NSW Council for Civil Liberties Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [108].
145. ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 10.
146. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(2)(e); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(3).
147. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(3).
148. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) 72(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(3); NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 60, rec 81.
149. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 42(2)(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(4)(b), Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 35(2)(b).
150. Equality Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD07, 15–16; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 16.

- selection for participation in the sporting activity is done in a reasonable way, based on skills and abilities relevant to the sporting activity and relative to other participants, or
- the sporting activity is conducted for people with a particular disability and the person does not have that disability.[151]

7.143 There is a similar exception in the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth).[152] All other states and territories also have exceptions that allow the exclusion of people with disability from sporting activities in some cases.[153] However, some states and territories:

- limit the exception to competitive sporting activities[154]
- require that discrimination is reasonable, proportionate and justifiable,[155] and
- clearly exclude coaching, administration and umpiring of sporting activities.[156]

7.144 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception. It noted that sport is not a protected area under the ADA, such that this section was unnecessary.[157] However, this is arguably inconsistent with its recommendations to retain the other sport-related exceptions.

Age discrimination exception

7.145 The ADA also makes it lawful to exclude people of particular ages from participating in any sporting activity, other than coaching or administration.[158]

7.146 There is no sport exception in the Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth), but other states and territories permit discrimination in sport based on age.[159] Their

---

151. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49R.
152. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 28(c).
153. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(2)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1)(d); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1)(d); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 43; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 81; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 66N(3).
154. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1).
155. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57(1)(a).
156. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(3); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(4).
157. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.295], rec 68.
158. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZYW.
159. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57M(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(2)(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 31; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85Q; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 66ZJ(3).

exceptions are often narrower than in the ADA, as they only apply to competitive sport.[160]

7.147 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended narrowing the exception to only apply to competitive sporting activities where the strength, stamina or physique of the competitors is relevant. It considered that age distinctions can be arbitrary and may not reflect the level of skill or ability.[161]

Racial discrimination and vilification exception

7.148 The ADA also permits discrimination and vilification based on nationality, place of birth or length of residence in:

- selecting people to represent a place in any sport or game, or
- the eligibility to compete, under the rules of any competition, in a sport or game.[162]

7.149 The characteristics relevant to this exception are different to the ADA's wide definition of race, which "includes colour, nationality, descent and ethnic, ethno-religious or national origin".[163]

7.150 The purpose of this exception may be different to the other sport exceptions. In 1999, the NSWLRC noted the view that its primary purpose was to allow sporting groups based on national identity to exclude people of different national origins. However, it thought the formation of clubs on racial grounds could have wider, detrimental effects. The NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception and introducing a narrow exception to discrimination by registered clubs. This new exception would be targeted at actions to reduce disadvantage or preserve minority culture (which we discuss in chapter 6).[164]

Question 7.7: Exceptions relating to sport

Should the ADA provide exceptions to discrimination or vilification in sport? If so, what should they cover and when should they apply?

160. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 57M(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 72(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 56(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 111(1)(c); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 31; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 85Q.
161. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 79, [6.396].
162. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22.
163. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4(1) definition of "race".
164. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.160], rec 53.

Charitable benefits

7.151 An exception applies across the ADA in relation to:

- a provision of a deed, will or other instrument that confers charitable benefits (or enables them to be conferred) on people of a class identified by reference to one or more of the attributes protected from discrimination, and
- an act which is done to give effect to such a provision.[165]

7.152 The ADA defines a "charitable benefit" as a benefit for purposes that are exclusively charitable according to the law in force anywhere in Australia.[166] Commonwealth law defines "charitable purposes" broadly, to include a wide range of purposes including advancing health, education, public welfare and religion.[167]

7.153 The exception can have wide applications. For example, it allowed someone to bequeath funds to a hospital for the medical treatment of exclusively "white babies".[168]

7.154 If this exception is considered too broad, but some form of exception is desirable, there are several other options to consider.

7.155 In 1999, the NSWLRC considered an exception of this type was important, partly because the exception seeks to ensure the ADA does not intrude into the private sphere. However, it did not support the exception in its current form. It recommended replacing the general exception with one covering the provision of goods, or disposal of property by gift or will, to a specific recipient.[169] As we discuss in chapter 6, the NSWLRC recommended that the ADA specifically prohibit discrimination in the disposal of interests in land.

7.156 Another option would be to adopt the approach used in federal discrimination law, which only grants an exception to registered charities and not individuals.[170]

7.157 A different option, recommended by the LRCWA, was to exempt only acts that were:

- consistent with the stated purpose of the relevant charity, and

---

165. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 55.
166. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 55(2) definition of "charitable benefits".
167. Charities Act 2013 (Cth) s 12 definition of "charitable purpose".
168. Kay v South Eastern Sydney Area Health Service [2003] NSWSC 292 [19]–[20].
169. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 45, [6.59].
170. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 36; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 49; Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 34; Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 8(2).

- reasonable and proportionate to the public benefit the charity was trying to achieve.[171]

7.158 The Equality Act 2010 (UK) provides another model to consider. Subject to certain exceptions, it allows a person to restrict the provision of benefits to people with certain protected characteristics, if this is done in pursuance of a charitable instrument. However, the provision of benefits must be either:

- a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim, or
- for the purpose of preventing or compensating for a disadvantage linked to the protected characteristic.[172]

Question 7.8: The charities exception

Should the ADA provide exceptions relating to charitable benefits? If so, what should they cover and when should they apply?

Voluntary bodies

7.159 The ADA has a broad exception for non-profit bodies. The exception provides that nothing in the ADA applies to:

- any rule or practice of a body that restricts admission to membership, and
- the provision of benefits, facilities or services to members of that body.[173]

7.160 This applies across the whole ADA, including the protections against discrimination, harassment, vilification, victimisation and unlawful advertisements.

7.161 Examples of voluntary bodies covered by this exception include a surf lifesaving club and a social tennis group.[174] However, the exception does not apply to bodies established by legislation. Nor does it apply to certain bodies registered under legislation, including registered clubs, cooperatives, friendly societies, building societies or credit unions, and cooperative housing societies.[175]

7.162 On one view, voluntary bodies should be exempt from discrimination law because they operate within the private sphere. It could be argued that they need independence so they can maintain a specific organisational culture, or associational autonomy.

---

171. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 70, rec 71.
172. Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 193(2).
173. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 57(2).
174. Webb v Surf Life Saving New South Wales [2020] NSWCATAD 232 [27]–[34]; Grass v Voyager Tennis Pty Ltd [2023] NSWCATAD 68 [58].
175. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 57(1).

7.163 Others think they should be covered by the ADA, including because they often receive substantial public funding and benefits, and provide important community services.[176]

7.164 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended repealing this exception. It concluded that the ADA should prohibit discrimination in relation to membership and access to benefits by all incorporated associations with membership open to the public or a section of the public.[177] We discuss the issue of clubs further in chapter 6.

7.165 Another option could be to make the exception narrower. For instance, a similar exception in the ACT only covers discrimination. It only applies if:

- the club or body is established to benefit a class of people sharing a protected attribute, and
- the discrimination is reasonable, proportionate and justifiable in the circumstances.[178]

Question 7.9: Voluntary bodies exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for voluntary bodies? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Aged care accommodation providers

7.166 Another exception applies to establishments that provide "housing accommodation for aged persons". The ADA does not apply to any rule or practice of these establishments that restricts admission to people of a particular sex, marital or domestic status, or race.[179]

7.167 The NSWLRC recommended this exception be repealed. It concluded that people should not be arbitrarily excluded from accommodation based on race, sex or marital status. Instead, it thought a new "special measures" exception should be implemented to accommodate the needs of particular groups.[180] We consider special measures in chapter 11.

176. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.77], [6.83].
177. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 27, rec 47, [6.88].
178. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 31. See also Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 72.
179. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 59.
180. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 48, [6.93]–[6.96].

7.168 WA is the only other state or territory with an exception about admission to aged care accommodation.[181] The LRCWA recommended repealing it.[182]

7.169 Aged care providers with religious affiliations may also be able to access the general exceptions for religious bodies, which we discuss above. If the aged care exception is repealed, consideration should also be given to whether s 56(c) and s 56(d) should be amended.

Question 7.10: Aged care accommodation providers exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for aged care accommodation providers? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

Acts done under statutory authority

7.170 There is an exception from the whole ADA for anything that is "necessary" to comply with a requirement of:

- any other Act, whether passed before or after the ADA
- any regulation, ordinance, by-law or other instrument made under any other Act, or
- an order of the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal (NCAT), or
- any court order, aside from those made by bodies with the power to fix minimum wages, or other terms and conditions of employment.[183]

7.171 Other discrimination laws have narrower exceptions. For example, the Sex Discrimination Act lists the laws that the relevant exception applies to.[184] This requires parliament to consider laws that may conflict with the prohibition on sex discrimination and add them to the list if necessary.

7.172 The exception relating to court and NCAT orders raises further issues. Federal discrimination law contains similar exceptions for court orders.[185]

---

181. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 74(2)(a).
182. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 82.
183. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 54.
184. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 40(2B)–(3). See also Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 47(2).
185. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 47(1); Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth) s 39(7); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 40(1)(d)–(e).

7.173 In 1999, the NSWLRC thought the exception about complying with a court or NCAT order was unnecessary. This was because such an order was unlikely to require conduct that would be unlawful under the ADA.[186]

7.174 Other reviews have taken different approaches. The ACT Law Reform Advisory Council considered the exception for court and tribunal orders should be limited to an act done under an order of a court or tribunal, which was mandatory and specific about conduct that must be performed in the absence of a non-discriminatory alternative.[187] However, the LRCWA concluded an exception for acts done to comply with a court or tribunal order was appropriate.[188]

Question 7.11: The statutory authorities exception

Should the ADA provide an exception for acts done under statutory authority? If so, what should it cover and when should it apply?

186. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 43, [6.38].

187. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 30(1); ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) rec 19.1.

188. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 158.

8. Civil protections against vilification

In brief

We seek your views on the protections in the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) against vilification based on race, homosexuality, transgender grounds, HIV/AIDS, and religious belief, affiliation or activity. We ask if these protections should extend to other attributes. We also invite views on the test for vilification, and the exceptions to it.

Protections against vilification: an overview 167

NSW protections against vilification 167

Federal protections 168

The protected attributes: civil vilification 169

How the protected attributes are expressed and defined 170

Other potential protected attributes 172

The test for vilification 179

An overview of the ADA's incitement-based test 179

A harm-based test 180

Other options for reform 183

The definition of public act 184

The ADA takes a broad approach to "public act" 184

Options for clarifying the definition 186

Exceptions 188

"Fair report" and "absolute privilege for defamation" exceptions 188

The public interest exceptions 189

Religious vilification protections 192

The definition of religious belief, affiliation and activity 193

Other concerns about the religious vilification protections 193

8.1 Vilification, discrimination and other hate-based conduct causes significant harm to victims and our community.[1] Vilification laws are designed to protect diverse communities from hate speech and denigration, and can also play an important role in promoting inclusion and social cohesion.

1. See NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151 (2024) ch 3.

8.2 A key issue is whether vilification laws strike the right balance with other rights and freedoms. International human rights law recognises that everyone has the right to freedom of expression.[2] The enjoyment of freedom of expression "enables vibrant, multi-faceted public interest debate giving voice to different perspectives and viewpoints".[3]

8.3 However, the right to freedom of expression "carries with it special duties and responsibilities".[4] Like the rights to equality and non-discrimination, this right may be restricted in certain circumstances, as provided under international human rights law.[5]

8.4 NSW has civil and criminal protections against different forms of vilification. The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) protects against public acts that incite hatred, serious contempt or severe ridicule towards a person or group, based on specific protected attributes.

8.5 Section 93Z of the Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) (Crimes Act) makes it an offence to publicly threaten or incite violence based on specific protected attributes. A new offence of inciting racial hatred by public act has been enacted, although it has not commenced at the time of writing.[6]

8.6 In 2024, we reviewed the effectiveness of s 93Z in addressing serious racial and religious vilification.[7] Our current review of the ADA raises wider issues about civil vilification laws, which we were not able to address within the narrow scope of the s 93Z review. In this chapter, we invite you to share your views on the:

- attributes protected against vilification in the ADA, including the 2023 reforms to prohibit religious vilification
- tests for civil vilification, including the definition of "public act", and

---

2. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 19(2).
3. "Rabat Plan of Action on the Prohibition of Advocacy of National, Racial or Religious Hatred that Constitutes Incitement to Discrimination, Hostility or Violence" in Human Rights Committee, Annual Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, UN Doc A/HRC/22/17/Add 4 (11 January 2013) [8]; International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 19(3).
4. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, 999 UNTS 171 (entered into force 23 March 1976) art 19(3).
5. See Human Rights Committee, General Comment No.34 on Article 19: Freedoms of Opinion and Expression, UN Doc CCPR/C/GC/34 (29 July 2011) [21]–[22].
6. Crimes Amendment (Inciting Racial Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93ZAA (uncommenced).
7. NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151 (2024).

- exceptions to civil vilification.

Protections against vilification: an overview

8.7 As we mention above, NSW has both civil and criminal protections against vilification. People and groups in NSW are also protected against vilification by federal law.

NSW protections against vilification

Civil protections

8.8 The ADA protects against vilification based on the protected attributes of race, homosexuality, transgender grounds, HIV/AIDS, and religious belief, affiliation or activity. The protection against HIV/AIDS vilification also protects people thought to have HIV/AIDS (whether or not they do).[8]

8.9 Under the ADA, it is unlawful to publicly incite hatred, serious contempt or severe ridicule towards a person or group, on the ground the person or members of the group have a protected attribute.[9]

Criminal offences

8.10 Section 93Z of the Crimes Act covers more serious forms of conduct. This section commenced in 2018. Previous serious vilification offences were consolidated, updated and moved from the ADA to the Crimes Act.[10]

8.11 Under s 93Z, it is an offence to publicly threaten or incite violence towards another person, or group of people, because they have a protected attribute. The offence applies to the protected attributes of race, religious belief or affiliation, sexual orientation, gender identity, intersex status, and having HIV or AIDS.

8.12 A police officer or the Director of Public Prosecutions can commence a prosecution under s 93Z.[11] An individual convicted of this offence can face a maximum penalty of 100 penalty units ($11,000), 3 years' imprisonment, or both. For corporations, the maximum penalty is 500 penalty units ($55,000).

8.13 The NSW Parliament recently enacted legislation to add a related offence to the Crimes Act. Upon commencement, it will be a criminal offence to incite racial hatred

---

8. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZXB.
9. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20C, s 38S, s 49ZXB, s 49ZE, s 49ZT.
10. Crimes Amendment (Publicly Threatening and Inciting Violence) Act 2018 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z.
11. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(4).

against a person or group. The offence will operate for three years.[12] This means there will be two potential pathways for addressing acts that incite racial hatred: a civil complaints pathway under the ADA and a criminal prosecution.

8.14 The new criminal offence will only apply to public acts that intentionally incite hatred based on race. The NSW Government has also commissioned a further review of criminal law hate speech protections for vulnerable communities.[13]

8.15 Like the civil vilification law in the ADA, the new criminal offence will require proof that a person, by a public act, incited hatred against a person or group based on race. However, the new offence will have two additional requirements:

- that the person accused of the offence intentionally incited racial hatred, and
- that the act would cause a reasonable person, who was part of the target group, to fear harassment, intimidation, or violence, or to fear for their safety.[14]

Federal protections

Civil protection

8.16 Under s 18C of the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) (Racial Discrimination Act) it is unlawful for a person to do an act, otherwise than in private that:

- is reasonably likely, in all the circumstances, to offend, insult, humiliate or intimidate another person or a group of people, and
- is done because of the race, colour or national or ethnic origin of the other person or of some or all the people in the group.

8.17 Under this civil protection, complaints can be made to the Australian Human Rights Commission.[15]

8.18 The regulation of broadcasting services provides another way of addressing vilification. For example, the Commercial Radio Code of Practice states that licensees must not broadcast a program which, in all the circumstances:

> is likely to incite in a reasonable listener, hatred against, or serious contempt for, or severe ridicule of, any person or group of persons because of age, ethnicity,

12. Crimes Amendment (Inciting Racial Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93ZAC (uncommenced).
13. NSW Government, "Review into Hate Speech Protections for Vulnerable Communities" (Media Release, Attorney General, 8 May 2025) <www.nsw.gov.au/ministerial-releases/review-into-hate-speech-protections-for-vulnerable-communities> (retrieved 12 May 2025).
14. Crimes Amendment (Inciting Racial Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93ZAA(1) (uncommenced).
15. Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46P.

> nationality, race, gender, sexual preferences, religion, transgender status or disability ...[16]

Criminal offences

8.19 There are also federal criminal protections against vilification. These apply to protect groups, members of groups, and close associates of groups that are distinguished by race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, intersex status, disability, nationality, national or ethnic origin or political opinion.

8.20 Under the Criminal Code (Cth) (Criminal Code), it is an offence for a person to advocate the use of force or violence against these groups, their members, or their close associates. The person may have in mind a combination of the protected attributes mentioned above.

8.21 The accused person does not have to intend that the force or violence occur. It is sufficient if they are reckless as to whether force or violence will occur.[17]

8.22 It is also an offence to threaten the use of force or violence against these groups, or their members or close associates, if a reasonable member of the targeted group would fear that the threat will be carried out.[18]

8.23 It is also an offence to advocate force or violence by causing damage to property (for example, painting an offensive slogan on a building). This only applies if the targeted group is distinguished by race, religion or ethnic origin.[19]

8.24 Aggravated versions of each offence (with a higher maximum penalty) may apply if the use of force or violence would threaten the peace, order, and good government of the Commonwealth if carried out.[20]

The protected attributes: civil vilification

8.25 The ADA prohibits vilification based on:

- race
- homosexuality
- transgender grounds
- having HIV/AIDS, and

---

16. Commercial Radio Australia, Commercial Radio Code of Practice (2017, last updated March 2018) cl 2.1.4. See also Broadcasting Services Act 1992 (Cth) s 123.
17. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2A(2)(b), s 80.2B(2)(b).
18. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2BA(2), s 80.2BB(2).
19. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2BE(2)(d).
20. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2A(1)(d), s 80.2B(1)(e), s 80.2BA(1)(d), s 80.2BB(1)(e).

- religious belief, affiliation or activity, including not having a religious belief or affiliation, or not engaging in religious activity.[21]

8.26 If someone brings a complaint on behalf of other people, each person on whose behalf the complaint is made must:

- have the characteristic that the conduct in question was based on, or
- claim to have that characteristic, and there is no sufficient reason to doubt this.[22]

8.27 We will consider complaints procedures and remedies in detail in our second consultation paper.

8.28 In preliminary submissions, we heard concerns that:

- the way the ADA expresses and defines certain attributes that are protected against vilification is outdated and under-inclusive, and
- other people, and groups of people, should be protected against vilification.

How the protected attributes are expressed and defined

8.29 As we detail in chapter 4, preliminary submissions raised many concerns about the way the ADA expresses and defines certain attributes in relation to the discrimination protections. While we do not repeat them here, many concerns are also relevant to the way the same attributes are expressed in the vilification sections of the ADA.

8.30 Some have specifically suggested that NSW should harmonise the expressions and definitions in the ADA's vilification protections with those in s 93Z of the Crimes Act.

8.31 The offence in s 93Z covers public acts that threaten or incite violence based on any of the following attributes:

> (a) the race of the other person or one or more of the members of the group,
>
> (b) that the other person has, or one or more of the members of the group have, a specific religious belief or affiliation,
>
> (c) the sexual orientation of the other person or one or more of the members of the group,
>
> (d) the gender identity of the other person or one or more of the members of the group,
>
> (e) that the other person is, or one or more of the members of the group are, of intersex status,
>
> (f) that the other person has, or one or more of the members of the group have, HIV or AIDS.[23]

---

21. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20C(1), s 38S(1), s 49ZT(1), s 49ZXB(1), s 49ZE(1).
22. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 88.
23. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(1).

8.32 It is irrelevant whether the alleged offender's assumptions or beliefs about an attribute of the other person or member of a group were correct or incorrect at the time of the relevant conduct.[24]

8.33 As defined in s 93Z:

- "race" includes colour, nationality, descent and ethnic, ethno-religious or national origin
- "religious belief or affiliation" means holding or not holding a religious belief or view
- "sexual orientation" means a person's sexual orientation towards persons of the same sex, persons of a different sex, or persons of the same sex and persons of a different sex
- "gender identity" means the gender related identity, appearance or mannerisms or other gender related characteristics of a person (whether by way of medical intervention or not), with or without regard to the person's designated sex at birth, and
- "intersex status" means the status of having physical, hormonal or genetic features that are neither wholly female nor wholly male, or a combination of female and male, or neither female nor male.[25]

8.34 The definition of "race" in s 93Z is the same as the ADA. But there are differences in relation to the other attributes.

8.35 Some have argued that the expressions and definitions of the protected attributes in s 93Z are wider, more modern, and more inclusive of LGBTQIA+ people than the ADA.[26] Compared to the ADA, s 93Z covers:

- sexual orientation (as opposed to "homosexuality" in the ADA)
- gender identity (as opposed to "transgender grounds" in the ADA), and
- people of intersex status (who are not covered at all in the ADA, under either the discrimination or vilification protections).

8.36 If the ADA mirrored these protected attributes as expressed in s 93Z, it would give people with these attributes the ability to make a civil complaint. This may be particularly important in cases that do not meet the criminal threshold.

8.37 We also heard concerns about the expression used in the ADA regarding HIV/AIDS vilification. The ADA refers to a person as being "HIV/AIDS infected". This is

---

24. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(2).
25. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5).
26. See, eg, NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, Preliminary Submission PAD27, 7; Law Society of NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD31, 13.

considered outdated and stigmatising, as it emphasises the illness rather than the person.[27]

8.38 Options could include using the expression in s 93Z, that is, a person who "has ... HIV or AIDS". One preliminary submission suggested person-centred language such as "persons living with HIV/AIDS".[28] Another suggested extending the vilification protections to include the unwanted disclosure of a person's HIV/AIDS status or threats to disclose it.[29]

8.39 We consider the definition of "religious belief or affiliation" in detail later in this chapter, when we discuss the 2023 reforms that prohibited vilification on this ground.

Other potential protected attributes

8.40 Some think the ADA fails to protect certain other groups that experience high levels of social stigma and hate speech. In submissions both to this review and our review of s 93Z, we received suggestions that the law should prohibit vilification based on:

- disability[30]
- caste[31]
- people who experience mental illness, and their families and carers[32]
- sex workers,[33] and
- all members of LGBTQIA+ communities, including bisexual+ people, non-binary and other gender diverse people and people with diverse sex characteristics.[34]

8.41 The Disability Royal Commission recommended that the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) should:

---

27. ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 7; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 7.
28. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 7.
29. HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 14.
30. See, eg, NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, Preliminary Submission PAD27, 7; Vision Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD68, 3; Family Advocacy, Preliminary Submission PAD75, 1.
31. Periyar Ambedkar Thoughts Circle Australia, Submission SV06, 7–11.
32. Mental Health Carers NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD42, 6.
33. See, eg, ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 7; Respect Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD57, 1, 6; Neophile, Preliminary Submission PAD66, 9; Scarlet Alliance, Australian Sex Workers Association, Preliminary Submission PAD74, 5–6; Sex Workers Outreach Project, Preliminary Submission PAD77, 7.
34. See, eg, Intersex Human Rights Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD02, 9; ACON, Preliminary Submission PAD44, 7; Neophile, Preliminary Submission PAD66, 13–14.

- contain a new protection against offensive behaviour, modelled on the Racial Discrimination Act, and
- make it unlawful to perpetrate or encourage violence or serious abuse, or incite hatred, because of disability.[35]

8.42 The Royal Commission also recommended that criminal vilification offences be extended to cover the vilification of people with disability based on their disability or perceived disability.[36]

8.43 Others have cautioned against expanding the list of protected attributes. We heard concerns about the potential impact of expanding vilification law on freedom of speech and freedom of religion.[37]

8.44 We invite you to comment on whether the coverage of the ADA's civil vilification protections should be expanded and, if so, which groups should be added. We set out below some considerations, adopted from other recent reviews, that could guide your response.

General principles to guide decision-making about protected attributes

8.45 A preliminary issue is what principles should guide decisions about which, if any, new attributes should be covered by the ADA's civil vilification protections.

8.46 The New South Wales Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) took a cautious approach in its 1999 review of the ADA, noting arguments that:

- vilification laws can have a chilling effect on free speech, and
- wider protections may increase complaints, which can have resource implications.[38]

8.47 The NSWLRC's view in 1999 was that vilification laws should only protect groups that are "socially significant", and who are being harmed noticeably and actively by hatred. It considered that the coverage of vilification laws should be justifiable and based on statistical information on the incidence of vilification of a particular group. In its view, new or extended vilification prohibitions should only be recommended where there is evidence that:

- a practical problem needs to be addressed

---

35. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", rec 4.29, rec 4.30.
36. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", rec 4.30.
37. See, eg, Australian Christian Lobby, Preliminary Submission PAD12, 11, 12; Feminist Legal Clinic, Preliminary Submission PAD72, 3.
38. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.79]–[7.80].

- existing laws are ineffective in addressing this problem
- the proposed prohibition might reasonably be expected to have an appropriate impact on this problem, and
- the proposed prohibition would not disproportionately diminish freedom of speech.[39]

8.48 Applying these considerations, the NSWLRC did not support expanding the ADA's coverage to prohibit gender, religion or disability vilification.[40] However, a prohibition on religious vilification was added to the ADA in 2023.[41]

8.49 More recent reviews of vilification laws have also identified principles to guide attribute selection. Some similarly considered that protections against vilification should only be extended to other groups if there is empirical evidence that the group is targeted or is at risk of experiencing vilifying behaviour.[42]

8.50 The Law Commission of England and Wales identified a range of factors that could be used to assess whether there is a "demonstrable need" for protection against vilification. These include the:

- severity of the vilifying behaviour experienced by the group
- total amount of vilifying behaviour targeted at the group, and
- amount of vilification targeted at the group, compared with the size of the group.[43]

8.51 Other recent reviews also supported adding new groups that had been omitted from protection. This could involve consideration of whether:

- the attribute is protected in other states and territories
- the attribute is protected under discrimination law, but not vilification law, and
- existing human rights standards provide any guidance.[44]

---

39. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.75], [7.84], [7.93].
40. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.81]–[7.92].
41. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZE, inserted by Anti-Discrimination Amendment (Religious Vilification) Act 2023 (NSW) sch 1.
42. England and Wales, Law Commission, Hate Crime Laws, Final Report No 402 (2021) [3.45]; Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) 54–55.
43. England and Wales, Law Commission, Hate Crime Laws, Final Report No 402 (2021) [3.42], [3.45].
44. See Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) 54–55; Queensland Parliament Legal Affairs and Safety Committee, Inquiry into Serious Vilification and Hate Crimes, Report 22 (2022) 44; Law Reform

8.52 The Law Commission of England and Wales also referred to the principle of "additional harm". This considers if there is evidence that the vilification of a member of a particular group also causes harm to other members, and to society more widely. "Additional harm" is harm that is "associated with a shared sense of collective identity".[45]

Consistency between discrimination law and civil vilification law

8.53 One issue is whether the civil vilification protections should apply to the same groups as the ADA's discrimination protections.

8.54 The ADA's vilification protections apply to a narrower range of attributes than the discrimination protections, as we set out in the table below.

Table 8.1: Attributes protected from civil vilification and discrimination

| Attributes protected from civil vilification | Attributes protected from discrimination |
|---|---|
| ▪ being "HIV/AIDS infected", actually or presumed▪ homosexuality▪ race▪ religious belief, affiliation or activity (including not having one)▪ transgender grounds | ▪ age▪ carer's responsibilities▪ disability▪ homosexuality▪ marital or domestic status▪ race▪ sex (including pregnancy and breastfeeding)▪ transgender grounds |

8.55 For instance, the ADA:

- prohibits discrimination based on age, carer's responsibilities, disability, marital or domestic status and sex, but does not protect against vilification on these grounds, and
- specifically prohibits vilification based on a person being, or thought to be, "HIV/AIDS infected",[46] but HIV/AIDS status is not a distinct protected attribute for the purposes of discrimination law. Instead, discrimination on the basis of HIV/AIDS status may constitute a form of disability discrimination (we discuss this more in chapter 4).

---

Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 229–230.

45. England and Wales, Law Commission, Hate Crime Laws, Final Report No 402 (2021) [3.83].
46. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZXB.

8.56 It could be argued that the groups at risk of experiencing discrimination are likely also to be at risk of experiencing vilification. However, there may be differences in principle between discrimination and vilification that justify different coverage.

8.57 In 1999, the NSWLRC did not accept that all groups protected against discrimination should also be protected against vilification. Instead, it considered the merits and problems of extending vilification protections to each specific group, and applied the principles set out above.

8.58 Views may differ about whether this approach is still appropriate today. For instance, in its 2015 report, the ACT Law Reform Advisory Council recommended that vilification laws should cover all attributes protected by discrimination laws.[47] This was not adopted, and the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) discrimination protections continue to cover many more attributes than its civil vilification protections.[48]

8.59 As we discuss in chapter 9, the ADA's specific protections against harassment only cover sexual harassment and not harassment based on protected attributes.

Consistency between the civil and criminal law

8.60 Another question is whether s 93Z of the Crimes Act and the ADA's civil vilification protections should cover the same protected attributes. There is a view that some of the expressions and definitions used in s 93Z are more modern and should be adopted in the ADA.

8.61 As noted above, currently s 93Z goes beyond the ADA by covering vilification based on "intersex status" and "sexual orientation" (as opposed to "homosexuality").

Identifying gaps based on the coverage of other civil vilification laws

8.62 Some other states and territories prohibit vilification based on a wider range of attributes than the ADA. These include:

- disability[49]
- gender identity[50]
- age[51]

---

47. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 96.
48. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 7, s 67A.
49. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 67A(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(j), s 20A; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(k), s 17(1), s 19(b).
50. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 67A(b); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(ba), s 20A; Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124A(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(ea), s 17(1), s 19(e).
51. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(1)(d), s 20A; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(b), s 17(1).

- relationship, accommodation, or employment status,[52] and
- association with a person who has, or is believed to have, a protected attribute.[53]

8.63 The Northern Territory (NT) discrimination law protects the widest range of attributes against vilification. However, the NT Government recently signalled its intention to repeal these vilification protections.[54]

8.64 Recent reviews in other states have recommended extending their own protections to cover more attributes, including attributes not currently covered in NSW.[55]

8.65 Some states have introduced or proposed new laws to expand the list of protected attributes in vilification laws. Most recently, the Victorian Parliament passed amendments to its vilification law to protect the attributes of disability, gender identity, sex, sex characteristics, sexual orientation, in addition to the existing protected attributes of race and religious belief.[56]

8.66 The Victorian amendments also provide that it is irrelevant that the person engaging in the conduct was incorrect about:

- a protected attribute of the other person or group, or
- whether the other person or group had a particular protected attribute.[57]

8.67 The Queensland Parliament passed similar amendments in 2024.[58] Along with other reforms, these amendments were due to commence on 1 July 2025. However, the

52. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(e)–(eb), s 20A.
53. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19(r), s 20A.
54. M Garrick, "NT's CLP Government Confirms Plans to Scrap Labor's Hate Speech Changes" (2 March 2025) ABC News <www.abc.net.au/news/2025-03-02/nt-anti-discrimination-hate-speech-laws-repealed/104991288> (retrieved 9 April 2025).
55. See, eg, Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 114; Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) rec 1, 60; Queensland Parliament Legal Affairs and Safety Committee, Inquiry into Serious Vilification and Hate Crimes, Report 22 (2022) 44, rec 4.
56. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102B (uncommenced). See also Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 7–8.
57. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102F (uncommenced). See also Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 10.
58. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 21., amending Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124A (uncommenced).

current Queensland Government decided to postpone the commencement of the reform package.[59]

8.68 A further issue is whether the ADA should protect against vilification based on having an association, real or perceived, with a targeted group. This might be a way of protecting people who are friends, parents, or relatives of someone with protected attributes.

8.69 This is currently part of the NT law.[60] Victoria has passed amendments to include this in its list of protected attributes.[61]

8.70 Another issue is whether NSW should prohibit vilification based on more than one attribute. The Victorian amendments will, upon commencement, provide that it does not matter if the conduct is claimed to have been in respect of one or more protected attributes.[62]

8.71 After recent amendments, the federal vilification offences can apply if the accused person had in mind a combination of protected attributes when targeting an individual or group.[63]

8.72 Prohibiting vilification that occurs because of more than one attribute might recognise that people with multiple protected attributes can experience vilification in unique and intersectional ways. It could also simplify the law, as it is sometimes hard to work out which attribute a vilifying act was based on.[64]

Question 8.1: Protected attributes

(1) What changes, if any, should be made to the way the ADA expresses and defines the attributes currently protected against vilification?

(2) Should the ADA protect against vilification based on a wider range of attributes? If so, which attributes should be covered and how should these be defined?

---

59. D Frecklington, "Media Statement: Crisafulli Government to Consult on Anti-Discrimination Laws" (14 March 2025) Queensland Government <statements.qld.gov.au/statements/102168> (retrieved 4 April 2024).
60. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 19, s 20A.
61. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102B(h) (uncommenced).
62. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 14, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 113(1A) (uncommenced).
63. Criminal Code (Cth) s 80.2A(3A), s 80.2B(4A), s 80.2BA(5), s 80.2BB(6), s 80.2BC(5), s 80.2BD(6), s 80.2BE(4).
64. Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) 58–59.

The test for vilification

8.73 Under the ADA, vilification occurs when a person, by public act, incites hatred towards, serious contempt for, or severe ridicule of a person or group because they have a protected attribute. This is an "incitement-based" test.

8.74 There are mixed views on incitement-based tests. In general, some consider them unclear and overly restrictive. Another criticism is that incitement-based tests ignore the harm experienced by the victim.[65]

8.75 We heard specific concerns about the test in the ADA. Some observe that the ADA imposes a higher standard than the Racial Discrimination Act.[66] Others consider the ADA's focus on a third-party audience sets the bar too high.[67]

8.76 On the other hand, we heard concern that a lower threshold would unjustifiably restrict free speech and prevent criticisms of religion.[68] In its 1999 report, the NSWLRC did not recommend changes to the incitement-based test.[69]

8.77 Section 93Z also contains an incitement-based test. We did not recommend changes to this test in our review of that section. However, we have not reached a view on the test as it operates in the ADA, or on any potential alternatives. If it is felt that the ADA test requires reform, there are a range of options to consider.

An overview of the ADA's incitement-based test

8.78 The ADA's test focuses on whether the public act incites, or is capable of inciting, particular emotions or responses in others. It does not consider the effect of the act on the targeted person or group. Similar tests are found in the civil vilification laws of several other states and territories.[70]

---

65. NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151 (2024) [8.72]–[8.75]; Queensland Parliament Legal Affairs and Safety Committee, Inquiry into Serious Vilification and Hate Crimes, Report No 22 (2022) 31, 45.
66. NSW Bar Association, Preliminary Submission PAD86 [29]; NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, Preliminary Submission PAD27, 7.
67. Kingsford Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD35, 5.
68. Australian Christian Lobby, Submission SV56, 3–4.
69. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.107]–[7.110].
70. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 67A(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124A(1); Civil Liability Act 1936 (SA) s 73(1); Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 7, s 8; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17.

8.79 The ADA does not define the word "incite". However, courts have held it to mean "to rouse, to stimulate, to urge, to spur on, to stir up or to animate", and that it "covers conduct involving commands, requests, proposals, actions or encouragement".[71]

8.80 The public act must reach an intended audience. Under the ADA, the act must be capable of inciting an ordinary member of that audience to feel hatred, serious contempt or severe ridicule based on the protected attribute. When assessing whether an act could incite those emotions, the context and intended audience of the act is relevant.[72]

8.81 Importantly, there is no need to show that the person who did the act intended to incite those emotions. It is also not necessary for anyone to in fact, be incited to feel those emotions.[73]

A harm-based test

8.82 One reform option could be to introduce a harm-based test. This would focus on the impact of the conduct on the individuals and groups targeted by a public act. For instance, harm-based tests elsewhere focus on whether the conduct:

- is reasonably likely to offend, insult, humiliate, intimidate or ridicule a person with a protected attribute,[74] or
- would be reasonably likely to be considered by a reasonable person with the protected attribute to be hateful, seriously contemptuous, or reviling or seriously ridiculing of the targeted person or group.[75]

Perspectives on a harm-based test

8.83 Some argue harm-based tests better reflect how members of the community understand and experience vilification.[76] This is because they consider how the target group experiences the conduct.

---

71. Sunol v Collier (No 2) [2012] NSWCA 44 [41]. See also Catch the Fire Ministries Inc v Islamic Council of Victoria Inc [2006] VSCA 284, 15 VR 207 [12]–[14].
72. Sunol v Collier (No 2) [2012] NSWCA 44 [34], [61]–[62]. See also Margan v Manias [2015] NSWSC 307 [61]–[62], [76].
73. Sunol v Collier (No 2) [2012] NSWCA 44 [29]–[31].
74. See, eg, Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18C(1)(a); Anti–Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1).
75. See, eg, Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti–Vilification Protections (2021) rec 10; Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-Vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102D(1)(b) (uncommenced).
76. Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) rec 9, 119.

8.84 A harm-based test could also lower the threshold for civil vilification complaints. Removing the need to prove the conduct could have incited a third party might reduce the burden on the complainant.[77]

8.85 In our recent review of s 93Z of the Crimes Act, we concluded that a harm-based test should not be introduced into the NSW criminal vilification offence. We were concerned that the elements of a harm-based test are insufficiently certain for application in the criminal law. Such a test could lead to unintended consequences, especially if it had an "objective" standard and there was no element that focused on the accused person's state of mind.[78]

8.86 However, we have not reached a view about whether a harm-based test should be part of the ADA's civil vilification framework. Different considerations may apply to civil vilification laws, where no criminal penalty applies.

Examples of civil harm-based tests

8.87 Harm-based tests apply in civil vilification laws in the NT, Tasmania and in the Racial Discrimination Act.[79] Amendments to introduce such a test were recently enacted in Victoria.[80] Recent inquiries supported the introduction, or consideration, of such a test in other states and territories too.[81]

8.88 If NSW was to introduce a civil harm-based test, an issue is whether it should replace the existing ADA test or operate in addition to it. Some laws, such as the civil vilification protections in the NT and the Racial Discrimination Act, only apply a harm-based test.[82]

8.89 However other civil vilification laws apply both a harm-based and an incitement-based test, in separate sections. This ensures that a wide range of vilifying behaviours are unlawful.[83]

---

77. Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) rec 9, 119; Explanatory Notes, Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Bill 2024 (Qld) 11; Queensland Parliament Legal Affairs and Safety Committee, Inquiry into Serious Vilification and Hate Crimes, Report No 22 (2022) 45.
78. NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151(2024) [4.55]–[4.70].
79. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18C(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20A(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1).
80. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102D(1)(b) (uncommenced).
81. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [6.3.2]; ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 95, rec 17.1, rec 17.2.
82. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18C(1)(a); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20A(1)(a).
83. See, eg, Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1), s 19.

8.90 Tasmania, for example, applies an incitement-based test to vilification based on race, disability, sexual orientation, lawful sexual activity, religious belief, affiliation or activity, gender identity or sex characteristics. A harm-based test applies to a wider range of attributes.[84]

8.91 The Victorian amendments will, upon commencement, provide for a harm-based test in addition to a separate incitement-based test. These will cover the same protected attributes.

8.92 First, the Victorian harm-based test will make it unlawful to engage in public conduct:

- because of a protected attribute of another person or group of persons
- that would, in all the circumstances, be reasonably likely to be considered by a reasonable person with the protected attribute to be hateful or seriously contemptuous of, or reviling or severely ridiculing, the other person or group of persons.[85]

8.93 The test will provide for conduct that is engaged in for two or more reasons. Where one of the reasons is a protected attribute, the conduct is taken to have been engaged in because of a protected attribute. This applies even if this is not the dominant or substantial reason for the conduct.[86]

8.94 Second, the Victorian incitement-based test will cover public conduct:

> that is likely to incite hatred against, serious contempt for, revulsion towards or severe ridicule of, another person or a group of persons on the ground of a protected attribute of that other person or group of persons.[87]

8.95 The test will provide that the motive for engaging in any such conduct is irrelevant.[88]

8.96 The Queensland amendments would also introduce a new harm-based test to operate alongside an incitement-based test.[89] However, as we explain above, their commencement date is now uncertain.

---

84. Anti-Discrimination Act 1988 (Tas) s 17(1), s 19.
85. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102D(1) (uncommenced).
86. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102D(3) (uncommenced).
87. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102E(1) (uncommenced).
88. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102E(3) (uncommenced). See also Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 9.
89. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 21, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124C, s 124D (uncommenced).

The new offence of inciting hatred

8.97 Although a criminal provision, the new NSW offence of inciting hatred will use aspects of both an incitement-based and harm-based test.

8.98 Section 93ZAA of the Crimes Act will, upon commencement, require proof that the accused person intentionally incited racial hatred towards another person or group. It will also require proof that their act would cause a reasonable person, who was the target of the incitement of hatred or a member of the targeted group, to fear harassment, intimidation or violence, or to fear for their safety.

Other options for reform

8.99 Another option might be to lower the threshold in the ADA's incitement-based test to cover a public act that is "likely" to incite. The Victorian incitement-based test will take this approach.[90] It was considered that this reform may reduce the burden on complainants.[91]

8.100 Other options, drawn from Victoria, include confirming that the conduct may:

- consist of a single occasion or a number of occasions over time, and
- occur in or outside the state.[92]

8.101 Further considerations could include changing the conduct that is prohibited. For example, the ADA could make it unlawful to:

- commit a public act that expresses (rather than incites) hostility against, brings into contempt or ridicules a person with a protected attribute[93]
- engage in conduct that is likely to create, promote or increase animosity towards, threaten, seriously abuse or severely ridicule,[94] or
- threaten vilification.[95]

---

90. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102E(1) (uncommenced). See also Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 21, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124D (uncommenced).
91. Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) rec 8, rec 9, 112–119; Department of Justice and Community Safety, Strengthening Civil Anti-Vilification Protections for all Victorians: Implementing the Legislative Recommendations of the Victorian Inquiry into Anti-vilification Protections (2023) 8–9.
92. Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 7; Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102D(2), s 102E(2) (uncommenced).
93. Kingsford Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD35, 5.
94. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 113.
95. HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD60, 14.

Question 8.2: The test for vilification

(1) Should NSW adopt a "harm-based" test for civil vilification? If so, should this replace or supplement the existing "incitement-based" test?

(2) What, if any, other changes should be made to the incitement-based test for civil vilification?

The definition of public act

8.102 The prohibitions on vilification in the ADA and in the Crimes Act only apply to public acts. Maintaining a distinction between public and private acts is one way the law seeks to protect diverse groups, without unjustifiably intruding into the private sphere. However, there may be ways of clarifying the definition of "public act" to ensure it covers relevant conduct and keeps pace with social change.

The ADA takes a broad approach to "public act"

8.103 The ADA provides that a "public act" includes:

> (a) any form of communication to the public, including speaking, writing, printing, displaying notices, broadcasting, telecasting, screening and playing of tapes or other recorded material, and
>
> (b) any conduct (not being a form of communication referred to in paragraph (a)) observable by the public, including actions and gestures and the wearing or display of clothing, signs, flags, emblems and insignia, and
>
> (c) the distribution or dissemination of any matter to the public with knowledge that the matter promotes or expresses hatred towards, serious contempt for, or severe ridicule of, a person or group of persons [on the basis of the protected attribute of the person or members of the group].[96]

8.104 Tribunals have interpreted the expression "public act" broadly. It includes conduct or communication that is "capable of being seen or heard, without undue intrusion, by a non-participant".[97]

8.105 The NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal has observed that the following factors may be helpful in determining if there has been a public act:

- whether there is an audience (where a speaker addresses an audience, it is more likely to be public)
- the size of any audience (where a speaker addresses a group, it is more likely to be public)
- the nature of the communication

---

96. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20B, s 49ZS. See also Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 38R, s 49ZD, s 49ZXA.

97. Z v University of A (No 7) [2004] NSWADT 81 [100].

- the intention of the person or people communicating, and
- the circumstances that led to the communication.[98]

8.106 For instance, the following have been found to be public acts:

- words shouted in the stairwell of an apartment block[99]
- shouting words from private property into a public street,[100] and
- a police exercise involving 200 people at a public train station that was closed to the public.[101]

8.107 In some situations, acts directed at sections of the public, or limited classes of people, can be considered public acts. In one case, this included a teacher's spoken communication to a high school class.[102]

8.108 Certain online activity has also been considered a public act. For example, where someone posts:

- written text on a website that is not password protected[103]
- written text on a public Facebook page or one that has an audience of "a number of people",[104] or
- a link on a public website to another website containing vilifying material, with an express invitation to access that link.[105]

8.109 While broad, the definition of public act is not unlimited. For instance, a statement made in a school staff muster meeting was found not be a public act. This was because the meetings were not open to the public.[106]

8.110 Also, the definition does not apply to all online acts. For instance, social media posts directed at smaller, private audiences may not be public acts. The Tribunal has commented that posting a link to a website that contains vilifying material on a private Facebook page will not, in and of itself, be a public act.[107]

---

98. Barry v Futter [2011] NSWADT 205 [74]–[76].
99. Anderson v Thompson [2001] NSWADT 11 [25].
100. Lamb v Campbell [2021] NSWCATAD 103 [23]–[28].
101. Ekermawi v Commissioner of Police, NSW Police Force [2019] NSWCATAD 79 [42]–[46].
102. Wolf v NSW Department of Education [2023] NSWCATAD 202 [44]–[45].
103. Collier v Sunol [2005] NSWADT 261 [33].
104. Burns v Smith [2019] NSWCATAD 56 [34]–[35].
105. Burns v Sunol [2015] NSWCATAD 131 [41]; Burns v Sunol [2016] NSWCATAD 16 [35]–[36].
106. Riley v NSW Department of Education [2019] NSWCATAD 223 [118].
107. Burns v McKee [2017] NSWCATAD 66 [62].

Options for clarifying the definition

8.111 Views differ about whether the ADA's definition of "public act" is appropriate and effective. Some think it is too narrow, unclear, inconsistent and inadequate in its application to online acts.[108] Others think the definition is too broad and should be narrowed to preserve freedom of speech and religion.[109]

8.112 In our recent review of s 93Z of the Crimes Act, we examined whether the definition of public act in this criminal vilification offence should be amended. We considered a range of potential reform options suggested in submissions and drawn from our research of the law in other states, territories and federally.

8.113 We concluded it was unnecessary to amend the definition. We considered it appropriately broad and flexible, with scope for argument on a case-by-case basis. The definition is well-established in NSW, and we expressed concern that any attempt to amend it may lead to unnecessary complications.[110]

8.114 The definition of public act in s 93Z was based on the civil definition in the ADA. Given this close relationship, it is likely that these considerations also apply to the ADA. However, it may be that minor amendments could clarify the civil definition.

8.115 One option could be to further harmonise the ADA's definition of public act with the definition in s 93Z.[111] Although the definitions are similar, there are some differences. Unlike the ADA, s 93Z expressly clarifies that a public act can include:

- communicating through social media and other electronic means
- graffiti, and
- acts that occur on private land.[112]

8.116 The reference to graffiti was added to s 93Z in March 2025.[113]

8.117 Making similar amendments to the ADA could lead to further alignment between the civil and criminal vilification regimes in NSW. It would address the situation that

---

108. NSW Greens, Preliminary Submission PAD85, 9–10; Inner City Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD40, 3; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 16.
109. Catholic Women's League Australia, NSW Inc, Preliminary Submission PAD88, 5; Australian Christian Lobby, Preliminary Submission PAD12, 20.
110. NSW Law Reform Commission, Serious Racial and Religious Vilification, Report 151 (2024) [6.26]–[6.55]
111. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 16; Inner City Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD40, 3.
112. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5).
113. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5) definition of "public act", amended by Crimes Legislation Amendment (Racial and Religious Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1 [1].

the definition in the criminal legislation is expressed in wider terms than in the civil legislation.

8.118 However, to the extent it would reflect existing interpretations of the ADA, it may not practically change the law. For instance, certain conduct involving graffiti has been held to be a "form of communication to the public" for the purpose of a homosexual vilification claim under the ADA.[114]

8.119 The definitions in the ADA and s 93Z also differ in their approach to the "distribution or dissemination of any matter to the public". To be considered a public act, the ADA requires this be done "with knowledge that the matter promotes or expresses" vilification.[115] Section 93Z does not require that the person distributing or disseminating the material had knowledge that it promotes or expresses vilification.[116]

8.120 In 1999, the NSWLRC reported that the ADA's knowledge requirement "prevents those innocently distributing material, without being aware of its contents, from being liable".[117] It is not clear why this requirement was not included in s 93Z, although it may relate to the mental elements of knowledge and recklessness that apply to this offence. Regardless, this indicates that the differences between the civil and criminal contexts may need consideration if alignment between the two definitions is contemplated.

8.121 Other developments in Victoria and Queensland could also be considered. The Victorian amendments include a definition of "public conduct" based on the s 93Z definition of "public act". For avoidance of doubt, the Victorian definition will also provide:

- conduct may be public even if it occurs on private property or land, or at a place that is not open to the general public, and
- a display on a person's body by means of tattooing or other body modification is not considered "public conduct".[118]

8.122 The Queensland amendments would also clarify that conduct may still be a public act even if it happens somewhere the public do not ordinarily access.[119]

---

114. Burns v Dye [2002] NSWADT 32 [86]–[88].
115. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20B(c).
116. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5) definition of "public act".
117. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.113].
118. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102C(2)–(3) (uncommenced).
119. Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 21, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124B(2) (uncommenced).

Question 8.3: The definition of "public act"

What changes, if any, should be made to the definition of "public act" in the test for vilification in the ADA?

Exceptions

8.123 There are a range of exceptions to the ADA's protections against vilification. Some, such as the general exceptions for religious bodies, apply across the ADA, including to the prohibitions on vilification. Others apply to both discrimination and vilification, such as the exceptions for faith-based organisations providing adoption services and the exception relating to transgender people in sport. We outline these broad exceptions in chapter 7.

8.124 Other exceptions apply specifically to vilification. The prohibitions on vilification do not apply to:

- a fair report of a public act of vilification
- the communication, distribution or dissemination of any matter that would be subject to a defence of absolute privilege in defamation proceedings, or
- a public act, done reasonably and in good faith, for certain purposes.[120]

"Fair report" and "absolute privilege for defamation" exceptions

8.125 The first category of exceptions applies to "a fair report" of an act of vilification. The purpose of this exception is to allow the media to report freely, provided the reporting is fair and factual.[121]

8.126 In 1999, the NSWLRC recommended that the Anti-Discrimination Board (now known as Anti-Discrimination NSW or "ADNSW") should have the power to create guidelines on what is a fair report.[122] This was not implemented and may be an option for consideration regarding the powers and functions of ADNSW. We will detail these powers and functions in our second consultation paper in this review.

8.127 The second category of exceptions concerns the defence of absolute privilege to defamation. It is a defence to a claim of defamation if the defendant can prove that the material in question was published on an occasion of "absolute privilege". The defence only covers certain situations, and in some cases, certain people or bodies.

---

120. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20C(2), s 38S(2), s 49ZE(2), s 49ZT(2), s 49ZXB(2).
121. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.132]–[7.133].
122. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 95.

For example, a person may have a defence of absolute privilege if the communication was made:

- during the proceedings of a parliamentary body
- during the proceedings of an Australian court or tribunal, or
- to a police officer while the officer is acting in their official capacity.[123]

8.128 In 1999, the NSWLRC considered this exception should remain.[124]

The public interest exceptions

8.129 The third category of exceptions aims to allow acts and discussions to occur when there is a public interest justification. They are designed to achieve a balance between the right to free speech, and the right to live free from vilification and the harms it causes.[125]

8.130 Generally, each of the public interest exceptions in the ADA apply to public acts, done reasonably and in good faith, for:

- academic, artistic, scientific or research purposes, or
- other purposes in the public interest including discussion or debate about, and expositions of, any act or matter.[126]

8.131 As we discuss below, the public interest exceptions for homosexual, transgender grounds, HIV/AIDS and religious vilification also refer to certain religious purposes.

Perspectives on the public interest exceptions

8.132 In 1999, the NSWLRC noted the public interest exceptions were appropriate and an important safeguard of the right to freedom of expression.[127]

8.133 However, some have argued that the exceptions go too far and do not protect the rights of marginalised groups.[128] A related view is that the exceptions give a special status to acts done for certain purposes. Some consider this unfair, particularly

---

123. Defamation Act 2005 (NSW) s 27(1)–(2)(b1).
124. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.136].
125. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Assembly, Second Reading Speech, 4 May 1989, 7488.
126. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20C(2)(c), s 38S(2)(c), s 49ZE(2)(c), s 49ZT(2)(c), s 49ZXB(2)(c).
127. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.140].
128. Scarlet Alliance, Australian Sex Workers Association, Preliminary Submission PAD74, 5.

where people engaging in these purposes have significant privilege and acts done for these purposes could inflict harm.[129]

8.134 If it is desirable to narrow the exception, one option could be to qualify that the academic, artistic, scientific, religious or research purpose should be "genuine". Victoria, the NT and the Racial Discrimination Act take this approach.[130]

8.135 A Victorian Parliamentary Committee recommended that the exception for acts done for any "purpose in the public interest" should also be confined to "genuine" purposes.[131] The Victorian amendments will introduce this.[132]

8.136 On the other hand, adding the word "genuine" might not lead to significant changes in the law's application. There may also be further uncertainty if the criteria to be used in assessing whether a purpose is "genuine" are unclear.

8.137 The Victorian amendments also provide exceptions for conduct engaged in reasonably and in good faith in:

- the performance, exhibition or distribution of an artistic work, or
- making or publishing a fair and accurate report of any event or matter of public interest.[133]

8.138 Another issue is whether the public interest exception should extend to "fair comment". Exceptions in the NT and the Racial Discrimination Act extend to "a fair comment on any event or matter of public interest if the comment is an expression of a genuine belief held by the person making the comment".[134] The NSWLRC did not support such an exception in 1999. It noted concerns that this could exempt any public comments made by someone who believes them to be true, no matter how abusive or offensive they are.[135]

---

129. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.138].
130. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18D; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20B; Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 11(1)(b)(i).
131. Parliament of Victoria, Legislative Assembly Legal and Social Issues Committee, Inquiry into Anti-Vilification Protections (2021) rec 12, 126.
132. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102G(1)(b) (uncommenced).
133. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102G(1)(a), s 102G(1)(c) (uncommenced). See also Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 11(1)(a), s 11(1)(c).
134. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18D(c)(ii); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20B(c)(ii).
135. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.134].

Religious discussion or instruction purposes

8.139 The public interest exception to homosexual vilification extends to acts done for the purposes of "religious instruction". The exceptions for vilification based on transgender grounds, HIV/AIDS, or religious belief, affiliation or activity apply more broadly to "religious discussion or instruction purposes".[136]

8.140 In contrast, the public interest exception to racial vilification in the ADA does not expressly include these purposes. However, the recently enacted NSW offence of publicly inciting racial hatred does not apply to an act that "consists only of directly quoting from or otherwise referencing a religious text for the purpose of religious teaching or discussion".[137]

8.141 The vilification protections in the ACT, the NT, and the Racial Discrimination Act do not provide exceptions for acts done for religious purposes.[138]

8.142 However, the Victorian exception extends to acts done for genuine religious purposes. This is currently defined as including, but not limited to, conveying or teaching a religion or proselytising.[139]

8.143 The Victorian amendments will, upon commencement, clarify that a religious purpose includes, but is not limited to, worship, observance, practice, teaching, preaching and proselytising in conformity with the doctrines, beliefs or principles of that religion.[140]

8.144 An issue is whether a religious purposes exception to vilification is necessary or desirable in the ADA. One consideration is that there may be a degree of overlap between these aspects of the public interest exceptions and other exceptions in the ADA. As we discuss in chapter 7, a general exception applies throughout the ADA (including the vilification protections) to the acts or practices of a body established to propagate religion, that:

- conforms to the religion's doctrine, or
- is necessary to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of adherents of that religion.[141]

---

136. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZT(2)(c), s 38S(2)(c), s 49ZXB(2)(c), s 49ZE(2)(c).
137. Crimes Amendment (Inciting Racial Hatred) Act 2025 (NSW) sch 1, inserting Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93ZAA(2) (uncommenced).
138. Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18D; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 67A(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20B. See also Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 21, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 124D(2)(c) (uncommenced).
139. Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001 (Vic) s 11(1)(b)(i), s 11(2).
140. Justice Legislation Amendment (Anti-vilification and Social Cohesion) Act 2025 (Vic) s 9, inserting Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 102G(2) (uncommenced).
141. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 56(d).

8.145 Another exception excludes the policies and practices of faith-based adoption services from the prohibitions on vilification based on homosexuality and transgender grounds.[142]

8.146 Others have considered it unnecessary to exempt acts done for religious purposes from vilification protections. The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia concluded that prohibitions on vilification do not unduly prevent individuals from expressing their religious views and opinions. Individuals can hold, and even strongly express, their religious views without this amounting to civil vilification.[143]

Question 8.4: Exceptions

What if any, changes should be made to the exceptions to the vilification protections in the ADA?

Religious vilification protections

8.147 In preliminary submissions to this review of the ADA, and during our 2024 review of s 93Z of the Crimes Act, we heard concerns about the ADA's protection against religious vilification.

8.148 It is unlawful, by public act, to incite hatred towards, serious contempt for or severe ridicule of a person, or group of people, because they:

- have or do not have a religious belief or affiliation, or
- engage, or do not engage, in religious activity.[144]

8.149 This was added to the ADA in 2023. Some regard this reform as an important protection for people of faith in the context of growing intolerance.[145] Others, while generally supporting protections against religious vilification, argue that the legislation is unclear, too broad and does not strike the right balance with freedom of expression.

142. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 59A.

143. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 231.

144. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZE(1)(a).

145. See, eg, National Catholic Education Commission, Preliminary Submission PAD16, 2; Australian National Imams Council, Preliminary Submission PAD23, 7; Australian Muslim Advocacy Network, Preliminary Submission PAD47 [2.3]; Hindu Council of Australia, Preliminary Submissions PAD58 [35].

The definition of religious belief, affiliation and activity

8.150 In particular, some noted that the ADA does not define "religious belief", "religious affiliation" and "religious activity".[146] When the reform was introduced, concerns were expressed that the term "religious affiliation" is ambiguous, and could protect anyone claiming to be affiliated with a religion or a religious group.[147] Some argued individuals could bring a complaint if they are affiliated with a religious organisation that received public criticism.[148]

8.151 Some have suggested the ADA should adopt the definition of religious belief and affiliation in s 93Z of the Crimes Act.[149] It is an offence to threaten or incite violence towards a person, or group, because the person or one or more members of the group has a "specific religious belief or affiliation".

8.152 Unlike the ADA, s 93Z:

- defines "religious belief or affiliation" as "holding or not holding a religious belief or view",[150] and
- does not expressly cover public acts of incitement based on a person or group engaging, or not engaging in, religious activity.

8.153 Others have raised concerns that the ADA does not only protect against vilification based on "lawful" religious activities.[151] However, as we outline in chapter 5, others have argued that lawfulness is already part of the well-established judicial definition of "religion".[152] Chapter 5 also considers other options for defining religious protections.

Other concerns about the religious vilification protections

8.154 Some preliminary submissions expressed concerns that the ADA could go beyond protecting individuals and groups against vilification based on their religious beliefs

---

146. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 3; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 11; NSW Greens, Preliminary Submission PAD85, 12; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 30.
147. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Assembly, 2 August 2023, 48.
148. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 15.
149. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 4; Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD82, 11.
150. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z(5) definition of "religious belief or affiliation".
151. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 3; Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 8; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87, 30.
152. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Council, 3 August 2023, 8196–8197, 8203–8204. See also Church of the New Faith v Commissioner for Pay-Roll Tax (Vic) (1983) 154 CLR 120, 136.

or views. There is a view that it could also be used to silence criticism of those beliefs and views themselves.[153]

8.155 When the reform was introduced into Parliament, the Attorney General said it was not intended to "protect religion or religious beliefs themselves, and they are not intended to be used to silence criticism or debate".[154] An option could be to clarify this in the ADA for the avoidance of doubt.

8.156 Some also argued the ADA does not only protect individuals and groups of people against religious vilification. It could also allow religious organisations, including churches, to seek redress for being vilified as an organisation.[155] This is because the prohibition covers the vilification of a "person" or a "group of persons".[156] In NSW, a "person" includes "an individual, a corporation and a body corporate or public".[157]

8.157 The other vilification protections in the ADA also apply to persons and groups of persons. There is a view that this is less concerning in relation to vilification based on other protected attributes. This is because other organisations are arguably unable to be characterised as having race, sexuality, gender identity or HIV/AIDs status, but can be characterised as "religious".[158]

8.158 Some argued that vilification complaints made by religious organisations against individuals could silence public debate and undermine democratic engagement and institutional accountability.[159] One suggestion involved clarifying that the ADA's protection against religious vilification only applies to "natural persons".[160]

Question 8.5: Religious vilification

What changes, if any, should be made to the protection against religious vilification in the ADA?

153. NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [71]; Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 8.
154. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Assembly, Second Reading Speech, 28 June 2023, 4.
155. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 3; NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [74]; Legal Aid NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD87.
156. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49ZE(1).
157. Interpretation Act 1987 (NSW) sch 4 definition of "person".
158. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 13.
159. NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [74].
160. Public Interest Advocacy Centre, Submission SV10, 13–14; NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21 [74]–[75].

9. Harassment

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) prohibits sexual harassment. We ask if changes are required to the tests for sexual harassment and to the areas of public life in which sexual harassment is unlawful. We also ask whether and, if so, how the ADA should prohibit harassment based on an individual's attributes.

The test for sexual harassment under the ADA 196

The ADA's four-step test for sexual harassment 197

Differences to the Sex Discrimination Act 198

Other sex-based conduct 200

Tests for other sex-based conduct 200

Benefits of prohibiting sex-based conduct 201

Concerns about prohibiting sex-based conduct 201

Areas in which sexual harassment is unlawful 203

Overview of the ADA's approach 204

Comparisons with the Sex Discrimination Act 204

Workplace-related laws also regulate sexual harassment 207

Prohibiting sexual harassment in other areas of life 208

The private accommodation exception 210

Harassment based on protected attributes 211

Arguments for and against new prohibitions 211

Conduct that could be considered attribute-based harassment 212

Harassment on the ground of other attributes and areas of life 213

9.1 The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) prohibits sexual harassment. Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual conduct that would make a person feel offended, humiliated, or intimidated.[1] This chapter focuses on the definition of sexual harassment, the areas of life where sexual harassment is prohibited and whether harassment on other grounds should be covered by the ADA.

1. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22A.

9.2 A significant issue is whether the ADA should be updated to reflect recent developments in sexual harassment law. The sexual harassment sections in the ADA have not been amended since they were introduced in 1997.

9.3 However, major changes have occurred at the federal level. The Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC)'s national inquiry into sexual harassment in workplaces has led to this change. In its 2020 Respect@Work report, the AHRC found that the federal sexual harassment laws (which were broadly consistent with the ADA) were not fit for purpose in addressing workplace sexual harassment. It recommended changes to place greater emphasis on victims, gender and intersectionality.[2] The Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (Sex Discrimination Act) was amended to implement the AHRC's recommendations.

9.4 Another issue is how the ADA relates to other laws that prohibit sexual harassment. The Sex Discrimination Act, federal employment laws, and NSW work health and safety laws also prohibit sexual harassment, either directly or indirectly. This means NSW complainants can face different options about which law to use and where to make a complaint.

9.5 They might also have options about how to frame their complaint. Sexual harassment can also amount to sex discrimination, bullying or subjecting someone to a hostile work environment.[3] Serious instances of sexual harassment can also amount to criminal conduct, including sexual assault.[4]

9.6 This chapter considers some of these legal frameworks and asks if there are any gaps in the ADA or indeed any overlaps with existing protections. We also ask if there is benefit in reforming the ADA to be more consistent with these frameworks.

9.7 We consider in chapter 11 whether there should be a positive obligation to prevent and eliminate harassment. In the second consultation paper, we will consider remedies, enforcement and complaints handling.

The test for sexual harassment under the ADA

9.8 There are four elements to sexual harassment under the ADA. The test in the Sex Discrimination Act is similar, but with some important differences that we explain below.

---

2. Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 10.
3. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 24; Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 789FD(1); Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28M.
4. Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) pt 3 div 10.

The ADA's four-step test for sexual harassment

9.9 Sexual harassment can include a broad range of behaviours, from sexually suggestive comments or questions to unwanted physical contact.[5] A single or isolated act of sexual conduct may be enough to be unlawful.[6]

9.10 The first step in the test is identifying what a person did and the sexual nature of the conduct. Sexual conduct includes sexual advances and requests for sexual favours.[7] However, the conduct does not have to be sexually explicit. For example, it can include sexual "[i]nnuendo, insinuation, implication, overtone, undertone, horseplay, a hint, a wink or a nod".[8]

9.11 The intention of the person engaging in the sexual conduct is irrelevant. This includes the person's view about their conduct and how it was received by the complainant.[9] Instead, whether the conduct is "sexual in nature" depends on the facts of the situation. This is what is known as an "objective" element.[10]

9.12 The second step is that the conduct must be directed to or done in relation to the complainant. This means there must be some connection between the conduct and the complainant. Simply being a bystander or observing sexual conduct may not be enough to be considered sexual harassment.[11]

9.13 The next step is that the sexual conduct must be unwelcome to the complainant. Whether the conduct is "unwelcome" is determined from the complainant's perspective at the time of the conduct.[12] In other words, it is a "subjective" element.[13] Sometimes, it may be "obvious" just from the nature of the conduct that

---

5. See, eg, Cooke v Plauen Holdings Pty Ltd [2001] FMCA 91; San v Dirluck Pty Ltd [2005] FMCA 750, 222 ALR 91; Elliott v Nanda [2001] FCA 418, 111 FCR 240; Poniatowska v Hickinbotham [2009] FCA 680; Kraus v Menzie [2012] FCA 3 [53].
6. See, eg, Hall v Sheiban Pty Ltd (1989) 20 FCR 217, 231; Cooke v Plauen Holdings [2001] FMCA 91 [25]; Johanson v Blackledge Meats [2001] FMCA 6 [85]; Aldridge v Booth (1988) 80 ALR 1, 5.
7. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22A(a).
8. Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [125].
9. Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [82], [96], [98]; Huang v University of New South Wales [2008] FCA 1930 [48].
10. Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [34].
11. Zanella v Carroll's Auto Repairs Pty Ltd [2001] NSWADT 220 [70]–[74]; Carter v Linuki Pty Ltd [2004] NSWADT 287 [24], [27]; Noble v Baldwin [2011] FMCA 283 [237].
12. Ewin v Vergara (No 3) [2013] FCA 1311 [447].
13. Aldridge v Booth (1988) 80 ALR 1, 5; Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [34]; Hall v Sheiban Pty Ltd (1989) 20 FCR 217, 247; Elliott v Nanda [2001] FCA 418, 111 FCR 240 [109]; Poniatowska v Hickinbotham [2009] FCA 680 [289].

it was unwelcome.[14] There is no requirement that the complainant expressly objected to the conduct or said that the conduct was unwelcome.[15]

9.14 The final step is that a reasonable person, with knowledge of all the circumstances, would anticipate that the complainant would be offended, humiliated or intimidated by the unwelcome sexual conduct.

9.15 This is known as the "reasonable person" test or standard. It is objective, meaning it is not assessed from the perspective of the complainant, but rather from the perspective of a hypothetical reasonable person with knowledge of the situation.[16]

Differences to the Sex Discrimination Act

9.16 Under both the ADA and the Sex Discrimination Act, sexual harassment includes engaging in unwelcome conduct of a sexual nature in relation to another person. An objective "reasonable person" standard applies in both laws to determine whether the unwelcome sexual conduct could be considered as offending, humiliating or intimidating to the complainant.

9.17 However, there are important differences between these two laws. An issue is whether the ADA should be amended to align with the Sex Discrimination Act.

The threshold of the "reasonable person" standard

9.18 One difference is that the threshold of the "reasonable person" standard is lower under the Sex Discrimination Act. It requires a reasonable person to anticipate "the possibility" that the person harassed would be offended, humiliated or intimidated.[17] By contrast, the ADA requires a reasonable person to anticipate that the person harassed would be offended, humiliated or intimidated.[18]

9.19 The Sex Discrimination Act was previously the same as the ADA standard. However, it was lowered in response to concerns that the previous standard:

- was too narrow,[19] and
- could allow a person to "run the risk" of causing offence, humiliation or intimidation.[20]

---

14. Hughes v Hill [2020] FCAFC 126, 277 FCR 511 [23].
15. Aldridge v Booth (1988) 80 ALR 1, 5; O'Callaghan v Loder [1983] 3 NSWLR 89 103–104.
16. See, eg, Johanson v Blackledge Meats [2001] FMCA 6 [84].
17. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28A(1)(b), s 28AA(1)(b), s 28M(2)(c).
18. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22A.
19. Explanatory Memorandum, Sex and Age Discrimination Legislation Amendment Bill 2010 (Cth) [69]–[70].
20. Australia, Senate Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, *Effectiveness of the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 in Eliminating Discrimination and Promoting Gender Equality (*2008) [11.36], rec 15.

Matters to be considered

9.20 Another difference is that the Sex Discrimination Act lists matters to be considered in determining whether a reasonable person would anticipate the possibility of offence, insult or humiliation. These are:

- the sex, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, intersex status, marital or relationship status, religious belief, disability, race, colour or national or ethnic origin of the person harassed
- the relationship between the person harassed and the harasser, and
- any other relevant circumstance.[21]

9.21 By contrast, the ADA says that the reasonable person would have regard to "all the circumstances".[22] It does not specify what those circumstances could include.

9.22 There could be benefits in listing some circumstances for consideration, as the Sex Discrimination Act does. For example, it would expressly allow for consideration of the complainant's individual circumstances, including their protected attributes. Some may consider this important, as inequalities that arise from an individual's characteristics can influence their risk of sexual harassment, and how they experience and respond to it.[23]

9.23 However, some have argued the Sex Discrimination Act list is ineffective. There is a view that complainants' attributes continue to be ignored in sexual harassment matters.[24]

Definition of "conduct of a sexual nature"

9.24 The final difference between the definitions of sexual harassment in the ADA and Sex Discrimination Act relates to the term "conduct of a sexual nature". In the Sex Discrimination Act, this includes making an oral or written statement of a sexual nature to a person or in the presence of a person.[25]

9.25 The ADA does not define this term. One view is that defining it could make it clear that conduct can include statements. However, it may not be necessary to define it.

---

21. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28A(1A).
22. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22A.
23. Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 359.
24. Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, Submission to the Australian Human Rights Commission, National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (4 March 2019) 23. See also Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 456.
25. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28A(2). See also Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 58(2); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 92(2)(b).

The NSW Court of Appeal has found that it is a broad term and it should not be interpreted in a limited way.[26] Defining the term could even have the effect of narrowing the current interpretation.

Question 9.1: The definition of sexual harassment

(1) Should the reasonable person test be expanded to include the "possibility" of offence, intimidation or humiliation? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA expressly require consideration of an individual's attributes, or the relationship between the parties, in determining whether a person would be offended, humiliated or intimidated by the conduct? Why or why not?

(3) Does the ADA need to define "conduct of a sexual nature"? Why or why not?

Other sex-based conduct

9.26 Unlike the ADA, the Sex Discrimination Act also prohibits:

- harassment "on the ground of sex",[27] and
- subjecting someone to a workplace that is "hostile on the basis of sex".[28]

9.27 We refer to these as "sex-based conduct". These forms of conduct are different from sexual harassment in that they do not need to be sexual in nature.

Tests for other sex-based conduct

9.28 Under the Sex Discrimination Act, "harassment on the ground of sex" occurs when a person engages in unwelcome, demeaning conduct in relation to the complainant because of the complainant's sex.[29] A reasonable person must anticipate the possibility that the conduct would offend, humiliate or intimidate the complainant.[30]

9.29 Subjecting someone to a workplace that is "hostile on the ground of sex" happens when:

- a person engages in conduct in the workplace, and

26. Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [97].
27. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA.
28. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28M, inserted by Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Act 2022 (Cth) sch 1 cl 5.
29. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA(1)(a).
30. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA(1)(b).

- a reasonable person would anticipate the possibility that the conduct would result in a workplace environment that is offensive, intimidating or humiliating to a person of the sex of the complainant.[31]

9.30 Factors to be considered in determining whether someone has been subjected to either form of conduct include:

- the seriousness of the conduct
- whether it was repeated, and
- the role, influence and authority of the person engaging in the conduct.[32]

Benefits of prohibiting sex-based conduct

9.31 Adopting similar protections in NSW could clarify the law and address some existing "grey areas" in the ADA. This includes behaviours that are not clearly prohibited by sex discrimination or sexual harassment laws in the ADA.[33] For example, behaviour that is:

- sexist rather than sexual in nature,[34] or
- not specifically directed to a person, for example, workplaces with an underlying culture of inappropriate behaviour.[35]

9.32 Introducing similar protections in NSW would allow people to pursue these sex-based claims under the ADA rather than having to use the federal laws. It would also reduce the inconsistency across Australia.

Concerns about prohibiting sex-based conduct

9.33 However, adding these protections to the ADA could make it harder for a complainant to decide which law best applies to their experience. This could arise where the same conduct could constitute sex discrimination, sex-based harassment and sexual harassment.[36]

---

31. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28M(2).
32. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA(2), s 28M(3).
33. Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 457, 460; Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Sex Discrimination and Fair Work (Respect at Work) Amendment Bill 2021 (Cth), Statement of Compatibility with Human Rights [12].
34. Women's Legal Service NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD55 [43]–[45].
35. Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (Cth) [6]. See also Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62 [6].
36. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 136–137, 140–141; Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 460.

9.34 One alternative is to clarify in the ADA that in some cases a hostile work environment may constitute indirect discrimination.[37] Further, better education and information about sex discrimination and sexual harassment may also help reduce confusion.[38]

9.35 Another consideration is whether the ADA needs to prohibit conduct that is already prohibited by the Sex Discrimination Act. Currently, complainants can use the Sex Discrimination Act to make complaints about other sex-based conduct.

9.36 Even if it is considered that the ADA should prohibit sex-based conduct, the Sex Discrimination Act may not be the preferred model. Aspects of this law have been criticised, including the:

- requirement for conduct to be "demeaning" to be considered harassment on the ground of sex
- requirement for someone to be "subjected" to a workplace that is hostile on the ground of sex, and
- factors listed in the Sex Discrimination Act to determine whether sex-based conduct has occurred.

9.37 Some think that the requirement for conduct to be "demeaning", as part of the test for harassment on the ground of sex, is unnecessary. The tests for sexual harassment and sex discrimination do not have this requirement. Some think it should be enough that a person was exposed to unwelcome conduct because of their sex, and that the "reasonable person" standard was met.[39]

9.38 The Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) considered that the requirement could lead to misunderstandings, including that:

- conduct must be demeaning to be considered unlawful sex discrimination or sexual harassment, and
- demeaning conduct is only unlawful in relation to sex, not other attributes.[40]

9.39 Some think that the Sex Discrimination Act's prohibition of a hostile workplace environment is ineffective and onerous for complainants. There are also concerns

---

37. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 141.
38. See, eg, Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 460; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 135, 141.
39. Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, Submission to the Senate Standing Committees on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Inquiry into the Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (11 October 2022) [10].
40. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 136–137.

that the protection may not fill the gaps in the law, as it was intended to. In particular, it may not overcome one problem that sexual harassment complainants face — that is, the need to prove that the respondent's actions directly affected them. This is because "subjecting" someone to a hostile environment would still require a person's actions to directly impact another person.[41]

9.40 There may also be concerns about the factors listed in the Sex Discrimination Act to be considered in determining if sex-based conduct has occurred. One view is that these factors pose unnecessary hurdles for complainants. It could be argued that factors such as the seriousness or repetition of the conduct are higher barriers than those found in the tests for sexual harassment.[42]

Question 9.2: Other sex-based conduct

(1) Should harassment on the ground of sex be expressly prohibited by the ADA? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA prohibit workplace environments that are hostile on the ground of sex? Why or why not?

(3) Are there any other options or models to prohibit conduct which may fall in the gap between sex discrimination and sexual harassment? What could be the benefits of these options?

Areas in which sexual harassment is unlawful

9.41 The ADA only prohibits sexual harassment in the following areas of public life:

- employment
- education
- goods and services
- accommodation
- land dealings
- sport
- state programs
- bodies that confer trade or occupational qualifications, and
- employment agencies.[43]

41. Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, Submission to the Senate Standing Committees on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Inquiry into the Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (11 October 2022) [16].
42. Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, Submission to the Senate Standing Committees on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Inquiry into the Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (11 October 2022) [12].
43. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22B–s22J.

9.42 The application of the ADA in these areas is, as we describe below, complicated. However, other laws take a different approach.

Overview of the ADA's approach

9.43 Within the areas of public life listed above, the ADA specifies who is prohibited from sexually harassing who. In most areas, the prohibition applies broadly. For example, it is unlawful to sexually harass someone while:

- providing or receiving goods and services
- providing or receiving accommodation
- engaging in sporting activities (including as a coach, player, official or administrator), or
- carrying out any function under NSW law for a state program.[44]

9.44 In some areas, the ADA only prohibits a person who has authority in a relationship from sexually harassing a person who does not have this authority. For example:

- members or employees of bodies that issue trade or occupational qualifications must not sexually harass people seeking those qualifications, and
- operators or employees of employment agencies must not sexually harass people who they are providing services to.[45]

9.45 Some areas are further limited. For instance, in the area of "education", the prohibition applies to staff members sexually harassing students aged 16 and over, and students aged 16 and over sexually harassing staff members.[46]

9.46 It does not apply where a student sexually harasses another student, or a staff member sexually harasses another staff member. However, the latter scenario may be covered by the prohibition on sexual harassment in the "employment" area.

Comparisons with the Sex Discrimination Act

9.47 The ADA's coverage is similar to the areas of life protected from sexual harassment under the Sex Discrimination Act. However, the Sex Discrimination Act also prohibits sexual harassment in clubs, and unions or employer associations.[47]

9.48 The Sex Discrimination Act also protects more types of workers from sexual harassment. Its approach to prohibiting sexual harassment in the workplace is simpler than the ADA's.

---

44. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22F, s 22G, s 22I, s 22J.
45. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22C, s 22D.
46. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22E.
47. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28D, s 28K.

9.49 The Sex Discrimination Act prohibits sexual harassment in connection with a person's status as a "worker" or "person conducting a business or undertaking".[48] These terms are broadly defined to cover a wide range of people in the employment sphere.

9.50 Workers include employees, contractors, apprentices, students gaining work experience, outworkers and volunteers.[49] A person conducting a business or undertaking includes a person doing so alone, and whether or not for profit or gain.[50]

9.51 By contrast, the ADA prohibits sexual harassment of specific types of workers by other specified workers or employers. For example, the ADA prohibits the sexual harassment of:

- an employee by their employer or a fellow employee
- a commission agent or contractor by their employer or fellow commission agent or contractor, and
- a partner in a partnership by another partner in the partnership.[51]

9.52 The ADA restricts the protection of other less traditional types of workers. It prohibits the sexual harassment of a "workplace participant" by another "workplace participant", but only where this occurs at the workplace of both these people.[52]

9.53 Workplace participants include the more conventional types of workers listed above, as well as:

- self-employed people, and
- volunteers or unpaid trainees.[53]

9.54 This means that the following instances of sexual harassment must occur in the workplace of both parties to be unlawful under the ADA:

---

48. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28B(3)–(8).
49. Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 7(1) definition of "worker".
50. Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 5(1) definition of "person conducting a business or undertaking".
51. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22B(1)–(5).
52. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22B(6).
53. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22B(9) definition of "workplace participant".

Table 9.1: Unlawful sexual harassment in the workplace

| Sexual harassment by | Sexual harassment of |
|---|---|
| Any workplace participant | A self-employed person, volunteer or unpaid trainee |
| A member of Parliament | Any workplace participant |
| A member of Parliament | A member of Parliament |
| A co-worker who is an employee | A commission agent or contractor |
| An employee, commission agent or contractor | A partner |

9.55 A "workplace" is defined as a place where a workplace participant works or attends "in connection" with being a workplace participant.[54] This includes accommodation provided by an employer, modes of transportation to attend work events and places where there are social gatherings of work colleagues.[55]

9.56 If NSW adopted the Sex Discrimination Act approach, it would mean:

- more types of workers would be covered by the prohibition on sexual harassment
- all types of workers would be treated the same, with no differences in requirement for where the sexual harassment took place, and
- sexual harassment done by any person, not just an employer or co-worker, would be prohibited, if done in connection with someone's status as either a worker or a person conducting a business or undertaking.

9.57 The Australian Law Reform Commission (ALRC) recently recommended the Sex Discrimination Act should prohibit sexual harassment in "all areas of public activity".[56] The ALRC also recommended that the Australian Government consider whether the prohibition should be expanded further to apply "universally" — that is, to any area of life, public or private.[57] The Australian Government has not yet responded to these recommendations.

---

54. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22B(9) definition of "workplace".
55. See, eg, Ewin v Vergara (No 3) [2013] FCA 1311; South Pacific Resort Hotels Pty Ltd v Trainor [2005] FCAFC 130, 144 FCR 402. These cases discuss the definition of "workplace" in the Sex Discrimination Act, which was the same as the ADA definition at the time.
56. Australian Law Reform Commission, Safe, Informed, Supported: Reforming Justice Responses to Sexual Violence, Report 143 (2025) rec 48.
57. Australian Law Reform Commission, Safe, Informed, Supported: Reforming Justice Responses to Sexual Violence, Report 143 (2025) rec 49.

Question 9.3: Sexual harassment in the workplace

Should the ADA adopt the Sex Discrimination Act's approach of prohibiting sexual harassment in connection with someone's status as a worker or person conducting a business or undertaking? Why or why not?

Workplace-related laws also regulate sexual harassment

9.58 Employment laws and work health and safety laws also regulate sexual harassment. These laws are limited to the workplace.

9.59 Sexual harassment in the workplace is prohibited, directly or indirectly, under the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) (Fair Work Act) and the Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) (WHS Act).[58] These Acts apply to "workers" and "people conducting a business or undertaking". These Acts cover more types of workers than the ADA currently does.

9.60 The Fair Work Act uses the Sex Discrimination Act definition of sexual harassment. Under the Fair Work Act, a person must not sexually harass a "worker" or "person conducting a business or undertaking" if the harassment occurs "in connection" with the person being either of those things.[59]

9.61 The Fair Work Act also prohibits bullying at work, which involves repeated unreasonable behaviour towards a worker or group of workers in a workplace, that creates a risk to health and safety.[60] A person may apply to the Fair Work Commission for an order to stop the bullying or an order to stop the sexual harassment.[61]

9.62 The Fair Work Act applies to most workplaces in NSW, but it does not apply to the state public sector and local government.[62]

9.63 The WHS Act imposes duties on people conducting a business or undertaking to:

- ensure, as far as reasonably practicable, the health and safety of their workers and others, and

---

58. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 527D; Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 19; Work Health and Safety Regulation 2017 (NSW) pt 3.2 div 11.
59. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 527D(2) definition of "worker"; Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (Cth) s 7 definition of "worker".
60. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 789FD(1).
61. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 789FC, s 527F.
62. See Industrial Relations (Commonwealth Powers) Act 2009 (NSW) s 6(c), s 6(f); AB [2014] FWC 6723.

- manage risks arising from hazards that may cause psychological harm.[63]

9.64 Harassment is recognised in the SafeWork NSW code of practice on psychosocial hazards as a common hazard that may cause psychological harm.[64] SafeWork NSW also has a separate code of practice which provides guidance to workers and people conducting a business or undertaking on how to identify and manage the risks of sexual and gender-based harassment.[65]

Question 9.4: Workplace-related laws regulating sexual harassment

(1) Are workplace-related sexual harassment laws and the ADA currently working well together, in terms of the definitions of sexual harassment?

(2) Should the ADA and workplace-related sexual harassment laws be more aligned?

Prohibiting sexual harassment in other areas of life

9.65 We heard some support for expanding the areas of life in which sexual harassment was prohibited. Options to consider included:

- prohibiting sexual harassment in any area of life, public or private
- prohibiting sexual harassment in all areas of public life, and
- expanding the areas of life protected from sexual harassment to cover all areas of life that are protected from discrimination under the ADA.

9.66 Prohibiting sexual harassment in any area of life, public or private, would make it unlawful to sexually harass a person on the street or in the home. This is the approach taken in Queensland and the Northern Territory (NT).[66] In 2022, the QHRC concluded this was operating well.[67] The ALRC also favoured this approach in its recent review of justice responses to sexual violence.[68]

9.67 Arguments in favour of this approach include that it would:

- simplify and clarify the ADA, and

63. Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 19; Work Health and Safety Regulation 2017 (NSW) pt 3.2 div 11.
64. Work Health and Safety Regulation 2017 (NSW) cl 55D; SafeWork NSW, Managing Psychosocial Hazards at Work: Code of Practice (2021) 8.
65. SafeWork NSW, Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment: Code of Practice (2023).
66. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 118; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 22.
67. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 130.
68. Australian Law Reform Commission, Safe, Informed, Supported: Reforming Justice Responses to Sexual Violence, Report 143 (2025) rec 49, [14.79]–[14.112].

- cover instances of sexual harassment that are pervasive but which the ADA does not prohibit, including sexual harassment on the street.[69]

9.68 It may also be considered appropriate that sexual harassment is unlawful no matter which area of life or type of relationship it occurs in. However, an argument against including areas of private life is that it may be inconsistent with the ADA's current distinction between public and private areas of life, and limitation to the public sphere only.[70]

9.69 A second option is to prohibit sexual harassment in all areas of public life. As with the first option, this would remove the need for the ADA to specify areas of life or who is prohibited from sexually harassing who. This would be simpler than the current approach and may also eliminate any uncertainty about where harassment is unlawful.[71]

9.70 A third option is to expand the areas of life protected from sexual harassment to cover all areas of life that are protected from discrimination under the ADA. For example, registered clubs are included in the areas of life protected from discrimination, but not sexual harassment.[72]

9.71 Only NSW, South Australia (SA) and Western Australia (WA) do not expressly prohibit sexual harassment in clubs. However, SA prohibits sexual harassment by a "member of a governing body of an association", which may extend to clubs.[73]

9.72 Further, WA may adopt the recommendation of the Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) to extend the prohibition against sexual harassment to all areas of public life that are protected from discrimination. The LRCWA considered that sexual harassment should not be tolerated in any of those areas.[74]

Question 9.5: Expanding the areas of life where sexual harassment is prohibited

(1) Should the ADA continue to limit the areas of life where sexual harassment is unlawful? Why or why not?

(2) Should sexual harassment be unlawful in other areas of life? For example:

---

69. Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Preliminary Submission PAD62, 6–7; NSW Council for Civil Liberties, Preliminary Submission PAD21, 21–22; Inner City Legal Centre, Preliminary Submission PAD40, 3.
70. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.17].
71. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 52.
72. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20A, s34A, s 38O, s 48A, s 49O, s 49ZR, s 49ZYP.
73. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 87(6g).
74. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 56, [4.3.1].

(a) areas of life that are protected from discrimination

(b) all areas of public life, or

(c) any area of life, public or private?

The private accommodation exception

9.73 The ADA prohibits sexually harassing someone while providing, or offering to provide, accommodation to them.[75] However, this does not apply to accommodation in a private household.[76]

9.74 Only NSW completely excludes private accommodation from the prohibition on sexual harassment. While the Sex Discrimination Act has an exception for private accommodation, it applies only where the private accommodation is being provided by a near relative.[77]

9.75 The ADA's sexual harassment exception is broader than the private accommodation exception that applies to discrimination (we discuss this in chapter 6). The discrimination exception only applies where:

- the person providing the accommodation is a near relative and intends to continue to reside at the premises, and
- the accommodation provided is for no more than 6 people.[78]

9.76 In 1999 the NSW Law Reform Commission recommended repealing the private accommodation exception for sexual harassment.[79]

9.77 We discuss other exceptions that apply across the ADA, including to the sexual harassment protections, in chapter 7.

Question 9.6: The private accommodation exception

Should sexual harassment be prohibited in private accommodation? Why or why not? If an exception for private accommodation is required, how wide should it be?

75. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22G(1).
76. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 22G(2).
77. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 4(1) definition of "near relative", s 28H.
78. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20(3), s 34(3), s 38N(3), s 48(3), s 49N(3), s 49ZQ(3), s 49ZYO(3)(a)–(b).
79. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [7.49], rec 91.

Harassment based on protected attributes

9.78 Harassing a person based on a protected attribute is not currently prohibited under the ADA. However, attribute-based harassment is prohibited elsewhere, including in Tasmania, the NT, WA and in some federal discrimination laws.[80]

Arguments for and against new prohibitions

9.79 Arguably, attribute-based harassment may already be prohibited by other means. There are instances where this conduct may be considered:

- unlawful discrimination (if for example, a person was treated less favourably based on a protected attribute)[81]
- vilification (if the conduct incited hatred or violence of people with that protected attribute)[82]
- intimidation (including for example, if the conduct caused the person to fear for their safety),[83] or
- workplace bullying (if the conduct created a risk to health and safety).[84]

9.80 However, an attribute-based approach to harassment may make it easier for people who are subjected to offensive, intimidating and humiliating treatment, based on their attributes, to make a complaint. Currently, they would need to make a discrimination or vilification complaint. But not all attribute-based harassment meets the threshold of discrimination or vilification.

9.81 Expressly prohibiting attribute-based harassment may better reflect the reality of people's experiences of harassment.[85] For example, a person of colour may experience sexual and racial harassment in the same conduct. Currently, they would need to pursue a sexual harassment claim and a separate race discrimination claim. They may decide it is easier to only pursue one claim or to not make a complaint. If the ADA prohibited attribute-based harassment, they may only need to satisfy one test.

---

80. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(1)(b); Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) s 18C; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 35, s 37, s 39; Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 49A(3), s 49B(2), s 49C(2).
81. O'Callaghan v Loder [1983] 3 NSWLR 89; Hall v Sheiban Pty Ltd (1989) 20 FCR 217. See also ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 90.
82. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 20C, s 38S, s 49ZE, s 49ZS, s 49ZT, s 49ZXB; Crimes Act 1900 (NSW) s 93Z.
83. Crimes (Domestic and Personal Violence) Act 2007 (NSW) s 7 definition of "intimidation", s 13.
84. Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth) s 789FD(1).
85. Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 463.

Conduct that could be considered attribute-based harassment

9.82 The type of conduct covered in various states, territories and federally differs. Tasmania has the broadest model, covering conduct that offends, humiliates, intimidates, insults or ridicules a person. This applies to both sexual harassment and attribute-based harassment. The only difference between attribute-based harassment and sexual harassment in Tasmania is that sexual harassment must be sexual in nature.[86]

9.83 Part of the Tasmanian test is that a reasonable person would have anticipated that the complainant would be offended, humiliated, intimidated, insulted or ridiculed.[87]

9.84 Other places cover a narrower range of conduct. WA limits attribute-based harassment to threats, abuse, insults or taunts.[88] Also, WA and the NT treat attribute-based harassment as a form of discrimination. This means complainants must establish that they were disadvantaged or treated less favourably because of the harassment.[89] This is a higher standard than the objective "reasonable person" standard used in Tasmania and for sexual harassment in the ADA.

9.85 The LRCWA recommended removing the requirement to establish disadvantage. It recommended adopting an objective standard.[90] It considered this would make it clearer that harassment is unacceptable.[91]

9.86 The Disability Discrimination Act does not define harassment. It has been interpreted narrowly by the courts, requiring repetitive and serious conduct.[92] The Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability (Disability Royal Commission) found that the Disability Discrimination Act has been ineffective in preventing harassment, with no successful claims since 2000.[93]

---

86. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1), s 17(3).
87. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 17(1).
88. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 49A(3), s 49B(2), s 49C(2).
89. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(1)(b), s 20(2); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 49A(3)(b), s 49B(2)(b), s 49C(2)(b).
90. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 104, rec 105.
91. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [5.2.1].
92. McCormack v Commonwealth of Australia [2007] FMCA 1245 [75].
93. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 318.

9.87 The Sex Discrimination Act requires the conduct to be "demeaning". As discussed earlier in the chapter, this has been criticised as unnecessary.[94] The Sex Discrimination Act is the only discrimination law that lists factors to be considered for attribute-based harassment. These include:

- the attributes of the complainant
- any power imbalance in the relationship between the parties
- the seriousness of the conduct, and
- whether the conduct was repeated.[95]

Harassment on the ground of other attributes and areas of life

9.88 Australian discrimination laws take different approaches to which attributes are protected from harassment and in which areas of life. Some align the attributes and areas with discrimination, while others are more limited.

9.89 One approach is to protect the same attributes and the same areas of life from both discrimination and harassment. Only the NT takes this approach.[96] Tasmania and the federal Sex Discrimination Act protect the same areas of life (but not attributes) from both harassment and discrimination.

9.90 A benefit of aligning the areas and attributes may be that it could be easier to understand when harassment and discrimination were unlawful, and it could promote consistency across the ADA.

9.91 However, some discrimination laws only protect selected attributes from harassment. The extent of the protection varies:

- In Tasmania, most attributes protected from discrimination are also protected from harassment. The exceptions are industrial activity, political and religious beliefs and activities, irrelevant criminal and medical records, and associations with people who have these or other protected attributes.[97]
- Federal discrimination law protects two attributes from harassment: sex and disability.[98]
- By contrast, WA only protects against harassment based on race.[99]

---

94. Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, Submission to the Senate Standing Committees on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Inquiry into the Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (11 October 2022) [10].
95. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA(2).
96. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 20(1)(b).
97. Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 16(l)–(s).
98. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA; Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 35, s 37, s 39.
99. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 49A, s 49B, s 49C.

9.92 A concern with prohibiting harassment based on some attributes and not others is that it may suggest that harassing behaviour is sometimes acceptable.[100]

9.93 Some discrimination laws only protect against harassment in limited areas of life. WA and the Disability Discrimination Act only prohibit harassment in three areas of life. This approach has been criticised. For example, the LRCWA considered that racial harassment should not be tolerated in any area of life, and recommended extending the prohibition to all areas of public life protected by its Act.[101] Similarly, the Disability Royal Commission considered that the limited scope of the disability harassment provision is one reason why it has been ineffective.[102]

Question 9.7: Attribute-based harassment

If the ADA was to prohibit attribute-based harassment, which attributes and areas should it cover?

100. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 136–137.

101. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) [5.2.2.1], rec 106.

102. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 319. See also Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 35, s 37, s 39.

10. Other unlawful acts and liability

In brief

The Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) prohibits other behaviour, including victimisation and unlawful advertisements. We invite comment on the ADA's approach to these unlawful acts. We also seek your views on how liability for unlawful conduct operates under the ADA. This includes whether the use of artificial intelligence in automated decision-making challenges current understandings of liability.

Victimisation 215

When victimisation occurs 216

Options to expand or clarify the coverage of this prohibition 216

Unlawful advertisements 218

Liability for unlawful behaviour 218

Forms of liability 219

Exceptions for employers or agents 220

Liability and artificial intelligence 222

10.1 In previous chapters, we consider the prohibitions against discrimination, vilification and sexual harassment under the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA). The ADA also makes it unlawful to:

- victimise someone for taking action under the ADA, or
- publish advertisements that contravene the ADA.

10.2 In this chapter, we outline what is covered by these forms of unlawful conduct and the defences that apply to them. We ask if any changes should be made.

10.3 We also discuss who may be held liable for unlawful conduct under the ADA and in what circumstances. We ask whether the growing use of artificial intelligence (AI) in decision-making challenges established understandings of liability and, if so, how this could be addressed.

Victimisation

10.4 Victimisation occurs where someone experiences retribution or further disadvantage because they exercise their rights under the ADA. One example of exercising rights under the ADA is making a discrimination complaint.

When victimisation occurs

10.5 Someone would be victimised under the ADA if they were subjected to any "detriment" because they had:

- brought proceedings under the ADA
- given evidence or information in connection with proceedings under the ADA
- alleged that someone had done something that contravened the ADA, or
- otherwise done anything under or by reference to the ADA.

10.6 Victimisation also occurs when someone is subjected to a detriment because the respondent knew that they intended to do any of these things, or suspected they had done them.[1]

10.7 A "detriment" means any form of "disadvantage",[2] loss, damage or injury.[3] The detriment needs to be of some substance and not merely trivial.[4] Examples include being:

- dismissed from a role at work[5]
- denied opportunities at work[6]
- excluded from a community social group,[7] and
- exposed to public humiliation or abuse.[8]

10.8 It is a defence if the allegation made under the ADA (for which someone believed they were being victimised) was false and not made in good faith.[9]

Options to expand or clarify the coverage of this prohibition

10.9 There are questions about whether the prohibition against victimisation should more clearly cover two other scenarios.

---

1. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 50(1).
2. Borg v Department of Corrective Services (2002) EOC 93-198 [173].
3. Shaikh v NSW Fire Brigades (1996) EOC 92-808 [48].
4. Bogie v University of Western Sydney (1990) EOC 92-313; Sivananthan v NSW Police Service [2001] NSWADT 44 [40]–[41].
5. Kolavo v Ainsworth Nominees (1994) EOC 92-576.
6. Borg v Department of Corrective Services (2002) EOC 93-198.
7. Grass v McIntosh, Leong and Auyeng [2023] NSWCATAD 258.
8. See, eg, Ferguson v Shoalhaven City Council [2023] NSWCATAD 276; Burns v Sunol [2012] NSWADT 246; Burns v Sunol [2014] NSWCATAD 61.
9. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 50(2).

Threats to victimise

10.10 The first scenario is where a person threatens to victimise someone. The ADA appears to require someone alleging victimisation to prove that a detriment has already occurred. By contrast, most other Australian anti-victimisation laws expressly cover threats to victimise someone.[10]

10.11 In 1999, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) thought that the ADA should clearly prohibit any conduct, actual or threatened, which would undermine its purposes, which include enabling people to bring complaints. The NSWLRC recommended that the ADA expressly cover a situation where the respondent threatened to victimise someone.[11]

Victimisation that occurs for two or more reasons

10.12 The second scenario is where someone was victimised for two or more reasons. For instance, they were victimised both for bringing an action under the ADA and for other reasons unrelated to the ADA. Currently, the ADA does not clearly include this in the test for victimisation.

10.13 By contrast, the ADA is clearer when it comes to unlawful discrimination. If an act was done for two or more reasons, and one reason was unlawful discrimination, the act is taken to be done for a discriminatory reason. This applies even if this was not the dominant or substantial reason.[12]

10.14 However, where a person victimises someone for two or more reasons, it has been found to be sufficient that one of the "real, genuine or true reasons" for doing so was that the person was pursuing a right under the ADA.[13]

Question 10.1: Victimisation

(1) Should the prohibition of victimisation in the ADA expressly extend to situations where a person threatens to victimise someone? Why or why not?

(2) Should the ADA provide that victimisation is unlawful even if it was done for two or more reasons? If so, how best could this be achieved?

---

10. See, eg, Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 47A(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 130(1); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 104(1); Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA) s 67(1).
11. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 98, [7.154].
12. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 4A.
13. Nicholls v Department of Education and Training (No 2) [2009] NSWADTAP 20 [36]; Jones v TRAD [2013] NSWCA 389, 86 NSWLR 241; Shaikh v NSW Fire Brigades (1996) EOC 92-808; Waterhouse v Bell (1991) 25 NSWLR 99.

Unlawful advertisements

10.15 It is unlawful to publish, or cause to be published, an advertisement that indicates an intention to do something that is unlawful under the ADA.

10.16 An "advertisement" includes any notice, sign, label, circular and any similar thing. It also includes anything that is not in writing, but which conveys a message because of the form or context in which it appears. The prohibition covers publishing the advertisement by any means, including in a newspaper or periodical, by radio or television broadcast, or in a film.[14]

10.17 The maximum penalty for contravening this section is 50 penalty units ($5500) for a body corporate or 10 penalty units ($1100) in any other case.[15]

10.18 One issue is whether there should be a defence to this form of unlawful conduct. Under the ADA, it is a defence if a person believed on reasonable grounds that the publication of the advertisement was not an offence.[16]

10.19 Only South Australia has a similar defence.[17] Queensland and Victoria have defences that the person took reasonable precautions and exercised due diligence to prevent publication.[18] Other Australian discrimination laws do not provide any defences to publishing something unlawful.[19]

Question 10.2: Advertisements

Should it be a defence to publishing an unlawful advertisement that the person reasonably believed publication was not unlawful? Why or why not?

Liability for unlawful behaviour

10.20 To establish a breach of the ADA, a complainant must identify who engaged in or did the wrongful act. Duty holders under the ADA include employers, partners, educational authorities, and people who provide services or accommodation. These duty holders may be individuals, partnerships, corporations, associations or government agencies.

---

14. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 51(1).
15. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 51(2).
16. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 51(4).
17. Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (SA) s 103(2).
18. Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 127(2)–(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 183.
19. See, eg, Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 86; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 69; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 20.

10.21 It is often possible to identify who engaged in certain conduct or made decisions. However, sometimes it can be difficult to identify the duty holder who is legally responsible under the ADA.

Forms of liability

10.22 There are several ways a duty holder may be liable for conduct or decisions that breached the ADA. These forms of liability are:

- direct or personal liability
- vicarious liability
- joint and several liability, and
- accessorial liability.

10.23 One way is if an individual is a duty holder, and they engage in conduct that is prohibited by the ADA. The individual would be personally liable or responsible for their actions. This is direct or personal liability.

10.24 Another way is if the duty holder is an employer, educational authority or government. The conduct of individuals may be treated as the conduct of the employer, educational authority or government. In this instance, the duty holder may be held:

- directly liable for the conduct of an individual, generally where the individual was an officer, director, principal, agent or employee, or
- vicariously liable under the ADA for the acts of an agent[20] or employee[21], unless they can prove a defence (we discuss this in the next section).

10.25 In some circumstances, the individual employee or agent and the employer or principal are both liable.[22] This is joint and several liability.

10.26 Finally, any person who caused, instructed, induced, aided or permitted another person to do an act that was unlawful under the ADA will be liable.[23] This is accessorial liability.

10.27 To establish accessorial liability, a complainant must prove:

- a breach of the ADA occurred by a person (person A)
- another person (person B) had reason to think the breach would occur

---

20. See, eg, Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [43].
21. Shellharbour Golf Club Ltd v Wheeler [1999] NSWSC 224, 46 NSWLR 253 [30], [33]; Vitality Works Australia Pty Ltd v Yelda (No 2) [2021] NSWCA 147, 105 NSWLR 403 [43]. See also NSW Breeding and Racing Stables Pty Ltd v V [2005] NSWCA 114 [25]–[33].
22. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 53(2).
23. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 52.

- person B had the power to prevent it, and
- it was what person B did or failed to do that permitted the breach by person A.[24]

10.28 A person may be liable in an accessorial way for conduct they could have prevented, or where they assisted, directly or indirectly, a duty holder to do an unlawful act. This includes a person who knowingly places someone in a situation where there is a real possibility that unlawful conduct will occur.[25]

10.29 Accessorial liability can also be a way of holding an employee liable for unlawful discrimination against a fellow employee. For example, in one case a complainant succeeded in claims of unlawful discrimination against her employer and her supervisor. The employer was found to have breached the ADA. Further, the supervisor was found to have caused the employer to discriminate, resulting in a finding that the supervisor was liable in an accessorial way. The Tribunal then treated the employer and supervisor as jointly and severally liable.[26]

10.30 These forms of liability do not override exceptions under the ADA or other immunities from liability. For example, the immunity of judicial officers performing their functions.[27]

Question 10.3: The forms of liability

What, if any, concerns or issues are raised by the ADA's approach to the various forms of liability?

Exceptions for employers or agents

10.31 The ADA provides two defences for employers or principals. The onus is on the employer or principal to prove that they either:

- took all reasonable steps to prevent the agent or employee from breaching the ADA, or
- did not authorise the agent or employee to do the act.[28]

10.32 The "reasonable steps" exception to vicarious liability is common to all Australian discrimination laws.[29] This exception was added to the ADA at the same time as the prohibition on sexual harassment. The purpose was to align the ADA with the Sex

24. City of Adelaide v Australasian Performing Right Association Ltd (1928) 40 CLR 481, 487; Dixon v RNJ Sicame Pty Ltd [2002] NSWADT 154 [51]; Hollingsworth v NSW Police [2004] NSWADT 17.
25. Elliott v Nanda [2001] FCA 418, 111 FCR 240 [163].
26. Borg v Department of Corrective Services [2002] NSWADT 42 [120]–[121].
27. See, eg, Johnston v New South Wales [2009] NSWADT 314 [61].
28. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 53(1), s 53(3).
29. See, eg, Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 106(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 121A(3); Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 110.

Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth), and to encourage employers to adopt sexual harassment grievance handling policies and procedures.[30]

10.33 What steps are "reasonable" may depend on the resources and circumstances of the principal or agent. A large company may be required to take more steps than a small company.[31]

10.34 The employer or principal must take "all" reasonable steps, not just "some" reasonable steps.[32] For instance, the mere existence of a policy or training addressing the unlawful behaviour is not necessarily enough. The policy or training must be adequate, implemented and brought to the attention of the employee or agent.[33]

10.35 However, the ADA is the only discrimination law in Australia that includes an exception relating to unauthorised acts. Whether an act was "authorised" has been interpreted broadly:

- an act has been considered authorised if the principal or employer was aware it was likely to occur and took no action,[34] and
- a principal or employer must prove they did not authorise the conduct "at any time", not just after the unlawful act occurred.[35]

10.36 In its 1999 review of the ADA, the NSWLRC recommended that the "unauthorised act" exception be removed. It said that the "reasonable steps" exception was sufficient and "achieved a practical approach" to the issue of attributed liability.[36]

Question 10.4: The exceptions for liability

Should the ADA continue to provide two exceptions to vicarious liability (that is, the "reasonable steps" and "unauthorised acts" exceptions)? Or is a single "reasonable steps" exception sufficient?

30. NSW, Parliamentary Debates, Legislative Council, Second Reading Speech, 20 November 1996, 6265.
31. Johanson v Blackledge [2001] FMCA 6 [101]; McAlister v SEQ Aboriginal Corporation [2002] FMCA 109 [143]; Cooke v Plauen Holdings Pty Ltd [2001] FMCA 91 [37].
32. Van Schoeler v Allen Taylor and Company Ltd (No 2) [2020] FCAFC 13, 273 FCR 189 [60].
33. See, eg, Van Schoeler v Allen Taylor and Company Ltd (No 2) [2020] FCAFC 13, 273 FCR 189 [85]; Caton v Richmond Club Ltd [2003] NSWADT 202; Richardson v Oracle Corporation Australia Pty Ltd (2013) 232 IR 31 [158], [164].
34. Shellharbour Golf Club Ltd v Wheeler [1999] NSWSC 224, 46 NSWLR 253 [58]. See also Hudson v Strathfield Golf Club [2000] NSWADT 88 [183]; NSW Breeding and Racing Stables Pty Ltd v V [2005] NSWCA 114 [32]-[33].
35. Shellharbour Golf Club Ltd v Wheeler [1999] NSWSC 224, 46 NSWLR 253 [74].
36. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 100, [7.209]–[7.210].

Liability and artificial intelligence

10.37 Another issue is how liability operates when it comes to automated decision-making by AI. AI is being increasingly used to make decisions that affect people's rights, including in government services and recruitment processes.[37] This can result in discrimination where, for example, the data used to train the computer program was biased.[38]

10.38 Decisions made by AI technologies can have limited human involvement. This could make it difficult to assign liability for any resulting unlawful discrimination.

10.39 One option to address this issue could be to amend the ADA to clarify the law on attributing acts to an individual or body corporate. For instance, the ADA could provide that decisions made by a computer program used by an individual or body corporate would be attributed to that individual or body corporate. Similar provisions exist in other Australian laws.[39]

10.40 The onus would then be on the individual or body corporate to prove a defence. For example, a defence could include that they took all reasonable steps to prevent the unlawful conduct, such as an audit of the computer program. If the individual or body corporate was found liable, those who developed or sold the product could also be found liable for causing or assisting the employer to discriminate.[40] We discuss accessorial liability above.

Question 10.5: Liability and artificial intelligence

Does the use of AI challenge the ADA's approach to liability? If so, how could the ADA be amended to address this?

37. Australian Human Rights Commission, Human Rights and Technology, Final Report (2021) 35.
38. N Sheard, "Employment Discrimination by Algorithm: Can Anyone Be Held Accountable?" (2022) 45 UNSW Law Journal 617, 625–626.
39. Migration Act 1958 (Cth) s 495A; Social Security (Administration) Act 1999 (Cth) s 6A(2).
40. N Sheard, "Employment Discrimination by Algorithm: Can Anyone Be Held Accountable?" (2022) 45 UNSW Law Journal 617, 638.

11. Promoting substantive equality

In brief

We consider a range of mechanisms to promote substantive equality: adjustments, special measures and positive duties to prevent discrimination and other unlawful conduct. We invite views on whether (and if so, how) these mechanisms should be part of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW).

Adjustments 224

The current model in the ADA 224

Models for a new requirement to provide adjustments 225

Attributes that could be covered 227

Special measures 229

The ADA's approach 229

Options for a potential new "special measures" section 232

The relationship with exemptions and certifications 234

A duty to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct 235

Arguments for and against a positive duty 235

Options for a positive duty 237

A duty to promote equality 240

11.1 Around Australia and internationally, discrimination laws increasingly look beyond achieving formal equality, which involves treating everyone the same way. There is a focus on what more could be done to achieve substantive equality.

11.2 As we discuss in chapter 2, this requires an approach which extends beyond comparing the treatment of individuals, and addresses the adverse impact of broader practices, cultural norms, customs and attitudes, and unconscious bias. Addressing these barriers to equality means treating people or groups in a way that achieves equal outcomes or access to equal opportunities.

11.3 Currently, how the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (ADA) seeks to address substantive equality is limited to prohibiting indirect discrimination (we discuss this in chapter 3). However, other mechanisms to promote substantive equality can be found in discrimination laws across Australia. These include:

- a requirement for duty holders to provide adjustments for some people with protected attributes

- special measures for groups who have experienced disadvantage, which allow them to be treated differently to best promote their rights, and
- a positive duty to prevent discrimination and other unlawful conduct.

11.4 In this chapter, we outline these mechanisms and ask if they should be part of the ADA. We will return to issues relating to the enforcement of any new mechanisms in the second consultation paper.

Adjustments

11.5 Adjustments are requirements for duty holders to support people with certain attributes to participate in the community and areas where discrimination is unlawful.

11.6 Adjustments can come in many forms. For example, an adjustment could involve providing:

- a ramp for accessing a building
- a machine reading software package to assist someone who is blind or vision impaired
- a student with a uniform that corresponds with their gender identity, or
- time off work for Sorry Business for an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander employee.[1]

11.7 Adjustments are sometimes called "reasonable adjustments" or "reasonable accommodation". Parties to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, including Australia, must take steps to ensure that "reasonable accommodation" is provided to people with disability.[2]

11.8 The ADA does not require duty holders to provide adjustments. We discuss the current model in the ADA below and ask whether it should change.

The current model in the ADA

11.9 As we detail in chapter 6, certain exceptions apply to discrimination based on disability in the areas of work, accommodation, education, the provision of goods and services, and the activities of registered clubs. These exceptions apply if

1. See, eg, Explanatory Statement and Human Rights Compatibility Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2022 (ACT) cl 30.
2. Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008) art 2 definition of "reasonable accommodation", arts 5, 14, 24, 27.

people with that attribute require a particular arrangement and it would impose an "unjustifiable hardship" on the duty holder to provide it.[3]

11.10 Similar exceptions apply to discrimination based on carer's responsibilities in employment (the only protected area applicable to this attribute).[4] All relevant circumstances are to be considered in working out if there would be unjustifiable hardship. These include:

- the nature of the benefit or detriment likely to anyone concerned
- the effect of the person's disability or responsibilities as a carer, and
- the financial circumstances of the duty holder and the amount of expenditure required.[5]

11.11 These exceptions imply that duty holders are sometimes required to provide adjustments for people with these two attributes so they can, for instance, fulfill the inherent requirements of a job. However, there is no clear duty to provide adjustments.

Models for a new requirement to provide adjustments

11.12 Many preliminary submissions supported amending the ADA to include such a duty. Potential benefits could include helping to prevent discrimination, promote equality and reduce the burden on individuals to seek the adjustments to support their participation and inclusion. It might also clarify parties' rights and obligations.

11.13 The Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability (Disability Royal Commission) considered that a standalone duty would be consistent with Australia's international obligations in relation to people with disability.[6]

11.14 If the ADA was to include a requirement to provide adjustments, other discrimination laws provide two main models for consideration.

Adding adjustments to the test for discrimination

11.15 The Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) (Disability Discrimination Act) provides one model. It deals with "reasonable adjustments" as part of the definition of direct and indirect disability discrimination.[7] For example, a failure to make reasonable

---

3. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49D(4)(b), s 49E(3)(b), s 49F(2)(b), s 49G(3)(b), s 49L(4).
4. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49V(4)(b), s 49W(3)(b), s 49X(2)(b), s 49Y(3)(b).
5. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 49C, s 49U.
6. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 308.
7. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 5(2), s 6(2).

adjustments that results in a person with disability being treated less favourably may be direct discrimination.[8]

11.16 This means any consideration of adjustments only arises in the areas where discrimination is unlawful and through the definition of "discrimination". However, there is no clear obligation to provide an adjustment to a person with disability separate from the definition of "discrimination" applying to the particular alleged unlawful conduct.[9] A 2017 full Federal Court decision found that for the right to a reasonable adjustment under the Disability Discrimination Act to be enforceable, a person with disability must show that:

- they are disadvantaged by a failure to provide a reasonable adjustment, and
- their disability was a reason for the failure to provide the adjustment.[10]

11.17 We heard concerns that this approach has created more difficulties for people who require adjustments.

11.18 It is important to note that "reasonable adjustments" simply means any "adjustment" that does not impose unjustifiable hardship on the person who would need to make it. It is not necessary to determine what is "reasonable".[11]

11.19 Under the Disability Discrimination Act, what constitutes unjustifiable hardship depends on the circumstances, including the:

- nature of any benefit or detriment likely to be suffered
- effect of the disability, and
- financial circumstances and expenditure required by the person making the adjustment.[12]

A separate duty to provide adjustments

11.20 Another model involves a separate duty to provide adjustments. This provides that a failure to provide adjustments can itself be unlawful discrimination.

11.21 Victoria has this model, for example. There, duty holders, including employers, educational institutions and service providers, are required to make reasonable adjustments for people with disability.[13]

---

8. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 5(2).
9. Purvis v New South Wales [2003] HCA 62, 217 CLR 92 [104]; Watts v Australian Postal Corporation [2014] FCA 370, 222 FCR 220 [233].
10. Sklavos v Australasian College of Dermatologists [2017] FCAFC 128 [23]–[53].
11. Watts v Australian Postal Corporation [2014] FCA 370, 222 FCR 220 [22].
12. Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) s 4 definition of "reasonable adjustment", s 11 definition of "unjustifiable hardship".
13. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 20, s 22A, s 33, s 40, s 45.

11.22 Whether an adjustment is reasonable depends on the context in which the duty applies. For instance, in the employment context, an adjustment is what a person with a disability requires to "adequately" perform the "genuine and reasonable requirements" of the role.[14]

11.23 The Victorian law sets out non-exhaustive lists of factors that must be considered in determining whether an adjustment is reasonable in each of the contexts where the duty applies. In employment contexts, this includes the:

- nature of the person's circumstances and disability
- nature of the role
- size and nature of the workplace, and
- financial impact of making the adjustment.[15]

11.24 In the Australian Capital Territory (ACT), duty holders must make adjustments to accommodate someone's "particular needs arising from a protected attribute", as long as this does not cause unjustifiable hardship for the duty holder.[16]

11.25 The Disability Royal Commission recommended that the Disability Discrimination Act should have a separate duty to make reasonable adjustments.[17] Other reviews have also recommended this model.[18] Reasons include that it would:

- be consistent with Australia's international obligations[19]
- improve clarity about people's rights and obligations, and
- encourage early intervention, preventing discrimination.[20]

Attributes that could be covered

11.26 The models discussed above only apply to disability discrimination. If a requirement to provide adjustments was introduced in NSW, it could also extend to other attributes.

---

14. Dziurbas v Mondelez Australia Pty Ltd [2015] VCAT 1432 [141]; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 20(1)(b)–(2), s 33(1)(b)–(2).
15. See, eg, Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 20(3).
16. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 74.
17. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 308, rec 4.26.
18. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 5.1; NSW, Legislative Council Portfolio Committee No 3, Children and Young People with Disability in New South Wales Educational Settings, Report 52 (2024) rec 25.
19. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", 308.
20. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 122–123.

11.27 One approach might involve providing adjustments to anyone with any protected attribute, as required. This is the approach taken in the ACT.[21] Similarly, the Northern Territory obliges duty holders to provide reasonable accommodation to any person who has a "special need" because of an attribute.[22]

11.28 Alternatively, an obligation to provide adjustments could apply to certain, specified protected attributes and contexts. For example, Victoria prohibits employers from unreasonably refusing to accommodate an employee's responsibilities as a parent or carer.[23]

11.29 The Law Reform Commission of Western Australia (LRCWA) recommended the obligation cover, at minimum, people with needs arising from family responsibilities or carer obligations, pregnancy and breastfeeding, as well as people with disability. The LRCWA also thought the option of extending the duty to all attributes and areas of life should be considered.[24]

11.30 Applying the duty to all protected attributes would allow more people to benefit from adjustments. But this could be a significant change in NSW, where duty holders may be less familiar with the concept of adjustments. Introducing a requirement to make adjustments in relation to a smaller range of attributes could give duty holders more time to prepare.

11.31 We discuss how a duty to make adjustments relates to inherent requirement exceptions in more detail in chapter 6.

Question 11.1: Adjustments

(1) Should the ADA impose a duty to provide adjustments? If so, what attributes should this apply to?

(2) Should this be a separate duty, form part of the tests for discrimination, or is there another preferred approach?

(3) Should a person with a protected attribute first have to request an adjustment, before the obligation to provide one arises?

(4) What test should be used to determine the scope of, including any limits to, the obligation to provide adjustments?

---

21. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 74.
22. *Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (*NT) s 24(1).
23. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 17(1), s 19(1), s 22(1), s 32(1).
24. Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 151, rec 66.

Special measures

11.32 "Special measures" are benefits, programs or policies that support some or all members of a disadvantaged group. They are implemented for the sole purpose of promoting substantive equality and redressing historical disadvantage. The concept comes from international human rights law.[25]

11.33 Although special measures involve treating people differently, this is not considered discrimination. This is because the purpose of a special measure is to secure the advancement of the group, so they can exercise and enjoy human rights and fundamental freedoms equally with others.[26]

11.34 Examples of special measures could include:

- a swimming pool located in an area with a significant Muslim population holding women-only swimming sessions to enable Muslim women to use the pool, or
- a company in an industry in which Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people are under-represented developing a training program to increase employment opportunities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.[27]

The ADA's approach

11.35 The ADA does not generally provide for special measures. Instead, it has:

- narrow "special needs" exceptions relating to race and age discrimination, and
- processes for duty holders to seek exemptions and certifications to undertake actions that promote equal opportunity.

Special needs exceptions

11.36 The ADA has "special needs" exceptions to racial discrimination and vilification, and to age discrimination. The exceptions apply to anything done to provide certain people with access to facilities, services or opportunities to meet their special needs or to promote equal and improved access.[28] These exceptions do not promote the rights of people with other attributes.

11.37 The ADA has other exceptions of a similar nature. For example:

---

25. Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 1249 UNTS 13 (entered into force 3 September 1981) art 4(1); International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, 660 UNTS 195 (entered into force 4 January 1969) art 1(4). See also Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008) art 5(4).
26. Gerhardy v Brown (1985) 159 CLR 70, 133.
27. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 12, examples.
28. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 21, s 49ZYR.

- a duty holder can discriminate against men to give women rights or benefits relating to pregnancy, childbirth or breastfeeding, and
- educational authorities can discriminate based on race in certain situations, such as running language classes for migrants.[29]

Exemptions

11.38 If a duty holder wishes to take affirmative action in relation to people with any other protected attribute, they can apply to the President of Anti-Discrimination NSW (ADNSW) for an exemption.[30]

11.39 For instance, exemptions might be granted for activities that help improve access to jobs, programs, services or facilities for groups that experience discrimination. An example might be targeted jobs or recruitment programs for people with protected attributes.[31]

11.40 Exemptions were intended to be a transitional measure to give duty holders time to comply with the ADA.[32] However, their use has increased over time. In 2023–2024, 77 exemption applications were made, of which 65 were granted. By comparison, 49 applications were made in 2018–2019, of which 35 were granted.[33]

11.41 In assessing an exemption application, the President of ADNSW must consider:

- whether it is necessary, and appropriate or reasonable
- whether there are non-discriminatory ways of achieving the purpose of the exemption
- whether the applicant can take or has taken reasonable steps to avoid any adverse impact of the exemption
- the community impact of granting the exemption, and
- any conditions or limitations that could be imposed.[34]

---

29. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 17(3), s 35; NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [4.182].
30. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 126.
31. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2022–23 (2023) 24.
32. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.124].
33. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2023–24 (2024) 24; Anti-Discrimination Board of NSW, Annual Report 2018–19 (2019) 14.
34. Anti-Discrimination Regulation 2019 (NSW) cl 6(1).

11.42 ADNSW asks applicants to provide them with information that meets these criteria, as well as background information about the applicant's business and any anti-discrimination policies or initiatives it has in place.[35]

11.43 The President has the power to vary or revoke an exemption, considering the criteria listed above.[36] ADNSW asks exemption-holders to provide exemption compliance reports to monitor compliance with the exemption and any conditions attached to it.[37]

Certifications

11.44 An alternative process is for a duty holder to seek "certification" of a special needs program or activity. Certifications are approvals granted by the NSW Attorney General for activities with a primary purpose to promote or improve access to facilities, services or opportunities that meet the special needs of people affected by unlawful discrimination.[38] For example, certification has been granted to programs for women in male-dominated industries.[39]

11.45 Certification provides an exception for anything done by a person in good faith for the purposes of the certified program or activity. The exception applies to discrimination based on sex, transgender grounds, marital or domestic status, disability, carer's responsibilities and homosexuality.[40]

11.46 Certifications are not required for programs based on race and age, which are covered by the ADA's existing special needs exceptions.

11.47 Compared to exemptions, certifications are relatively rare. Between 2018–19 to 2023–24, only 23 certifications were granted.[41] In 2023–24, only 5 applications were made, of which 4 were granted.[42]

---

35. Anti-Discrimination NSW, "Exemptions and Certifications" (2025) <antidiscrimination.nsw.gov.au/anti-discrimination-nsw/organisations-and-community-groups/exemptions-and-certifications.html> (retrieved 4 March 2025).
36. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 126(5).
37. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2023–24 (2024) 24.
38. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 126A(2).
39. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2022–23 (2023) 38.
40. Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) s 126A(1).
41. Anti-Discrimination Board of NSW Annual Report 2018–19 (2019) 14; Anti-Discrimination NSW, ADNSW Annual Report 2019–20 (2020) 38; Anti-Discrimination NSW, ADNSW Annual Report 2020–21 (2021) 31; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2021–22 (2022) 35; Annual Report 2022–23 (2023) 24; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2023–24 (2024) 24.
42. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Annual Report 2023–24 (2024) 24.

Concerns about the existing measures and processes

11.48 Many preliminary submissions raised issues about the current processes. We heard that they are:

- resource intensive for both ADNSW and for applicants[43]
- difficult for the public to understand due to the overlap between what is covered by each process,[44] and
- inconsistent with the laws in all other states and territories, creating complexities for businesses operating across Australia.[45]

11.49 One reform option, supported by many preliminary submissions, would be for the ADA to generally permit duty holders to take special measures. In 1999, the NSW Law Reform Commission (NSWLRC) also recommended a general special measures "exception" to the prohibition against discrimination.[46]

11.50 This could avoid the need for duty holders to apply for an exemption or certification each time they wanted to take steps to advance substantive equality. It might be particularly important for employers that wish to run affirmative action-style targeted recruitment campaigns.[47]

Options for a potential new "special measures" section

11.51 If the ADA were to generally allow for special measures, one question is how this should be framed. Sometimes, special measures are seen as "exceptions" to the prohibition on discrimination.[48] However, a better view is that they are "integral" to the meaning of the right to equality and discrimination, and not an exception to it.[49] Some discrimination laws reflect this latter view.[50]

---

43. See, eg, Business Council of Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD13, 3–4; Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 19–20; Australian Industry Group, Preliminary Submission PAD24, 4; Transport for NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD91, 4.
44. Anti-Discrimination NSW, Preliminary Submission PAD83, 20.
45. Business Council of Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD13, 4.
46. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 49.
47. See, eg, Diversity Council Australia, Preliminary Submission PAD14, 2–3.
48. See, eg, NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) rec 49.
49. Maloney v R [2013] HCA 28, 252 CLR 168 [327].
50. See, eg, Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 12; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 7D. See also ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) rec 20.1; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 4.1.

11.52 Perhaps the most significant issue involves identifying the criteria that should determine what constitutes a special measure. Under international human rights law, a special measure:

- is necessary to accelerate or achieve equality
- has a sole purpose of securing adequate advancement of certain people so that they can equally enjoy or exercise their human rights
- does not lead to separate or unequal rights between groups, and
- is discontinued once the objectives of the measure have been achieved.[51]

11.53 Other recent law reform reviews have recommended that the criteria for special measures in domestic discrimination laws should be consistent with international human rights law.[52]

11.54 Victoria provides an example of how this could be done. The Victorian Act allows a person to take a special measure for the purpose of promoting or achieving substantive equality for members of a group with a protected attribute. It provides that, to be a special measure, the action must be:

- undertaken in good faith for achieving substantive equality
- reasonably likely to achieve this purpose
- a proportionate means of achieving this purpose, and
- justified because members of the group have a particular need for assistance.[53]

11.55 Both the Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC) and the ACT Law Reform Advisory Council supported this model.[54]

11.56 In another approach, the NSWLRC recommended in 1999 that the following criteria should form part of a special measures "exception":

- the purpose is not to cause detriment or disadvantage to any other person

---

51. Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2515 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 May 2008) art 5(4); Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 1249 UNTS 13 (entered into force 3 September 1981) art 4(1); International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, 660 UNTS 195 (entered into force 4 January 1969) art 1(4).
52. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) rec 20.2; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 116.
53. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 12.
54. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) rec 20.1; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 4.1

- the measure is done in good faith for the purpose of securing the advancement or protecting the welfare of certain groups
- those groups are in need of advancement or protection because they are in a position of social disadvantage or isolation (including because of historical discrimination)
- those groups are likely to accept the benefit offered by the measure
- the measure is reasonably capable of achieving its purpose, and
- the measure will not continue indefinitely unless required, or beyond a period reasonably necessary to achieve its purpose.[55]

11.57 Other reviews have suggested additional criteria, including that the measure:

- does not restrict the rights of affected people, and
- should only be implemented after consultation with affected people and communities, particularly Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.[56]

The relationship with exemptions and certifications

11.58 Another issue is whether the existing exemption and certification processes should stay if the ADA provides for special measures more generally. There could be concerns about removing the exemption and certification processes.

11.59 The first relates to the removal of the oversight measures in these processes, which could be seen as important safeguards. These include:

- the ability for ADNSW or the Attorney General to deny inappropriate measures, and
- the power of ADNSW (and NCAT, in reviewing an exemption decision) to place conditions on exemptions.

11.60 There is also a risk that some measures that are currently covered by exemptions or certifications may fall outside the scope of a new special measures section. For example, some current exemptions allow certain employers to discriminate to comply with US export policies.[57]

---

55. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) appendix A, Draft Anti-Discrimination Bill 1999, cl 68.
56. ACT Law Reform Advisory Council, Review of the Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT), Final Report (2015) 20.2; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 4.3.
57. Anti-Discrimination NSW, "Current Exemptions" (2025) <antidiscrimination.nsw.gov.au/anti-discrimination-nsw/organisations-and-community-groups/exemptions-and-certifications/current-exemptions.html> (retrieved 4 March 2025). See also Re Rheinmetall Defence Australia Pty Ltd [2022] QIRC 440; BAE Systems Australia Ltd [2008] VCAT 1799.

11.61 One option could be to keep the exemption process, even if a new section dealing with special measures is introduced. Some other Australian discrimination laws have both.[58]

11.62 The NSWLRC also recommended this in 1999. However, the NSWLRC thought that its proposed special measures "exception" should replace the certification process. It thought this process was unnecessary and resource intensive.[59]

Question 11.2: Special measures

(1) Should the ADA generally allow for special measures? Why or why not?

(2) If so, what criteria for a special measure should the ADA apply?

(3) If a general special measures section is added to the ADA, should it replace the existing exemption and certification processes? Why or why not?

A duty to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct

11.63 Another mechanism to achieve substantive equality is to require duty holders to take steps to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct, including discrimination, sexual harassment, vilification or victimisation. This goes further than making adjustments for someone, or taking special measures for protected groups, by seeking to prevent unlawful conduct.

11.64 Many discrimination laws in Australia impose such a duty.[60] Recent reviews have also recommended introducing positive duties to prevent unlawful conduct.[61]

Arguments for and against a positive duty

11.65 Many preliminary submissions considered that the ADA should include a positive duty to prevent unlawful conduct. Such a duty might:

---

58. See, eg, Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 44; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 89; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 59.

59. NSW Law Reform Commission, Review of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), Report 92 (1999) [6.139], rec 51.

60. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15; Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 18B; Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 75; Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 (Tas) s 104; Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 47C. See also Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 25, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 131I (uncommenced).

61. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", rec 4.27; Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: Revitalising Australia's Commitment to Human Rights, Final Report (2023) 82–83, 92, 95; Australian Human Rights Commission, The National Anti-Racism Framework: A Roadmap to Eliminating Racism in Australia (2024) rec 10; Australian Law Reform Commission, Safe, Informed, Supported: Reforming Justice Responses to Sexual Violence, Report 143 (2025) rec 53.

- reduce the burden that currently falls on victims having to make a complaint to address, or stop, a specific incident of discrimination or ongoing discrimination
- more effectively address the causes of discrimination than the current model of individual remedies, for example by requiring duty holders to change discriminatory policies
- improve understanding of the impact of discrimination and help to change prejudiced views, and
- help duty holders avoid the costs arising from unlawful conduct, including complaints, reduced productivity, and reputational damage.

11.66 On the other hand, we also heard some concerns about introducing a positive duty. These included that:

- existing duties are sufficient
- any new duties could conflict with existing duties, and
- any new duties could be too onerous.

11.67 Some NSW duty holders are already required to take steps to prevent discrimination, harassment and vilification under other laws. It could be argued that these existing duties are sufficient. In particular, NSW employers have obligations under other laws to:

- take reasonable and proportionate measures to eliminate sex discrimination, sexual or sex-based harassment, subjecting a person to a hostile workplace environment on the ground of sex, and related victimisation[62]
- ensure the physical and psychological health and safety of their workers by eliminating or minimising risks to health and safety, as far as is reasonably practicable,[63] and
- manage psychosocial risks arising from work-related hazards that could cause psychological harm by eliminating or minimising reasonably foreseeable hazards and reviewing measures taken to ensure they are effective.[64]

11.68 On the other hand, it could be said these existing duties are too limited because:

- they only apply to employers, not other duty holders under the ADA, and
- the work health and safety focus of these duties does not align with the purpose of discrimination laws.[65]

---

62. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 47C(1)–(4).
63. Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) s 17, s 19.
64. Work Health and Safety Regulation 2017 (NSW) cl 34–35, cl 37–38, cl 55A definition of "psychosocial hazard", cl 55B definition of "psychosocial risk", cl 55D.
65. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: A Reform Agenda for Federal Discrimination Laws (2021) 73.

11.69 A related concern is the risk that a new a positive duty in the ADA could conflict with these existing duties. It may not be clear to employers which duty they need to comply with, or how they can comply with multiple duties. However, some argued that new duties could work in a complementary and "mutually reinforcing" way alongside existing duties.[66] Careful legislative drafting would be needed to ensure this occurred.

11.70 Another concern is that positive duties could place a high regulatory burden on duty holders. There were different views on this. For example, some consider that a positive duty may decrease the burden on employers by reducing their risk of being found vicariously liable for discrimination or other unlawful conduct. As we discuss below, the regulatory burden could be managed by carefully framing the scope and requirements of the positive duty.

11.71 If NSW was to introduce a positive duty to prevent unlawful conduct, questions would arise about what it required of duty holders; the conduct, protected attributes and protected areas the duty should cover; and who the duty holders should be. We set out some options below.

Options for a positive duty

What the duty could require

11.72 The most common approach in other Australian discrimination laws is to require duty holders to take "reasonable and proportionate" steps to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct. For example, this could require duty holders to:

- implement policies to prevent unlawful behaviour
- provide training on ADA obligations
- develop inclusion targets
- keep records in incident management and complaints systems,[67] and
- review policies and procedures, develop action plans and collect and monitor data.[68]

11.73 Victoria's discrimination law provides an example. Anyone who has a duty not to engage in discrimination, sexual harassment or victimisation must take reasonable

66. Australian Human Rights Commission, Respect@Work: National Inquiry into Sexual Harassment in Australian Workplaces (2020) 480; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 230.
67. NSW Nurses and Midwives' Association, Preliminary Submission PAD50, 4.
68. See, eg, Explanatory Statement and Human Rights Compatibility Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2022 (ACT) cl 30; Explanatory Memorandum, Anti-Discrimination and Human Rights Legislation Amendment (Respect at Work) Bill 2022 (Cth) [14].

and proportionate measures to eliminate that conduct as far possible. What is "reasonable and proportionate" will depend on:

- the size, nature and circumstances of the duty holder's business
- the duty holder's resources
- the duty holder's business and operational priorities, and
- the practicability and cost of the measure.[69]

11.74 This approach requires meaningful action. However, the requirements are tailored to the circumstances of the duty holder. For instance, a small community organisation may only be required to ensure that its staff are aware of its commitment to treat them fairly, and of how compliance will be managed. By contrast, a large company will have to undertake a compliance assessment, develop a compliance strategy and undertake regular monitoring.[70]

Types of conduct the duty should address

11.75 The ADA prohibits discrimination, harassment, vilification and victimisation. A positive duty to prevent unlawful conduct could address some or all of this conduct.

11.76 Positive duties in other discrimination laws across Australia cover discrimination and sexual harassment. Some also cover vilification,[71] and some cover victimisation.[72] Both the QHRC and LRCWA concluded that positive duties should not be confined to only some forms of prohibited conduct.[73]

11.77 The duty in the Sex Discrimination Act covers discrimination and other forms of conduct related to sex.[74] Some of this sex-based conduct is not currently prohibited by the ADA.[75] We discuss whether this conduct should be prohibited in chapter 9.

Coverage of attributes, areas and duty holders

11.78 If the ADA were to adopt a positive duty, there are questions about what protected attributes and areas it should cover, as well as who the duty holders should be.

---

69. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15(6).
70. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15, examples.
71. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 75.
72. Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 18B; Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15; Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 25, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 131I(l) (uncommenced).
73. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991, Report (2022) 230; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) 241.
74. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 47C.
75. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 28AA, s 28M.

11.79 Most positive duties in Australian discrimination laws apply to all protected attributes.[76] Federal positive duties do not exist for all protected attributes, however the Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) recommended they should.[77] Other law reviews also supported covering all protected attributes, stating this would avoid creating a "hierarchy" of attributes and better recognise intersectional discrimination.[78]

11.80 In terms of the areas of life covered, some discrimination laws apply the duty to unlawful conduct in all areas of public life in which discrimination or other unlawful conduct is prohibited.[79] Other discrimination law reviews have also recommended introducing positive duties across all areas of public life in which discrimination or other unlawful conduct is prohibited.[80]

11.81 A related issue is who the duty should apply to. In Victoria and the NT, it applies to anyone who has an obligation not to engage in discrimination, sexual harassment or victimisation.[81] The AHRC also recommended introducing a duty that applies to all duty holders under discrimination laws.[82]

11.82 Currently, the positive duty under the Sex Discrimination Act is limited to employers and anyone conducting a business or undertaking. This includes sole traders, not-for-profit organisations that engage and pay staff, government departments and companies.[83]

---

76. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 18B(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 75(2); Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 25, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 131I (uncommenced).
77. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: Revitalising Australia's Commitment to Human Rights, Final Report (2023) 82, 92, 95.
78. Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) 228.
79. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15(1)–(2); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 18B(1)–(2); Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 75(1)–(2). See also Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 25, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 131I (uncommenced).
80. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: Revitalising Australia's Commitment to Human Rights, Final Report (2023) 82–83, 95; Queensland Human Rights Commission, Building Belonging: Review of Queensland's Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (2022) rec 15.2; Law Reform Commission of Western Australia, Review of the Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (WA), Project 111, Final Report (2022) rec 125.
81. Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) s 15(1); Anti-Discrimination Act 1992 (NT) s 18B(1).
82. Australian Human Rights Commission, Free and Equal: Revitalising Australia's Commitment to Human Rights, Final Report (2023) 81–83.
83. Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) s 47C(1), s 4 definition of "person conducting a business or undertaking"; Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (Cth) s 5; Australian Human Rights Commission, Guidelines for Complying with the Positive Duty under the Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth) (2023) 15.

11.83 Similarly, the ACT applies a positive duty to organisations and businesses, and people with "organisational management responsibility" for these bodies. This includes, for example, sole traders, small business owners or university chancellors. This includes people who are responsible for controlling or directing an organisation or business, but not general employees or mid to low-level managers.[84]

A duty to promote equality

11.84 Another option could be to introduce a public sector equality duty. The Australian examples, discussed above, apply to government entities (such as an employer which is a government department) and to non-government actors, such as privately owned businesses.

11.85 However, the UK has a broader "equality duty" that applies only to public authorities.

11.86 The equality duty goes beyond taking steps to eliminate unlawful discrimination. It shapes the development of public policy decisions. When exercising their functions, public authorities must have due regard to the need to:

- eliminate discrimination, harassment and victimisation
- advance the equality of opportunity between people with a relevant protected attribute and those without it, and
- foster good relations between people with a relevant protected characteristic and those without it.[85]

11.87 Public authorities must publish information annually to demonstrate their compliance with the duty. They must also publish specific and measurable objectives for meeting their obligations.[86]

11.88 Victoria has a similar, but narrower, duty. Victorian public authorities must consider and promote gender equality, and take necessary and proportionate action towards achieving it.[87]

---

84. Discrimination Act 1991 (ACT) s 75(1), s 75(6) definition of "organisational management responsibility"; Explanatory Statement and Human Rights Compatibility Statement, Discrimination Amendment Bill 2022 (ACT) cl 30. See also Respect at Work and Other Matters Amendment Act 2024 (Qld) s 25, inserting Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (Qld) s 131I (uncommenced).
85. Equality Act 2010 (UK) s 149(1). See also Northern Ireland Act 1998 (UK) s 75(2).
86. Equality Act 2010 (Specific Duties and Public Authorities) Regulations 2017 (UK) reg 4, reg 5.
87. Gender Equality Act 2020 (Vic) s 7.

11.89 Drawing on the UK and Victorian examples, the Disability Royal Commission recommended that all Commonwealth entities should be under a duty to promote disability equality and inclusion.[88]

11.90 A potential benefit of this approach is that, by just focusing on public authorities, it avoids imposing onerous obligations on private actors. On the other hand, this could also mean that the duty's ability to prevent discrimination is limited.

11.91 However, it would also be possible to introduce both:

- a duty to eliminate unlawful conduct that applies to private and public actors, and
- a broader UK-style duty to promote equality, that only applies to public authorities.

Question 11.3: A positive duty to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct

(1) Should the ADA include a duty to take reasonable and proportionate measures to prevent or eliminate unlawful conduct? Why or why not?

(2) If so:

(a) What should duty holders be required to do to comply with the duty?

(b) What types of unlawful conduct should the duty cover?

(c) Who should the duty holders be?

(d) What attributes and areas should the duty apply to?

88. Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability, Final Report (2023) vol 4, "Realising the Human Rights of People with Disability", rec 4.12.

Appendix A: Preliminary submissions

PAD01 Professor Cathy Sherry, 20 July 2023

PAD02 Intersex Human Rights Australia, 24 July 2023

PAD03 Confidential, 2 August 2023

PAD04 Mark Seymour, 8 August 2023

PAD05 Shooters Union NSW, 19 August 2023

PAD06 Councillor Nathan Zamprogno, 28 August 2023

PAD07 Equality Australia, 31 August 2023

PAD08 Dr Jason M Chin, 7 September 2023

PAD09 M E Browne, 9 September 2023

PAD10 Confidential, 15 September 2023

PAD11 Confidential, 22 September 2023

PAD12 Australian Christian Lobby, 22 September 2023

PAD13 Business Council of Australia, 26 September 2023

PAD14 Diversity Council Australia, 26 September 2023

PAD15 David A W Miller, 26 September 2023

PAD16 National Catholic Education Commission, 27 September 2023

PAD17 Dementia Australia, 27 September 2023

PAD18 Disability Advocacy NSW, 27 September 2023

PAD19 Independent Education Union of Australia NSW/ACT Branch, 27 September 2023

PAD19A Independent Education Union of Australia NSW/ACT Branch, 17 April 2024

PAD20 Shooting Industry Foundation Australia, 27 September 2023

PAD21 NSW Council for Civil Liberties Inc, 28 September 2023

PAD22 Amazon, 28 September 2023

PAD23 Australian National Imams Council, 28 September 2023

PAD24 Australian Industry Group, 28 September 2023

PAD25 Freedom for Faith, 28 September 2023

PAD26 Adventist Schools Australia, Australian Association of Christian Schools, Christian Schools Australia, 28 September 2023

PAD27 NSW Aboriginal Women's Advisory Network, 28 September 2023

PAD28 Coalition Against Caste Discrimination, 29 September 2023

PAD29 Associate Professor Mark Fowler, 29 September 2023

PAD30 Rainbow Labor NSW, 29 September 2023

PAD31 Law Society of NSW, 29 September 2023

PAD32 UNSW Allens Hub for Technology, Law and Innovation, 29 September 2023

PAD33 Australian Feminists for Women's Rights, 29 September 2023

PAD34 Falun Dafa Association of Australia Inc, 29 September 2023

PAD35 Kingsford Legal Centre, 29 September 2023

PAD36 Rainbow Families, 29 September 2023

PAD37 Catholic Archdiocese of Sydney, 29 September 2023

PAD38 Marque Lawyers Pty Ltd, 29 September 2023

PAD39 National Justice Project, 29 September 2023

PAD40 Inner City Legal Centre, 29 September 2023

PAD41 NSW Ombudsman, 29 September 2023

PAD42 Mental Health Carers NSW Inc, 29 September 2023

PAD42A Mental Health Carers NSW Inc, 30 September 2024

PAD43 LGB Alliance Australia, 29 September 2023

PAD44 ACON, 29 September 2023

PAD45 Fair Game Australia, 29 September 2023

PAD46 Associate Professor Bruce Baer Arnold and Associate Professor Wendy Bonython, 29 September 2023

PAD47 Australian Muslim Advocacy Network, 29 September 2023

PAD48 Confidential, 29 September 2023

PAD49 Law Society of NSW Young Lawyers Human Rights Sub-Committee, 29 September 2023

PAD50 New South Wales Nurses and Midwives' Association, 29 September 2023

PAD51 Cleaning Accountability Framework, 29 September 2023

PAD52 NSW User's and Aids Association, 29 September 2023

PAD53 People with Disability Australia, 29 September 2023

PAD54 UTS, Jumbunna Institute for Indigenous Education and Research, 29 September 2023

PAD55 Women's Legal Service NSW, 29 September 2023

PAD56 Presbyterian Church of Australia in New South Wales, 29 September 2023

PAD57 Respect Inc, 29 September 2023

PAD58 Hindu Council of Australia, 29 September 2023

PAD59 Professor Margaret Thornton, 29 September 2023

PAD60 HIV/AIDS Legal Centre, Positive Life NSW, 29 September 2023

PAD61 Adrian Buckley, 29 September 2023

PAD62 Australian Lawyers for Human Rights

PAD63 Racial Justice Centre Ltd, 29 September 2023

PAD64 Helena Chui, 29 September 2023

PAD65 Family First Party Australia, 2 October 2023

PAD66 Neophile, 3 October 2023

PAD67 Church of Scientology Australia, 3 October 2023

PAD68 Vision Australia, 3 October 2023

PAD69 Australian Human Rights Commission, 4 October 2023

PAD70 Full Stop Australia, 4 October 2023

PAD71 Carers NSW, 4 October 2023

PAD72 Feminist Legal Clinic Inc, 5 October 2023

PAD73 Community Legal Centres NSW, 6 October 2023

PAD74 Scarlet Alliance, Australian Sex Workers Association, 6 October 2023

PAD75 Family Advocacy, 6 October 2023

PAD76 Australian Retailers Association, 9 October 2023

PAD77 Sex Workers Outreach Project NSW, 9 October 2023

PAD78 Office of the Advocate for Children and Young People, 9 October 2023

PAD79 Equal Pay for Equal Play NSW, 11 October 2023

PAD80 Catholic Schools NSW, 12 October 2023

PAD81 Sydney University Postgraduate Representative Association, 13 October 2023

PAD82 Public Interest Advocacy Centre, 13 October 2023

PAD83 Anti-Discrimination NSW, 13 October 2023

PAD84 Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group, 13 October 2023

PAD85 NSW Greens, 16 October 2023

PAD86 New South Wales Bar Association, 18 October 2023

PAD87 Legal Aid NSW, 20 October 2023

PAD88 Catholic Women's League Australia, New South Wales Inc, 20 October 2023

PAD89 Anonymous, 23 October 2023

PAD90 Unions NSW, 25 October 2023

PAD91 Transport for NSW, 31 October 2023

PAD92 J Grass, 28 November 2023

PAD93 The Sussan Group, 20 March 2024

PAD94 Michael Page International, 16 April 2024

PAD95 Aber Karhani, 2 November 2024

PAD96 Philip Sacks, 28 November 2024

Appendix B: Preliminary consultations

Australian Discrimination Law Experts Group (PCAD01)

29 August 2023

Dr Alice Taylor

Associate Professor Anne Hewitt

Professor Beth Goldblatt

Liam Elphick

Peta Spyrou

Dr Robin Banks

Professor Simon Rice OAM

Professor Margaret Thornton

Anti-Discrimination New South Wales (PCAD02)

20 November 2023

Helen McKenzie (President)

Anti-Discrimination New South Wales staff workshop (PCAD03)

5 December 2023

NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal (PCAD04)

20 December 2023

Justice Lea Armstrong, President

Judge Susanne Cole (Deputy President and Division Head of Administrative and Equal Opportunity Division and Occupational Division)

Theresa Simon (Principal Member)

NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal (PCAD05)

17 March 2025

Justice Lea Armstrong, President

Judge Rashelle Seiden SC (Deputy President and Division Head of Administrative and Equal Opportunity Division and Occupational Division)

Acting Judge Nancy Hennessy (Deputy President)

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-7" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Community SECURITY GROUP

CSG

A CSG ANALYSIS OF REPORTED ANTISEMITIC INCIDENTS IN AUSTRALIA IN 2023

This Report has been authored by CSG for reference by relevant stakeholders.
It is not intended for broad public distribution.

Please note, this publication contains material which may be considered offensive.

CSG COMMUNITY SECURITY GROUP

COMMUNITY SECURITY GROUP

Members of the crowd chant “F-ck the Jews” and other slurs during an anti-Israel protest at the Sydney Opera House, two days after the Hamas terror attack in Israel, New South Wales, 9 October 2023.

An antisemitic poster at an anti-Israel protest in Melbourne, 12 November 2023.

The text and illustrations in this publication may only be reproduced with prior permission of the Community Security Group.

Copyright © 2024 Community Security Group.

This publication is a specialist analysis by the Community Security Group. It is different in purpose and scope to that of the Annual Report on Antisemitism in Australia which is researched and published by the Executive Council of Australian Jewry (ECAJ), the elected national representative body of the Australian Jewish Community. The ECAJ Antisemitism Report is a comprehensive report of antisemitic incidents and public antisemitic discourse in Australia. This publication, authored by the Community Security Group, complements the ECAJ Antisemitism Report and provides additional analysis specifically of antisemitic incidents that have been reported to the various Community Security Groups and other relevant security bodies in Australia for use in the provision of security protection to the Australian Jewish Community. Because they serve different purposes, the ECAJ Antisemitism Report and this publication cover different time periods and apply different collection methods and different classifications of incidents.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Executive Summary ..... 4

About CSG ..... 6

Definition of Antisemitic Incidents ..... 6

Reporting

- Reporter Type ..... 7
- Method of Reporting ..... 7

Incident Categories

- Extreme Violence ..... 8
- Assault ..... 8
- Threat ..... 9
- Damage and Desecration ..... 10
- Abusive Behaviour ..... 11
- Literature ..... 13

Analysis

- Israel-Hamas War ..... 14
- Issue-motivated Incidents ..... 16
- Monthly Breakdown ..... 16
- Incident Victims ..... 17
- Sites Targeted ..... 18
- Incident Offenders ..... 18
- Social Media ..... 18
- Discourse ..... 19
- Geographical Analysis ..... 20

Law Enforcement Action ..... 21

Suspicious Activity Reports ..... 23

Conclusion ..... 23

Contact Information ..... 24

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report will statistically review antisemitic incidents in the 2023 calendar year, reported to the Community Security Group (CSG) across Australia.

This is the sixth published report by CSG on antisemitic incident statistics, albeit CSG has been recording antisemitic incidents since its inception.

CSG recorded 830 antisemitic incidents in Australia in 2023. This represents an 88% increase in antisemitic incidents compared to the 442 incidents recorded in 2022. Further, this is the highest number of antisemitic incidents recorded by CSG in a calendar year and is 69% higher than the previous highest record in 2021 of 490 incidents. Such an increase represents an unprecedented rise in antisemitism across Australia.

REPORTING OF ANTISEMITIC INCIDENTS

This increase is attributed to a surge in antisemitic incidents related to the ongoing Israel-Hamas War. During the conflict, The Australian Jewish Community has been subject to unprecedented levels of vilification, including serious and unprovoked assaults; a riot outside a synagogue; hate speech during anti-Israel protests; death threats sent to prominent Jewish figures; and several hoax bomb threat campaigns. From January until September, there was an average of 32 antisemitic incidents per month; whereas between October and December, noting that the Israel-Hamas conflict began on 7 October 2023, there was an average of 182 antisemitic incidents per month. In fact, antisemitic incidents that occurred during the conflict comprised 65% of all antisemitic incidents for 2023. Whilst the rise in antisemitic incidents can be attributed to the local impact of the Israel-Hamas War, it cannot be labelled as the 'cause'. The cause continues to be the actions of individuals who seek to target and vilify the Jewish Community in Australia.

KEY FINDINGS:

- The single highest category of antisemitic incident reported was abusive behaviour at 644, followed by 84 antisemitic threats, 44 incidents of damage and desecration of Jewish property, 36 antisemitic assaults, 20 incidents of antisemitic literature and two acts of extreme violence.

- There was an average of 69 antisemitic incidents per month in 2023. The highest number of antisemitic incidents was recorded in October at 223, which comprised 27% of all incidents. This was closely followed by 217 incidents in November as well as 105 incidents in December, all of which coincided with the Israel-Hamas War.

- New South Wales experienced the highest reported number of antisemitic incidents at 408 (49%), followed by 303 incidents in Victoria (37%), 58 incidents in Western Australia, 30 incidents in Queensland, 13 incidents in South Australia, 12 incidents in Tasmania, 6 incidents in the Australian Capital Territory and no reported incidents in the Northern Territory.

- Antisemitic incidents most commonly occurred in public places at 352 incidents (42%), followed by 158 incidents at synagogues, 99 incidents at Jewish organisations, 92 incidents at private properties, 82 incidents at Jewish private residences, businesses or properties and 47 incidents at Jewish schools.

- There were two acts of extreme violence. In October 2023, a Jewish man was seriously assaulted, resulting in extensive injuries and hospitalisation, after identifying himself as Jewish and displaying pro-Israel sentiment in a public place. The second act of extreme violence cannot be disclosed publicly as it remains part of an ongoing investigation.

- There were 36 assaults in 2023, which constituted a 227% increase compared to the 11 assaults in 2022. Further, this is the highest number of assaults recorded by CSG in a calendar year and is 200% higher than the previous highest record of 12 assaults in 2019. Most assaults occurred between October and December, and they disproportionately targeted identifiably Jewish individuals in public places and schoolchildren at non-Jewish schools.

- There were 84 threats in 2023, which constituted a 740% increase compared to the 10 threats in 2022. Further, this is the highest number of threats recorded by CSG in a calendar year and is 211% higher than the previous highest record of 27 threats in 2019.

Most threats in 2023 occurred between October and December. These included a series of hoax bomb threats sent to Jewish facilities across Australia in December; an online post to the social media page of an anti-Israel group calling for the beheading of Jews during a pro-Palestine rally; an ISIS beheading video sent to two Jewish organisations warning of violence; and an abusive message sent to a Jewish school, stating a desire to commit arson on the facility and kill the occupants inside.

- CSG identifies when certain types of discourse are involved in antisemitic incidents. In 2023, anti-Israel discourse was involved in 280 incidents, compared to 58 incidents in 2022, constituting a 383% increase. Further, there were 49 incidents which involved Islamist discourse, compared to 11 incidents in 2022, representing a 345% increase; and 321 incidents involved extreme-right discourse, compared to 247 incidents in 2022, representing a 30% increase. Although the nominal rise in incidents featuring extremist discourse is partially due to the overall increase in antisemitic incidents in 2023, the disproportionate increase in incidents involving anti-Israel discourse and Islamist discourse reflects the impact of the Israel-Hamas War on the local security environment.

- One-hundred and ninety-two incidents (23%) occurred on the Jewish Sabbath (Shabbat) and 88 incidents occurred during a Jewish festival (11%).

- Fifty-one incidents involved Jewish schoolchildren as victims, with 14 incidents targeting Jewish university students or staff on university campuses.

- Law enforcement across the country were notified of 355 incidents (43%). In New South Wales, the NSW Police Force recorded 333 reports to police as 'Hate Crime Related' and targeting the Jewish Community.

- Offenders were charged by law enforcement in relation to 28 antisemitic incidents.

- In addition to the 830 antisemitic incidents reported to CSG in 2023, there were more than 3000 reports of suspicious and non-suspicious security-related activity reported to CSG and processed by the CSG workforce, as part of CSG's role in the provision of security to the Australian Jewish community.

"There remains significant under-reporting of antisemitic incidents to CSG and law enforcement in Australia, similar to other forms of hate crime. As a result, the true number of antisemitic incidents is likely to be much higher than recorded in this report. As such, the figures presented should be indicative of trends as opposed to nominal values. CSG encourages the Australian Jewish Community to report these incidents in future through the CSG 24/7 hotline for Emergency, Advice and Assistance (1300 000 CSG), CSG Alert app (New South Wales and Western Australia) JEAP app (Victoria) and to local police."

ABOUT CSG

The Community Security Group (CSG) oversees the specialised and specific security needs of the Jewish Community in New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland and Western Australia. These organisations work closely with their associated Jewish Community Council or Jewish Board of Deputies, under the auspices of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry (ECAJ). In each representative state, CSG works closely with government and law enforcement to ensure oversight of each community's security and emergency management programs and policies.

DEFINITION OF ANTISEMITIC INCIDENTS

CSG defines an antisemitic incident as any malicious act aimed at Jewish people, organisations or property, where there is evidence that the act has antisemitic motivation or content, or that the victim was targeted because they are or are believed to be Jewish.[1]

Antisemitic motivation, language or targeting must be demonstrated for the incident to be classified as antisemitic. This definition is not dictated by Commonwealth or state legislation, with both non-criminal and criminal incidents included in this report.

The general activities of antisemitic organisations have not been included in this statistical assessment, as these activities are far-ranging, significantly unpublicised and, in some cases, so voluminous that the data would be substantially and improperly skewed.

Antisemitic incidents may occur in a variety of forms, including physical force against people or property, verbal or written abuse and antisemitic posters, leaflets or stickers. A large amount of antisemitic activity also takes place online, particularly on social media platforms. CSG statistically records all formally reported antisemitic online activity but excludes proactively located antisemitic material unless it specifically targets a Jewish site or person in Australia. Antisemitic incidents online are recorded only when the victim and/or the offender is located in Australia.

An incident involving neo-Nazi symbology, specifically including the swastika, is categorically considered antisemitic where there is an intended public audience or victim. This includes the 'Sieg Heil' gesture, commonly referred to as the 'Nazi salute'.

Incidents that are strictly anti-Israel are not classified as antisemitic. However, incidents containing anti-

Israel components are classified as antisemitic where the incident has involved antisemitic discourse, evident antisemitic motivation and/or the targeting of a victim because they are, or are believed to be, Jewish or associated with the Jewish Community.

Of note, hundreds of incidents in 2023 were originally reported to CSG as 'antisemitic' but were later recategorised as reports of activity, as they were not antisemitic but rather strictly anti-Israel or political in nature. These reports have been categorically excluded from this report. Each report of antisemitism made to CSG is evaluated by the professional workforce to verify credibility and accuracy, and to ensure correct categorisation for reliable reporting and data analysis purposes.

EXAMPLES:

- During a pro-Palestine rally, an individual shouted, "I love Hamas and Hizballah. Get the f-cking Jews wiped out". The individual was later charged by police with offensive conduct (15 October 2023, New South Wales).

- Graffiti reading "Kill Jews" and "Jews live here" was spray painted in pink on the wall of a Jewish-owned apartment complex (16 November 2023, Victoria).

[1] CSG has based this publication on the model of the Community Security Trust's (CST) annual and biannual publication on antisemitic incidents; 'Antisemitic Incidents Report 2023', Community Security Trust, 2023.

REPORTING

Antisemitic incidents are reported to CSG from an array of sources, including from victims and their family or friends, witnesses, the CSG workforce, third-party security guards operating at Jewish sites, other Jewish organisations and law enforcement.

REPORTER TYPE

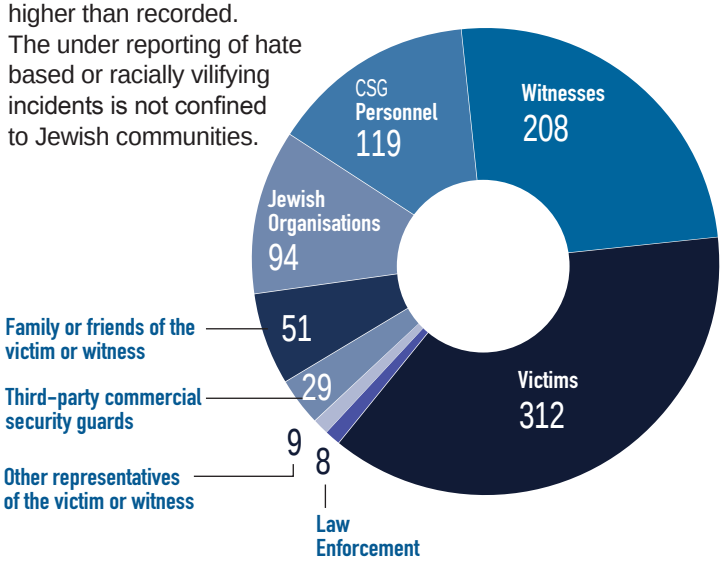
Incidents were most commonly reported by victims at 312 incidents (38%), followed by 208 incidents by witnesses, 119 incidents by CSG personnel, 94 incidents by other Jewish organisations, 51 incidents by family or friends of the victim or witness, 29 incidents by third-party commercial security guards, nine incidents by other representatives of the victim or witness and eight incidents by law enforcement.

There is significant under-reporting of antisemitic incidents to CSG and law enforcement in Australia, particularly by victims, likely making the actual number of antisemitic incidents substantially higher than recorded.
The under reporting of hate based or racially vilifying incidents is not confined to Jewish communities.



CSG notified law enforcement of 355 incidents, with offenders charged for 28 incidents.

CSG has a dedicated 24/7 hotline for emergency, advice and assistance, in addition to a smartphone application and website, for the reporting of antisemitic incidents.

METHOD OF REPORTING

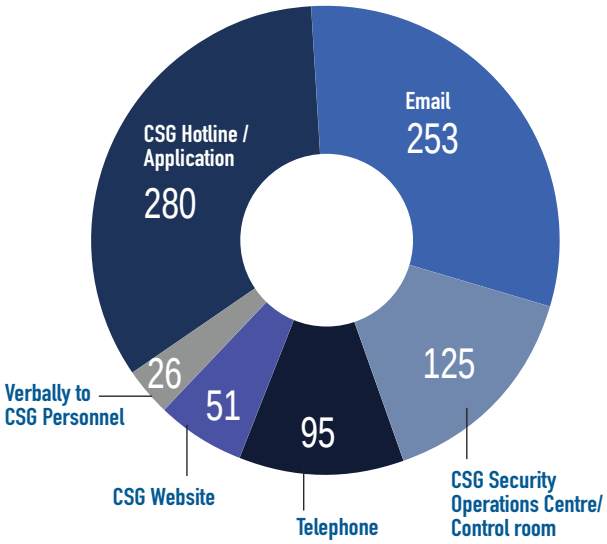
Incidents were most commonly reported to CSG via the CSG hotline / mobile app[2] at 280 incidents (34%), followed by email at 253 incidents. One-hundred and twenty-five incidents were reported to the CSG Security Operations Centre / Control Room, followed by 95 incidents via phone, 51 incidents via the CSG website and 26 incidents verbally to CSG personnel.



[2]Hotline (1300 000 274 [CSG]); CSG Alert app (NSW and WA) and JEAP app (VIC).

CSG encourages the Australian Jewish Community to report all incidents through the CSG Hotline (1300 000 CSG) or app (CSG Alert for New South Wales and Western Australia, JEAP for Victoria) as preferred reporting methods".

INCIDENT CATEGORIES

Antisemitic incidents are classified into six categories: extreme violence, assault, threat, damage and desecration, abusive behaviour and literature.[3]

The single highest category of antisemitic incident reported was abusive behaviour at 644, constituting 78% of all antisemitic incidents. This was followed by 84 threats, 44 incidents of damage and desecration, 36 assaults, 20 incidents of literature and two acts of extreme violence. Whilst abusive behaviour typically comprises the vast majority of antisemitic incidents, it has historically constituted a higher proportion of all antisemitic incidents. In 2023, the highest proportion of antisemitic incidents was attributed to the more serious incidents of assaults and threats.

EXTREME VIOLENCE

Extreme violence is defined as any physical attack potentially causing loss of life or grievous bodily harm. It is considered the most severe category of antisemitic incident. An act of extreme violence can include an attempt which is unsuccessful.

In 2023, there were two incidents of extreme violence reported to CSG.

EXAMPLES:

EXTREME VIOLENCE

| | |
|---|---|
| 2018 | 1 |
| 2019 | 2 |
| 2020 | 0 |
| 2021 | 0 |
| 2022 | 1 |
| 2023 | 2 |

- A Jewish man was seriously assaulted, resulting in extensive injuries and hospitalisation, after identifying himself as Jewish and displaying pro-Israel sentiment in a public place. The man was originally threatened by a group of individuals, who threw rocks at him and said that they would return to assault him. The man called 000; however, a larger group of people returned before police could arrive, where he sustained serious injuries after being severely beaten by the individuals (28 October 2023, New South Wales).
- The second incident of extreme violence cannot be disclosed publicly for confidentiality reasons, as it forms part of an ongoing investigation.

ASSAULT

Assault is any actual or attempted physical attack against a person that constitutes actual bodily harm or common assault. This includes violent use of force, chasing a target with a perceived intention to cause harm, and use of projectiles, even when the target is missed. In 2023, there were 36 assaults in 2023, which constitutes a more than two-fold increase compared to 2022 and is – by a significant margin – the highest number of assaults recorded by CSG in a calendar year.

Twenty-six of the 36 antisemitic assaults (72%) occurred within the months of October through December, coinciding with the ongoing Israel-Hamas War. Almost half of all antisemitic assaults involved anti-Israel as well as antisemitic discourse, with four featuring extreme right discourse and three featuring Islamist discourse. Assaults occurred mainly in public places and private properties, and predominantly in areas with high Jewish populations in New South Wales and Victoria. Sixty-four percent of incidents targeted identifiably Jewish individuals, with all but five of these occurring in public places. Further, schoolchildren were disproportionately represented as victims, constituting 22% of assault victims, compared to comprising 6% of all antisemitic incident victims. In most cases, schoolchildren were assaulted at non-Jewish schools or in public places by other schoolchildren.

EXAMPLES:

- An individual attempted to gain entry to a Holocaust museum to discuss “issues about the Holocaust”. After being denied entry twice, the individual shouted, “More of you should have been killed”. He then returned and assaulted the security guard at the facility, pushing him in the chest and grabbing his throat (16 October 2023, South Australia).

[3] ‘Antisemitic Incidents Report 2023’ CST, 2024. These are categories adopted by the CST in their classification of antisemitic incidents in the United Kingdom.

A Jewish man witnessed another individual attacking a service station attendant inside a service station. After calling 000, he began filming the encounter, at which point the individual exited the service station and then assaulted the Jewish man, punching him in the face whilst yelling “dirty rotten Jewish c-nt” and threatening to kill him. Police arrived on-scene, at which point the individual spat on and assaulted the attending officers, before eventually being arrested (8 November 2023, Victoria).

An identifiably Jewish man was assaulted inside a nightclub by a group of individuals who claimed to be Palestinian. The group initially approached the Jewish man and ripped his Star of David necklace off him, shouting: “Do you know where I’m from?, “I’m from Palestine, you f-ckwit” and “Stop killing our people”. After making a report to security at the nightclub, both the Jewish man and group were ejected from the premises. An individual from the group then approached the Jewish man outside the nightclub and punched him in the face (9 November 2023, Victoria)

THREAT

A threat is classified as any directly communicated intent to inflict a violent or hostile action. A threat may be verbal, written or physical. A threat is distinct from general abuse in that there is a direct insinuation of future violent or hostile action towards people and/or property.

In 2023, CSG recorded 84 threats. This represents a more than eight-fold increase compared to the 10 incidents recorded in 2022 and is – by a significant margin – the highest number of threats recorded by CSG in a calendar year. Twenty-five of these threats were made verbally in-person to Jewish individuals, with 22 made via social media, 16 via phone call, 14 via email, five via letter and two as gestures. Offenders were charged in relation to eight threats, all of which were laid by NSW Police. They were charged with ‘using a carriage service to menace, harass or offend’, ‘using a carriage service to make threats to kill’ or ‘stalk and intimidate with intent to cause fear of physical or mental harm’.

EXAMPLES:

An individual called a synagogue and said, “Is this the Jewish people? I am Hitler and I will f-cking kill you. You are going to f-cking die … I will gas the Jews” (8 April 2023, Tasmania).

A Jewish man was walking in an inner-city neighbourhood when an unknown individual approached him and asked whether he was Jewish, before yelling, “You are brave to be walking through here. You should be careful … Go back to Bondi. I will kill you. I’m serious” (2 May 2023, New South Wales).

An individual approached congregants gathered outside a synagogue and shouted, “Are you Jews scared of me? Well, you should be scared of me. I’m going to blow this place up.” (28 September 2023, New South Wales).

Two individuals walked past a synagogue and shouted “Allahu Akbar”, before saying that they would “blow up the synagogue” (8 October 2023, New South Wales).

A vehicle stopped next to a Jewish man and the occupants inside asked, “Do you know where any Jews are?”. When the man inquired as to why they were asking, the occupants replied with, “We are on the hunt to kill Jews” (10 October 2023, Victoria).

An individual sent several threats to Jewish organisations via social media. The first threat included a message that said, “We will blow your building up and cut your heads off soon. Gas a Jew”. The second and third messages included a video of an ISIS beheading and the caption, “We are coming for you soon, from western Sydney”. The offender was later identified by police and charged with several telecommunications offences in New South Wales (11-12 October 2023, New South Wales and Victoria).

An individual approached two Jewish individuals and asked if they were Jewish. He then shouted, “The Muslims are going to kill all the Jews. Hitler didn’t finish the job … Next time, I’m going bring a knife and kill you” (25 October 2023, Victoria).

- Two individuals began shouting “F-ck the Jews” and “F-ck Israel” towards crowds at a popular beach. After being told to leave the area by a member of the public, one of the individuals replied with “F-ck the Jews. F-ck you. F-ck Israel” and threatened to sexually assault his wife in front of him. Police later charged the individual with an intimidation offence (22 October 2023, New South Wales).

- A local individual posted on social media: “Time to extinct ALL jews. They are nothing but trash. Let’s go! Kill your neighbour jew. Kill the cun7s in Palestine. It is Palestine! Not fugging Israel! IT IS PALESTINE!!!!!!! End of story … Kill every jew! [sic]” (23 October 2023, Queensland).

DAMAGE AND DESECRATION

Damage and desecration is defined as any adverse material act against Jewish-owned property or property perceived to be associated with Jews. The act must be directed against property, with no potential harm to people. This category includes antisemitic graffiti, vandalism, postering and hacking, and is distinct to general abusive behaviour as it targets Jewish property.

In 2023, CSG recorded 44 incidents of damage and desecration. This is a similar figure to the 41 incidents of damage and desecration recorded in 2022 and is the highest number of incidents of this kind recorded by CSG in a calendar year. Twenty-one of these incidents were acts of antisemitic vandalism of Jewish locations, followed by 16 incidents of graffiti and seven incidents of stickering. Most incidents (43%) targeted Jewish properties, businesses or residences, with 30% featuring anti-Israel as well as antisemitic discourse.

EXAMPLES:

- At least 10 identifiably Jewish headstones were defaced with white stencils of a Nazi swastika at a Jewish cemetery (31 January 2023, New South Wales).

- On the anniversary of Adolf Hitler’s birthday, antisemitic stickers, with extreme right discourse and links to neo-Nazi groups, were placed on a synagogue and Jewish memorial by a minor. The offender was later identified and charged by police (20 April 2023, Australian Capital Territory).

- Graffiti including a Nazi swastika and the words, “Kill the Jews”, were located on the private residence of a Rabbi (11 November 2023, New South Wales).

- A swastika was spray painted in blue on the headstone of a Jewish grave (7 November 2023, Victoria).

- A gardener working at a property approached a group of Jewish individuals inside a vehicle and asked whether they were Jewish. After they indentified as Jewish, he then proceeded to extensively damage the vehicle using gardening tools. Police arrived, at which point the individual attempted to assault them, before eventually being arrested (9 November 2023, Victoria).

- An individual threw two glasses of red paint at a synagogue (23 November 2023, Western Australia).

- A Jewish prayer book was found torn up, damaged and discarded on a public street (18 December 2023, Queensland).

ABUSIVE BEHAVIOUR

Abusive behaviour is insulting or offensive antisemitic activity. The behaviour may be directed towards a victim or be broadly offensive and may include verbal or written abuse and antisemitic gestures.

In 2023, CSG recorded 644 incidents of abusive behaviour. Abusive behaviour constituted the largest category of reported antisemitic incidents in 2023, which is similar to previous years. Unlike previous years, however, abusive behaviour comprised a smaller proportion of overall antisemitic incidents, at 78%. This is mainly due to the sharp rise in antisemitic assaults and threats.

The 644 incidents of abusive behaviour in 2023 included 276 incidents of antisemitic verbal abuse (43%), 125 reports of antisemitic graffiti, 74 antisemitic gestures, 65 reports of antisemitic abuse on social media, 35 antisemitic phone calls, 28 antisemitic emails, 13 antisemitic stickers, 11 antisemitic letters, 10 reports of antisemitic vandalism and seven antisemitic web enquiries. This distribution of incidents is similar to historical data.

EXAMPLES:

- An individual made comments, “Hitler was right. He should have killed all the Jews … Kanye [West] was right about the Jews”, before alluding to poisoning a Jewish person (6 January 2023, Victoria).
- A synagogue received a voicemail from an unknown individual, who yelled: ‘F-ck you Jew. I’ll f-cking gas you. Hitler’s coming back, you f-cking Jew’. The individual called the synagogue several days later and shouted ‘f-cking kike’ to a staff member over the phone. Police later identified the caller, and they were charged with ‘using a carriage service to menace, harass or offend’ (13 and 15 January 2023, New South Wales).
- Antisemitic graffiti reading, ‘Kill the Jews’, ‘Fag’, ‘KKK’ and ‘Hitler’, was located on a children’s playground (10 February 2023, New South Wales).
- A boat with the words, ‘Jew Hunter’ written on the side, was observed operating nearby a Jewish area (4 March 2023, New South Wales).
- An individual made comments in a predominantly Jewish area which included “he’s a bloody Jew”, “You Jews, Hitler should have finished the job” and “Jews should be wiped out”. The individual then approached two identifiably Jewish individuals and shouted “f-cking Jew” and “Jewish c-nt” towards them (24 June 2023, Victoria).

On the anniversary of the September 11 terror attacks, graffiti was located in a public area which included a Star of David, the words “911” and a link to a website which suggested that Jews were responsible for the terror attacks (11 September 2023, Victoria).

Multiple graffiti tags of ‘F-ck Jews’ were located nearby a synagogue in a park (9 October 2023, New South Wales).

An antisemitic email was sent to a Jewish organisation in relation to the Israel-Hamas War (13 October 2023, New South Wales).

History shows how hated you are I would crush a filthy Jew like a cockroach under foot .
If you show your ugly head to me in my country I will cut it off and roll it down the street I'm not a rag head Bring back the Furher No difference

An individual sent the following message to a Jewish school via Instagram. The individual was later charged with using a ‘carriage service to menace, harass or offend’ (18 October 2023, New South Wales).

You're school is nothing but a disgrace and I hope all the children, parents & staff who spend a cent to support the devil get cancer and die a slow painful death. Just as you should. Enjoy your day. I hope it's your last x

Praise hitler, if only he was here to continue the mass destruction of your blood line.

Two Stars of David were drawn next to a street sign which said, ‘No entry’ (8 November 2023, New South Wales).

Graffiti reading “Jew Free Zone” and “Jews not welcome” was located in an inner-city neighbourhood (18 November 2023, Victoria).

Graffiti reading ‘F-ck the Jews’ was located on private property (7 December 2023, New South Wales).

LITERATURE

Literature is antisemitic material that is distributed in multiple quantities, with each piece identical in content. It is often applicable in incidents of mass-produced antisemitic posters and stickers that are widely distributed over a geographic area, or identical antisemitic emails or letters sent to multiple recipients. Such a distribution would count as one incident to reflect that it is one act by one offender or group. This also avoids inflating the overall statistics. In addition, CSG excludes from statistical review proactively sought antisemitic literature that reflects the general activities of antisemitic organisations.

In 2023, there were 20 incidents of literature recorded by CSG. This is the same figure as reported in 2022 and is generally similar to historical data. Eighty percent of all incidents contained extreme right discourse, which is similar to that recorded in 2022. This reflects the ongoing mass distribution of propaganda and extremist material by far-right groups across Australia, specifically the use of emails, letters, graffiti and stickering to spread antisemitic material. Further, compared to other incident categories, incidents of literature were reasonably spread across the country, with several incidents recorded in New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia.

EXAMPLES:

- Several antisemitic letters containing far-right discourse were placed in residential letterboxes, including at Jewish residences (25 July 2023, New South Wales).
- Posters of Adolf Hitler, with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu superimposed on the image, were affixed to numerous public locations in predominantly Jewish locations (5 November 2023, New South Wales).

CSG staff have undergone specialist training to professionally respond to, assess, record and triage antisemitic and other security incidents, and provide specific security and incident advice to victims and witnesses. CSG respects the wishes and needs of incident victims including victim confidentiality and liaison with law enforcement."

ANALYSIS

ISRAEL–HAMAS WAR 2023

This report fundamentally demonstrates the extent of the impact of overseas conflicts involving Israel on the local security environment. CSG attributes the 88% increase in antisemitic incidents in 2023 almost entirely to the impacts of the ongoing Israel-Hamas War. This is supported by details of incident reports as well as captured data. In fact, prior to the Israel-Hamas War, projected analysis by CSG indicated that antisemitic incident levels in Australia in 2023 were likely to be 13% lower than 2022.

Sixty-five percent of all antisemitic incidents occurred during the conflict, with an average of 182 antisemitic incidents recorded per month between October and December. This compares to the average of 32 antisemitic incidents per month between January and September, prior to the conflict. Further, 49% of antisemitic incidents during the Israel-Hamas War involved anti-Israel and/or Islamist discourse as well as antisemitic discourse. Incidents involving anti-Israel and Islamist discourse increased by 382% and 345% respectively when compared to 2022.

In addition to a nominal increase in the volume of antisemitic incidents in 2023, the Israel-Hamas War had a direct impact on the distribution and pattern of antisemitic incidents across the country. There was a surge in more serious incidents, comprising acts of extreme violence, assaults and threats during the conflict period. Of the 36 assaults recorded in 2023, which constituted a 227% increase, 26 of them (72%) occurred during the Israel-Hamas War, with 13 involving anti-Israel and/or Islamist discourse as well as antisemitic discourse. In the same vein, of the 84 threats recorded in 2023, which constituted a 740% increase, 68 of them (81%) occurred during the Israel-Hamas War, with 33 involving anti-Israel and/or Islamist discourse as well as antisemitic discourse.

These findings demonstrate that an unprecedented increase in antisemitic violence and vilification targeting the Jewish community occurred during the Israel-Hamas War. Such a sudden – and perhaps unexpected – change in Australia's security environment reflects the scale of this conflict, which has been the largest since Israel's inception. It also reflects how conflicts involving Israel can galvanise extremist and hostile actors whose beliefs and motivations may be otherwise hidden in the local environment.

The data relating to incidents reported to CSG during the Israel-Hamas War demonstrate other key insights:

- Actors from across the ideological spectrum – Sunni extremist, Shia extremist, extreme right and extreme left – were all, to varying degrees, involved in perpetrating antisemitic incidents. Whilst it may be anticipated that offenders may be of certain profiles and hold particular ideologies, CSG's data – which accords with historical findings – demonstrates that offenders hold ideologies from across the ideological spectrum.
- There was a surge in incidents targeting Jewish individuals at their private residences, businesses and properties in 2023. In 2022, there were 21 antisemitic incidents which occurred at Jewish private residences, business and properties, comprising approximately 5% of all incidents. Throughout the Israel-Hamas War in 2023, 65 incidents occurred at Jewish private residences, business and properties, constituting a more than three-fold increase, and which does not even factor in any incidents recorded between 1 January and 6 October 2023. This demonstrates that Jewish individuals have been increasingly targeted at their homes and businesses, outside of public places and communal locations.
- There were countless reports of unprovoked incidents of abuse, threats and assaults targeting identifiably Jewish individuals, particularly in public places. In most cases, the nature of the incident demonstrated that perpetrators held anti-Israel and, at times, other motivations, yet targeted identifiably Jewish individuals entirely because of their religion which was overtly displayed. During the Israel-Hamas War, there were 169 incidents which targeted identifiably Jewish individuals, 58% of which occurred in public places.
- Of the 26 charges laid by law enforcement in 2023, 16 of them (62%) related to incidents that occurred during the Israel-Hamas War, reinforcing the finding that more serious incidents – by their qualification as 'criminal' and warranting prosecution – occurred during the conflict period.

Amidst the findings in this report, the political dimension of this issue must be recognised. Ongoing conflicts in Israel over time have been distinct to other conflicts globally and in the Middle East. They have a uniquely far-reaching and emotive impact on diaspora communities around the world. Since the outbreak of the conflict, Jewish communal security groups worldwide have recorded surging levels of anti-Jewish hate crime, antisemitic hate speech and antisemitic protest activity.

In the local security environment, there were some noteworthy and 'watershed' incidents directly related to the conflict.

- On Monday 9 October 2023, two days after the Hamas terror attacks in Israel, approximately 1000 protesters linked with far-left and anti-Israel groups gathered in Sydney CBD. They initially planned to hold a protest at Sydney Town Hall to protest against the expected Israeli retaliation to the attacks; however, the protest crowd later moved to Circular Quay to protest the lighting of the Sydney Opera House in the colours of the Israeli flag. Members of the crowd were filmed chanting "F-ck the Jews" and other slurs. Other members held Hizballah flags, burnt Israeli flags and assaulted and threatened Jewish community members who attended the area to view the Opera House. NSW Police have charged at least five individuals in relation to the assaults. No charges have yet been laid in relation to the offensive speech.

Police clash with protesters outside synagogue, sourced from The Herald Sun, 14 November 2023.

Pictures of the protest crowd, sourced from The Australian, 10 October 2023.

- On 10 November 2023, the day after a restaurant burnt down in Caulfield, pro-Palestine protesters gathered in the predominantly Jewish suburb to show support for the business owners. Protesters clashed with police, leading to several arrests and the evacuation of a nearby synagogue. Several Jewish community members were assaulted, threatened and verbally abused. Victoria Police also arrested other individuals in relation to an assault and an attempted vehicle ramming of members of the public nearby, several hours prior to the protest.
- Throughout December, numerous hoax bomb threats were made to synagogues across Australia.

EXAMPLES:

- A swastika was spray painted in black paint on a poster depicting an individual kidnapped by Gaza militant group, Hamas (22 October 2023, Victoria).
- Two identifiably Jewish individuals were exercising, when a group of construction workers yelled "Is that a bullet-proof vest?", referring to a weighted vest that one of the individuals was wearing. The workers then yelled, "You must be a Jew. F-ck you. Should we shoot you?" (24 October 2023, New South Wales).
- An antisemitic email was sent to a Jewish organisation (25 October 2023, New South Wales).
- A Jewish individual was walking with an Israeli flag when a crowd started chanting "Gas the Jews" and "F-ck the Jews" towards him (5 November 2023, Victoria).
- Whilst on a domestic flight with a major Australian airline, an identifiably Jewish couple were verbally abused by another passenger who shouted: "Free Palestine", "You're killing our babies" and "Go back to your home" (18 December 2023, New South Wales and Victoria).

ISSUE-MOTIVATED INCIDENTS

In addition to the Israel-Hamas War, there were other identified patterns of antisemitic incidents which related to specific political and other issues in 2023. These included:

- Ongoing conspiracy theories relating to Jews creating the COVID-19 virus and vaccine.
- Sympathy and allegiance with antisemitic comments made by US celebrity, Kanye West in 2022.
- Antisemitic dimensions to views in relation to the ongoing Russia-Ukraine War. Antisemitic discourse has been present amongst some Russian nationalist movements, drawing on antisemitic tropes when describing the Ukrainian Government, a significant proportion of whom are Jewish; however, by the same token, antisemitic discourse has also been part of elements of the Ukrainian resistance, with local neo-Nazi groups sympathising with extremist Ukrainian militias. Incidents with these features have presented locally in protests and online.
- Extremist narratives alleging that 'The Voice' referendum was orchestrated by a powerful Jewish lobby attempting to impinge the rights of white Australians.

EXAMPLES:

COVID: Graffiti which read "F-ck the Jews … with the poison vaccine" was located in a supermarket carpark (19 September 2023, Victoria).

Kanye West: Graffiti reading "Kanye was right" [referring to the antisemitic comments made by celebrity Kayne West] was spray painted over posters of hostages taken by Hamas during their incursion of Israel (22 October 2023, New South Wales).

MONTHLY BREAKDOWN

There was an average of 69 antisemitic incidents per month in 2023. This equates to approximately 2.3 incidents per day. Unlike previously and as already outlined in this report, data was skewed in October, November and December due to the impacts of the Israel-Hamas War on the local security environment. The highest number of incidents occurred in October at 223, followed closely by November at 217.

Further, there are typically a higher-than-average number of incidents during the Jewish High Holy Days in September and October due to increased Jewish communal activity which often sees a corresponding rise in opportunistic antisemitic incidents. The decrease in December to 105 – compared to October and November – is attributed to the holiday season.

INCIDENT VICTIMS

Antisemitic incidents in 2023 targeted a large cross-section of the Jewish community across Australia.

Identifiably Jewish individuals were the victims of 235 incidents (28%). This comprises a much higher proportion than historically. In 2022, 14% of antisemitic incidents were perpetrated against identifiably Jewish individuals. This is attributed – at least in part – to the local impact of the Israel-Hamas War, in which identifiably Jewish individuals were disproportionately targeted through assault, threat and abuse in public areas. Seventy-two percent of incidents targeting identifiably Jewish individuals in 2023 occurred during the period of the Israel-Hamas War. Twenty-three of the 36 assaults (64%) in 2023 targeted identifiably Jewish individuals, with 57% of all incidents which targeted identifiably Jewish individuals occurring in public places.

Schoolchildren were the victims of 51 incidents. Twenty-seven of these incidents (53%) occurred at non-Jewish schools, eight in public areas, eight at Jewish schools, four on public transport directly before or after school, three whilst travelling to or from school and one on social media. Eight incidents (16%) in which schoolchildren were victims involved assaults, whilst five were threats. Of the 41 incidents involving schoolchildren where the age of the offender was recorded, 32 were other minors, eight were adults and one involved both an adult and a minor.

Jewish university students or staff were the victims of 14 antisemitic incidents at universities across Australia. These included two assaults, with 10 incidents (71%) including anti-Israel as well as antisemitic discourse.

EXAMPLES:

- Whilst walking home from synagogue, a driver stopped his vehicle nearby an identifiably Jewish individual, before yelling “F-ck the Jews” and performing a Nazi salute towards him (14 October 2023, New South Wales).
- Two schoolchildren from a Jewish school were aboard a public bus in their school uniforms. An individual (adult) boarded the bus and began verbally abusing them, saying that “Jews are murderers” and that the students were “killing people in Gaza”. Both students immediately alighted from the bus and fled the area (20 October 2023, New South Wales).
- A schoolchild was verbally abused at a non-Jewish school by other children, who threatened to stab him, as he was the son of a staff member who worked at a Jewish school (23 October 2023, Queensland).
- Two schoolchildren from a Jewish school in school uniform were approached by an individual who said, “You people are all monsters. I wish you were bombed instead” (10 November 2023, New South Wales).
- A vehicle with at least five occupants stopped in traffic outside a Jewish school and yelled towards an identifiably Jewish schoolchild, “Free Palestine. F-ck the Jews. F-ck your country. Everybody hates Jews. We have tons of gas.” (10 November 2023, Victoria).
- A university student shared a post glorifying Adolf Hitler with other students via social media (18 October 2023, New South Wales).

SITES TARGETED

Incidents most commonly occurred in public places at 352 (42%), followed by 158 incidents at synagogues, 99 at Jewish organisations, 92 on private properties, 82 at Jewish private residences, businesses or properties and 47 at Jewish schools.

This composition is relatively similar to historical data, although incidents at Jewish private residences, businesses or properties increased in its share of total incidents by 5%.

INCIDENT OFFENDERS

Where possible, CSG has recorded the age, gender and appearance of incident offenders.

In 402 incidents (48%), the age of an offender was recorded. From these 402 incidents, 341 involved adults, 56 involved minors and five involved both adults and minors. These findings are consistent with recent data outlining that minors are increasingly involved in hate and extremist activity. One hundred and fifty-six incidents involved more than one offender.

A physical description of the offender was obtained in 308 incidents (37%), noting that a large number of incidents are not physical (i.e. phone call, email, social media, etc). Offenders were described as Caucasian in 160 incidents, followed by Middle Eastern in 132 incidents, Asian in seven incidents, South Asian in four incidents, Pacific Islander in three incidents and Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander in two incidents.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Ninety-three antisemitic incidents (11%) occurred on social media. These included 20 threats made to Jewish individuals and businesses as well as synagogues, Jewish organisations and schools. Whilst this is marginally higher than previous figures, it is relatively similar to historical data. The slight increase is likely due to the larger number of incidents relating to the Israel-Hamas War which occurred on social media, with 57 of the 93 incidents (61%) on social media featuring anti-Israel as well as antisemitic discourse.

These figures marginally reflect the volume and scope of antisemitism on social media and other online platforms. A large amount of antisemitic content is frequently posted indiscriminately and anonymously by diverse social media users worldwide. CSG only statistically records formally reported antisemitic online activity where the victim and/or the offender is located in Australia. Proactively located antisemitic material posted online is excluded unless it specifically targets a Jewish site or person in Australia.

EXAMPLES:

- A user posted a comment on a Jewish organisation's social media page: "We will remove all Jews in Australia" (29 October 2023, Queensland).

DISCOURSE

Particular and distinct types of discourse featured in an increasing number of antisemitic incidents in 2023. CSG records when Islamist, extreme right and/or anti-Israel discourse are involved in an incident alongside antisemitic discourse. This provides insight into the motivations of incident offenders and where extremist movements may be growing.

In 2023, there were 280 incidents which contained anti-Israel discourse, constituting 34% of total incidents. This compares to the 58 incidents with anti-Israel discourse in 2022, which comparatively comprised 12% of total incidents and represents a 383% increase. This increase is attributed to the local impact of the Israel-Hamas War.

There were 49 incidents involving Islamist discourse, comprising 6% of total incidents. This compares to the 11 incidents featuring Islamist discourse in 2022, which comparatively comprised 2% of total incidents and represents a 345% increase. This increase is also attributed to the local impact of the Israel-Hamas War.

Extreme right discourse featured in 321 incidents, constituting 39% of all antisemitic incidents. In 2022, by comparison, there were 247 incidents featuring extreme right discourse, comparatively constituting 56% of all antisemitic incidents. Although incidents of this type comprised a smaller proportion of total incidents in 2023, this figure reflects that the steady rise of extreme right sentiment across Australia remains.

Although all of these increases are partially due to the overall increase in antisemitic incidents, the increasing prevalence of certain types of discourse reflects how extremist rhetoric is becoming increasingly normalised and part of mainstream narratives.

INCIDENTS OF EXTREME RIGHT DISCOURSE

EXAMPLES:

An individual called a synagogue and left a voicemail, in which he discussed the Israel-Palestine conflict, before saying, “Do you want to send around a couple of Jewish f-cking scum to chuck rocks at my fence because I’d love to f-cking shoot them … You f-cking scumbag motherf-ckers are lower than f-cking sh-t” (24 August 2023, Tasmania).

An individual – with a Nazi flag affixed to his vehicle – was observed driving erratically and recklessly through predominantly Jewish areas. After multiple calls to CSG and 000, the individual was arrested soon after and charged with public display of a Nazi symbol (14 October 2023, New South Wales).

An individual was observed walking on a public beach with a swastika painted in white on his back (15 October 2023, Western Australia).

GEOGRAPHIC ANALYSIS

New South Wales experienced the highest reported number of antisemitic incidents at 408 (49%), followed by 303 incidents in Victoria (37%), 58 incidents in Western Australia, 30 incidents in Queensland, 13 incidents in South Australia, 12 incidents in Tasmania, 6 incidents in the Australian Capital Territory and no reported incidents in the Northern Territory.

Of the 830 incidents recorded by CSG in 2023, 86% occurred in New South Wales and Victoria. This closely mirrors the distribution of Australian Jewry residing across the country, with 87% residing in either New South Wales or Victoria. Disparities between states may be indicative of reporting levels as well as the size, dominion and reach of the CSG workforce and other representative organisations.

Across all states, there were recorded increases in antisemitic incidents, although to varying degrees. Victoria recorded the highest increase from 103 to 303 incidents, constituting a surge of 194%. Queensland, Tasmania and Western Australia all recorded increases of more than 100%, whilst New South Wales recorded a 45% increase. Modest increases were observed in the Australian Capital Territory and South Australia, although analysis of percentage changes is generally unreliable when data sample sizes are small.

Incidents were generally concentrated in the suburbs and areas most heavily populated by the Jewish community, predominantly in metropolitan capital cities.

- In New South Wales, 99% of incidents occurred in metropolitan Sydney, with 23% of incidents occurring in the Bondi area, although incidents were relatively spread across the city.
- In Victoria, all incidents occurred in metropolitan Melbourne, with 26% of incidents occurring in the Caulfield area.
- In Western Australia, 97% of incidents occurred in Perth, with 14 incidents occurring in Mount Lawley and nine incidents in Dianella.
- In Queensland, incidents were spread across cities in the state. Seventy percent of incidents occurred in metropolitan Brisbane, whilst four incidents occurred on the Gold Coast, three incidents on the Sunshine Coast and two incidents in Cairns.
- In South Australia, 85% of incidents occurred in Adelaide, with 46% in the Adelaide CBD area.
- In Tasmania, 58% occurred in Launceston and 33% occurred in Hobart.
- In the Australian Capital Territory, all incidents occurred in Canberra.

LAW ENFORCEMENT ACTION

28 offenders were charged in relation to documented and reported incidents in 2023. This represents an 115% increase compared to 2022, although the percentage change must be viewed within the context of the overall increase in incidents, a significant proportion of which were more serious in nature. According to CSG records, all of these charges were laid by NSW Police, although several arrests were made by Victoria Police.

Further, media reports have detailed that Victoria Police have made 42 arrests in relation to "alleged antisemitic crimes" in 2023[4]. This finding demonstrates that law enforcement, continue to hold antisemitic incident offenders accountable for their actions, where crimes have been committed. It must be noted, however, that a significant amount of antisemitic activity does not qualify as a criminal offence and not all victims wish to report incidents to law enforcement and/or provide statements for prosecution.

EXAMPLES:

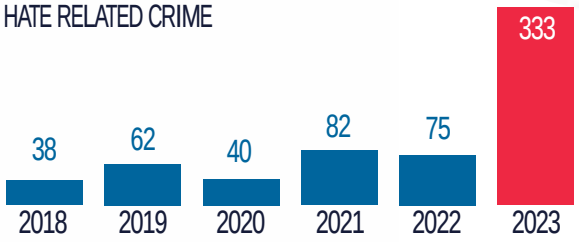
Three individuals walked past a Holocaust museum and made 'Sieg Heil' salutes whilst impersonating a soldier marching. Police were contacted and arrested the three individuals onsite. All three offenders were charged with public display of a Nazi symbol (13 October 2023, New South Wales).

The most common charge laid by law enforcement was 'using a carriage service to menace, harass or offend', a type of telecommunications offence. Pleasingly, six incidents resulted in prosecution in New South Wales for the recently enacted offence of publicly displaying the Nazi symbol without a reasonable excuse.

In each representative state, CSG works closely with government and law enforcement agencies to ensure oversight of each Jewish community's security and emergency management programs and policies. A key function of CSG is providing law enforcement with information relating to antisemitic incidents as well as evidence of hate crimes to assist with prosecutions. Law enforcement were notified in relation to 355 antisemitic incidents (43%) in 2023.

Hate crime statistics are actively recorded by law enforcement across Australia. In New South Wales, the New South Wales Police Force Engagement and Hate Crime Unit classified a total of 333 reports to police as 'Hate Crime Related' and targeting the Jewish Community in 2023 , noting that the collection and classification methods for recording this data are not the same as that used by CSG.



The concentration of the Australian Jewish population in particular areas of metropolitan cities across Australia has also meant that antisemitic incidents are generally confined to a select number of police jurisdictions.

NSW

In New South Wales, 200 incidents occurred in Eastern Suburbs Police Area Command (PAC), followed by 34 in Eastern Beaches PAC, 32 in Sydney City PAC, 30 in Kings Cross PAC, 18 in Ku-Ring-Gai PAC, 13 in North Shore PAC, 10 in Inner West PAC, 10 in St George PAC, six in Parramatta PAC, six in South Sydney PAC, four in Leichhardt PAC, four in Surry Hills PAC, three in Bankstown PAC, three in The Hills PAC, two in Auburn PAC, two in Newcastle City Police District (PD), two in Northern Beaches PAC, two in Richmond PD, two in Ryde PAC, one in Blue Mountains PAC, one in Brisbane Water Police District, one in Burwood PAC, one in Campbelltown City PAC, one in Campsie PAC, one in Cumberland PAC, one in Fairfield City PAC, one in Mount Druitt PAC, one in Murray River PD, one in Port Stephens-Hunter PD, one in Riverstone PAC and one in Sutherland Shire PAC. One incident occurred within the jurisdiction of the Australian Federal Police and 12 incidents did not occur within a select NSW Police jurisdiction.

| | |
|---|---|
| Eastern Suburbs PAC | 200 |
| Eastern Beaches PAC | 34 |
| Sydney City PAC | 32 |
| Kings Cross PAC | 30 |
| Ku-Ring-Gai PAC | 18 |
| North Shore PAC | 13 |
| Inner West PAC | 10 |
| St George PAC | 10 |
| Parramatta PAC | 6 |
| South Sydney PAC | 6 |
| Other PACs and PDs | 36 |
| N/A and AF: | 13 |

[4] http://www.australianjewishnews.com/one-antisemitic-incident-every-day/

[5] NSW Police have not validated the data contained in this publication, nor CSG's interpretation of the data.

VICTORIA

In Victoria, 126 incidents occurred in Caulfield Police Service Area (PSA), followed by 53 in St Kilda PSA, 23 in East Melbourne PSA, nine in Melbourne City PSA, nine in Prahan PSA, eight in Boroondara PSA, six in Bayside PSA, six in Malvern PSA, three in Doncaster PSA, three in Moorabbin PSA, three in Oakleigh PSA, two in Monash PSA, two in Mooney Valley PSA, two in Mornington Peninsula PSA, two in Stonnington PSA, one in Baw Baw PSA, one in Bentleigh PSA, one in Bethanga PSA, one in Box Hill PSA, one in Brimbank PSA, one in Darebin PSA, one in East Gippsland PSA, one in Flemington PSA, one in Geelong PSA, one in Hobsons Bay PSA, one in Kew PSA, one in Knox PSA, one in Merribek, one in the PSO / Public Transport area, one in Vermont South PSA, one in Wangaratta PSA, one in Whittlesea PSA, one in Yarra PSA and one in Yarra Ranges PSA. One incident occurred within the jurisdiction of the Australian Federal Police and 26 incidents did not occur within a select Victoria Police jurisdiction.

| | |
|---|---|
| Caulfield PSA | 126 |
| St Kilda PSA | 53 |
| East Melbourne PSA | 23 |
| Melbourne City PSA | 9 |
| Prahan PSA | 9 |
| Boroondara PSA | 8 |
| Bayside PSA | 6 |
| Malvern PSA | 6 |
| Other PSAs | 36 |
| N/A and AFP | 27 |

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

In Western Australia, 21 incidents occurred in Morley Police Station Area, followed by 13 incidents in Bayswater PSA, eight in Wembley PSA, four in Perth PSA, two in Scarborough PSA, one in Fremantle PSA, one in Goldfields-Esperance PSA, one in Kalgoorie PSA, one Kannington PSA, one in Kensington PSA and one in Warwick PSA. Four incidents did not occur within a select Western Australia Police jurisdiction.

| | |
|---|---|
| Morley PSA | 21 |
| Bayswater PSA | 13 |
| Wembley PSA | 8 |
| Perth PSA | 4 |
| Scarborough PSA | 2 |
| Other PSAs | 6 |
| N/A | 4 |

CSG encourages the Australian Jewish Community to report all incidents through the CSG Hotline (1300 000 CSG) or app (CSG Alert for New South Wales and Western Australia, JEAP for Victoria) as preferred reporting methods".

SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY REPORTS

A critical function of CSG is to identify, respond to and assess incidents of suspicious activity. This forms a vital part of CSG's role in overseeing the specialised and specific security needs of the Jewish community. Detecting and reporting potential hostile reconnaissance is critical in thwarting violent and/or planned terror activity. Individuals or groups seeking to perpetrate harm will often visit their target prior to carrying out their intended action.

Antisemitic terror attacks continue to occur globally, perpetrated by terror actors across the ideological spectrum. In 2023, these included a shooting at two synagogues in Los Angeles and a shooting outside a Jewish preschool in Albany, New York. Fortunately, there were no fatalities.

In 2023, there was an increased number of foiled antisemitic terror attacks. Whilst this is a testament to the efforts by counter-terrorism authorities in thwarting acts of bias motivated violence, it reflects the extent of the security threat posed to Jewish communities worldwide. In chronological order, there have been plots foiled in Greece, USA (multiple), India and Brazil by actors from across the ideological spectrum, allegedly including Iran/Hizballah, white supremacists and Salafi-jihadists. Since the outbreak of the Israel-Hamas War, there have been multiple (at least three publicly reported) attack plots allegedly coordinated by Gazan militant group, Hamas to target Jewish sites across Europe, including in Germany, Denmark and the Netherlands.

Across Australia, more than 3000 reports of suspicious and non-suspicious security-related activity were reported to CSG.

Across Australia, more than 3000 reports of suspicious and non-suspicious security-related activity were reported to CSG. These reports included suspected incidents of hostile reconnaissance.

The CSG workforce has undergone specialist training in identifying suspicious indicators, enacting emergency procedures and response, collecting and assessing threat intelligence and providing law enforcement with specific detail and evidence to assist in their identification and investigative efforts, including closed-circuit television (CCTV). CSG encourages community awareness and resilience, and provides training to staff at Jewish sites to recognise and report suspicious activity to law enforcement and CSG.

CONCLUSION

In 2023, CSG recorded an 88% surge in antisemitic incidents across the country. Whilst this report analysed the pattern and distribution of these incidents, the unprecedented nature of these findings must be acknowledged overall. Eight hundred and thirty antisemitic incidents is – by a significant margin – the highest number of incidents recorded by CSG in a calendar year. These included substantial increases in serious incidents, including assaults of and threats directed towards the Jewish community.

Insight into the incidents that occurred in 2023 reflects that the increase can be predominantly attributed to the Israel-Hamas War, which remains ongoing. As such, until the conflict is resolved, it is likely that CSG will continue to record heightened levels of antisemitic incidents and the Jewish community across the country will face ongoing vilification.

New South Wales Office

Phone: 02 9353 1600
Email: csg@csgnsw.org.au
Website: www.csgnsw.org.au
App: CSG Alert / CSG & CHS Alert Assist
Facebook: Community Security Group NSW

Victoria Office

Phone: 03 9519 8600
Email: info@csgvic.com.au
Website: www.thecsg.org.au/vic
App: JEAP
Facebook: Community Security Group Victoria – CSG

Queensland Office

Phone: 0419 724 632
Email: csgops@qjbd.org

Western Australia Office

Phone: 0416 756 764
Email: info@csgwa.com.au
App: CSG Alert
Facebook: Community Security Group WA

Please direct all Australian Capital Territory, South Australian, Tasmanian and Northern Territory inquiries to the CSG national hotline.

National 24 HR emergency response, incident reporting, advice and assistance

1300 000 CSG (1300 000 274)

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-8" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

26 May 2016

IHRA non-legally binding working definition of antisemitism

Adopted by the IHRA Plenary in Bucharest

In the spirit of the Stockholm Declaration that states: "With humanity still scarred by …antisemitism and xenophobia the international community shares a solemn responsibility to fight those evils" the committee on Antisemitism and Holocaust Denial called the IHRA Plenary in Budapest 2015 to adopt the following working definition of antisemitism.

On 26 May 2016, the Plenary in Bucharest decided to:

Adopt the following non-legally binding working definition antisemitism:

"Antisemitism is a certain perception of Jews, which may expressed as hatred toward Jews. Rhetorical and phys manifestations of antisemitism are directed toward Jewish or r Jewish individuals and/or their property, toward Jewish commu institutions and religious facilities."

To guide IHRA in its work, the following examples may serve as illustrations:

Manifestations might include the targeting of the state of Israel, conceived as a Jewish collectivity. However, criticism of Israel similar to that leveled against any other country cannot be regarded as antisemitic. Antisemitism frequently charges Jews with conspiring to harm humanity, and it is often used to blame Jews for "why things go wrong." It is expressed in speech, writing, visual forms and action, and employs sinister stereotypes and negative character traits.

Contemporary examples of antisemitism in public life, the media, schools, the workplace, and in the religious sphere could, taking into account the overall context, include, but are not limited to:

- Calling for, aiding, or justifying the killing or harming of Jews in the name of a radical ideology or an extremist view of religion.
- Making mendacious, dehumanizing, demonizing, or stereotypical allegations about Jews as such or the power of Jews as collective — such as, especially but not exclusively, the myth about a world Jewish conspiracy or of Jews controlling the media, economy, government or other societal institutions.
- Accusing Jews as a people of being responsible for real or imagined wrongdoing committed by a single Jewish person or group, or even for acts committed by non-Jews.
- Denying the fact, scope, mechanisms (e.g. gas chambers) or intentionality of the genocide of the Jewish people at the hands of National Socialist Germany and its supporters and accomplices during World War II (the Holocaust).
- Accusing the Jews as a people, or Israel as a state, of inventing or exaggerating the Holocaust.
- Accusing Jewish citizens of being more loyal to Israel, or to the alleged priorities of Jews worldwide, than to the interests of their own nations.
- Denying the Jewish people their right to self-determination, e.g., by claiming that the existence of a State of Israel is a racist endeavor.
- Applying double standards by requiring of it a behavior not expected or demanded of any other democratic nation.
- Using the symbols and images associated with classic antisemitism (e.g., claims of Jews killing Jesus or blood libel) to characterize Israel or Israelis.
- Drawing comparisons of contemporary Israeli policy to that of the Nazis.
- Holding Jews collectively responsible for actions of the state of Israel.

Antisemitic acts are criminal when they are so defined by law (for example, denial of the Holocaust or distribution of antisemitic materials in some countries).

Criminal acts are antisemitic when the targets of attacks, whether they are people or property – such as buildings, schools, places of worship and cemeteries – are selected because they are, or are perceived to be, Jewish or linked to Jews.

Antisemitic discrimination is the denial to Jews of opportunities or services available to others and is illegal in many countries.

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-9" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

4

Anti-Zionism and Anti-Israel Behavior and Sentiment

The second potential cause of discrimination against Jews that we address in this study is anti-Zionism and anti-Israel sentiment. On a basic level, this theory predicts a link between opposition to the state of Israel and discrimination against Jews. This relationship works concurrently along two mechanisms that are documented in the literature. First, anti-Zionism can mirror and is often a cover for more classical anti-Semitism; that is, anti-Zionism can be a "politically correct" cover for those who seek to target Jews for other reasons. Thus, when this form of anti-Zionism manifests, it is basically an indicator of levels of other forms of anti-Semitism.

Second, there is a tendency among at least some anti-Zionists to ascribe to all Jews responsibility for the perceived injustices committed by Israel or for the existence of Israel itself. Thus, the ideology can in and of itself be a motivation for discrimination against Jews.

However, in line with the vast majority of academic literature on the topic, we do not mean to imply that either of these trends can be ascribed to all anti-Zionists or to all people who hold anti-Israel views or who criticize Israel. In fact, the relationship between views on Zionism and anti-Semitism is quite complex. Views on Israel do not automatically translate into views on Jews. Also, just as many who hold anti-Zionist views do not express anti-Semitic views, there are Christian theologies that are pro-Israel but hold what can be classified as negative views on Jews. Zuckerman (1996: 25) discusses how this plays out in Armageddon theology, which > reveals a contradictory impulse toward Jews. On the one hand, the return of Jews to Israel is to be encouraged, and Jews are to be positively supported in their endeavors to strengthen Israel as a sign of the hastening of the End of Times. On the other hand, it is anticipated that most Jews will suffer terribly during the period of Tribulation and that only those Jews who converted to Christ in the end will be redeemed.

Thus, Armageddon theology's support for Israel is combined with a belief that Jews are deserving of punishment for believing in the wrong God, a key element of the theologically based anti-Semitism discussed in the previous chapter. This set of beliefs is held only by a portion of US Christians who support Israel.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

In contrast, there is a small portion of Christians who believe that Israel is a "violation of Christian teachings and as a false interpretation of the Jewish Bible" because Christians have replaced Jews as the chosen people (Jikeli, 2020: 4). Overall, Christian views on whether God's covenant with the Jews is still valid and, if valid, whether it includes a Jewish right to the state of Israel vary considerably (Jikeli, 2020).

For these reasons among others, the empirical portion of this chapter does not directly address either anti-Zionism or anti-Semitism. Rather, it focuses on anti-Israel attitudes and behavior as a potential cause for discrimination against Jews. That being said, it is difficult to discuss anti-Israel movements and attitudes without discussing anti-Zionism and its relationship to anti-Semitism. Still, we limit this discussion to the evolution and nature of the claims made by anti-Zionists and why there is a theoretical basis to believe that anti-Zionist beliefs or anti-Israel sentiment can cause discrimination against Jews outside of Israel.

This chapter proceeds as follows. First, we discuss our theoretical perspective on anti-Zionism. Second, we survey the history and content of the various manifestations of anti-Zionism. Third, we look at parallel theories in the general literature on the causes of discrimination. Finally, we examine the correlation between measures of anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews.

Our Theoretical Perspective on Anti-Zionism

As the goal of this study is to examine the causes of discrimination against Jews, we examine the literature and theories on anti-Zionism with a view to elicit what causal predictions can be found in this literature. In doing so, we include in this discussion literatures such as those which suggest that anti-Zionism is de facto anti-Semitism and the extent to which anti-Semitic motifs and conspiracy theories about Jews are present in anti-Zionist discourse. It is not our intent to paint all who hold anti-Israel attitudes with the same brush. This group is diverse and holds a wide range of views. Rather, we seek to examine precisely those elements of the anti-Zionist movement which are most likely to cause discrimination against Jews, to demonstrate that there is a theoretical basis to believe such a causal effect might exist, and to examine the nuances of this theorized causality.

Anti-Zionism is linked to events in the Middle East. This has two manifestations. First, many anti-Zionists believe that the establishment of state of Israel is illegitimate. Second, many object to specific Israeli government policies. While these criticisms focus to a great extent on Israel's actual policies, there is also a nontrivial element that ascribes to Israel nefarious policies with little basis in fact. These fictional policies often overlap with classic conspiracy theories against Jews, the subject of Chapter 5 of this volume.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Thus, in this chapter we discuss these views when relevant to our discussion of anti-Zionism, and in Chapter 5 we discuss them in the context of conspiracy theories against Jews, a phenomenon which predates anti-Zionism by more than a millennium. We posit that the anti-Zionism and conspiracy theory literatures provide important but different perspectives on this issue, which bring up different questions and theoretical predictions. For this reason we discuss them separately.

While views which blame all Jews for Israel's behavior or existence are on the extreme end of those who hold anti-Israel or anti-Zionist views, we posit that they are particularly important to understanding the causes of discrimination against Jews. That is, it is in particular when all Jews, including those living outside of Israel, are blamed that discrimination against Jews outside of Israel becomes more likely. Thus, we place particular emphasis on this element of anti-Zionism in this discussion in order to provide a foundation for this theory. Some of this discussion necessarily focuses on the links theorized in the literature between this aspect of anti-Zionism and anti-Semitism.

In addition, we discuss the use of anti-Semitic motifs in anti-Zionist discourse. Again, we make no claim that this is representative of all anti-Zionists, and it certainly is not representative of all who criticize Israel's policies. Rather, we seek to establish that such anti-Semitic motifs are present in at least some elements of anti-Zionist discourse. We argue that the presence of anti-Semitism in at least some elements of the anti-Zionist movement may influence the link, if any, between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews.

In this vein, we also discuss a literature which explicitly argues that anti-Zionism often constitutes anti-Semitism. We treat this literature as a body of theory which argues that there is a link between anti-Zionism and anti-Semitism and, therefore, it predicts that anti-Israel activities and beliefs may predict discrimination against Jews. This literature also provides some predictions of the circumstances under which anti-Zionism will be more strongly linked to anti-Semitism and, therefore, to discrimination against Jews.

We do not delve into the question of the legitimacy of the existence of the state of Israel or the accuracy of the claims made by anti-Zionists about Israel, other than to sometimes note that some claims regarding Israel's activities are non-evidence-based. Nor do we take a stand on the issue of the morality, correctness, or lack thereof of any policies by the Israeli government. Our sole concern is to discuss the anti-Zionist ideology, its advocates, the movement associated with it, and the relationship between all of these and discrimination against Jewish minorities outside of the state of Israel, if any such relationship exists. That being said, both the legitimacy of the establishment of Israel and policies and actions taken by Israel's government are central issues among anti-Zionists. We accordingly address these issues in that context.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

We would also like to emphasize that we do not argue that criticism of Israel's government or its policies, and even anti-Zionism, are in and of themselves anti-Semitic. No government should be immune from criticism, and Israel is no exception. However, as we note, it is not uncommon that modern anti-Zionist discourse contains classical anti-Semitic stereotypes and tropes. A very effective method of identifying anti-Semitic anti-Zionism is Sharansky's (2004) "3D" test, which posits that the presence of any of the following three phenomena indicates anti-Semitism:

- Demonization: When Israeli actions are brought out of their proportions and when Israeli actions are compared to Nazi actions.
- Double standard (discrimination): When there is a selective criticism over Israel and not over similar cases by others; when Israel is being criticized for harming human rights, but states such as Iran, North Korea, Syria, Cuba, and China are not being criticized.
- Delegitimization: When Israel's right of existence is being denied, while all other states have that right.

As we argued earlier, we would add to this list manifestations of anti-Zionism that blame all Jews for the perceived bad behavior of Israel. Sharansky likely does not include the latter on his list because his list focuses on types of critiques of Israel which he argues are anti-Semitic, and this last manifestation focuses not on Israel but on world Jewry. As we discuss in detail in this chapter, in some cases anti-Zionists do explicitly hold all Jews responsible for the perceived bad behavior of Israel. We argue that it is these manifestations of anti-Zionism that are more likely to result in discrimination against Jews. This makes the line between legitimate criticism of Israel and anti-Semitic manifestations of anti-Zionism theoretically and empirically important.

We also acknowledge that previous studies have shown an empirical link between ant-Zionist attitudes and anti-Semitic attitudes. Specifically, several survey-based studies find that people who hold anti-Zionist attitudes are more likely to hold anti-Semitic attitudes and vice versa (Kaplan & Small, 2006; Frindte et al., 2005).[1] However, it is important to emphasize that these studies show probabilities; that is, anti-Zionist views are not automatically anti-Semitic, nor do they automatically mean that those who hold such views are also anti-Semites. Rather, one who holds anti-Zionist or anti-Israel attitudes is statistically more likely to also hold anti-Semitic attitudes than someone who does not hold such attitudes. Studies also show that anti-Semitic incidents in Western countries spike at times of Israeli military confrontations with Palestinians (Feinberg, 2020a, 2020b; Jacobs et al., 2011).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

The empirical findings in this chapter are consistent with these studies and show that measures of anti-Israel behavior and sentiment are clearly linked to discrimination against Jews outside of Israel. This adds to previous studies which focus on anti-Israel sentiment causing anti-Jewish attitudes. Here we show that anti-Israel sentiment and behavior can also lead to actions, more specifically to discrimination against Jews.

More precisely, we find that in Christian-majority countries, states which vote more often against Israel in the United Nations General Assembly also tend to engage in more government-based religious discrimination (GRD) against Jews. Anti-Israel and pro-Palestine views within a population are linked to more GRD against Jews. However, UN voting records on Israel and Palestine do not lead to more societal religious discrimination (SRD) against Jews, and pro-Palestine views are at most weakly connected to SRD. This implies that while government actions against Jews are, at least in part, connected to anti-Israel sentiment, there is no systematic connection between anti-Israel sentiment in society and societal actions taken against Jews. This implies that anti-Jewish actions taken by members of society, ranging from graffiti on synagogues to violent attacks against Jews, likely have other motives. The "Israel" motive is likely at least in part a cover for these other motives.

This chapter proceeds as follows. First, we discuss the history and content of the various manifestations of anti-Zionism. Second, we examine the links between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews. Third, we look at parallel theories in the general literature on the causes of discrimination. Finally, we examine the correlation between measures of anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews.

From National Emancipation to Delegitimization Campaigns: A Brief History of Anti-Zionism

Modern anti-Zionism can trace its roots to the success of Zionism. In the wake of the historical events surrounding World War II and the Holocaust, the Jewish people established the state of Israel in 1948. An Arab coalition declared war on the newly founded state and tried unsuccessfully to prevent Israel's establishment and independence. This coalition included Egypt, Jordan, Iraq, Syria, Saudi Arabia, the Arab Liberation Army, the Army of the Holy War, supporters from the Muslim Brotherhood movement, supporters from Pakistan, and many other countries.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Anti-Zionism as a politically relevant and important phenomenon was a reaction to Israel's establishment. That being said, it is important to emphasize two aspects of anti-Zionism. First, anti-Zionism existed before the establishment of the state of Israel. It rose concurrently with the rise of the modern Zionist movement itself in the late nineteenth century. Zionism is an idea that was never unopposed. However, this discussion focuses on anti-Zionism after the establishment of the state of Israel.

Second, while it is not the focus of this book to determine what is and is not anti-Semitism, it is clear that there are some types of anti-Zionism that are not necessarily anti-Semitic, such as post-nation-state anti-Zionism, an opposition of all nation-states and not just the Jewish one.

However, as noted earlier, much of the literature on the topic is not neutral on this issue. Many explicitly argue that anti-Zionist trends are anti-Semitic. Some even call anti-Zionism the "New Antisemitism" (e.g., Sharansky, 2004; Bartov, 2005; Harrison, 2006; Wistrich, 2013; Heni, 2013; Gerstenfeld, 2015; Rosenfeld, 2015; Chesler, 2014; Johnson, 2016; Rich, 2016; Topor, 2018, 2021). They argue that anti-Zionism disguises its Jew-hatred as something else, such as left politics, post-colonialism, human rights promotion, and the Enlightenment. From this perspective, the "new" anti-Semitism is not so new. This literature is not lacking in evidence that at least some anti-Zionists behave similarly to classic anti-Semites. It documents that many anti-Zionists use the exact same tropes and prejudices that classical anti-Semites use against Jews, but direct it against the state of Israel and any Jewish support for Israel. From the perspective of this literature, while pre-1948 anti-Semitism existed mostly in right-wing circles, post-1948 anti-Semitism exists in both right- and left-wing circles.

Wistrich (2013) argues that anti-Zionism is perhaps most pronounced in Arab and Muslim-majority states and, not surprisingly, among Palestinians. Some of its advocates engage in efforts to delegitimize, demonize, and dehumanize Israel, Israeli citizens, and even Jews who are not related to Israel and live in other places in the world. Extreme anti-Zionists, especially among Muslim fundamentalists, claim that the Jews created post-colonialism, post-imperialism, democracy, and the democratization process, as well as the globalization and liberalization trends, in order to suppress Muslims and Islam and to control the world. This type of argument can also be found among some left-wing political activists in the West. This is an example of anti-Zionists borrowing from older conspiracy theories about Jews controlling the world (Litvak & Webman, 2010; Rich, 2016; Topor, 2018, 2021).

There are many early links between anti-Zionism in the Muslim world and anti-Semitic motifs, conspiracy theories, and individuals. For example, after the establishment of the state of Israel, Muslim movements such as the Muslim Brotherhood promoted anti-Semitic propaganda to discredit Jewish independence. Moreover, when some Nazi officers sought shelter after the defeat of the Axis powers, Egypt embraced them as military consultants for the "Jewish problem" of the Arab world. Even the Palestinian mufti of Jerusalem, Mohammed Amin al-Husseini, supported the Nazi regime and met with Adolf Hitler himself. After the Arab defeat in 1948, Arab leaders applied common anti-Semitic prejudices to Israel and blamed the Jews for controlling the media, the global economy, and even other states. Muslim clergymen, politicians, and scholars all blamed the Jews for the failing Arab economies and societies. The alleged motivation for these nefarious activities and conspiracies was support for the state of Israel (Wistrich, 2013).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Thus, Israel was blamed for many of the ills of the Arab world. Jews in general were blamed for supporting or even spearheading the efforts to create these ills in order to support the state of Israel. The accusations against Israel and Jews mirrored closely classic anti-Semitic tropes and conspiracy theories. However, they added a new element which ascribed to the global Jewish conspiracy the goal of creating and maintaining the state of Israel. This became a common pattern for anti-Zionist inspired anti-Semitism.

Arab nationalism, which was an increasingly popular ideology in the Arab world at the time of Israel's establishment and for several decades thereafter, effectively adopted anti-Semitic motifs from the religious types and the common European types. Even before 1948, in most Arab countries classic anti-Semitic texts such as The Protocols of the Elders of Zion, Ford's International Jew, Hitler's Mein Kampf, and August Rohling's Talmud Jew were translated and widely distributed (Perry and Schweitzer, 2008; Litvak & Webman, 2010). Many in the Arab world, including governments and the media, made use of conspiracy-theory accusations. For instance, the Jews were blamed for spreading the AIDS epidemic among Arab military officers in the second half of the twentieth century in a manner similar to the case of the Black plague in medieval times (Laqueur, 2006). This is an example of the "well poisoning" trope which we discuss in more detail in Chapter 5. There were also more classic blood libels, such as a Syrian TV show broadcast widely throughout the Middle East in which Jews kill a Muslim child to get blood to bake matzah for Passover (also discussed on more detail in Chapter 5).[2]

In another example of this phenomenon, the April 1981 issue of al-Da'wa', a major Muslim Brotherhood journal, was devoted to the 12 Jewish sins. These sins are almost identical to ancient Christian and Muslim anti-Semitism: opportunism, schizophrenia, racism, the desire to destroy the world, egoism, looting, sadism, lust for money, blackmail, pledge violations, lack of integrity, and spread of conflicts (Bodansky, 1999).

The 1967 war caused a transformation in anti-Zionist movement which led to the increased popularity of the movement worldwide. The Arab countries lost a significant amount of land to Israel, including the Golan Heights, the West Bank, the Sinai Peninsula, and the Gaza strip. When Israel was established in 1948, the Jewish people, previously perceived as persecuted, became the pioneers of hope and freedom. Many admired their ability to establish a state after the genocide of the Holocaust.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

In contrast, in 1967 the Israelis already had a state. The 1967 military victory shifted perceptions of Israel in many quarters. It was seen as an illegitimate conqueror, occupier, and oppressor by many nations and people around the world. This created a perception of Palestinian Arabs as the new victims and as a stateless people. This view was particularly popular among the far left and in the developing world, much of which had recently gained their independence from colonial powers or had yet to gain their independence (Litvak & Webman, 2010; Topor, 2018).

This led to a rise in anti-Zionism among the global left. While much of this involved criticism of Israel's policies similar to criticism of other countries, some of it was overtly anti-Semitic. In fact, it led to new genera of anti-Semitic illustrations and caricatures of Jews in the Arab press and literature. Post-1967 caricatures depicted the Jewish people as oppressors and even as Nazis (Kotek, 2004).

Anti-Zionism also became mired in the superpower struggles of the Cold War. As the Soviet Union and the United States collided through their allies and proxies in the Middle East, the Soviets began spreading propaganda about Israel, an important American ally in the region. Internationally, this propaganda accused Israel of being an American imperial ally which tried to strengthen American control and power in the region. Domestically, some of the Soviet elite, including Stalin in the early 1950s, oppressed their Jewish citizens on the grounds that they were a fifth column that would eventually support the United States, based on the assumption of Jewish loyalty to Israel over that of their home country, a classic anti-Semitic trope (Kostychenko, 1995; Brandenberger, 2005; Brent & Naumov, 2003).

Historically, the Soviet hostility to Israel and even to Judaism was based upon the ideological foundations of Marxism and early socialism. Karl Marx was born as a Jew but quickly renounced Judaism. Though he did use anti-Semitic stereotypes in his writings, it can be argued that he criticized Judaism as an ethnocentric group that did not fall fully into his social vision. Marx wanted to free society from capitalism, Judaism, and religion in general (Blanchard, 1984). As he wrote in The Jewish Question: "What is the secular basis of Judaism? Practical need, self-interest. What is the worldly religion of the Jew? Huckstering. What is his worldly God? Money. . . . The social emancipation of the Jew is the emancipation of society from Judaism" (Marx, 1844).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

The Socialists, the Leninists, and the revolutionary groups in Russia and elsewhere based their ideology and criticism on Marxism, and specifically on its opposition to religion in general, which included Judaism. However, since Jews were seen as money seeking and greedy, some socialists conflated Jews with capitalism and with the Western world. Thus, among these groups, opposition to the state of Israel is linked to opposition to the United States, the West, and capitalism in general (Wistrich, 1979, 1990).

After the 1967 war and during the 1970s, anti-Zionism emerged as a significant political force in Europe, as well as in the developing world. This manifestation focused on Israel's occupation of Palestinian territory, as well as arguments that Israel oppressed the Palestinians. They advocated that the Gaza strip, Sinai, the West Bank, and East Jerusalem should all be handed back to the Arabs.

Moreover, this discourse facilitated a return of anti-Semitic expressions into mainstream political discourse among the political left. The peak of this early left anti-Zionism was likely the 1975 United Nations General Assembly Resolution 3379, which regarded Zionism as racism.[3] Seventy-five nations voted in favor of characterizing Jewish nationalism (and no other form of nationalism) as racism, including the German Democratic Republic, Poland, and the Soviet Union itself, among others. Though Great Britain and France voted against the act, many of their citizens supported it (Weitzman, 2008; Litvak & Webman, 2010; Topor, 2018, 2021).

The Iranian Islamic revolution of 1979 placed into power a regime that was headed by the anti-Semitic and anti-Zionist Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The regime declared that Israel was an imperial mistake which should be corrected (Weitzman, 2008; Litvak & Webman, 2010). Since that point in time, it has repeatedly and publicly stated its desire to destroy the "Zionist entity" and has engaged in Holocaust denial and other classical forms of anti-Semitic propaganda.

In the 1990s, events contributed to a decline in the popularity of anti-Zionism. More specifically, Israel was seen as changing its behavior and seeking peace. The 1991 Madrid Conference represented an ideational shift. In Madrid, Arab states, the Palestinian delegation, and Israel had shifted from an outlook of a zero-sum game to a mutual gain outlook.[4] The conference was the first time in the history of the conflict that the Israeli and the Palestinian delegations, the latter as part of a Jordanian delegation, had negotiated with each other (Herman & Newman, 2000: 107–153). As an indirect result of the conference, Israel and Jordan signed a peace agreement in October 1994 (Barak, 2005) which complimented the 1978 peace treaty with Egypt. Moreover, just before the conference took place, the United Nations had revoked the anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic resolution 3379 and adopted the General Assembly's resolution 46/86. Now, while 72 nations voted in favor of resolution 3379, 111 nations voted in favor of its revocation. Interestingly, Israel's Arab and Muslim neighbors voted against it, including

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, and Iran, among others. Egypt abstained.[5]

What became known as the Oslo peace process began shortly thereafter. Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), sent a letter to the late Israeli prime minister, Yitzhak Rabin, on September 9, 1993. Arafat promised to recognize Israel's right of existence, to accept UN Security Council Resolutions 242[6] and 338,[7] and to negotiate a peace settlement with Israel. Israel, in response, recognized the PLO as the Palestinians' representative. On September 13 of that year, the Declaration of Principles between Israel and the PLO, concerning the former's existence and the latter's sovereignty, was signed in Washington, DC—the First Oslo Accord (Oslo A). This was followed by the second Oslo agreement (Oslo B) on September 28, 1995. This agreement was meant to strengthen what was now the Palestinian Authority and to give it responsibility over all Palestinian internal affairs (Herman & Newman, 2000: 107–153).

As a result of this, anti-Zionism declined in the 1990s with the belief that Israel would give up land and some regional interests, allowing a Palestinian independent state to be established. This decline continued until the failure of the 2000 Camp David Summit. Israeli prime minister Ehud Barak offered Yasser Arafat more than 90% of the West Bank, but Arafat rejected the offer. This led to the second Palestinian Intifada (Swisher, 2004: 312–334). These events revived the negative and critical stance within the European and global left which depicted Israel as an illegal and illegitimate occupier and oppressor (Topor, 2018).

This coincided with another shift in global trends in anti-Zionism. From 1948 until the early 2000s, anti-Zionism was mostly initiated by Arab and Muslim nations, opposing Israel's right of existence. This opposition was also supported and promoted by the Palestinians and the global post-colonial left ideology (Topor, 2018). The element of critiques of Israel's behavior was present, but it was not dominant.

At the beginning of the twenty-first century, critiques of Israel's behavior, real and imagined, increased. Some nongovernmental actors started promoting anti-Zionism. In some cases they blamed Israel and its Jewish supporters worldwide for most of the problems in the Middle East. However, most of them focused on Israel's policies toward the Palestinians.

Nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and civil society organizations (CSOs) intensified their criticism over Israel, specifically regarding its policies toward the Palestinians. NGOs such as Human Rights Watch, the United Nations Human Rights Council, Amnesty International, and the International Federation of Human Rights began to devote more resources toward highlighting Israel's policies toward the Palestinians. While these organizations engage in a wide variety of other projects of promoting human rights and anti-racist acts, many argue that the resources they devoted to the rights of the Palestinians were highly disproportional. That is, they posit that, even if one accepts that all allegations made by these organizations are fully accurate, Israel is given a wildly disproportionate level of attention. Some go so far as to argue that this constitutes a double standard and discrimination against Israel (Steinberg, 2011).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

The Durban conference against racism in 2001 serves as a good example. At this conference, despite the unfortunate abundance of human rights violators in the world, Israel was given a much higher level of attention. At the entrance of the conference, flyers were distributed widely among the visitors. The flyers contained anti-Semitic stereotypes applied to the state of Israel, including copies of the Protocols of the Elders of Zion and Nazi-like caricatures of Jews. The Durban conference and, later, the United Nations Human Rights Council called for an immediate weapons embargo and economic sanctions on Israel. Moreover, Israel was compared to the South African apartheid regime. Other countries that have objectively poor human rights records and that arguably behave worse in this respect than Israel, such as Iran, Venezuela, and North Korea, were largely ignored. Many consider this a manifestation of anti-Zionism (Steinberg, 2011; Schoenberg, 2008; Bayefsky, 2002; Topor, 2021).[8]

On a more general level, this double standard argument holds that, while it is legitimate to discuss and even focus on Israel's treatment of the Palestinians, the level of disproportionality of this criticism of Israel as compared to other states is unjustifiably high. This literature attributes this criticism to anti-Semitism. While the literature tends to consider the disproportionality sufficient proof for this charge, it also argues that the anti-Semitic motifs that are present in at least some of this criticism support this argument.

This literature also argues that many of the critiques essentially posit that Israel behaves illegitimately based on actions that objectively are common behaviors among states. Kontorovich argues that this is true of the international law literature. For example, many critics argue that Israel is a discriminating state, apartheid, since it passed the Jewish Nation State law in its Knesset in July 2018, which describes Israel as a Jewish nation. Yet multiple countries, including several European countries, have similar laws, often in their constitutions. As of 2014, other than Israel, at least 42 countries, including nearly all Middle Eastern countries, declare an official religion. None of them is religiously homogeneous (Fox, 2015, 2019, 2020). Kontrovich similarly argues that Israel is often criticized for violating international law for other acts, such as the siege of Gaza, despite that these acts technically do not violate international laws and that countries engaging in similar acts elsewhere are rarely similarly criticized.[9]

However, anti-Semitism is not the only potential motive. This criticism of Israel may also be a diversionary tactic. Henne (2018), for example, in a study that does not focus on Israel, demonstrates that many countries are active in human rights efforts precisely to deflect criticism away from their own poor human rights records.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

While this discussion has emphasized the elements of anti-Zionism which overlap with anti-Semitism, again, it is not our intention to argue that all anti-Zionists and all who criticize Israel are anti-Semitic. Rather, our purpose is to establish that such trends are present in anti-Zionist and anti-Israel discourse and movements. In the next section we discuss how these elements can potentially cause discrimination against Jews.

From Anti-Zionism to Discrimination

We argue here that a key link between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews is that in many cases, Jews outside of Israel are blamed and sometimes targeted for the perceived bad behavior of Israel. In some cases, those who criticize Israel's behavior consider all Jews to be part of the "evils" committed by Israel. Among those who oppose Israel's existence, some blame Jews for supporting the state of Israel. Thus they consider Jews complicit in and responsible for Israel's illegitimate existence. This, we argue, potentially provides a motivation to discriminate against Jews. This is a proposition we test empirically later in this chapter.

One manifestation of this phenomenon is the belief that Jews in countries like Britain, Germany, or the United States cannot be true citizens because of their loyalty to Israel. That some Jews actively oppose Israel's policies does not seem to undermine this in the eyes of at least some who hold this type of view; that is, even Jews who denounce Israel can still be suspect. This is analogous to the trend within Christianity described in Chapter 2 where even Jews who convert to Christianity are suspect due to an inherent imperfection that cannot be erased though conversion.

Another manifestation focuses on racism. If Zionism is racism, as enshrined by the UNGA 3379 resolution, and if Israel and the Jewish people are a whole, then all Jews are racists. This belief has led to some odd occurrences. On several occasions, anti-racist leftist groups in the United States and the United Kingdom blocked Jews and Israelis from attending and supporting other anti-racist and anti-fascist rallies. An awkward situation has evolved in which some anti-racist groups discriminate against Jews based on claims that all Jews, who are also Israel supporters, are racist and that all Jews are suspected of supporting Israel unless proven otherwise (Fine & Spencer, 2017; Topor, 2021).

A third manifestation excuses anti-Semitism and even violence toward Jews as the fault of Israel and Jewish support for Israel. Norman Geras argues that while not all who criticize Israel are anti-Semitic, a "substantial section" of the left uses Israel as an "alibi for a new climate of anti-Semitism on the left." This alibi phenomenon has multiple manifestations. First, it posits that anti-Semitism is caused solely by Israel. For example, according to this perspective, Arabs would not engage in Holocaust denial if it were not for their anger over the issue of Israel. Thus Israel's behavior or even existence is the reason for all anti-Semitism and, therefore, excuses it. Those who make this claim do not address why anti-Semitism existed before the founding of the state of Israel.[10]

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

A second manifestation of this phenomenon has it that expressing anti-Semitic tropes is not anti-Semitic unless the speaker intends them to be anti-Semitic. Geras (2013, n.p.) points out that this is an odd argument since "for no other kind of racism would such a narrowly-conceived" definition, which ignores "a language that embodies negative stereotypes, or of unconscious prejudicial assumptions, or of discriminatory practices, and so forth . . . be taken seriously even for a moment." Third, many simply ignore, dismiss as unimportant, or turn a blind eye to anti-Semitism. This can include the overtly anti-Semitic language used by groups like Hamas and Hezbollah in which anti-Semitism is ignored while the focus is shifted to their anti-Israel programs as criticism against Israel is indeed legitimate. It can also involve referring to terror attacks against Jews in the West as motivated by Israel, rather than anti-Semitism, despite abundant evidence of anti-Semitic ideas expressed by the terrorists.[11]

Finally, the intersectionality movement, which originated in feminist theory and has become "the dominant paradigm in many fields of study in the humanities and softer social sciences, [and] advocates treating oppressions as integrally linked" (Elman & Romirowsky, 2019: 228), has become increasingly anti-Zionist. Within this movement there is a developing "trend toward wiping the category 'liberal Zionist' off the map . . . even to the point of denying that Zionists of any kind can be feminists at all" (Brahm, 2019: 163). This has developed into a mandatory ideology in which disagreement is not permitted. "If you hold to one 'progressive' position, you've got to hold to everything else the leading progressives deem worthy of inclusion in their society. There is no room for disagreement among intersectional feminists" (Brahm, 2019: 163). There is also a trend within the movement which associates all Jews with "white privilege" and "oppression" (Brahm, 2019). Elman and Romirowsky (2019: 229) argue that this constitutes "anti-Jewish animus under the guise of anti-Zionism."[12]

This has led to a situation where Jews who identify with most aspects of the progressive movement but support Israel are ostracized. For example, in 2017 and 2018 at Chicago's "Dyke March," Jewish marchers were ejected for displaying a rainbow flag with a Jewish star, a Jewish symbol dating back to at least the twelfth century, which is also present on Israel's flag.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

> March organizers said last year in a statement that the women were ejected because they were pro-Israel while the march was explicitly anti-Zionist, and because of the Jewish star flag's "similarity to the Israeli flag and the flag's long history of use in pinkwashing efforts." Pinkwashing is a term used by critics of Israel alleging that the Israeli government touts its pro-LGBT policies in order to distract from its treatment of the Palestinians.[13]

The 2019 Washington, DC, Dyke March enacted a similar policy.[14] To place this in context, this would be akin to banning the cross because one is upset with Denmark, Finland, or Iceland, among many other countries, which have crosses on their flags.

Anti-Zionist ideologies can have practical consequences. That is, when Jews are blamed for Israel's policies, this can lead to overt discriminatory acts against Jews. This type of targeting is common on US college campuses. For example, in 2014 a pro-Palestinian organization marked the doors of many Jewish students and put paper notes on their dormitory room doors, blaming these Jewish students for Israeli policies in the conflict with the Palestinians.[15] A similar incident occurred in the dorms at Emory University in 2019, where activists posted eviction notices on the doors of Jewish students in protest against Israel's policies toward Palestinians.[16] To be clear, had these forms of protest been posted on all the doors in a dorm, this would not be singling out Jews for blame. That in both of these cases the notices were placed only on the doors of Jews signals that Jews outside of Israel are being blamed for Israel's perceived injustices. It is also a form of societal harassment and involves an implied threat in that it implicitly states, "we know who you are and where you live."

Another incident occurred at the University of California, Los Angeles, which focused on the dual loyalty trope. Rachel Beyda, a Jewish student who ran for student council, was asked by several student members whether she can be objective and not biased toward the state of Israel, simply because she is a Jew and belonged to a Jewish religious organization; that is, Rachel was asked whether she has dual loyalties. At first, the council voted against Rachel's attempt to be elected, and only after a university counselor intervened was she allowed to run for student council.[17]

In a similar incident at the University of Illinois at Champaign, the university's vice chancellor removed a Jewish student from the Campus Student Elections Commission during a discussion about divesting from Israeli companies and a debate over an Illinois Student Government resolution condemning the conflation of anti-Zionism with anti-Semitism, in which some students held up signs labeled "Free Palestine," "F— Zionists," and "F— Nazis, support Palestinians."[18] Other incidents at the university's campus between 2015 and 2020 include other incidents of Jews elected to student government being prevented from participating in the student legislation process, multiple incidents of vandalism of the university's Chabad house, anti-Semitic graffiti on campus including swastikas, rocks thrown through Jewish students' windows, and calling pro-Israel students "Nazis" and "white supremacists."[19]

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

These types of incidents are common. There have been anti-Semitic incidents at the majority of US college campuses with large Jewish populations. While the majority of these incidents take the form of classic anti-Semitism, about one-quarter of them are directly anti-Israel. However, anti-Israel incidents are more likely to show intent to harm Jewish students and staff. A study also found that the presence of anti-Israel activities and organizations on US college campuses is a strong predictor of anti-Semitic incidents on those campuses.[20]

This phenomenon is not limited to the United States. A 2019 study of young Jews (ages 16–34) in 12 European countries found that 46% had been subject to at least one anti-Semitic incident in the past 12 months. The report notes:

> Existing evidence shows that Jewish university students—especially those involved in some way in student politics—are known to be particularly susceptible to anti-Semitic harassment from their fellow students, often expressed in the form of anti-Israel discourse . . . over half of the young Jewish Europeans in this sample are students. . . . Such highly politicized university environments, often fueled by staunchly leftist political agendas, can feel acutely uncomfortable, and indeed anti-Semitic, for many of them. (O'Flahtery, 2019: 26)

In sum, several manifestations of anti-Zionism are very similar to classic anti-Semitism. The demonization of Israel is similar to the demonization of Jews in past (and current) ages (Sicher, 2011). As Johnson (2016) claimed in a report over allegations of anti-Semitism in the British Labour Party, anti-Semitism was once explained by religious, cosmopolitan, pseudo-scientific, communist, and capitalist explanations. Now, it is explained by the opposition to the right of existence of Israel. From this perspective, once, Jews were persecuted and discriminated against because of their religion. Then they were persecuted for their race. Now they are persecuted and discriminated against because of a Jewish state (Sacks, 2015: 3–44; Bergman, 2013). The empirical analysis in this chapter is intended to see whether the evidence supports this contention.

Anti-Zionism and General Social Science Theory?

It is difficult to find any academic theories or literature on the causes of anti-Zionism that fail to focus also on anti-Semitism in the time after the establishment of the state of Israel.[21] While there have been attempts to link the issue to larger issues such as racism (e.g., Marcus, 2007), the word "anti-Semitism" generally appears prominently in those discussions.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Be that as it may, if one wants to discuss the question of whether there is any general social science theory which can lend understanding to the more specific case of anti-Zionism, there are two pertinent questions. First, is there any analogous situation where an entire identity group, whether that identity is based on religion, ethnicity, nationality, race, or some other basis for identity, is held responsible across a large number of countries for the behavior or perceived behavior of a state associated with that identity group? Second, if yes, is there any social science theory which addresses this situation that can be applied to understand the link between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews? It is not the purpose of this discussion to arrive at a definitive answer on the uniqueness of anti-Zionism, but rather to evaluate how anti-Zionism as a potential cause of discrimination against Jews fits into the larger social science literature.

It is certainly possible to find examples of individuals being sanctioned or attacked due to the behavior of other members of their perceived identity group. For example, across Western countries, societal discrimination against Muslims tends to spike after terror-related activity by Muslims. This certainly happened in the United States after September 11, 2001. In another interesting example, in Australia in September 2014, hundreds of police raided dozens of locations and arrested two Muslims on terrorism charges. This led to a wave of societal discrimination against Muslims in Australia. This occurred despite the fact that no terrorist acts had been committed in this case. These acts against Muslims included vandalism, verbal abuse in public, and anti-Muslim social media comments. There were some reports of low-level physical attacks, such as a coffee cup thrown at one Muslim, and another where a baby's stroller was kicked.[22]

There is a considerable social science discussion of this phenomenon in the context of Muslims in the West. There are several theories that are applied to explain this phenomenon. The relevance of these theories toward explaining the potential link between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews varies.

The first such argument is that discrimination occurs because Muslims pose a perceived security threat. This argument is most often framed in the context of securitization theory. Securitization theory was developed at least in part to explain how liberal democratic states are able to justify actions taken against Muslims and other immigrants that on their face violate liberal norms. It was also developed to explain how leaders use scapegoating in order to enhance their political power, though the focus of this discussion is on how the theory might help explain discrimination against Jews.

Securitization theory posits that when a minority is perceived as a security threat, this can attract discrimination. Specifically, when a group or minority is perceived as an "existential threat," a process of "securitization" may occur. This process is driven by "speech acts" by leaders that "securitize" the group. This process removes policy toward the group from normal policy and transforms it into the realm of extraordinary politics (Buzan et al., 1998; Mabee, 2007; Waever, 1995, 2011). "The theory suggests that a state representative can 'securitize' an issue by invoking 'security.' 'Securitized' issues are lifted above normal ordinary politics and moved from normal to emergency politics. They are assigned an urgency that requires extraordinary measures to eliminate the threat" (Fox & Akbaba, 2015: 176). This legitimizes discriminatory actions that would be illegitimate under normal circumstances. Many argue that this is what drives policy toward Muslims in the West (Cesari, 2013; Donnelly, 2007; Gearty, 2007; Razack, 2008).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Cesari (2013) takes this a step further, arguing that discriminatory acts that have little or no connection to security are often justified when a minority is hyper-securitized. This explains some types of common forms of discrimination against Muslims in the West which in no way address security concerns. These include restrictions on halal slaughter of meat, Muslim women wearing their traditional head coverings, and the building of new mosques.

While it is difficult to argue that Jews pose a security threat in the West, it is possible to apply the classic anti-Semitic trope of accusing Jews of dual loyalties. More specifically, securitization theory posits that speech acts are used to securitize a minority and depict them as an existential threat. In this case, painting Jews as loyal to a foreign government is an analogous type of speech act which portrays Jews as a threat. Though the danger Jews are said to pose is not strictly a security threat, these alleged foreign loyalties can be presented as a form of existential threat. As is the case with the securitization of Muslims, the truth of this accusation is less relevant than whether leaders are willing to engage in speech acts which make the accusation and whether these accusations find fertile ground; that is, securitization is about perceptions, which need not have a basis in reality. In both cases, the accusations create a perceived threat which justifies discrimination. Also, it is worth noting that based on core securitization theory, these speech acts are often made by opportunistic politicians, including but not limited to populists, seeking to amass power, who do not necessarily believe the accusations they are making.

Another branch of securitization theory applies it more broadly to immigrants in the West. For example, Chebel d'Appollonia (2015: 2) argues that > since the 1990s, the categories of "new comers," "illegal immigrants," "bogus" asylum seekers, and "suspicious minorities" have been increasingly conflated in the media and general public discourse. Western governments have responded to concerns raised by the so-called new immigration (itself a euphemism for "non-European") by linking immigration policy to other high profile issues.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

While these issues include security issues like terrorism, they also include others, such as job security, drug trafficking, and other types of crime. Thus, it is arguable that all immigrants can be securitized under this rubric. If Jews are portrayed as foreign or as having dual loyalties, this can be seen as similar to the threat posed by "alien" immigrants.

This "speech act" and "securitization" process can also explain how leaders deal with Israel directly. Many leaders posit that Israel is a security threat or a threat to world peace. Multiple polls on the topic show that large numbers of people consider Israel the greatest threat to world security and world peace.[23] Setting aside how this may justify actions against Israel, to the extent that Jews are held responsible for Israel's actions, it can also securitize Jews living outside Israel.

The securitization framework, as a description of the process of how elites stigmatize Jews, is also useful to understand anti-Semitism throughout history. For example, as described in more detail in Chapter 3, in the early days of the Christian church, church leaders actively portrayed Jews as Christ killers. Their motivation at that time was at least in part to create a distinct Christian identity and to prevent Christians from leaving the church for Judaism. In time this became less of a concern, but the pattern of religious and secular elites across religions using speech acts to accuse Jews of various crimes in order to spark hatred and stigmatize Jews in order to justify discrimination against them has become a time-worn pattern.

It is clear that in both the Jewish and Muslim cases, speech acts are used to undermine the legitimacy of a minority and to justify discriminatory acts. In both cases, the minority is painted as somehow dangerous, alien, and deserving of punishment. However, the nature of the transgressions attributed to Muslims and Jews are qualitatively different. We discuss this in the context of conspiracy theories about Jews in Chapter 5. In Chapter 7 we propose expanding securitization theory beyond the issues of security and immigrants; that is, we propose using the securitization framework to address a wider array of reasons that a minority might be stigmatized using an elite-driven speech act process.

The second literature that seeks to explain discrimination against Muslims in the West focuses on threats to national culture. This type of argument focuses on protecting a national culture from perceived foreign encroachment. Muslims are seen as adhering to their foreign culture and refusing to assimilate, thereby undermining the national culture. Religion is generally recognized as a potential element of national identity (Breakwell, 1986; Little, 1995; Gurr, 1993, 2000; Horowitz, 1985; Smith, 2000). It is also linked to multiple national ideologies (Friedland, 2001: 129–130; Smith, 1999, 2000). In addition, some studies link individual religiosity and nationalism (Sorek & Cebanu, 2009; Voicu, 2011). Studies of ethnic conflict show that perceived cultural differences can result in discrimination against minority groups (Gurr, 1993, 2000; Horowitz, 1985). In fact, many compare nationalism and religion because they are both ideologies that confer exclusive identity and inspire high levels of commitment (Beit-Hallahmi, 2003: 20; Green, 2000: 70–71; Juergensmeyer, 1993).

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

This body of theory both applies and does not apply to anti-Zionism. On one hand, in most Western and European countries, Jews are considered part of the national culture and history, at least among the mainstream. For example, numerous Western and European states, including but not limited to Austria, Belgium, Germany, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, and Russia, have laws recognizing religions considered indigenous or traditional, or otherwise list those religions considered legal and legitimate. These lists include Judaism.

On the other hand, to an increasing extent, Jews are being depicted as foreign in Western countries in both far right- and left-wing circles. For example, UK Labour Party leader Jeremy Corbyn stated that Zionists "don't understand English irony." In a more blatant example, French philosopher Alain Finkielkraut, who is Jewish, was verbally assaulted by yellow vest protesters. The verbal attacks included "dirty Zionist [expletive deleted]" "go back to Tel Aviv" and "we are the French people, France is ours."[24] Incidentally, the hypocrisy of, on one hand, questioning the legitimacy of Jews having a state while in the same breath telling a Jew who has lived in France all of his life to go "back" to that state is inescapable.

Be that as it may, as discussed earlier, the anti-Zionist motivation for discrimination against Jews outside of Israel works through the mechanism of depicting Jews as foreign or somehow illegitimately loyal to Israel, or otherwise responsible or complicit in its behavior. From this perspective, all Jews are linked to this foreign power and, with perhaps the exception of those Jews who publicly denounce that foreign power, are complicit (though, as noted previously, there are some who would still consider these Jewish Israel-denouncers complicit). Thus, they pose a threat to the nation, though not the culture because there is no hint of a refusal to accept cultural norms, unless one considers anti-Zionism a cultural norm. In contrast, Muslims are perceived to pose a cultural threat precisely because they are seen as not subscribing to the cultural norms of the West.

Consequently, when applied to anti-Zionism, the securitization and the protection of national culture explanations merge. In both cases, Jews are stigmatized as loyal to a foreign power that is seen as illegitimate and even evil through elite speech acts. From both of these perspectives, Jews are seen as a threat, and the threat is not precisely a security threat, nor is it precisely due to cultural differences between Jews and other Westerners. Rather, from these perspectives, the threat is based on foreign-ness and having dual loyalties, a classic anti-Semitic trope.

A third potentially analogous phenomenon is also related to perceived foreign threats. There are numerous specific incidents where states involved in a conflict mistreat those perceived as being associated with the enemy state. A classic example of this phenomenon was the internment of US Japanese citizens during World War II. However, these cases are rarely persistent over long periods of time and tend to be limited to a single country or a small number of countries involved in a conflict; that is, they tend to be local responses to specific and usually local events during limited periods of time. While resentments can persist after the conflict, they tend to fade over time unless the conflict itself persists or reignites. Thus, this type of case does not provide a good basis for understanding the dynamics of anti-Zionism and discrimination.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

A fourth body of theory used to explain discrimination against Muslims in the West is Samuel Huntington's "clash of civilizations" theory. Huntington (1993a, 1996) predicted that after the end of the Cold War most conflict would be between different civilizations. He divided the world into the Western, Slavic-Orthodox, Sino-Confucian, Islamic, Hindu, Japanese, Latin American, Buddhist, and African civilizations. He also predicted that conflict between the Islamic and Western civilizations would be particularly intense and violent. Huntington (1996: 252–254; 2000) specifically applies this theory to domestic conflict.[25] In fact, he argues that international conflicts are "a small, and possibly quite unrepresentative, sample of the violent conflicts in the world" (Huntington, 2000: 609). Thus his theory is easily applied as an explanation for discrimination against Muslim minorities in the West.[26]

It is difficult to apply this body of theory to Jews in the West for two reasons. First, Huntington (1996: 48) states, "Judaism clearly is not a major civilization. . . . It is historically affiliated with both Christianity and Islam, and for several centuries Jews maintained their cultural identity within Western, Orthodox, and Islamic civilizations." Second, most studies on Huntington's theory which assign Israel a civilization consider it part of the West. While Israel may be associated with the West, especially in the perceptions of many Muslims, Jewish minorities in Muslim-majority countries are generally considered indigenous.

Finally, there are at least two other examples of states considered illegitimate in world politics. Taiwan is considered by China to be part of China and therefore illegitimate. Many states do not recognize Taiwan, though this seems to be largely due to a desire to maintain good relations with China, a country that is a major world power. The Turkish government in Cyprus is recognized only by Turkey and is not recognized by any other country. Yet in neither of these cases does this illegitimacy lead to worldwide discrimination against either Taiwanese or Turks.

There is also no shortage of countries across the world that objectively violate human rights and other accepted international norms. Yet, it is difficult to think of any other case where an entire identity group is consistently, across dozens of countries, held responsible for the actions or perceived actions, much less the perceived illegitimacy, of a single state. For example, the concept of holding any random ethnic Russian responsible for the policies of Vladimir Putin's Russia seems ludicrous. Holding all ethnic Chinese responsible for the actions taken by China in Tibet or more recently against the Uyghur Muslims seems similarly farfetched. Yet synagogues across the world are regularly attacked and defaced by perpetrators who specifically state that their motivation is Israel's behavior. This is particularly interesting because most synagogues have no formal association with Israel, and most who attend synagogues outside of Israel are not Israeli. In the eyes of the perpetrators, being Jewish is enough. That being said, as we will see from the following evidence, it is likely that many of these societal attacks on Jews have motivations other than or in addition to anti-Zionism.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

In sum, some of the social science literature which explains discrimination can be applied to map the dynamics or mechanism that links anti-Zionism to discrimination against Jews, particularly securitization theory and theories which focus on associating minorities with foreign threats. Yet, the anti-Zionist motivation for discrimination is distinct from how these theories apply to other minorities in both cases due to the exact nature of the perceived threat, and in that a single identity group is tied globally to the perceived injustices perpetrated by the actions taken by a single state, and even to that state's existence.

Testing the Influence of Anti-Zionist Behavior and Sentiment on SRD and GRD

This study does not strictly measure anti-Zionism. Anti-Zionism is a multi-faceted and complex phenomenon that would be difficult to properly capture without a multi-country data-collection effort using a large battery of variables.

However, this study can measure anti-Israel government behavior and anti-Israel attitudes in society, which we argue provide good surrogate variables for the phenomenon we'd prefer to measure. More specifically, it measures societal attitudes toward Israel and Palestine, as well as how the government voted on Israel-related resolutions in the UN General Assembly between 1990 and 2014. Because many states abstain or fail to vote, we measure both the percentage of times a state votes in favor of Israel and the percentage of times it voted against Israel.[27] We also use polling data from the ADL Global 100 survey on what percentage of a country's population holds both anti-Israel and pro-Palestine views. For more details on these variables and the multivariate tests, see Appendix A.

As shown in Table 4.1, the results are mixed. Anti-Israel UN voting causes higher levels of GRD, but only in Christian majority countries.[28] This is logical because Muslim-majority countries nearly uniformly vote against Israel in the UN General Assembly. It is a known statistical reality that if a variable shows no

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Table 4.1 UN Voting on Israel and Views on Israel and Palestine as Causes of SRD and GRD

| Cause of Discrimination | Societal Discrimination | Government-Based Discrimination |
|---|---|---|
| UN voting | | |
| Anti-Israel | Less discrimination | More discrimination in Christian-majority countries; no influence in Muslim-majority countries |
| Pro-Israel | No influence | No influence |
| Views of country's population | | |
| % Israel unfavorable | No influence | More discrimination |
| % Palestine favorable | More discrimination (weak result) | More discrimination |

The full multivariate analyses represented in this table are presented in Appendix A.

variation (that is, it is basically the same for all cases) it will not correlate with another variable. It is sort of like predicting that only people who breathe oxygen will be anti-Semites. As all humans need to breathe oxygen to live, this prediction is technically true, but it does not in practice discern who is and who is not an anti-Semite.

The results for SRD are perplexing. Anti-Israel UN General Assembly voting predicts less SRD.[29] We would expect the opposite. This is likely because a small number of countries which vote most often in favor of Israel in the United Nations—Australia, Canada, and the United States—also have relatively high levels of SRD against Jews.

An interesting aspect of these results is that while anti-Israel UN General Assembly voting influences both types of discrimination, pro-Israel voting does not. This means that supporting Israel is not necessarily a sign of favoritism toward Jews, but siding against it in the international political arena does have an influence, albeit a mixed one where SRD decreases but GRD increases.

The results for the ADL global 100 polling data are more straightforward. Higher levels of anti-Israel[30] and pro-Palestine[31] views in a country lead to more GRD. However, the results only weakly predict SRD and only on the Palestine-favorable variable.[32] This result is sufficiently weak that many would not consider it a statistically significant result.

We discuss the implications of these results in the following.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

Conclusions

It is unlikely that anti-Zionism is the primary motivation for SRD. The ADL Global 100 variables which measure societal views on Israel show a weak, at best, connection between anti-Israel views and with SRD. UN voting by a country shows that anti-Israel government behavior is associated with lower SRD. This implies that even when those engaging in SRD against Jews in some manner communicate that they are doing so for anti-Zionist or anti-Israel reasons, other motivations are likely involved. Thus, at least in the case of SRD, saying that activities are motivated by Israel's behavior is likely a cover for other motivations for discriminating against Jews.

However, anti-Israel views are more strongly associated with GRD, as is anti-Israel UN voting, but only among Christian-majority countries for the latter. This is likely through two mechanisms. First, politicians respond to attitudes in society, and one of their responses to anti-Israel attitudes is GRD against Jews. Second, the attitudes of the politicians themselves may reflect those of their constituents.

We posit that both of these mechanisms influence GRD and that, at least during the study period of 1990–2014, anti-Zionist motivations for GRD are mostly an elite phenomenon. This is not to say that there is no anti-Zionism among non-elites, but rather it only translates to discrimination when elites are involved. If non-elite societal actors motivated by anti-Zionism were commonly directly involved in discrimination against Jews, we would see a stronger link between societal anti-Israel attitudes and SRD against Jews. However, when these attitudes are present, policymakers seem to be more willing to translate societal sentiments into government policy discriminating against Jews. Thus, while societal anti-Zionism does have an influence on GRD, it is likely mediated through elites.

If we rely on the concept that speech acts by elites are used to stigmatize Jews as complicit in Israel's perceived sins, as is posited by the modified version of securitization theory we discuss in this chapter, this brings anti-Zionist motivations for discrimination against Jews even further into the realm of elites. If this theory is accurate, societal anti-Zionist attitudes are to a great extent a result of the same process that causes GRD. That is, elite speech acts both mobilize anti-Zionist attitudes and justify the discriminatory policies of the government. Thus, the link between the two, to the extent that it exists, is that both anti-Israel attitudes and discrimination against Jews are at least in part a consequence of elite actions and decisions.

This complex relationship between anti-Zionism and discrimination against Jews is not surprising. This is because anti-Zionism is itself complex. It can involve criticism of Israel's behavior, as well as opposition to the state's existence.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

It can overlap with a wide range of political ideologies of both the left and the right. It often involves the use of anti-Semitic tropes that migrated from more classical anti-Semitism, a topic we discuss in more detail in Chapter 5. It can also be a cover for other types of anti-Semitism. Thus, while the measures used in this chapter are intended to measure the extent of anti-Israel sentiment and government policy in a country, in practice this involves tapping into a far more complex phenomenon.

It is also important to reiterate that the empirical portion of this chapter does not measure anti-Zionism directly. Rather, it measures attitudes in a society toward Israel and Palestine and how a country's government votes in the United Nations. This means that, irrespective of whether anti-Israel attitudes, pro-Palestine attitudes, or a country's UN voting record constitutes or is somehow influenced by anti-Zionism, these phenomena are strongly correlated with GRD—government-based discrimination against Jews. These results also remain valid whether or not there is any link between anti-Israel sentiment and anti-Israel UN voting, on one hand, and anti-Zionism or anti-Semitism, on the other. As we discuss in more detail in Chapter 7, this has considerable implications for our understanding of both anti-Semitism and anti-Zionism and their influence on the treatment of Jews worldwide.

Downloaded from https://academic.oup.com/book/39979/chapter/340295066 by University of Sydney user on 30 June 2025

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-10"
annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach
dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

About us Board & Staff Programs
Movements Children Safety & Policies Resources

AZYC Building Strong Communiti

Australasian Zionist Youth Council the Roof Body For Australia and New Zealand's Zionist youth movements

ABOUT THE MOVEMENTS ABOUT AZYC

9

1869

307
Volunteers

7
Different Cities

607

The Movements

HOW TO SIGN UP FOR SHNAT

Shnat Hachshara is a year long educational and leadership program that is run for school leavers by each AZYC movement! The linked forms below may be in addition to forms required by each movement. More information about each Shnat program can be found here.

Partners

Site Map

610

Contact us

306 Hawthorn Rd, Caulfield South, VIC 3162

(03) 9272 5678

exec.officer@azyc.com.au

About us
Board & Staff
Programs
Movements
Children Safety & Policies
Parents
AZYC Constitution

2023 AZYC. All Right Reserved. Website By Omni Online

Movements

Betar

Activities in Victoria, New South Wales and Queensland

Betar is a worldwide Zionist Jewish youth movement. Betar Australia has independent Maozim in Melbourne, Sydney and Brisbane, all of which unite for camps each year. In Betar, we strive to create a fun atmosphere for our chanichim, aiding in their social and personal development with high quality role models. We maintain a strong emphasis on core ethical values. Our activities instil a sense of Jewish identity through the unique Jewish community that Betar supports. We affirm all streams of Judaism, catering to all of them at our camps and functions. Furthermore, we teach our chanichim about the importance of Zionism as well as Israeli history, culture and contemporary politics. Betar has a keen focus on hasbarah and is active in Pro-Zionist events on university campuses and information sessions for the Jewish community. Betar runs regular activities across all three states and we would love for you to get involved. Please click here for contact details of your local state representative.

CONTACT:

Hannah Mendels

Email: australia@betar.org.au

Hineni

Activities in Melbourne and Sydney

Hineni is an Australian-born Jewish youth movement. The movement fosters a warm and dynamic culture of education, individuality and fun. Our movement is ideologically based on Modern-Orthodoxy, Political activism and Zionism. Our approach to learning is a pluralist and open-minded one, whilst being grounded in a traditional, Modern Orthodox atmosphere. Hineni is a place where young people from all backgrounds can come together to strengthen their Jewish identity. In Sydney, the movement is affiliated with The Central Synagogue and this is where we run most of our events and activities. In Melbourne, Hineni is supported by and based at Caulfield Hebrew Congregation. Hineni also has a strong presence in Canberra, where we run events at the Canberra Jewish Community Centre. We invite all Jewish youth to come to Hineni for a uniquely inclusive atmosphere, a critical understanding of the world around them, long lasting friendships and a sense of true self confidence.

CONTACT:

Jasmine Harrison

Email: rosh@hineni.org.au

Hashy

Activities in Melbourne

Hashomer Hatzair, also known as Hashy, is a secular humanist Jewish, Zionist and socialist youth movement that provides informal education to young Jewish people aged 8-18 through weekly educational programs, seminars, biannual camps, and community events. Founded in 1913 in Galicia, Austria-Hungary, Hashomer Hatzair came into being as a result of the merger of two groups, Hashomer (“The Guard”) a Zionist scouting group, and Ze’irei Zion (“The Youth of Zion”) which was an ideological circle that studied Zionism, left wing socialism and Jewish history. Hashomer Hatzair is the oldest Zionist youth movement still in existence. In 1953 Hashomer Hatzair was established in Australia as a break away from Habonim Dror. The movement thrived in the Jewish communities of Melbourne and Sydney, however the ken (branch) in Sydney closed due to a lack of members as a result of many of the bogrim (leaders) making aliyah. In Melbourne, the ken is known as Bet Anielewicz, named after Warsaw ghetto uprising fighter and movement member Mordechai Anielewicz.

CONTACT:

Email: merakez@hashyaus.org

Habonim Dror

Activities in Australia in Melbourne, Sydney and Perth | Activities in New Zealand in Auckland, Wellington and Christchurch.

Habonim Dror is a Jewish, Socialist-Zionist youth movement that operates throughout Australia and New Zealand, as well as all around the world. We strive to take responsibility for the Jewish People, Israeli society and the world. Through critically analysing the world around us, we strive to empower the youth, providing them with the ability to develop a meaningful Jewish, Zionist identity that exists in all spheres of life, which is to be used to improve oneself, the Jewish people and the wider world. The unique atmosphere created in the movement has ensured we are one of the largest Jewish youth organisations in Australia. Our vision for the Jewish people and for humanity is one in which all people understand the power of personal freedom, the importance of equality of human value (shivyon erech ha'adam), and the value of friendship, culture and community. We want to play our part in creating a world in which all people explore their identity, express their creativity, fight for morality and strive to improve society through critical analysis and communal teamwork. As a Jewish youth movement we believe that our contribution to this world picture should come through educating today's youth through the lens of the principles of Socialist-Zionism.

CONTACT:

Aaron Lemberg – Australia
Email: mazkir@hdoz.com

Rotem Einhar – New Zealand
Email: mazkirut@habo.org.nz

VISIT AUSTRALIA'S SITE

VISIT NEW ZEALAND SITE

Bnei Akiva

Activities in Melbourne, Sydney, Perth, Auckland and Wellington

Bnei Akiva is the largest Zionist Youth Movement in the world. Running activities for over 45,000 young Jews in 34 different countries, it provides a unique framework for the young Religious Zionist community, imbuing the ideals of Torah V'Avodah. This ideology combines an unwavering commitment to full Torah observance, coupled with the recognition that we have an obligation to actively involve ourselves in society. The maxim "Am Yisrael b'Eretz Yisrael al pi Torat Yisrael" – "The Jewish Nation living in the Land of Israel according to the Torah of Israel", pithily sums up the movement's ideals. Only through Aliyah, the highest form of Zionist expression, can the Torah be fully kept.

For more information about Bnei Akiva Australia and its activities, please visit their website: www.bneiakiva.com.au

For more information about Bnei Akiva New Zealand and its activities, please visit their website: www.bneiakiva.org.nz

CONTACT:

Dina Zeimer – Australia

Email: federal@bneiakiva.com.au

Noga Malal – New Zealand

Email: merakez@bneiakiva.org.nz

Netzer

Activities in Melbourne, Sydney and Perth

Netzer Australia is a Progressive Jewish and Reform Zionist Youth Movement. Founded in Melbourne in 1979, Netzer Olami today has 18 sniffim internationally and is an affiliate of the World Union for Progressive Judaism. Netzer facilitates immersive, informal education for chanichim/ot with a focus on our ideology and values in Tikkun Olam and social justice, intentionality and informed decision making. Netzer Australia is run by skilled volunteer youth leaders (Madrichim) of university age who have completed intensive leadership training and education on Shnat Netzer and Tzmicha (a year 13 program). Netzer Australia has programming in Melbourne, Sydney and Perth who meet regularly as well as leaders in Canberra and Adelaide. HaShoresh, Our Roots, is a Netzer House based in Melbourne in which federal seminars, monthly kabbalat shabbat services and regular community events take place.

CONTACT:

Georgie Davis + Jasmine Stern

Email: federal@netzer.org.au

Hatzofim

Activities in Melbourne, Sydney, and small Israeli communities in Australia and New Zealand.

HaTzofim Australia is a branch of the Israeli Scouts youth movement. HaTzofim youth movement involves thousands of teenagers in Israel and around the world. Its programme gives the opportunity for every child and teenager to gain leadership skills and to integrate and take a meaningful part in Israeli society and the Jewish communities around the world. HaTzofim Australia have been active since 2013, with two operating branches “Shvatim”; Melbourne’s Shevet Onnot, and Sydney’s Shevet Shahar with a new Shevet opening in the Eastern Suburbs in 2023. We also run activities for the Israeli communities across Australia. We meet every Sunday and run activities in Hebrew which are centred around Israel and Israeli culture, leadership, Zionism, environment, friendship, current events and community values. We also experience scouting, hiking, camps and community events. Our activities start from year 3 to year 12. During year 8 and year 9 the youth participate in our Hadracha and Leadership Course and later becoming ‘Shachbag’, Madrichim.

CONTACT:

Mia Rom

Email: Hatzofimau@israelscouts.org

CatZ

Activities in Canberra

The AYZC collaborate with its participating movements to create a presence within the Canberra Jewish community through Canberra’s Jewish Pluralist Zionist Youth Movement, CATZ, Based out of the ACT Jewish Community Centre.

CONTACT:

Charlotte Freedman and Mia Kline

Email: catz.canberra@gmail.com

LEARN MORE

620

JAZY

Activities in Adelaide

JAZY is Adelaide's only Jewish youth movement that exists to enable every Jewish child in Adelaide the opportunity to attend a completely pluralist movement. JAZY has three main values;

1. Educating our chanich about all streams of Judaism and Zionism so that they can have a better understanding of their Jewish world as well as allowing them to develop the means to communicate with everybody in the Jewish community. We also value educating our chanich about Israel and Tikkun Olam as well as political and world issues to equip them with the knowledge and abilities they need to be global citizens.

2. Connecting the small group of Adelaide's Jewish youth with one another, and with the greater Jewish youth movement community. Providing our chanich with these opportunities to connect and relate to one another's experiences and more importantly, to form lifelong friendships is very important.

3. Equipping our chanich with the tools and supports they need to form their own Jewish identities.

CONTACT:

Oz Wittles

Email: jazy.adel@gmail.com

LEARN MORE

(03) 9272 5678

exec.officer@azyc.com.au

Children Safety & Policies

Parents

AZYC Constitution

2023 AZYC. All Right Reserved. Website By Omni Online

OUR CORE VALUES

OUR MISSION

Moriah College aspires to achieve excellent academic standards by promoting the intellectual, spiritual, moral, social and physical development of the students. We strive to foster critical thought, cultural interests, tolerance, social responsibility and self-discipline. The total development of all our students remains our overall concern – helping them to proudly realise their full potential as Jews, and as Australians.

Moriah not only aspires to achieve excellence in academic standards, but maintains and promotes among its students an awareness of and a feeling for Jewish traditions and ethics, an understanding of and a positive commitment to Orthodox Judaism and identification with and love for Israel. Moriah creates a stimulating and caring environment for each student, provides a rich Jewish social and cultural experience and offers wide-ranging support services for its students, including support programs for children with special needs and careers information and advice.

Moriah College is an independent, co-educational Modern Orthodox Zionist Jewish school, which prides itself on providing the highest standard of Jewish education.

a

a

Request a Tour

About Masada College.

Established in 1966, Masada College is a leading Jewish co-educational institution serving students from Early Learning Centre to Year 12. As the only Jewish school on Sydney's North Shore, we maintain a distinctive position in the educational landscape while upholding our vision of academic excellence combined with strong Jewish values.

Our leafy, green campus provides an ideal balance between personalised attention and comprehensive opportunities. The beautiful tree-lined grounds create a peaceful learning environment that encourages both academic focus and community connection.

Academically, Masada College consistently ranks among the top schools in New South Wales, with HSC results regularly placing our students in the highest achievement bands. Our curriculum integrates the NSW educational standards with Jewish studies, Hebrew language, and programs that foster entrepreneurial thinking and real-world skills.

The college is structured into three divisions: Early Learning Centre (ages 2-5), Junior School (Kindergarten to Year 6), and Senior School (Years 7-12).

624

Our core Jewish values of Derech Eretz (respect and decency), Kavod (honour) and Chesed (compassion) form the foundation of our educational approach. These principles, together with a strong Zionist ethos, guide our teaching practices, behavioural expectations, and community interactions.

Masada College maintains formal accreditation with the NSW Education Standards Authority (NESA). Our global outlook is strengthened through partnerships with international Jewish schools and educational institutions, including our collaborative work with Harvard University's Project Zero research team.

Governance is provided by a Board of Directors comprised of community leaders, alumni, and parent representatives who bring a diverse skills matrix to oversee strategic direction while preserving our mission and values.

Established in 1966, Masada College is a Jewish co-educational school from preschool to Year 12 on Sydney's North Shore. Every Masada student is valued and nurtured to reach their full potential.

Our approach is to enhance a premium academic program with a focus on fostering the values, dispositions and behaviours that empower young people to excel at school and in their futures.

Masada students are resilient, determined, courageous, and empathetic with an ability to work with others and a desire to contribute to their community and society.

Our Jewish core values of Derech Eretz (conducting oneself with respect and decency), Kavod (showing respect to others) and Chesed (emphasising compassion and generosity), is integrated into all aspects of school life, developing a strong and positive mindset within each student.

Our core Jewish values of Derech Eretz (respect and decency), Kavod (honour) and Chesed (compassion) form the foundation of our educational approach. These principles, together with a strong Zionist ethos, guide our teaching practices, behavioural expectations, and community interactions.

Masada College maintains formal accreditation with the NSW Education Standards Authority (NESA). Our global outlook is strengthened through partnerships with international Jewish schools and educational institutions, including our collaborative work with Harvard University's Project Zero research team.

Governance is provided by a Board of Directors comprised of community leaders, alumni, and parent representatives who bring a diverse skills matrix to oversee strategic direction while preserving our mission and values.

Contact Us Today

Discover how Masada College can inspire curiosity and unlock the limitless potential in your child.

Enquire Now

Hebrew Curriculum.

Hebrew learning at Masada is delivered by highly qualified and experienced teachers who bring exceptional expertise to our program. Our HSC students have a strong history of consistently performing at the top of the state in both Modern and Classical Hebrew, reflecting the academic excellence that defines our Hebrew studies. This outstanding performance is supported by our vibrant Israeli demographic community, which provides regular exposure to authentic Hebrew language and culture throughout the school day.

As a proud Zionist school, our love of Israel is central to our identity, and Hebrew holds special significance as the language of our homeland. Beyond its contemporary importance, we maintain a deep reverence for the study of ancient texts and biblical literature. Older students who choose to pursue this pathway have the opportunity to engage with these foundational sources of Jewish wisdom as an elective option, while all students encounter texts within our broader Jewish academic studies.

Hebrew is a vibrant part of life at Masada College, infused into every aspect of our campus. We have a dynamic community of native Hebrew speakers, with Israeli students receiving extended Hebrew language learning. Hebrew can be heard throughout the school from the classroom to the playground, creating an immersive environment where language learning happens naturally. Hebrew learning at Masada is integral to the curriculum from ELC right through to Year 12, fostering both linguistic competence and cultural connection.

Jewish Holidays & Commemorative Days.

Jewish holidays and commemorative days hold a cherished place at Masada College, allowing students the opportunity to take an active role in our assemblies and celebrating key moments in the Jewish calendar. Our informal Jewish Life team provides dynamic, experiential programmes that complement formal learning. We celebrate Chaggim with joy and community spirit, marking festivals such as Purim, Pesach, Shavuot, Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot, and Chanukah. We gather to remember Yom HaShoah and Yom Hazikaron, culminating in a global celebration of Israel's birthday on Yom Ha'atzmaut. These experiences foster a deep pride in Jewish identity within our multicultural Australia and strengthen our connection to Israel.

Masada College

Masada College

Request a Tour

Our Jewish Ethos.

We actively encourage and embrace families from all Jewish backgrounds, traditions, and levels of observance at Masada College.

Recognising that our diversity is one of our greatest strengths, our students learn about the richness of Jewish heritage in all its forms, exploring the various ways Jewish families express their faith and culture.

Masada College creates an inclusive environment where every family feels valued and every child can thrive, underpinned by traditional halachic observance and enduring Jewish values.

We believe that what unites us as a Jewish community far outweighs what might distinguish us, and this shared foundation allows us to grow together whilst honouring our individual journeys.

We actively encourage and embrace families from all Jewish backgrounds, traditions, and levels of observance at Masada College.

Recognising that our diversity is one of our greatest strengths, our students learn about the richness of Jewish heritage in all its forms, exploring the various ways Jewish families express their faith and culture.

Masada College creates an inclusive environment where every family feels valued and every child can thrive, underpinned by traditional halachic observance and enduring Jewish values.

We believe that what unites us as a Jewish community far outweighs what might distinguish us, and this shared foundation allows us to grow together whilst honouring our individual journeys.

Our Jewish Values.

Our students represent a wide range of Australian Jewish life and are embraced by our close-knit community. We are committed to providing our students with a strong foundation of Jewish education, and a deep understanding of the values that have been the cornerstones of our faith for thousands of years.

Through a combination of formal and experiential learning, our Jewish Life Department inspires students to explore their heritage, deepen their understanding of diverse expressions of Judaism, and actively discover and celebrate their Jewish identities while making Judaism their own with pride through practice, community involvement, and social action.

From ELC through to senior school, our students' Jewish journey is marked by many special milestone events, such as Shabbat experiences, Siddur presentations, Shtetl performances, and much more. Torah and Zionism lie at the heart of our spiritual and cultural foundation, guiding our approach to learning, leadership, and community.

impact on the world.

Our Vision.

Cultivating Minds, Nurturing Souls

At Masada College, we cultivate a Growth-Oriented, Innovative, and Immersive Learning Culture in Jewish life.

We inspire students to take root like sturdy trees, embracing Jewish traditions and values, and making Judaism their own, thriving in their growth and fostering an everlasting bond with the land and people of Israel.

Our educators, like dedicated gardeners, provide essential care and guidance, nurturing not only Jewish knowledge but also middot/character and values, fortifying the roots of a strong, united community. We instill a sense of communal and global responsibility, guiding each individual to be a beacon of light unto the nations, driven to make a positive impact on the world.

As these young trees grow into mighty oaks, they will stand tall, bearing fruit and nurturing the next generation. Together, they will form a flourishing orchard, a testament to the enduring legacy of Masada College: where roots run deep, future leaders flourish and goodness truly makes greatness!

> “
>
> We cater to Jewish children of all backgrounds, allowing students to explore and develop their own Jewish identity.

Contact Us Today

Discover how Masada College can inspire curiosity and unlock the limitless potential in your child.

Enquire Now

Our College

Scopus Mission Statement and Values
Scopus Horizons
History and Heritage
Governance
Leadership
Child Safeguarding

Our Child Safe Culture
Do you have a child safety concern?

School Performance Information
College Calendar
College Services
Working at Scopus
Privacy Policy
College Policies

Scopus Mission Statement and Values

Chazak V'Ematz - חזק ואמץ

— Be strong and of good courage

Mission Statement

Within a proud Modern Orthodox and Zionist framework, Mount Scopus students learn and lead with menschlechkeit, integrity and purpose. With a strong Jewish identity the College cultivates academic excellence, holistic development and community service.

Within our mission statement, we aim to:

- Promote excellence in learning and academic achievement by means of inquiry and critical thinking and by creating a desire for lifelong learning
- Enable holistic development for all students by offering a wide range of activities, inside and outside of the classroom
- Provide Jewish learning, values and experiences, within a Modern Orthodox and Zionist framework, that enable each student to make an informed choice as to the meaning of their Jewish identity
- Develop the notions of community and service by engendering values, knowledge and skills so that students can play their full part in their communities – as members of the College, as Jews, as Australians and as citizens of the world.

---

Mount Scopus Memorial College aims to provide a high-quality schooling to all of its students,

- that is free from discrimination based on gender, sexual orientation, health, disability, race and socioeconomic background;
- that is underpinned by respectful relationships between all members of the school community;
- that takes place in an environment that is supportive and engaging for all school community members.

Our Mission is underpinned by our Values of:

- Integrity: We are true to ourselves and respectful to each other. We are honest. We have courage to do what is right even when it is hard. We live our values.
- Compassion: We show empathy to understand others' situations, emotions, and perspectives. We endeavour to assist in the fulfilment of the needs of others. We act on our feelings of empathy and show compassion and forgiveness.
- Inclusion: We create a caring and respectful environment where people feel connected and know they matter. People are valued for what they say, how they think. We honour the varied perspectives, circumstances and experiences of everyone in our community.
- Curiosity: We have a passion for asking questions. We are open minded as we explore our learning which we see as a life long journey. We are encouraged to wonder, question, dream and think deeply.

As an IB school, the College is bound by the Mission Statement of the International Baccalaureate Organisation:

The International Baccalaureate Organisation aims to develop inquiring, knowledgeable and caring young people who help to create a better and more peaceful world through intercultural understanding and respect.

Our Values

To this end the IBO works with schools, governments and international organisations to develop challenging programmes of international education and rigorous assessment.

These programmes encourage students across the world to become active, compassionate and lifelong learners who understand that other people, with their differences, can also be right.

The College supports and promotes the principles and practice of Australian democracy, including

- elected government
- the rule of law
- equal rights for all before the law
- freedom of religion
- freedom of speech and association; and
- the values of openness and tolerance

opus Memorial College is a organisation and has a zero rance for child abuse.

nowledge the traditional ns of the land on which our is situated and we pay our o the Wurundjeri elders both past and present.

GANDEL CAMPUS

Main Reception
(03) 9834 0000

Lew Family Secondary School
(03) 8888 8500

Smorgon Family Primary School
(03) 9834 0100

Enrolments
(03) 9834 0070

GANDEL BESEN HOUSE CAMPUS

(03) 9900 4600

FINK KARP IVANY CAMPUS

(03) 8554 4700

© 2025 Digistorm

Site By Digistorm

About Bialik

Our Campus & Facilities

Alan Finkel Launch Lab

Gringlas Sports Centre

Genia Janover Learning Centre

Yoga for Kids

BK's Gymnastics

Maccabi Aquatics

Soccerwise

Our Leaders & Teachers

Senior Leadership Team

About Bialik College

When your child is a Bialik College student they are welcomed into a vibrant Jewish community school where children of all ages grow together on one campus.

We pride ourselves on nurturing the emotional, social and spiritual needs of each child within an inclusive Jewish ethos and caring family environment.

Our school has a strong Zionist ethos and an inclusive, pluralist approach that teaches the full spectrum of Jewish identity. This gives them the confidence to contribute meaningfully to the Jewish, Australian and global communities.

Bialik's RIPER values – Respect, Integrity, Perseverance, Empathy and Responsibility – are central to our mission.

Bialik College instils a lifelong love of learning among our students, and we have attained a reputation for academic excellence which is jewish school embracing the entire jewish community regardless of affiliation or practice."

636

— Jeremy Stowe-Lindner, Principal

How we learn and grow together

Bialik College is a pluralist Zionist Jewish school, embracing an inclusive approach to Judaism. Our ethos, which includes aspects from all streams of Judaism, closely mirrors the rich mosaic of Jewish identity in Melbourne.

All students attend one campus in Hawthorn, where they learn and grow together. This creates a close-knit community of students from as young as 3 months in the Children's Centre, and 3 to 18 years in the Genia Janover Learning Building and Main School.

Most Bialik College students live in the Caulfield and Elsternwick, many travelling to school on public transport or Bialik buses.

ADDRESS
429 Auburn Rd Hawthorn VIC 3122

CONTACT US
Early Learning Centre:
(03) 9822 4599

637

We also acknowledge the Elders of the Bialik community who, in 1942 – a time of tragedy and horror for the Jewish people and for so many others around the world – visioned and developed Bialik College as a new type of schooling for the youngest members of our community.

© 2025 Bialik College

site by Digistorm

Our Campus & Facilities

Alan Finkel Launch Lab

Gringlas Sports Centre

Genia Janover Learning Centre

Yoga for Kids

BK's Gymnastics

Maccabi Aquatics

Soccerwise

Our Leaders & Teachers

Senior Leadership Team

Governance, Council and Annual Report

Child Safety & Wellbeing

Our Ethos

Jewish Life

Rosenkranz Centre for Excellence and Achievement

Jewish Life

Jewish Life at Bialik is interwoven into every facet of the school, whether on camp, in the classroom or curriculum or at assemblies.

The Mifgash, Hebrew for "Meeting Place" (Centre for Jewish Life), beats like the heart of Bialik, providing a dynamic experiential and interactive environment in which the Jewish, Zionist and personal identity of our students can grow and develop. This is a place where everyone belongs and is made to feel at home. Our Informal Jewish Educators run experiential, values-based lessons and interactive learning programs focusing on a range of themes from student leadership and personal development to our connection with modern day Israel.

Shabbatonim, festivals and commemorations receive special attention at Bialik. The journey of exploration begins with model Kabbalat Shabbat in the ELC, which develops right into Primary School. By upper Primary and into Middle School our students experience first-hand a genuine Shabbat experience through our Shabbatonim (weekend retreats).

Our Campus & Facilities

Alan Finkel Launch Lab

Gringlas Sports Centre

Genia Janover Learning Centre

Yoga for Kids

BK's Gymnastics

Maccabi Aquatics

Soccerwise

Our Leaders & Teachers

Senior Leadership Team

Governance, Council and Annual Report

Child Safety & Wellbeing

Our Ethos

Jewish Life

Rosenkranz Centre for Excellence and Achievement

All Year 7 students participate in the year-long B'nei Mitzvah program, which emphasises community responsibility and social action and culminates in a combined B'nei Mitzvah ceremony. Bar-and Bat-Mitzvah lessons are offered free of charge as part of the College's Jewish Studies' program.

Jewish Curriculum

The Jewish Studies curriculum embraces pluralistic narratives and ethical teachings of the Torah and emphasises Jewish values like Tikkun Olam ('healing the world') and Chessed (kindness) throughout the College. The three principles of Educate, Participate and Donate are central to the ongoing activities which mark the Jewish Life programs. Jewish Studies at Bialik develops the skills, knowledge and values essential for students to become active members across our Jewish community

At both Year 11 and Year 12 levels, students may enrol for ELECTIVE and SPECIALIST AREAS OF JEWISH STUDIES such as Hebrew, Global Politics (which focuses on modern Israel studies) and Religion and Society.

Hebrew Language

Since its earliest days, Bialik's mantra for teaching Hebrew has been Ivrit B'Ivrit – or Hebrew in Hebrew. Learning Hebrew is an immersive experience for students and is an essential part of the curriculum from Bialik Children's Centre up to Year 8, with a substantial number of students continuing to study Hebrew for their VCE. As a Hebrew School, Bialik boasts an outstanding tradition of regularly obtaining the state's top VCE Hebrew results and the highest number of graduates of any school undertaking Hebrew studies in VCE.

At Bialik, Hebrew is believed to be the living, breathing language of the Jewish people and it can be heard around the campus regularly. Every ELC classroom has a Hebrew speaking educator and in the Primary School, Hebrew words and conversation are introduced into daily College life, a complement to the comprehensive formal curriculum. An opt-in, bilingual Hebrew Immersion program operates in Years 4 and 5 at Primary School level. In Middle School our Heb-J program allows students to elect to undertake additional classes taught in Hebrew beyond their regular Hebrew lessons. Learning Hebrew is optional from

640

Israel immersion experience – Chavayah

Our Campus & Facilities

Alan Finkel Launch Lab

Gringlas Sports Centre

Genia Janover Learning Centre

Yoga for Kids

BK's Gymnastics

Maccabi Aquatics

Soccerwise

Our Leaders & Teachers

Senior Leadership Team

Governance, Council and Annual Report

Child Safety & Wellbeing

Our Ethos

Jewish Life

Rosenkranz Centre for Excellence and Achievement

Each year, Bialik ensures that its entire Year 10 cohort, regardless of financial background, can travel to Israel for an immersion experience in Israeli society. There they attend Alexander Muss High School which is chosen because of its healthy pluralist approach, which mirrors Bialik's own inclusive plurality. Students get to experience the daily lives of normal Israelis whilst appreciating their historical and biblical connections to Israel.

This is a life-changing experience which ties together so much of our educational programming. Students see Judaism, Zionism and modern life in action, engagement and vitality as can be found nowhere else. They delve into all of Israel's complexities, vitality and beauty with hands and hearts open, coming back to Melbourne changed forever for the better.

Chavayah is one of the jewels in the Bialik College crown.

ADDRESS

429 Auburn Rd Hawthorn VIC 3122

Main Reception: (03) 9822 7981

CONTACT US

Early Learning Centre: (03) 9822 4599
Bialik Children's Centre: (03) 9822 7982
shalom@bialik.vic.edu.au

We acknowledge the Wurundjeri people as the traditional owners of the land on which we learn. We thank Elders past and present for guarding Country and for reminding us of the importance to tread lightly.

We also acknowledge the Elders of the Bialik community who, in 1942 – a time of tragedy and horror for the Jewish

© 2025 Bialik College Site by Digistorm

Our Campus & Facilities

- Alan Finkel Launch Lab
- Gringlas Sports Centre
- Genia Janover Learning Centre
- Yoga for Kids
- BK's Gymnastics
- Maccabi Aquatics
- Soccerwise

Our Leaders & Teachers

- Senior Leadership Team
- Governance, Council and Annual Report

Child Safety & Wellbeing

Our Ethos

- Jewish Life
- Rosenkranz Centre for Excellence and Achievement

642

Principal's Welcome

Bruchim Habaim - Welcome to the King David School

Schooling is an integral part of our lives, establishing the foundation for our future success. I am proud that at King David, we prepare our students to thrive in the world they will graduate into, ensuring they are collaborative, critical and creative thinkers.

Our values of community-mindedness, equity, and social justice ensure that students develop emotional intelligence. Students are encouraged to use their achievements to create a better Australia.

From celebrating our Chagim (holidays) to debating Jewish ethics to researching Jewish history, our students experience Judaism as a rich and moving tradition that is relevant to their lives. Our Jewish Life team facilitates hands-on learning that strengthens our students' Jewish and Zionist identities.

As you look on the website, I encourage you to discover our educational philosophy and the extraordinary opportunities on offer both in and out of the classroom. From exceptional outdoor education, to musicals, debating, coding contests and more, our students are able to challenge themselves in a range of environments.

Our School's founders, Isador Magid AO and Rabbi Dr John Levi AC, stand as role models for our students and teachers alike by virtue of their dedication to learning and enlightenment. The school environment they created continues to this day, promoting critical inquiry, positive relationships and the embracing of difference.

It is a privilege to lead Australia's only Progressive Jewish school. I invite you to book a tour and learn more about the King David difference.

Marc Light, Principal

Insights - Principal's Blog

Each week our Principal, Marc Light shares his insights into current events and educational pedagogy, highlighting how these inform the educational programs and culture at The King David School.

Nurturing flow

We are in the midst of an extraordinary series of Performing Arts events at our school. This includes last week's success in winning the interschool Battle of the Bands competition and our fabulous Years 3 to 5 performance of The Jungle Book. This week has brought our extraordinary Spring Concert and this Sunday our

Read More »

Positive Expectations

Every morning across the School we have heard the blasts of shofar from our Year 2 ba'ale tokea (masters of the blast) at the Dandenong Road Campus and a roster of student and staff volunteers at Magid Campus. We are now well into the month of Elul, the period where we sound

Read More »

A meaningful antidote to climate anxiety

According to research referenced by the Climate Council in their Climate Anxiety Toolkit, more than three quarters of Australians are worried about climate change. In particular, a worldwide study found that more than half of young people surveyed are feeling "sad, anxious, angry, powerless, helpless, and guilty about climate change."

Knowing ourselves so we can choose

This week our Year 7 cohort delighted their parents, grandparents and special friends with their celebration of the Kabbalat Mitzvah. This program is one that is focused on acknowledging the special stage of life that accompanies the B'nei Mitzvah years. In Jewish custom it is said that one does not

Read More »

Read More »

Stronger together

Last week, I attended an extraordinary community event. The Eitan Chitayat – I am That Jew presentation organised by the combined parents' associations of King David, Bialik College, Leibler Yavneh College, Mount Scopus Memorial College and Yeshivah-Beth Rivkah College was a triumph. The sense of vibrancy and unity that was

Read More »

Pride in our names and our heritage

Do you know an Oliver, a Noah, or a Henry? Or an Isla, a Charlotte or an Amelia? These were the top three most popular boys and girls baby names selected in Victoria in 2024. The most popular global names are harder to definitively ascertain as some countries do not

Read More »

The thorough and purposeful approach of our ELC

Yesterday, I had the joy and nachat (pride) of attending the Senior Kindergarten Family Fun Day. It was a beautiful opportunity for our students, parents and educators to come together to celebrate the growth and learning that has taken place so far this year. Watching our students sing, dance, decorate family

Read More »

Facing antisemitism

The recent school holiday period was a challenging time for the Melbourne Jewish community. The arson attack on the East Melbourne shule and the violent protest on diners at Miznon restaurant in the CBD were reflective of an increasing spate of antisemitic incidents and rhetoric which have left many in

Read More »

Voting for Israel's democratic future

The relationship between Israel and Diaspora Jewish communities is a crucial one that has matured and changed over the 77 years of the State's existence. A prevailing understanding of shared interdependence now lies at the heart of our appreciation of the centrality of Israel to Jewish communities and of the

Read More »

Examining the efficacy of exams

Many of us have a school examination story that reflects the particularly challenging place that these experiences play in our education. My mother used to tell me about a high school examination which she used as a life lesson. She had written an essay, reread it in the minutes before

Read More »

Praying for Israel's safety

It has now been a week since the escalation of the war in Israel which has seen direct engagement with Iran. It has been an exceedingly worrying time for so many of us who have close friends and family members in Israel. Israelis have been cautious of entering directly into

Read More »

Modelling disagreement

This week our Year 9 students were presented with a wonderful opportunity to hear from a broad panel of politicians from across the political spectrum. They learnt from the panellists' insights but also from their capacity to model collegiality and respect despite their differing worldviews. Within the Year 9 Nitzan

Read More »

Enquire online

Call us

ELC & Junior School (03) 9291 7979
Middle & Senior School Office: (03) 9291 7900
Admissions (03) 9527 0102

Email us

© 2025 The King David School. All Rights Reserved

Email | Staff Portal

The King David School is a forward-thinking school that fosters a love of learning, egalitarianism and a proud connection to Jewish identity.

The King David School acknowledges the Bunurong/Boon Wurrung and the Wurundjeri peoples of the Kulin nation as Traditional Owners of the land on which we are fortunate to teach and learn. We also acknowledge Traditional Owners of country throughout Australia and their continuing connection to land, sea and community. In the spirit of tikkun olam, we seek to 'learn and understand' the history, struggle and culture of our First Nations People. We pay our respects to them and to their Elders past and present.

myKDS

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-11" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

The Jewish Council of Australia Does Not Represent Me!

Victory

This petition made change with 7,014 supporters!

Share this petition

5 updates

The issue

The Jewish Council of Australia (JCA), has made a number of public statements that do not reflect the views and beliefs of many in our community. As members of this diverse community, it is crucial that we clarify that their statements and JCA do not represent us.

The Jewish community in Australia is rich in diversity, encompassing a wide range of opinions, beliefs, and values. JCA's recent public statements have caused concern among many of us, as they do not align with our views or the values we hold dear.

We, the undersigned, feel that the JCA's and its representatives' accusations against Israel of genocide, their support for the pro-Palestinian protest movement, and their criticism of Jillian Segal's appointment as Australia's first anti-Semitism envoy do not align with our perspectives. These statements have led to misrepresentations of our community's values and beliefs.

We urge the Australian Jewish community to sign this letter to demonstrate our lack of support for the JCA as the body who purports to represent us.

We request that the Australian media be reminded that statements by the Jewish Council of Australia should not be presented as a majority voice or representative body of the Australian Jewish community. Our primary organization, the Executive Council of Australian Jewry (ECAJ), represents the Australian Jewish community in dealings with the Federal government, parliamentary inquiries, national law enforcement agencies, and the national media. Additionally, the ECAJ can facilitate contact between the media and other Jewish organizations for diverse perspectives.

Please sign this petition to make it clear that the JCA as a body and its statements do not represent your views. Together, we can advocate for a more inclusive representation that genuinely reflects the diversity of our community. Share this petition with others who feel similarly, so our collective voice can be heard.

A few links for reference:

https://www.instagram.com/p/C9IsOz6vw39/?img_index=1

https://www.instagram.com/p/C9G64_8PBmx/

https://www.instagram.com/p/C9BnPzEPmcu/?img_index=5

https://www.instagram.com/p/C78duPsvbjT/

Report a policy violation

J- United
Petition starter

Media enquiries

Support Change — Become a member today

Not beholden to politics or power brokers, Change.org is free for people everywhere to make change. Every day there are real victories for issues you care about, and they're only possible because we are 100% funded by everyday people like you.

$3 $10 $20 $30 Other

Share this petition

Pay with credit card or PayPal

Petition updates

Victory

19 July 2024 —
We want to express our sincere gratitude to each and every one of you (7000) who has taken the time to sign our petition that has been only open for one week. Your support is invaluable and demonstrates a shared commitment to ensuring our perspectives are not misrepresented by a minority.

Following recent coverage in the Australian and Jewish News, we have made the decision to close the petition. It is essential for us to ensure that the signatures we collect are genuine and reflect a true representation of our community's stance. We aim for accuracy and authenticity in our advocacy efforts, and this includes maintaining the integrity of our supporter base.

If we identify any signatures that do not align with our principles or appear to be from individuals who do not genuinely support our cause, we will take steps to amend the count accordingly. Our goal has always been to gather signatures organically, without databases, to ensure that each signature truly represents our communities voice.

Thank you once again for your courage and support. Together, we are making a difference in the fight against antisemitism.

J-United Team

Victory!

1 year ago

We want to express our sincere gratitude to each and every one of you (7000) who has taken the time to sign our petition that has been only open for one week. Your support is invaluable and demonstrates a shared commitment to ensuring our perspectives are not misrepresented by a minority. Following recent coverage in the Australian and Jewish News, we have made the decision to close the petition. It is essential for us to ensure that the signatures we collect are genuine and reflect a true representation of our community's stance. We aim for accuracy and authenticity in our advocacy efforts, and this includes...

7,000 supporters 1 year ago

Take a Stand To Combat Antisemitism: Ask 5 People to Sign Our Petition Today!

1 year ago

Our small community needs your support! J-United doesn't have a database to reach everyone, so we're asking for your help. This petition is a grassroots effort to ensure that our media understands that the JCA does not represent the majority view of our Jewish community. We have many other roof bodies that truly reflect our values. Please ask all your Jewish friends and family to sign and share to amplify our message!

6,000 supporters 1 year ago

WE HIT 5k SIGNATURES....IF EVERYONE ASKS 1 MORE PERSON TO SIGN WE ARE AT 10k

1 year ago

We reached 5000 Signatures in 48 hours. Brilliant Result. Lets each ask one more Jewish person to sign it and we get to 10,000 signatures. Please send this to your family and friends, sometimes it takes many times for people to see something before they sign it. Lets keep nudging! Yalla!

5,000 supporters 1 year ago

Thankyou and Please keep spreading the petition

1 year ago

We have had just over 4000 incredible Jewish community members sign this petition, however our work is not done, we want at least 10,000 signatures so we can show the world, that JCA does not represent us. Please send this to your family and friends, sometimes it takes many times for people to see something before they sign it. Be the Yiddishe nudges we know how to be!

can show the world, that JCA does not represent us. Please send this to your family and friends, sometimes it takes many times for people to see something before they sign it. Be the Yiddishe nudges we know how to be!

4,000 supporters 1 year ago

J- United started this petition 1 year ago

Share this petition

Share this petition in person or use the QR code for your own material.

Download QR code

Share on Facebook

Send via WhatsApp

Post on X

648

Copy link

Send via email

Petition created on 11 July 2024

Change.org › National Employment Standards › The Jewish Council of Australia Does Not Represent Me!

© 2025, Change.org, PBC

This site is protected by reCAPTCHA and the Google Privacy Policy and Terms of Service apply.

English (Australia)

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-12" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

Nick Riemer
6,808 posts
Follow
Nick Riemer
@NickRiemer1
Activist, linguistics academic. Currently president, USyd @NTEUnion. Author, Boycott Theory & the Struggle for Palestine (2023) : bit.ly/3dmJgTy. Views my own.
Stolen Gadigal land (Sydney)
actualtasks.wordpress.com
Joined January 2013
1,471 Following
3,983 Followers

1

Nick Riemer reposted
Ali Abunimah @AliAbunimah · Oct 7
The massive anti-colonial operation launched by the Palestinian resistance is still unfolding and clearly took the enemy totally by surprise. It is nonetheless the direct result of the enemy occupier's relentless aggression backed by the "West" against the Palestinian people.
Local Focus - Security Alerts @LocalFocus1 · Oct 7
UPDATE: Video of Al Qassam Elite Forces controlling an ISF military jeep inside Gaza. twitter.com/LocalFocus1/st...
0:07
80
1.1K
3.6K
195K

2

Nick Riemer reposted
Dalia Hatuqa @DaliaHatuqa · Oct 7
A summary of what's going on in Gaza atm:
This morning, fighters from Gaza carried out an operation that took Israeli by surprise, reaching Sderot, and taking Israeli hostages amidst a barrage of rocket fire.
98
2.2K
6.5K
1.1M

3

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 7

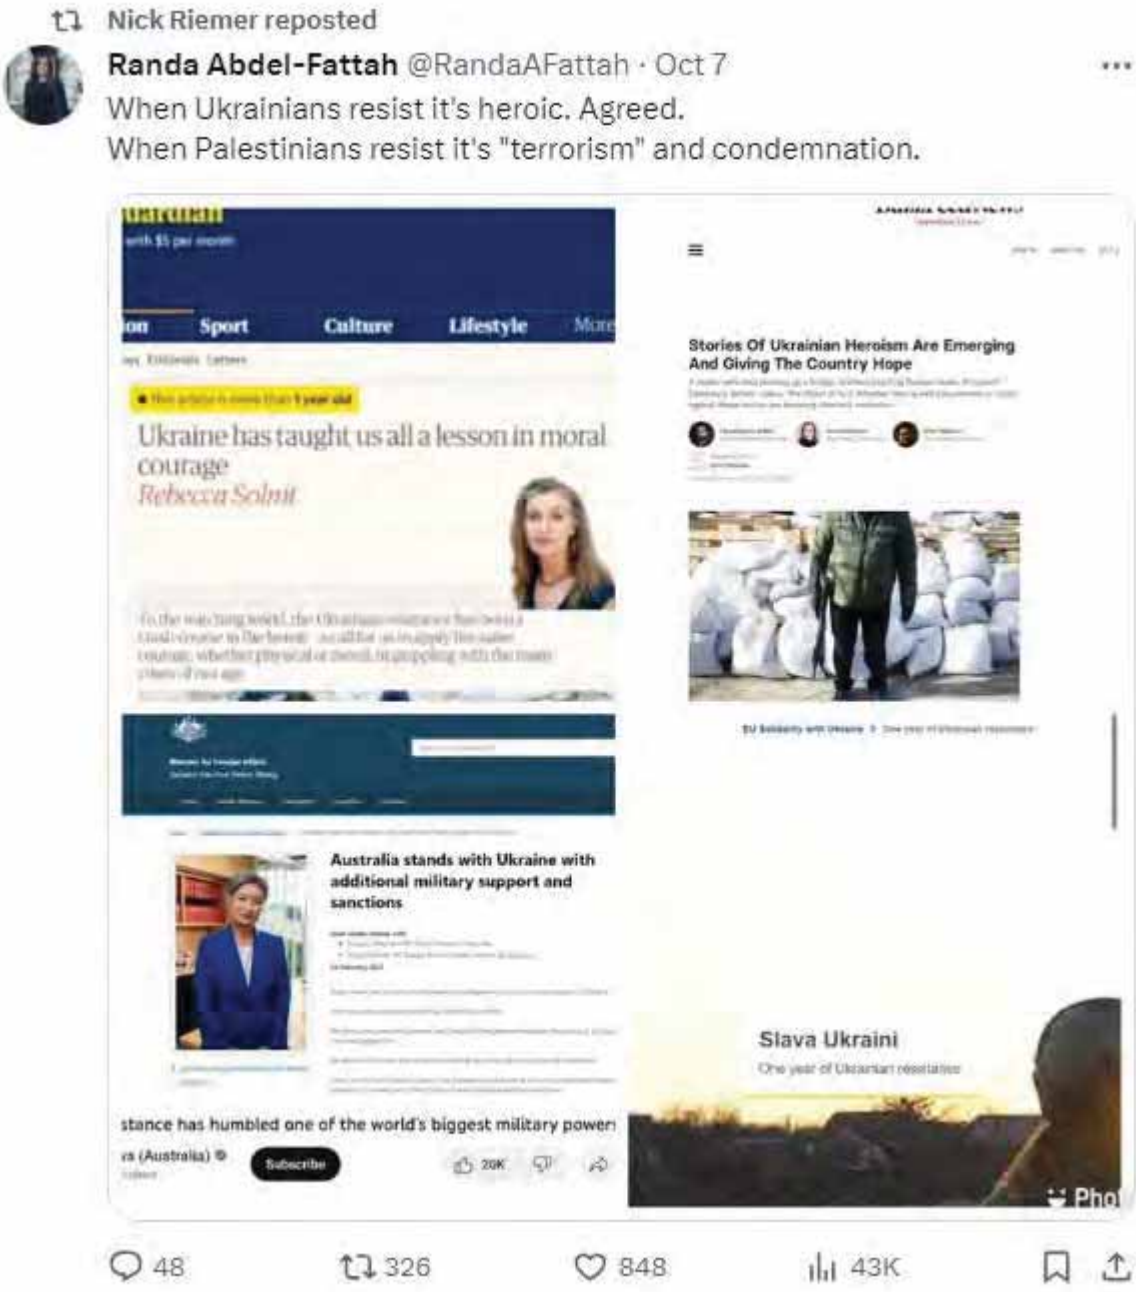
Resistance is the right of occupied people. It's simple: everyone who wants a just world must stand with Palestine, for an end to brutal occupation, siege and apartheid.

Unconditional solidarity with Gazans. Free Palestine.

152 255 942 62K

4



Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 7
When Ukrainians resist it's heroic. Agreed.
When Palestinians resist it's "terrorism" and condemnation.
Sport
Culture
Lifestyle
Ukraine has taught us all a lesson in moral courage
Rebecca Solnit
Stories Of Ukrainian Heroism Are Emerging And Giving The Country Hope
Australia stands with Ukraine with additional military support and sanctions
Slava Ukraini
stance has humbled one of the world's biggest military power
Subscribe
48
326
848
43K

5

Nick Riemer reposted

Rania Zabaneh @RZabaneh · Oct 7

Palestinians break into separation fence w/Israel, dozens of Israelis captured and brought into Gaza... In 2011, Israel released 1,027 prisoners for an Israeli soldier, many here see this as a rare chance for +550 Palestinians sentenced to life to be released in a similar deal.

42 1.5K 4.6K 918K

6

Nick Riemer reposted

Yousef Munayyer @YousefMunayyer · Oct 7

Replying to @YousefMunayyer

Hard to put into words the scale of embarrassment for the Israeli govt at this moment. Gaza is a besieged strip over which they exercise constant control, violence and surveillance and yet they seemed to have no clue about a massive operation that was surely planned for months.

5 103 487 24K

7

| | |
|---|---|
| | Nick Riemer repostedsara m. saleh \| سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Oct 7If you're upset/shocked by images of Zionist bodies bloody & attacked & never shown a fleck of concern for the thousands of Palestinians who are under attack daily & murdered in cold blood, some whose bodies are held hostage as bargaining chips by Israeli occupiers - SPARE ME29 274 1K 42K |
| 8 | Nick Riemer repostedAntony Loewenstein @antloewenstein · Oct 8Vital to hear the #Palestinian POV, not for "balance" but to understand what decades of #Israeli occupation does to a community both in #Palestine and globally.@RandaAFattah @iamthenas and so many more are available and ready to go @ABCthedrum @abcnews @theprojecttv36 199 571 37K |
| 9 | Nick Riemer repostedRanda Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 8"Palestinians are terrorists. They should peacefully resist."But not Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (criminalised). Not Literature festivals (attacked, censored, refuse visas, lawfare). Not social media activism (shadow-ban them). Not protests (shoot them, mow the lawn).58 3.2K 10K 541K |
| 10 | Nick Riemer repostedRanda Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 8"Israel has the right to defend itself" against...the population it oppresses, colonises, controls, holds captive, bombs...Any regime that sustains its power on that principle is a regime that is ethically and morally running out of time.7 74 266 9.2K |

11

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Oct 7

Let's be clear #ApartheidIsrael has been at war with each and every Palestinian each and every day for 27,174 straight days!

#ApartheidIsrael has killed a Palestinian each and every day this year.

If you find yourself caring today, ask yourself why you didn't care yesterday?

8 43 97 4.9K

12

Nick Riemer reposted

BDS movement @BDSmovement · Oct 8

We strongly condemn the hypocrisy and complicity of the colonial West for, once again, ignoring Israel's decades-long oppression against Palestinians and attacking Palestinian armed resistance as if "violence" just began this morning.

#ColonialHypocrisy

183 1.7K 3.7K 183K

13

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 8
Emergency appeal for aid to Gaza. Donate now.
EMERGENCY APPEAL
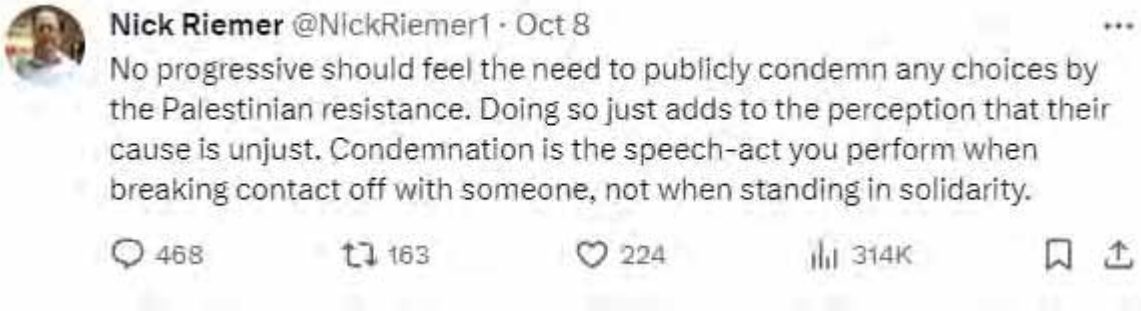
islamicrelief.org.au
8
14
28
3.6K

14



Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 8
No progressive should feel the need to publicly condemn any choices by the Palestinian resistance. Doing so just adds to the perception that their cause is unjust. Condemnation is the speech-act you perform when breaking contact off with someone, not when standing in solidarity.
468
163
224
314K

15

Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Oct 8

important words from @iamthenas of @APAN4Palestine on our tvs just now

7 33 102 20K

16

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 8

A packed-to-the-rafters event in Balmain Town Hall to celebrate the publication of Hall Greenland's fascinating biography of Michel Pablo. A real privilege to have been asked to launch the book.

1 4 1.7K

17

Nick Riemer reposted

Noura Erakat @4noura · Oct 8

Civilians r taken hostage, soldiers r captured. This is a military tactic.Hamas has demanded release of all Palestinian political prisoners 5,200 now in captivity, 170 children, & 1200 held without charge or trial. Some like Walid Daqqah held since 1986 & denied cancer treatment.

> The Spectator Index @spectatorindex · Oct 7
> BREAKING: Hamas claims to have taken several Israeli soldiers hostage

58 688 1.7K 224K

18

Nick Riemer reposted

Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Oct 8

In 2003, activists painted no war on the opera house in opposition to US and israel backed Iraq war. They were arrested.

Tomorrow, the state will use this same building to display support to a genocidal apartheid regime which has waged war on Palestinians for over 75 years.

> 6 News Australia @6NewsAU · Oct 8
> The Sydney Opera House will tomorrow night be lit in blue and white in solidarity with Israel | #6NewsAU

34 464 1.4K 124K

19

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 8
Sydney demonstration for Palestine, Monday 5.30pm, Town Hall.
Palestine Action Group Sydney
RALLY FOR A FREE PALESTINE
NO WAR ON GAZA!
5:30 MONDAY 9 OCTOBER
TOWN HALL
54
111
302
36K

20

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 8
#Palestine #Gaza
War crimes are committed against Palestinians on a daily basis
ISRAEL AT WAR
Israeli hostages taken by Hamas militants
UN peacekeepers deployed along Lebanon Israel border to maintain stability
ABC NEWS
15:17 VIC
0:53
15
150
330
26K

21

Nick Riemer reposted

Al-Haq الحق @alhaq_org · Oct 8

NEW STATEMENT from Al-Haq, @AlMezanCenter @pchrgaza: For decades, our organizations have warned against the status quo & the deliberate failure & unwillingness of the int. community to address the root causes of the current situation in #Palestine

7 242 335 57K

22

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 9

Solidarity from Sydney Uni with all @NTEUMonash members on strike today! We're with you. Higher education is in crisis and it's heartening to see so much industrial action in Victorian universities!

> Alison Barnes @AlisonBarnes25 · Oct 9
> NTEU members at Monash University are on strike from noon today until noon Wednesday. Don't cross picket lines, online or in-person. Rally outside Chancellory 12:30 today. Not a member? Join now to take part: nteu.au/join Solidarity & best wishes from all NTEU members.

1 9 36 3.7K

23

Nick Riemer reposted
Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Oct 9
What about Palestinian "hostages"?
More here...
abc.net.au/news/2023-10-0...
0:36
NEWS
4
61
137
12K

24

Nick Riemer reposted
Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Oct 9
Israel has been at war with the Palestinians for more than 27,000 days, 24/7/365!
More here...
abc.net.au/news/2023-10-0...
0:30
Nasser Mashni
Australia Palestine Advocacy Network
NEWS
5
38
58
6.4K

25

Nick Riemer reposted

ACT 4 PALESTINE @Act4pal1 · Oct 9

"Resistance is the right of occupied people. It's simple: everyone who wants a just world must stand with #Palestine, for an end to brutal occupation, siege and #Apartheid."

@NickRiemer1, a senior lecturer at the University of Sydney and a member of the NTEU Sydney University...
Show more

7 16 4.3K

26

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 9
Big crowd already on unceded Gadigal land for the Sydney Free Palestine demonstration.
0:08
405
287
1.2K
218K

27

Nick Riemer reposted
APAN @APAN4Palestine · Oct 9
Catch APAN president Nasser Mashni on The Project tonight at 6:30PM! (Channel 10)
Catch APAN president Nasser Mashni on The Project tonight at 6:30PM!
2
8
36
3.2K

28

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 9

Please donate generously and share widely! All funds to @MedicalAidPal!

MAP's team on the ground in Gaza are working to ensure hospitals and emergency responders have the supplies they need to cope with an unprecedented influx of casualties.

6 381 360 60K

29

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 9

Thousands of people out in support of justice for Palestine. Now marching to the Opera House.

84 99 386 25K

30

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 9

Whoops

6 News Australia @6NewsAU · Oct 9

Anthony Albanese says people should NOT attend the pro-Palestine rally in Sydney | #6NewsAU

4 18 132 10K

31

Nick Riemer reposted

ACT 4 PALESTINE @Act4pal1 · Oct 9

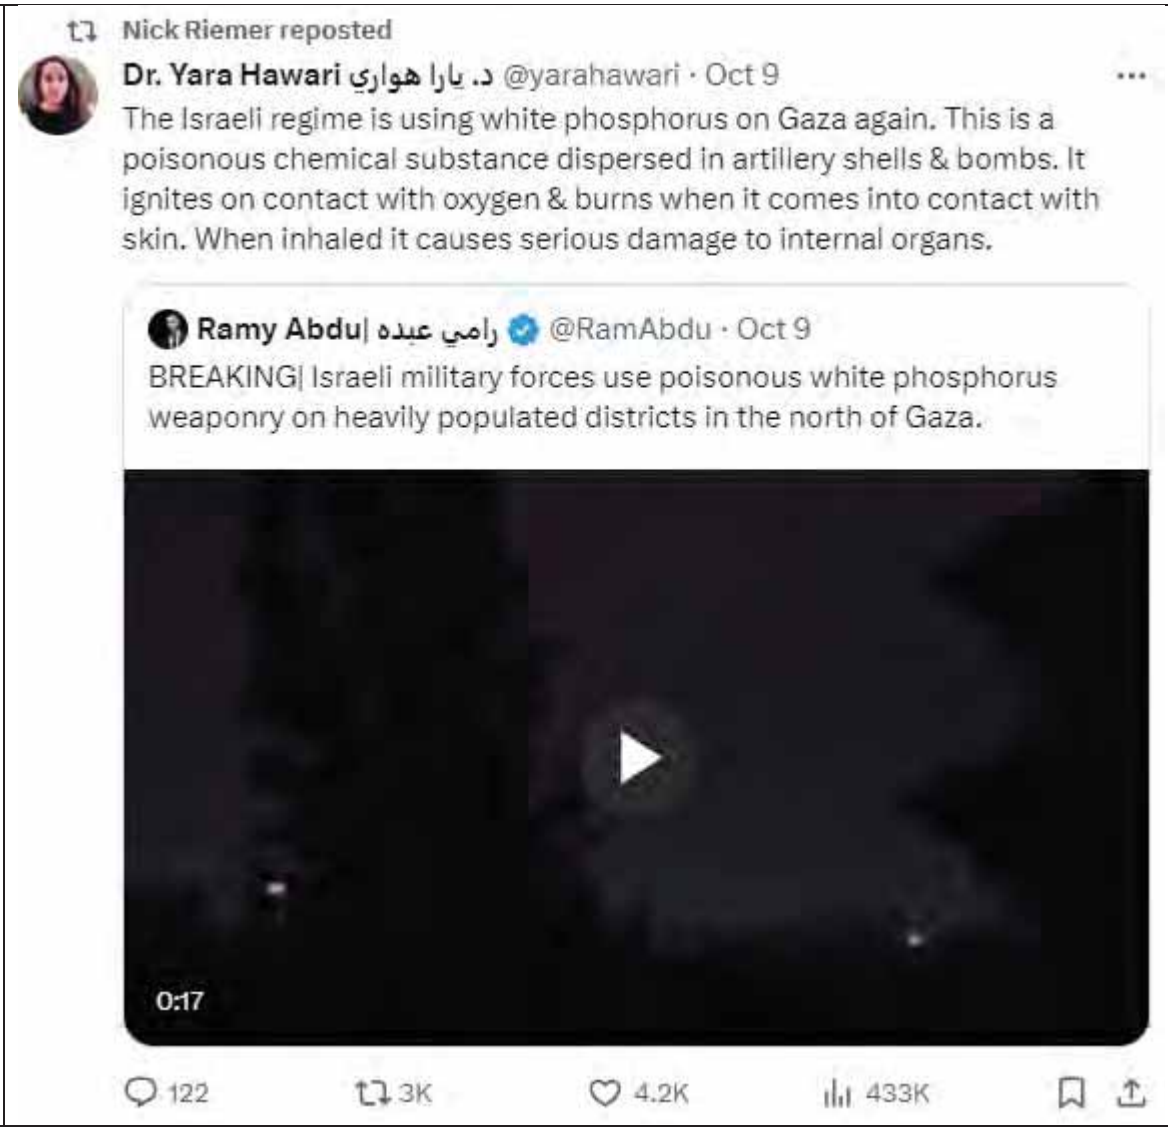
The UN Refugees and Works Agency (@UNRWA) says an #Israeli airstrike has targeted an UNRWA-run school used as a shelter for displaced #Palestinian families in the #Gaza Strip, causing serious damages.
#GazaUnderAttack
#IsraeliCrimes

12 14 1.8K

32



Nick Riemer reposted
Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Oct 9
The Israeli regime is using white phosphorus on Gaza again. This is a poisonous chemical substance dispersed in artillery shells & bombs. It ignites on contact with oxygen & burns when it comes into contact with skin. When inhaled it causes serious damage to internal organs.
Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Oct 9
BREAKING| Israeli military forces use poisonous white phosphorus weaponry on heavily populated districts in the north of Gaza.
0:17
122
3K
4.2K
433K

33

Nick Riemer reposted

Briony Neilson @Briony_Neilson · Oct 9

If you feel like tuning in, I'll be on #latenightlive tonight on @RadioNational with @PhillipAdams_1, talking convict history, France's penal colony in New Caledonia and French convict poet Julien de Sanary who found sanctuary in Australia in 1920 abc.net.au/listen/live/ra...

usyd_humanities and Criminocorpus

2 3 28 3.3K

34

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 9
This is what @AlboMP Australian state premiers are supporting. Palestinians being massacred.
Dalal IRIQAT دلال عريقات @DalalIRIQAT · Oct 9
#Gaza under everyone/everything is target to Israeli military machine! 3 mosques have been targeted on prayer times resulting in mass executions. In 36 hours, > 500 killed, includ 90 children, 60 women & 3000 injuries #Collective_punishment #War_crimes #EndIsraeliOccupation
0:05
26
35
113
10K

35

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 9
Exactly the right answer to anyone asking Palestine supporters if they 'condemn' Palestinian militants' actions.
Middle East Eye @MiddleEastEye · Oct 9
Husam Zomlot, the head of the Palestinian Mission to the UK, blasted the BBC over its biased coverage during an interview in which he was asked whether he would condemn the unprecedented military attack by Hamas on Israel
0:59
PALESTINIAN AMBASSADOR
66
163
539
38K

36

Nick Riemer reposted
Michael Grewcock @RoarPrawn1 · Oct 9
Sydney Opera House in response to the Israeli flag to be projected onto the Opera House #FreePalestine
0:42
19
94
324
28K

37

Nick Riemer reposted

Electronic Intifada @intifada · Oct 10

Explosions are heard in the background as Refaat Alareer gives his testimony of living under Israeli airstrikes in Gaza.

"The whole room is filled with gunpowder," @itranslate123 says. "We don't deserve this. We're not animals like the Israelis think. Our kids deserve better."

169 4.1K 7.8K 1.3M

38

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Oct 10

A statement from @tzedekcollectiv

As a collective of progressive Jews in the diaspora, living as uninvited settlers in the colony of so-called Australia, we watch the news unfold in Palestine and Israel with grief and rage.

26 256 793 74K

39-40

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 10

Pathetic to see the Australian political establishment clutching at every straw to discredit Palestine supporters. The Palestine Action Group statement on last night's demonstration should be widely read. Next demonstration, this Sunday 1pm.

alestine Action Group Sydney

ne Action Group statement on last night's protest:

ctober 2023, Palestine Action Group organised a successful ral
t of Palestine, calling for the end of the occupation and for Aust to Israel. Thousands on thousands of diverse attendees marcl era House and demonstrated our opposition to Australia's suppo te of Israel, a genocidal apartheid regime which has waged wa nians for over 75 years.
we have woken up to the Premier of NSW, the Prime-Minister, t Affairs Minister and Independent MP, Allegra Spender condem stests and questioning why it went ahead. Let us affirm, we have demonstrate. At a conjuncture where anti-protest laws widen t anyone who opposes the colonial and capitalist structures of thi irst Nations movements to the Climate Justice movement, the st on Pro-Palestinian protestors is no different. Australia as a color perialist entity will always support Israel and the state is frighten in their masses showing that we oppose imperialism and colon ne where the people of Palestine resist over 75 years of war and cres and Israel declares intent to commit genocide against the p e, we will demonstrate, we will continue to demonstrate and we his state that we oppose apartheid, we oppose settler-colonialis ose genocide.

chant. They were quickly condemned for their chants and asked to leave. Long-standing Palestinian organisers and activists, Palestinian, Arab and Muslim elders attending the protest were disgusted and deplored by the action. This is not what our movement stands for. We oppose Zionism, an ideology distinct from Judaism. We oppose Israel, a racist state which has waged genocide on Palestinians. We are an anti-racist and anti-colonial movement and we refuse to fight racism with racism.

PAG has a long-standing history of working with Jewish activists and organisers who oppose Zionism, from Tzedek to Jews against the occupation, we share anti racist and anti colonial values with our anti-Zionist Jewish siblings. We thank them for their ongoing solidarity, including the contingent who attended this very rally. We've checked in with as many of those Jewish people in the contingent as we know to ensure they are feeling safe and okay.

For over a decade we have organised peaceful Palestinian rallies and we he streets at 1pm, Sunday 15 Octobe

t both attacks on Palestinian resistar ide on Palestinians. We will not bow t nd our mobilisations. We will demon to the sea!
ck racism.

52 194 581 41K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 10

facebook.com
Palestine Action Group... - Palestine Action Group S
Palestine Action Group statement on last night's protest: On 9 October 2023, Palestine Action Grou...

5 3 7 2.1K

41

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Oct 9

This is genocidal.

Israeli Defense Minister Yoav Gallant:

"I have ordered a complete siege on the Gaza Strip. There will be no electricity, no food, no fuel, everything is closed. We are fighting human animals and we act accordingly."

3.4K 6.1K 879K

42

Nick Riemer reposted

Noura Erakat @4noura · Oct 10

Not only has Israel not created a humanitarian corridor- it has bombed the one crossing it doesnt control. They have deliberately trapped Palestinians in one of the most crowded place on earth as they continue indiscriminate aerial bombardment.

madamasr.com/en/2023/10/09/...

#Gaza

114 1.3K 2.2K 204K

43

Nick Riemer reposted

Free Gaza Australia @GFFAusGroup · Oct 10

Support the Palestinian people's struggle for freedom, justice and equality... Protests this week in 7 capital cities across another settler colony - Australia.

BDS movement and Samidoun Network

6 11 1.1K

44

Nick Riemer reposted
Muhammad Smiry @MuhammadSmiry · Oct 10
Al-Rimal neighborhood, nothing but destruction. #Gaza
0:23
382
4K
6.8K
1.2M

45

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 11

In the last few days, more Sydney University staff have pledged to uphold the academic boycott of Israel. Israeli universities play a major role in sustaining the oppression of Palestinians. The boycott is a non-violent response and should be supported. sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2427

Academic BDS pledge

In response to the call from Palestinian civil society, including Palestinian academics and students, for an institutional academic boycott of Israel, and in recognition of Israeli universities' key role in enabling ongoing Israeli oppression of Palestinians, we undertake not to engage in any professional association with Israeli academic, research or government institutions, or collaborate professionally in any way with those institutions' leaders, until Israel complies with international law and elementary principles of human rights by

- ending its illegal occupation and annexation of internationally recognized Palestinian territory as defined by the UN;
- granting full equality before the law to Palestinian citizens of Israel; and
- recognizing the right of Palestinians to return to the land from which they have been and continue to be expelled.

We note that while this commits us to fully breaking ties with Israeli academic institutions, it does not preclude continuing collaboration with individual Israeli researchers who do not occupy leadership roles in them. We look forward to a time when Israel is prepared to negotiate seriously and in good faith with Palestinians, and civil society actions like the boycott are no longer necessary.

49 106 286 16K

46

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 10

I wrote this on the lighting of buildings around the world in support of the apartheid state.

20 98 198 19K

47

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 11

Disgraceful attempt by the NSW Police to obstruct basic democratic rights. Defending Palestine amidst the horrific brutalization of Gaza is morally necessary. Fortunately, protest does not need anyone's legal permission in NSW. The demo must happen regardless of police support.

> Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Oct 11
> Breaking: Our form 1 for sundays demonstration just got rejected by cops despite them being very cooperative and happy with how we organised our demonstration on Monday. This is a targeted political campaign to silence and criminalise dissent. (1/3)

38 100 307 41K

48

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Oct 11

Joined a contingent of Sydney Uni staff for BDS at this important moment to stand against thr brutality of ongoing colonisation, the renewed threats on Palestinians, and the crackdown on protest here in NSW. Proud to stand with fellow unionists in solidarity from Gadical to Gaza.

8 13 45 2.7K

49

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Oct 11

Israel is creating a media blackout in Gaza. No electricity, water, food, medical supplies. It is destroying Gaza neighbourhood by neighbourhood and massacring the population. Support for Israel's actions in Gaza is a support for genocide.

21 385 807 44K

50

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Oct 11

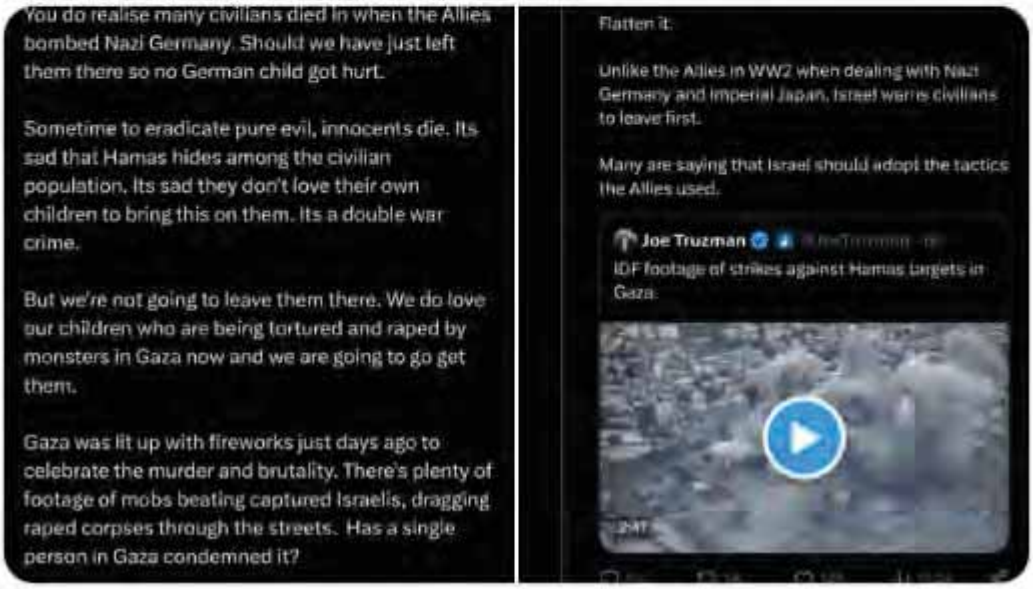
This is an open call for genocide, a War Crime.

The AJA must be investigated, condemned and all necessary action taken by the relevant authorities. @VictoriaPolice @AusFedPolice @nswpolice

Just sickening.

We must end the divisiveness in this country.

All life is precious!



26 193 416 110K

51

Nick Riemer reposted

Amnesty International Australia @amnestyOz · Oct 11

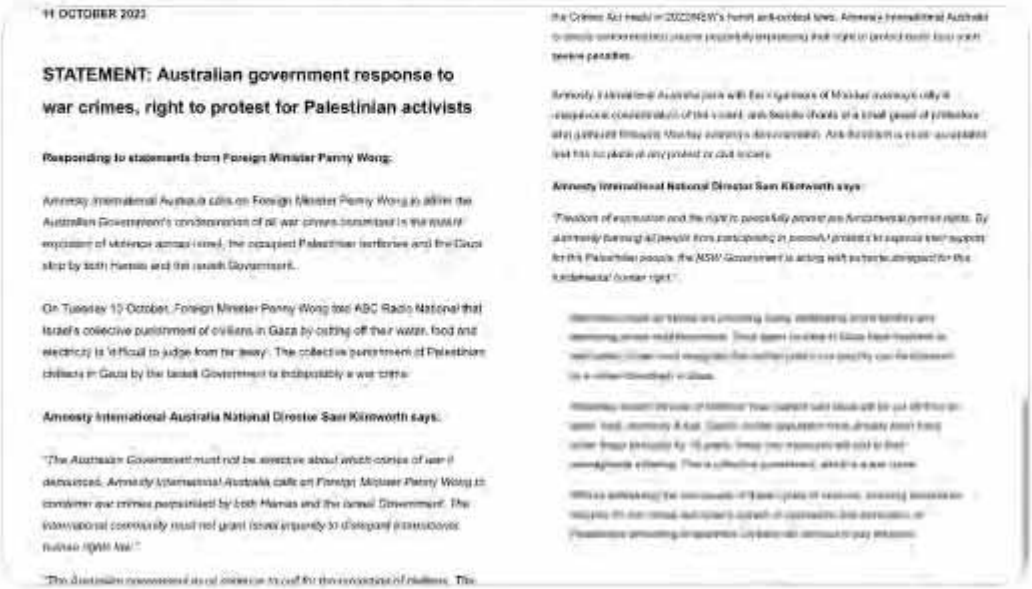
Amnesty International Australia statement on the Australian government's response to Hamas and Israeli war crimes, and NSW gov denial of Palestinian activists' right to peaceful protest



11 OCTOBER 2023

STATEMENT: Australian government response to war crimes, right to protest for Palestinian activists

Responding to statements from Foreign Minister Penny Wong:

Amnesty International Australia calls on Foreign Minister Penny Wong to affirm the Australian Government's condemnation of all war crimes committed in the recent escalation of violence across Israel, the occupied Palestinian territories and the Gaza strip by both Hamas and the Israeli Government.

On Tuesday 10 October, Foreign Minister Penny Wong told ABC Radio National that Israel's collective punishment of civilians in Gaza by cutting off their water, food and electricity is "difficult to judge from far away". The collective punishment of Palestinian civilians in Gaza by the Israeli Government is indisputably a war crime.

Amnesty International Australia National Director Sam Klintworth says:

"The Australian Government must not be selective about which crimes of war it denounces. Amnesty International Australia calls on Foreign Minister Penny Wong to condemn war crimes perpetrated by both Hamas and the Israeli Government. The international community must not grant Israel impunity to disregard international human rights law."

88 309 600 197K

52

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 11

10-12 hours, after which Gaza will be even more cut off from the world, with the IDF able to move in with impunity and massacre more Gazans with the full-throated blessing of the West.

48m ago 17.56 AEDT

Gaza's only power plant has 10 to 12 hours of fuel left

The Gaza Strip's sole power plant and only current provider of electricity will run out of fuel in 10 to 12 hours, the Palestinian Energy Authority chair, Thafer Melhem, told Voice of Palestine radio on Wednesday.

Israel cut off its own electricity supply to Gaza on Monday as part of what it called a "complete siege" in response to the Hamas attack.

Updated at 18.27 AEDT

16 29 54 4.5K

53

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 11
Very glad to see my union, @NTEUNSW signing this letter Open Letter calling on the NSW Premier to uphold the right to protest for Palestine. Protest is a basic right and mustn't be obstructed. You can't dispute that & call yourself a democrat. nswccl.org.au/open_letter_pe... via @NSWCCL
nswccl.org.au
Open Letter: Peak Bodies & Trade Unions call on Premier to affirm support for the right to protest 18
41
100
6.5K

54

Nick Riemer reposted
Josh Pallas @joshpallas · Oct 11
Hey @nswpolice I'd love to know what power you think you have to refuse a Form 1 on this basis 👇, because when I read the law, I don't see one #nswpol #nswlaw
Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Oct 11
Funny they said that because they've also informed us that they will not be accepting ANY FURTHER FORM 1. They're weaponising procedural issues to hide political motivations twitter.com/isobelroe/stat...
2
25
83
8K

55

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Oct 11

This is not self-defence (as many are trying to spin this). Rather, this is one of many of grave breaches of the Geneva Convention and serious violations of international law enacted by the state of Israel...otherwise known as war crimes

123 140 464 17K

56

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Oct 12

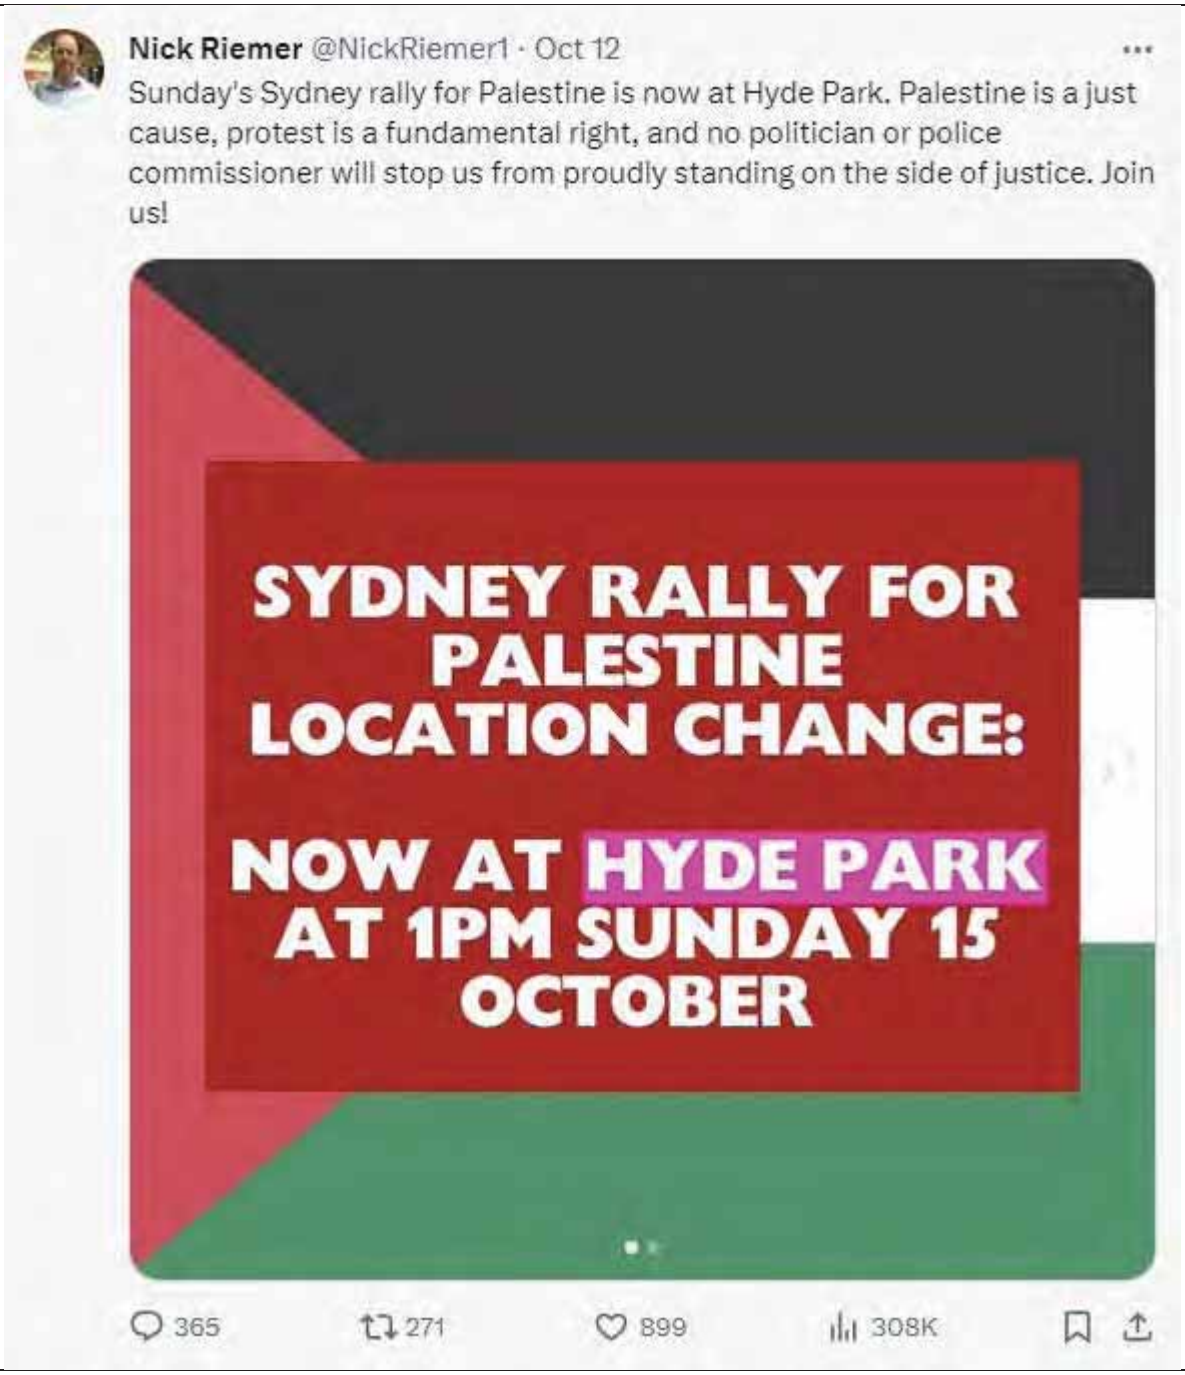
If all the progressives and celebrities rushing to react on socials could take a step back and pick up a damn book on Palestine.

14 46 238 8.1K

57



Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 12
Sunday's Sydney rally for Palestine is now at Hyde Park. Palestine is a just cause, protest is a fundamental right, and no politician or police commissioner will stop us from proudly standing on the side of justice. Join us!
SYDNEY RALLY FOR PALESTINE LOCATION CHANGE:
NOW AT HYDE PARK AT 1PM SUNDAY 15 OCTOBER 365
271
899
308K

58-59

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 11

Next Sydney protest, this Sunday 1pm. Let's make it a huge one. Justice for Palestine.

140 183 542 72K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 12

Now at Hyde Park.

44 37 102 80K

60

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 12

Congratulations to @jennyleong for being one of the rare Australian politicians to react appropriately.

> Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Oct 12
>
> (1/6) Yesterday in Parliament, I had the opportunity to acknowledge the horrific situation currently unfolding as a result of the most recent escalation of the conflict between Israel and Palestine.

47 91 358 24K

61

Nick Riemer reposted

Josh Pallas @joshpallas · Oct 12

Great write up from @crikey_news on the stakes for the right to protest of government rhetoric and actions this week msn.com/en-au/news/oth... #protectprotest #nswpol @BarnsGreg @NSWCCL @amalfalastini

5 13 39 4.5K

62

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 12

No water, fuel for Gaza until captives freed: Israeli minister aje.io/f8595l?update=... via @AJEnglish

14 5 14 2.3K

63

Nick Riemer reposted

lydia_shelly @lydia_shelly · Oct 12

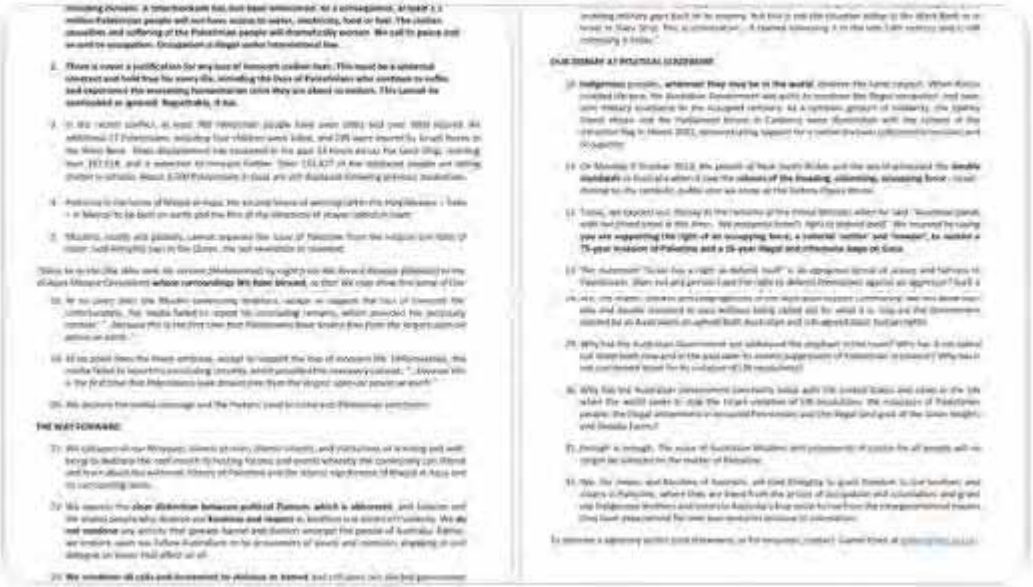
Statement issued by members of the Australian Muslim community on the issue of Palestine. #palestine #auspol #nswpol



13 30 60 15K

64

Nick Riemer reposted
Josh Pallas @joshpallas · Oct 13
Why is it newsworthy that a staffer went to a protest? Why is an apology warranted for attending a protest? Staffers should be left alone by the media unless there's impropriety.
Sky News Australia @SkyNewsAust · Oct 12
A 22-year-old staffer who works for Environment Minister Tanya Plibersek has apologised after attending a pro-Palestine rally in Sydney earlier this week, but concerns are now being raised over Labor's ability to hire "decent" staff.
...
Show more
28
72
512
42K

65

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 12

The Sydney rally is happening. This Sunday, 1 pm, at Hyde Park.

If you cannot stomach war crimes and collective punishment, you must stand with us. If you care about civil liberties and right to public assembly, you must stand with us. We need your solidarity now more than ever.

31 204 659 27K

66

Nick Riemer reposted
Save Australian Universities @SaveAusUnis · Oct 13
Big respect to @mcassidywelch. Academia is about integrity. This is why most of the managers don't belong into academia, because they don't have integrity. Solidarity with staff at ACU, who are mistreated, disrespected and abused and still maintain integrity!
@JasonClareMP twitter.com/mcassidywelch/...
This post is unavailable.
5
20
1.9K

67

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 13
Palestine Legal Stands Firmly with the Palestine Movement, Condemns Rising Anti-Palestinian Attacks
PALESTINE LEGAL STANDS FIRMLY WITH THE PALESTINE MOVEMENT, CONDEMNS RISING ANTI-PALESTINIAN ATTACKS.
palestinelegal.org
Palestine Legal Stands Firmly with the Palestine Mov Palestine Legal expresses our firm and unequivocal solidarity with the Palestinian people in their ...
9
3
5
1.1K

68

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 11

Birzeit University condemns the Israeli occupation's attack on the Islamic University in Gaza Strip on Monday Oct 6, 2023, and the bombing of several university's buildings. The assault caused substantial damage to a number exterior and interior equipment and facades.⅓

2 34 83 6.6K

69

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Oct 13

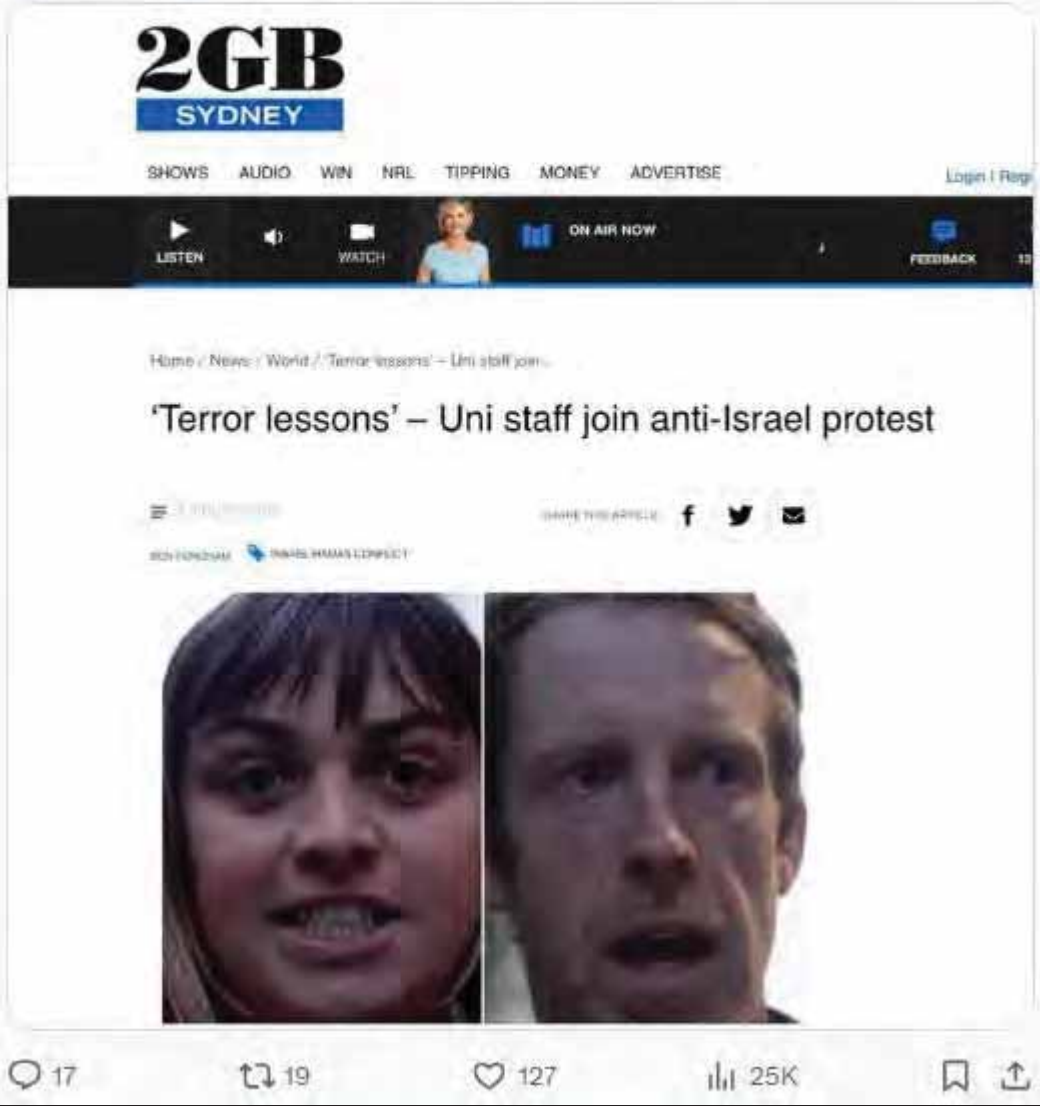
We will not be intimidated by rightwing media commentators or police threats
With ½ a million mobilised by Israel, white phosphorous & increasing bombings, it's crucial we speak out against escalating brutalities
It's more important than ever to stand in solidarity
@Dave_Brophy



17 19 127 25K

70

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 13

Happy for Ben Fordham, or anyone else, to publicise the fact that I oppose Israeli brutality against the Palestinians. You should too!

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Oct 13

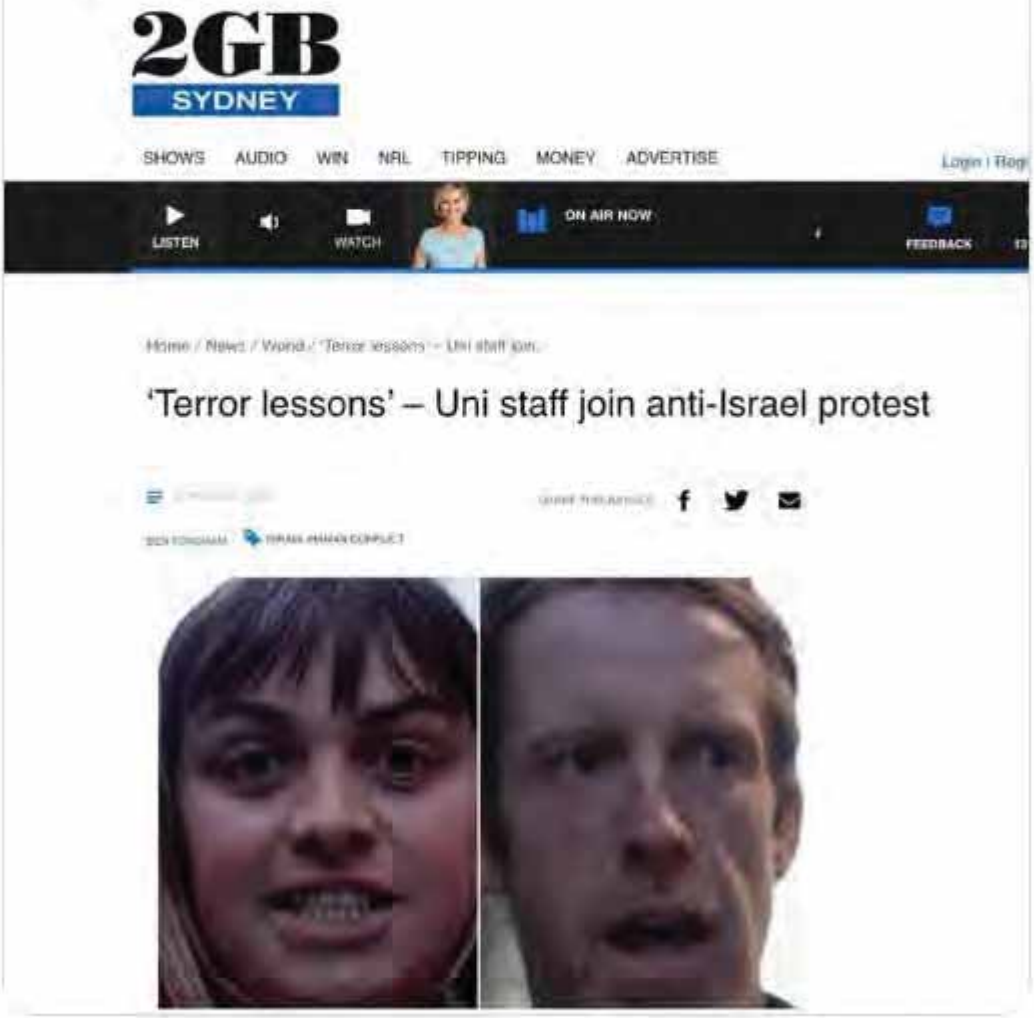
We will not be intimidated by rightwing media commentators or police threats
With ½ a million mobilised by Israel, white phosphorous & increasing bombings, it's crucial we speak out against escalating brutalities
It's more important than ever to stand in solidarity...
Show more



20 19 159 17K

71

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Oct 13

A statement from @MehreenFaruqi , @SueHigginson_ and I on the Palestinian Action Group Rally happening this Sunday at 1pm.

STATEMENT FROM MEHREEN FARUQI, JENNY LEONG AND SUE HIGGINSON ON THE PALESTINE ACTION GROUP RALLY

We confirm our support for the Palestine Action Group's rally on Sunday 15 October calling for an end to the Israeli occupation of Palestine this Sunday in Sydney's Hyde Park.

We reject the attempts by NSW Police and the NSW Government to prevent the Palestinian community and their supporters from exercising the right to engage in peaceful protest. These shameful attempts to silence those calling attention to the worsening humanitarian crisis in Gaza set a chilling precedent for freedom of speech and threaten the right to protest in this State.

Palestinian and Jewish communities are suffering. All communities have the right to safety as they gather and grieve together and they have the right to engage in peaceful political protest together. This is one of the core tenets of our democracy and must be protected.

Everyone in this State has the right to gather peacefully to demonstrate their views, regardless of their background or political persuasion.

They do not need police permission to peacefully assemble and protest on public land – in spite of this Government's bad faith statements to the contrary. They certainly shouldn't be subjected to threats by the police that attempt to intimidate people into not protesting. The announcement that the NSW Police will be granted extraordinary powers to search protestors without reasonable cause is alarming and draconian.

Already, too many lives, so many of them civilians, have been lost. With UN experts condemning the indiscriminate bombing of Gaza as "collective punishment" in breach of international law and food, water, and electricity supplies in Gaza running dangerously low, we know the suffering will only continue.

War is never the answer. The Australian Government must work to de-escalate the situation, and call for an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. To end the cycle of violence, the illegal Israeli occupation of Palestine must end.

We mourn the loss of life. We stand in solidarity with the movement for a free Palestine. We are unanimous in our view that there is no place anywhere for anti-semitism, Islamophobia, racism, or discrimination.

Here in NSW and around the world, we will always support the right for people to engage in collective action and peaceful protest.

56 90 269 18K

72

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Oct 13

"I am part of a class whose deaths don't matter but whose violence is counted . . . If you can't understand these words, then try to feel what makes a body write them."

Micaela Sahhar on the demand for Palestinians to explain and defend their humanness.

2 57 114 8.7K

73

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 15

From Tzedek Collective. Lots of love to our Jewish friends and allies who refuse to allow a genocidal regime to speak on their behalf as it massacres Palestinians with impunity. We walk into the future together, for a free Palestine, for a world free of racism. 🇵🇸❤️✡️

2 104 338 11K

74

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 15

My call in @OverlandJournal for solidarity with Palestine, which is also a necessity for defending democratic rights in the West. With Israel committing inconceivable crimes in Gaza, it has never been more important than now.

5 12 28 2.2K

75

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 15

There have been massive rallies for Palestine and Gaza in the UK overnight. Let's be out in force in Hyde Park at 1 today to call for an end to permanent war and genocidal crimes against Palestinians, equality & justice for everyone in the Middle East, and a free Palestine.

20 53 151 13K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 15

Standing in solidarity with Palestine has never been more important, including for the defence of democratic freedoms in the West.

2 2 932

76

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 15

Lots of interest in our placards for the Sydney Palestine demonstration, which clearly going to be big!

23 19 131 5.2K

77

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 15

Official government spares no effort to slander us and intimidate us from standing up for Palestine, and still a huge crowd turns out in Sydney. End the Gaza blockade, end the genocide. Free Palestine.

22 119 367 14K

78

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 15
Couldn't be prouder to have been out with Sydney Uni staff again standing for Palestine.
0:35
95
153
714
27K

79

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 15
Sydney's Palestine protest today brought together 5000+ antiracists of all backgrounds & all faiths - Muslims, Jews, Christians, atheists - in a powerful & moving call for justice. Shame on @ChrisMinnsMP & the other politicians who tried to stop it happening. We will remember you
JUSTICE FOR PALESTINE
22
111
437
13K

80

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Oct 15

The ultimate goal is to push Palestinians out of Gaza... this amounts to a war crime. Its the forced displacement of a population that are already mostly refugees... thats why people in Gaza are saying they will not leave their homes because they know it could mean permanent exile.

95 2.5K 4.5K 244K

81

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 16

Important appeal from @BirzeitU. University staff and their unions must respond.

> Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 16
>
> Do Not be Silent about Genocide
> Open Letter from Birzeit University in Palestine to International Academic Institutions > bit.ly/3tE2viS

BIRZEIT UNIVERSITY

October 15, 2023

Do Not be Silent about Genocide

Open Letter From Birzeit University in Palestine to International Academic Institutions

We at Birzeit University call upon international academic institutions to take concrete action to stop the genocidal war on the Palestinian people and to end Israeli settler colonialism. Over the past 8 days, Israel's brutal and vicious bombardment of the Gaza Strip—which has been besieged by Israel for the past 17 years—has resulted in the killing of over 2,400 Palestinians, one third of whom are children, the injuring of over 10,000 Palestinians, the deliberate displacement of more than half a million Palestinians and the call for the removal of another million from the north of the Gaza Strip, the destruction of 60,000 residential units, in addition to targeted attacks on hospitals, schools and universities.

Recent statements by Israeli government officials calling Palestinians "human animals" that are to be starved and further made hostage through a complete blockade of food, water, electricity, and fuel amplifies Israel's founding racist ideology that operates with pervasive international impunity and complicity. This war of elimination begun in 1948 continues to escalate, devoid of humane rules or ethical constraints, exacerbating an already insufferable living situation for Palestinians.

Birzeit University calls upon the international academic community, unions, and students to fulfill their intellectual and academic duty of seeking truth, maintaining a critical distance from state-sponsored propaganda, and to hold the perpetrators of genocide and those complicit with them accountable.

We also hold Israeli universities responsible as they have been indispensable to the regime of settler colonial oppression and apartheid, complicit in grave violations of human rights including developing weaponry, military doctrines, and legal justification for the indiscriminate, mass targeting of Palestinians. These academic institutions must be shunned by the international academic community.

Birzeit University urges the international community to immediately intervene to stop this barbaric aggression and to protect Palestinians from the dramatic escalation of Israeli war crimes, crimes against humanity, and ethnic cleansing throughout all of Palestine. The ongoing impunity granted by the international community to the Israeli occupying forces must end today

8 · 21 · 1.7K

82

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 16

'The onus is not on us to demonstrate our moral credentials. There's no blood on our hands. There are no grounds to question our morality or our political objectives' - my article on Palestine solidarity in @OverlandJournal , accompanying Micaela Sahhar's essay 'On human animals'.

> Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Oct 16
> Replying to @OverlandJournal
> ...followed by @NickRiemer1's argument for why it has never been more vital to stand in solidarity with Palestine. overland.org.au/2023/10/it-has...

3 8 17 3K

83

Nick Riemer reposted

Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Oct 16

Important hybrid forum this Friday, October 20, 17-18.30 (Sydney time). Palestinian, Jewish and other speakers on the history and context of the Gaza conflict and apartheid in Israel, and the importance of the BDS campaign, including in universities.

1 29 26 8.5K

84

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 16

Excellent line-up of speakers for this event on Friday: Dr Ihab Shalbak, Rand Khatib, @jamal_nabulsi, Dr Ronit Lentin, Kevin Fine, @LuciaSorbera, @NickReimer1. #USyd folks please share and attend!

> Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Oct 16
>
> Important hybrid forum this Friday, October 20, 17-18.30 (Sydney time). Palestinian, Jewish and other speakers on the history and context of the Gaza conflict and apartheid in Israel, and the importance of the BDS campaign, including in universities.

4 12 30 4.9K

85

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 16

Our 'Unionists for Palestine' solidarity statement is almost at 300 signatures, purely off the back of word of mouth and personal contacts. If you're a union member in Australia and haven't signed yet, please do so, and encourage others to join you. forms.gle/tyNHDoBRc9KVei...

101 239 362 84K

86

Nick Riemer reposted

Ho Ho Ho Chi Minh @JonPiccini · Oct 16

I just signed this petition, you should too.

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 16
>
> Our 'Unionists for Palestine' solidarity statement is almost at 300 signatures, purely off the back of word of mouth and personal contacts. If you're a union member in Australia and haven't signed yet, please do so, and encourage others to join you.
> forms.gle/tyNHDoBRc9KVei...
>
>
>

8 16 57 5.9K

87

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 17

Over 500 signatures! If you're a union member in Australia, add your name at the link to show solidarity with Palestinians and support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 16
>
> Our 'Unionists for Palestine' solidarity statement is almost at 300 signatures, purely off the back of word of mouth and personal contacts. If you're a union member in Australia and haven't signed yet, please do so, and encourage others to join you.
> forms.gle/tyNHDoBRc9KVei...
>
>
>

6 71 105 11K

88

Nick Riemer reposted
naama @derridalicious · Oct 17
Signed, as a Jewish (& Israeli) NTEU member
Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 16
Our 'Unionists for Palestine' solidarity statement is almost at 300 signatures, purely off the back of word of mouth and personal contacts. If you're a union member in Australia and haven't signed yet, please do so, and encourage others to join you.
forms.gle/tyNHDoBRc9KVei...
UNIONISTS
FOR PALESTINE
5
16
127
11K

89

Nick Riemer reposted
BDS_Australia @BDS_Australia · Oct 17
Replying to @NickReimer1
We call for Australian unions and unionists to #Boycott #Divest and for the Australian government to apply #Sanctions (just like they did in July this year on over 1,000 Russian individuals and entities..)
foreignminister.gov.au/minister/penny....
foreignminister.gov.au
Further sanctions in response to Russia's invasion of Today Australia has imposed targeted sanctions on 35 entities in Russia's defence, technology and ...
1
5
6
698

90-92

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 18

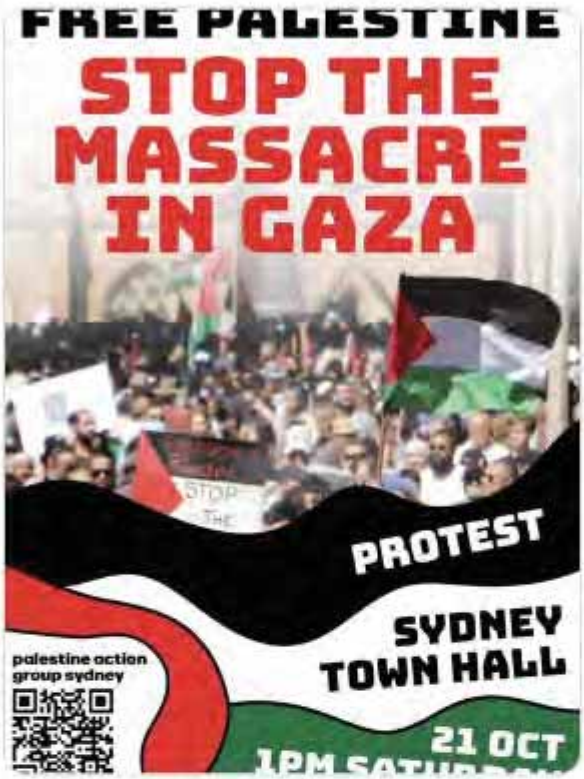
In face of the unspeakable news from Gaza, we are not powerless and we need to act. Here are three things you can do.

1. Attend the next solidarity demonstration where you live. Sydney's is at 1pm this Saturday at Town Hall Sqare. Thread.



45 · 138 · 378 · 22K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 18

2. Sign any solidarity statements that you can find. Here's one for union members which has almost 1000 signatures already.
forms.gle/tExgYvPWZ8UbC7...

4 · 21 · 55 · 2K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 18

3. Support solidarity organisations like @APAN4Palestine and groups supporting @BDSmovement. Donate to appeals for Gaza - there are many.

None of these things can reverse the horrors in Gaza. But they will contribute to a political climate where Israel's impunity is challenged

1 · 13 · 41 · 1.7K

93

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 18

Birzeit University calls on the international community to put an end to the genocide and war crimes of the Israeli occupation against Palestinians. The latest and worst of which is the massacre in Ahli Arab Hospital (Baptist) in Gaza, resulting in more than 500 martyrs.

5 116 139 12K

94

Nick Riemer reposted

John Reynolds @SeanMac_R · Oct 18

Public statement by over 800 scholars and practitioners of international law, conflict studies and genocide studies, warning of the possibility of genocide being perpetrated by Israeli forces against Palestinians in the Gaza Strip

31 1.1K 1.6K 225K

95

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Oct 18

Western media must stop repeating Israeli lies & repeating Israeli claim that Jihad bombed the hospital, like it did with the beheaded babies. It is time for serious, responsible & ethical journalism. Palestinians are paying with their lives over the recklessness of western media

8 132 320 12K

96

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 17

I have never see worse genocide apologia than @camstewarttheoz's latest piece, in which he justifies a door-to-door massacre of Palestinian civilians. "It will be slow, bloody, and unspeakably brutal," he says. As we call for peace, this propagandist calls for death.

3 48 166 4.8K

97-98

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 18

USyd NTEU stands with students in opposing cuts to Philosophy. Cuts affect everyone. The uni has the money to offer a full range of courses. In choosing not to, it obediently sets out to habituate the next generation to austerity. It's great that that's just not going to happen.

2 9 49 2.5K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 18

3 531

99

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 18
Donate to this vital aid appeal for Gaza, sponsored by @apheda, who have a long and proud record of support for Palestine.
Union Aid Abroad @apheda · Oct 17
With your support, the MA'AN Development Center will work with local organisations to provide water, food, medical supplies and shelter; psychosocial support for families and individuals; and dignity and hygiene kits for displaced people in Gaza. gaza-emergency-appeal-2023.raisely.com
2
2
11
1.6K

100

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 18
Please donate to the Union Aid Abroad @apheda appeal for the people of Gaza. Union Aid Abroad is the Australian union movement's overseas development arm, and has a long and proud history of support for Palestine. gaza-emergency-appeal-2023.raisely.com
IONIS
FOR LESTI
4
16
24
2K

101

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Oct 18

Actions across the continent for Palestine.
1. Vigil in Perth
2. Vigil in Canberra
3. Forum in Sydney & online
4. Rally in Canberra
5. Rally in Brisbane
6. Rally in Sydney
7. Rally in Perth
8. Vigil in Hobart
9. Rally in Melbourne...
Show more

9 99 110 14K

102

Nick Riemer reposted

Rawan Arraf @rawanarraf · Oct 18

Your thoughts are not. Decades of cover for this impunity. Over the past week your govt provided carte blanche for your "friends" these war criminals, to bomb and bomb and bomb, deny food, water, electricity, fuel; the necessary elements for life and survival, from these liars.

> Senator Penny Wong @SenatorWong · Oct 18
> The scenes from the explosion at a Gaza City hospital are deeply distressing. It is clear there has been a devastating loss of life.
>
> Our thoughts are with those killed, those injured and their loved ones.

8 82 237 12K

103

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 19

Do Not be Silent about Genocide Open Letter from Birzeit University in Palestine to International Academic Institutions bit.ly/3tE2vlS

4 103 125 13K

104

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Oct 19

At least 31 dead in Rafah now, with people still trapped under the rubble. Do you know how Palestinians report casualties? According to family. How horrifying is that.

13 225 452 35K

105

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 19

Read this magnificent speech from @Dave_Brophy, and then tell me that you don't have an obligation to stand with Palestinians.

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 19

I had a chance to speak today at a student-organised snap rally for #Palestine on campus. Palestinian & Jewish students spoke more movingly than I could, but sharing my contribution here

3 5 16 1.6K

106

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 19

There's a real groundswell of Palestine solidarity among members of the union movement at the moment. Time for union leaderships to catch up and unequivocally support Palestinian rights - for the sake of everyone in the Middle East.

10 11 49 1.7K

107

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 19

Poetry for a Free Palestine. "Joudah's poem reminds us that Palestinians are repeatedly required to prove their humanity and even love for their oppressor."

links.org.au
Poetry for a Free Palestine
Markela Panegyres — As Israel enacts a genocidal war on Gaza, the words of Palestinian-American ...

4 3 659

| | |
|---|---|
| 108 | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 19Important act of Palestine solidarity from @NTEUnion. Proud that my membership dues are contributing to this. @NTEUNSWUnion Aid Abroad @apheda · Oct 19Solidarity from @NTEU for Gaza as they have just informed us of their decision to grant $15K to our appeal ❤️🟤 @unionsaustralia @eduint @ituc3 5 48 2.3K |
| 109 | Nick Riemer repostedTasnim Mahmoud Sammak 🇵🇸 @SammakTasnim · Oct 18As Palestinian youth living in the Australian colony, we are enraged and not surprised that the Australian settler government stands with Israel's genocidal war on Gaza. 9 16 35 2.4K |

110

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 20

Pro-Palestinian protestors have blocked access to the US surveillance base at Pine Gap in Alice Springs.

A group of activists at the Pine Gap Joint Defence Facility near Alice Springs. Picture: Territorians for Palestine

Pro-Palestinian protestors have blocked access to the US surveillance base at Pine Gap in Alice Springs, with one protestor locking himself to a barrel splattered with red paint on the middle of the road.

Workers at the military base have been prevented from entering from around 5am, with metal cables previously covering the road.

At 7:20am the fire brigade arrived and have begun the process of removing the barrel from the road.

More to come

145 524 1.5K 75K

111

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 20

Over 210 people in person and online at the @sydneystaff4bds forum 'Gaza in context. The duty of solidarity in the West' at @Sydney_Uni. Students, staff and community coming together to speak, understand and act. Recording coming soon.

33 27 135 5.5K

112

Nick Riemer reposted

Padraic Gibson @paddygibson · Oct 20

Israel is not simply above the law; Israel is the law of empire.

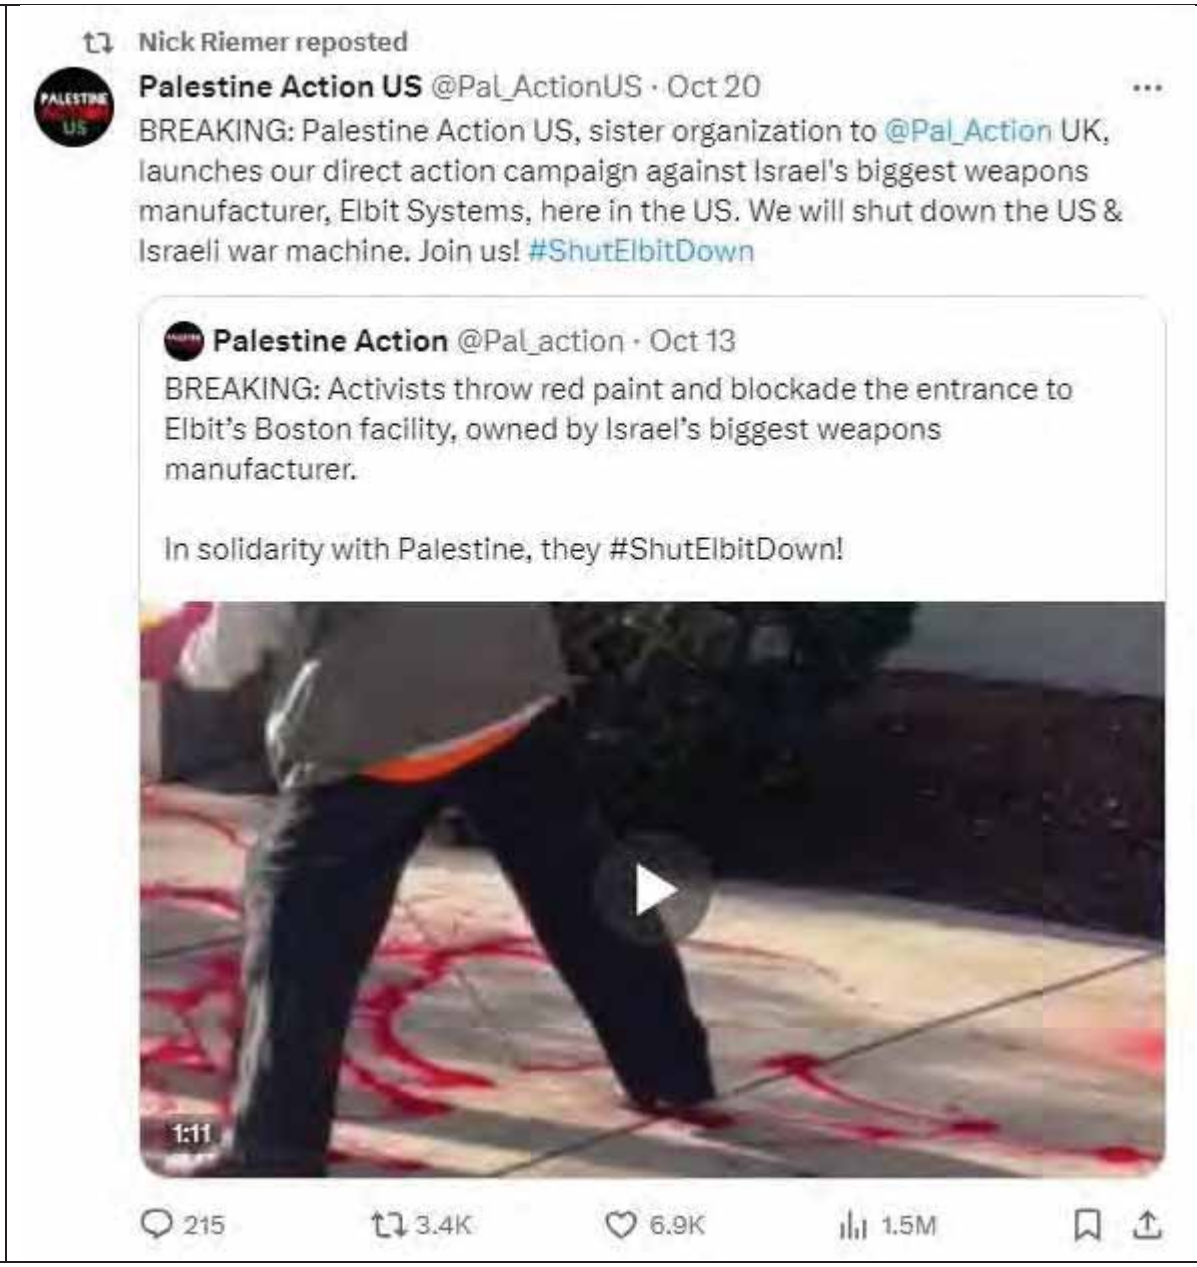
Israel is not above politics; Israel is the politics of settler-colonialism.

Israel is not above ethics; Israel is the ethics of Western domination

-Dr Ihab Shalbak at the Sydney Uni Staff for BDS forum tonight

7 42 104 2.9K

113



Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Action US @Pal_ActionUS · Oct 20
BREAKING: Palestine Action US, sister organization to @Pal_Action UK, launches our direct action campaign against Israel's biggest weapons manufacturer, Elbit Systems, here in the US. We will shut down the US & Israeli war machine. Join us! #ShutElbitDown
Palestine Action @Pal_action · Oct 13
BREAKING: Activists throw red paint and blockade the entrance to Elbit's Boston facility, owned by Israel's biggest weapons manufacturer.
In solidarity with Palestine, they #ShutElbitDown!
1:11
215
3.4K
6.9K
1.5M

114

Nick Riemer reposted

Free Gaza Australia @GFFAusGroup · Oct 20

🇵🇸2,500+ people rally and march in #Canberra for justice in Palestine, demanding #CeasefireNOW, an end to Israel's #genocide of Palestinian people and the illegal blockade of Gaza and for Albanese Labor govt to stop supporting genocide. #FreePalestine

15 27 1.1K

115

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Oct 20

'With the arcs of Palestinian dehumanisation so ingrained in Western media, institutions, and government, resistance to this discourse must come from people everywhere, all the time.'

@EDolanEvans on the law and political economy of dehumanisation

overland.org.au
The wretched of Gaza: the law and political economy
The discourses of dehumanisation that spread from Israeli narratives and are championed by Western ...

6 11 1.8K

116

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 21

Finishing up our working bee and getting ready to head to Town Hall. Join the rally at 1pm. #UnionistsforPalestine

8 6 46 2.5K

117

Nick Riemer reposted

Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Oct 20

Part of my interview with Today, this morning talking about the solution to ending the cycle of violence (and no it's not giving everyone a big hug?)

47 171 545 35K

118

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 21

First outing for the new Unionists for Palestine banner at the Sydney demonstration. Members from NTEU, Nurses and Midwives, ASU, MUA and many other unions will be gathering behind it in solidarity with a free Palestine

151 90 353 13K

119

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 21

Another huge public upsurge for Palestine in Sydney. Huge cross-section of society here, except of course for our gutless political 'leaders' cowering behind Israel's 'right to defend itself' when that means Gaza being flattened and starved.

38 160 471 15K

120

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 21
Crowd in Sydney now about to march. Chants of "Palestine will be free", "Long live Gaza", "In our thousands in our millions, we are all Palestinians".
0:44
142
251
707
24K

121

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 21
Union members from @NTEUnion and @raffwu marching for Palestine.
32
26
94
4.2K

122

Nick Riemer reposted

Free Gaza Australia @GFFAusGroup · Oct 21

30,000 people rally and march in #Gadigal / #Sydney for justice in Palestine, demanding #CeasefireNOW, an end to Israel's #genocide of Palestinian people and the illegal blockade of Gaza and for @AlboMP Labor govt to stop supporting genocide. #FreePalestine

15 127 233 10K

123

Nick Riemer reposted
Rawan Arraf @rawanarraf · Oct 21
If you don't understand 'from the river to the sea', you don't understand, 'always was, always will be'.
Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Oct 21
#NewProfilePic
FROM THE VER TO TI
SEA ALWAYS WAS WAYS WILL 21
158
623
125K

124

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Oct 21

Just 20 trucks for 2.2 million people.

Meanwhile the Israeli regime bombardment continues not only unabated and with complete impunity but also with increased material support from the US.

> Mada Masr مدى مصر @MadaMasr · Oct 21
>
> BREAKING: 20 trucks of aid enter Gaza via Rafah crossing
>
> Twenty trucks of aid crossed from North Sinai into the Gaza Strip on Saturday morning via the Rafah border crossing, the first supplies to be delivered to Gaza's population of 2.2 million Palestinians in almost ...
> Show more

49 1.4K 2.4K 146K

125

Nick Riemer reposted
Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 22
War on Gaza ... A war on humans and intellect
الحرب على غزة.... حرب على الإنسان والقلم
1:03
2
47
67
5.2K

126

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 21
Over 1000 Palestinian, Arab, SWANA, First Nations, Bla(c)k artists & allies sign solidarity statement to Tony Burke, Minister for the Arts, demanding action to stop Israel's campaign of genocide, occupation & apartheid.
@OverlandJournal
overland.org.au
12
110
239
15K

127

128

129

130

131

Nick Riemer reposted

Union Aid Abroad @apheda · Oct 21

2.2 million Gazans are still cut off from water, food, fuel. They are dying. They need #AidNow. They need help from Australia and @AlboMP for an urgent #CeasefireNow @ACFID @unionsaustralia @VicUnions @TeachersFed @nswnma @NTEUnion @ituc

8 108 112 19K

132

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Oct 22

Apparently these leaflets were dropped by Israel on Gaza North today: "anyone who chooses not to evacuate could be identified as an accomplice of a terrorist org." Basically they transform the hundreds of thousands of civilians who remained in their homes into killable subjects

1 107 142 52K

133

Nick Riemer reposted

Greg Barns SC @BarnsGreg · Oct 22

Replying to @NickRiemer1 and @OverlandJournal

I just subscribed We must support media in Australia that supports #Palestinians

1 2 461

134

Nick Riemer reposted

Hannah McCann @binarythis · Oct 22

We're here rallying for a free Palestine in Melbourne today @NTEUUniMelb

92 49 280 11K

135

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Oct 22

Here we are doing everything we can to summarise, shrink, meme it, make it digestible against our better judgment - so please don't insult us and say you didn't know. Say you chose to ignore it, say you chose to be complicit instead.

84 170 6.6K

136

Nick Riemer reposted

Padraic Gibson @paddygibson · Oct 22

30,000 strong on the streets for Gaza yesterday on Gadigal land.

Sydney's multicultural working class stands with Palestine even as the gutless Labor Party back Israel's genocidal war.

The movement will only grow. Break Australian support for Israel. Down with imperialism!

124 161 472 15K

137

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Oct 22 proud to join other unionists standing with Palestine today

7 7 38 1.6K

138

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Oct 23

Israel is refusing to accept its hostages. Think about that next time you question the humanity of Palestinians, who are committed to the return of every Palestinian in Israeli prisons.

> Al Jazeera English @AJEnglish · Oct 22
>
> Replying to @AJEnglish
>
> Israeli PM's office has confirmed that Israel declined to accept two Israeli hostages from Hamas, stating that they will not address what is considered to be "mendacious propaganda" by the group.
>
> LIVE updates aje.io/a8glal

4 203 402 25K

139

Nick Riemer reposted

Cerveaux non disponibles @CerveauxNon · Oct 23

Un monde fou à Paris place de la République pour demander l'arrêt des attaques d'israël à Gaza et la fin de la colonisation

65 377 983 54K

140

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 23

The rank-and-file unionists' petition for Palestine is getting close to 2000 signatures from across the Australian labour movement. Especially glad to see the hundreds and hundreds of @NTEUnion members who've signed. Add your name if you haven't already: forms.gle/RfLrTaAhCtZaP8...

members in solidarity with tine peace, justice and solidarity with an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an imm blockade of Gaza end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to a demonstrations around Australia for Palestine protest, which is fundamental to democracy.
was the initiative of NSW members of the National Tertiary Educatio

17 100 176 16K

141

Nick Riemer reposted

alana lentin @alanalentin · Oct 23

New collective just dropped @westernsydneyu #WSU4Palestine. Sign our open letter docs.google.com/forms/d/1MjZR6...

7 28 49 8.3K

142

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 23

How good is this incredible work from insanely talented comrade @efanlyons - please them give them a follow; they're a young, powerful voice of Blak sovereignty and they deserve your attention.

9 176 724 21K

143

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Oct 23

Media coverage may be dying down, but Palestinians in Gaza are reporting that last night saw the most intensive Israeli regime bombardment yet, including in the south which was continues to be touted by Israeli officials as a safe zone.

15 1K 1.3K 50K

144

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Oct 23

Over the last 2 weeks, across the West Bank, Israeli soldiers have been invading Palestinian communities with a ferocious intensity.

1000s have been arrested & are being held captive.

The total no. of Palestinians currently incarcerated by the Israeli regime is approx 10,000.

4 421 450 23K

145

Nick Riemer reposted

Wendy Bacon @Wendy_Bacon · Oct 24

If you are a unionist, you may wish to add your name to this petition

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 23

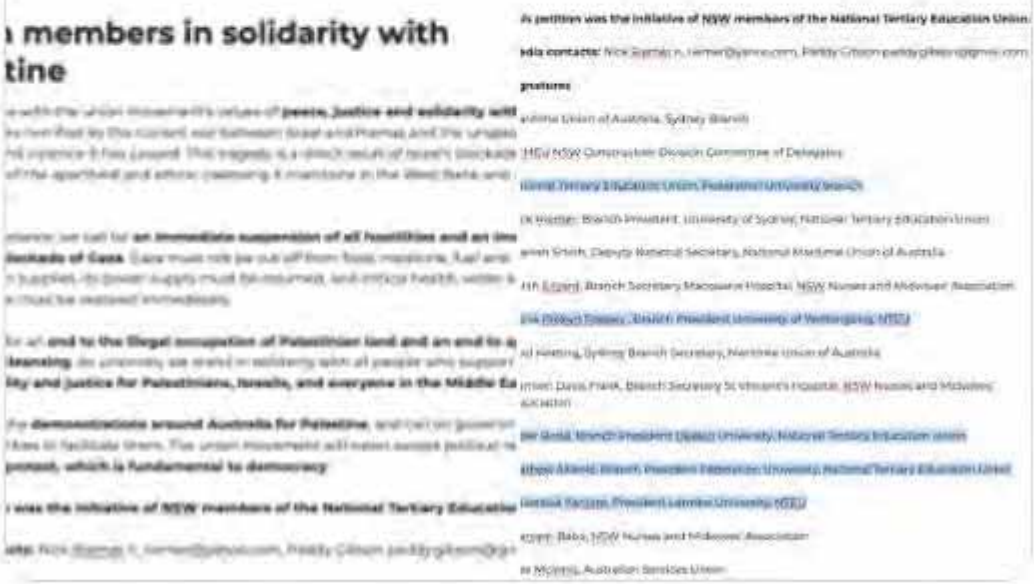
The rank-and-file unionists' petition for Palestine is getting close to 2000 signatures from across the Australian labour movement. Especially glad to see the hundreds and hundreds of @NTEUnion members who've signed. Add your name if you haven't already: forms.gle/RfLrTaAhCtZaP8...



1 6 8 1.2K

146

Nick Riemer reposted

Union Aid Abroad @apheda · Oct 24

This is the daily update from the UN in Gaza. 436 Palestinians have been killed over the past 24 hours. Another 20 trucks carrying food, water and medical supplies were allowed to cross the border. 1/2 ochaopt.org/content/hostil...

2 16 9 1K

147

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 24

Ne restons pas silencieux face au génocide
Lettre ouverte de l'Université palestinienne de Birzeit aux institutions académiques internationales.
birzeit.edu/ar/do-not-be-s...

BIRZEIT UNIVERSITY

25 octobre 2023

Ne restons pas silencieux face au génocide

Lettre ouverte de l'Université palestinienne de Birzeit aux institutions académiques internationales

Nous, à l'Université de Birzeit, exhortons les institutions académiques internationales à prendre des mesures concrètes pour mettre fin à la guerre génocidaire contre le peuple palestinien et au colonialisme israélien.

Au cours du seizième jour de bombardements brutaux et vicieux d'Israël sur la bande de Gaza – qui est assiégée par Israël depuis 17 ans – plus de 4650 Palestiniens sont morts, dont le tiers sont des enfants, et plus de 14 000 sont blessés. Ces actes criminels ont entraîné également le déplacement forcé de plus d'un demi-million de Palestiniens et l'appel à déplacer un autre million du nord de la bande de Gaza, la destruction de 60 000 unités résidentielles, et le bombardement délibéré des hôpitaux, des écoles et des universités.

Les récentes déclarations du gouvernement israélien qualifiant les Palestiniens comme des "bêtes humaines" à affamer et à prendre en otage par un blocus total de la nourriture, de l'eau, de l'électricité et du carburant rendent visible l'idéologie raciste fondatrice d'Israël, qui opère en toute impunité et avec la complicité de la communauté internationale. Cette guerre visant à l'élimination des Palestiniens a commencé en 1948 et elle continue de s'intensifier, sans règles humaines ni règles éthiques, aggravant une situation de vie déjà insupportable pour les Palestiniens.

L'université de Birzeit fait appel à la communauté académique internationale, aux syndicats et aux étudiants pour qu'ils remplissent leur devoir intellectuel et académique de recherche de la vérité, à garder une distance critique par rapport à la propagande parrainée par l'État israélien et à demander des comptes aux auteurs du génocide et à leurs complices.

Nous considérons les universités israéliennes également responsables de cette situation car elles ont joué un rôle indispensable dans le régime d'oppression coloniale et d'apartheid, et elles ont été complices de graves violations des droits de l'homme, y compris le développement d'armements, de doctrines militaires et de justifications juridiques pour le ciblage massif et indiscriminé des Palestiniens. Ces institutions académiques doivent être bannies par la communauté académique internationale.

L'Université de Birzeit exhorte la communauté internationale à intervenir immédiatement pour mettre fin à cette agression barbare et pour protéger les Palestiniens de l'escalade dramatique des crimes de guerre israéliens, des crimes contre l'humanité et du nettoyage ethnique dans l'ensemble de la Palestine. L'impunité accordée par la communauté internationale aux forces d'occupation israéliennes doit cesser dès aujourd'hui.

2 34 38 3.5K

148

Nick Riemer reposted

Zachary Foster @_ZachFoster · Oct 24

Why don't Palestinians embrace non-violent resistence?

You've probably heard this question asked a lot over the past 2 weeks.

A short response. A 🟥.

706 19K 34K 3.4M

149

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 25

'From Gadigal To Gaza': important Indigenous-Palestinian solidarity meeting tomorrow in Marrickville hosted by Blak Caucus & Autonomous Collective Against Racism, with Lizzie Jarrett, @efanlyons @LyndaJune1 @Lana_Tatour @RandaAFattah @amalfalastini.

14 27 61 5.8K

150

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 25

Well-attended lunchtime Palestine solidarity protest organised by students at Sydney Uni today. Grateful to have been given the chance to say why taking a side matters, and why taking the side of the oppressed means listening to Palestinians and standing with Palestine.

39 38 138 7.5K

151

Nick Riemer reposted

lydia_shelly @lydia_shelly · Oct 25

Tonight I was elected President of the @NSWCCL. I'm looking forward to promoting & defending civil liberties. I hope to build upon the legacy of the last 60 years of advocacy! Thank you to past pres @joshpallas for your leadership - you leave big 🔪 to fill! #ccl #auspol #nswpol

12 9 49 3.1K

152

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 26

If you read anything, read every single word of this searing brilliant piece by @sareemakdisi @nplusonemag nplusonemag.com/online-only/on...

10 701 1K 98K

153

Nick Riemer reposted

NSW Council for Civil Liberties @NSWCCL · Oct 26

Welcoming @lydia_shelly as newly elected President of @NSWCCL. Last night @joshpallas handed the reigns to Lydia. Both are both incredible warriors defending civil liberties and standing up for human rights. 💪👏

3 4 23 934

154

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Oct 26

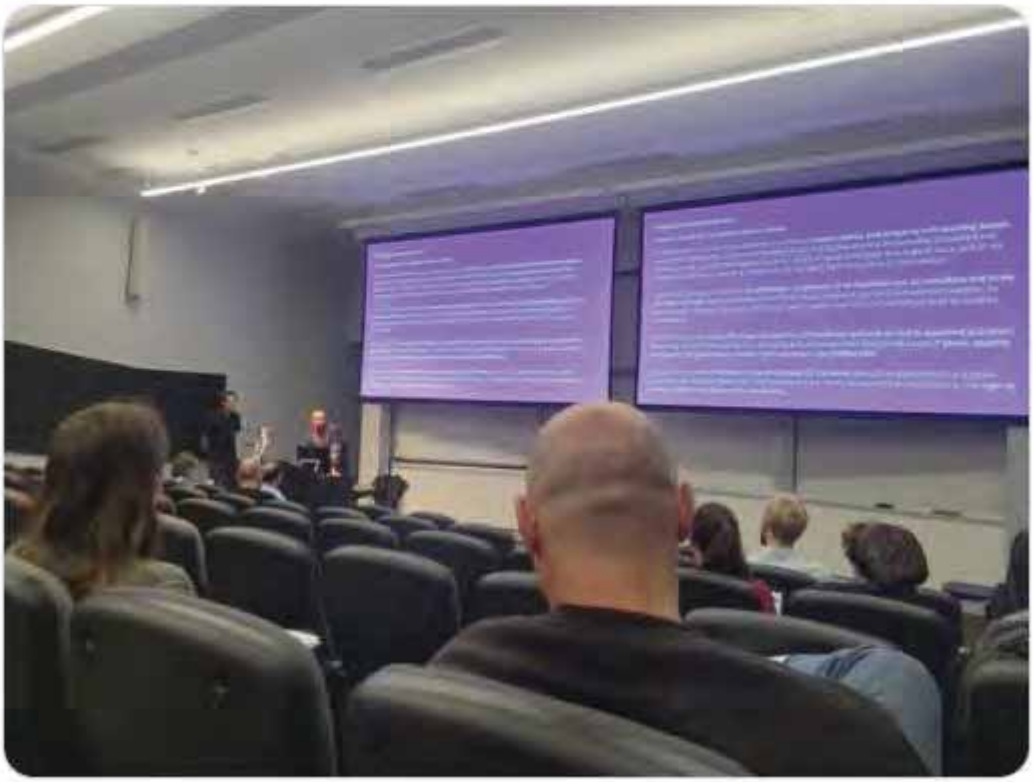
Proud to have moved a successful motion in solidarity with Palestine at the University of Sydney branch of my union @NTEUNSW

Thanks to all my colleagues at the meeting and a special thanks to comrade @strom_m



3 60 383 7.6K

155

Nick Riemer reposted

Dylan Griffiths @DylanInnerWest · Oct 26

Waverley council descending into madness with councillors trying to remove councils only First Nations councillor from the reconciliation action committee after he spoke out about Palestine.
Will @WaverleyLabor be supporting this motion?

Extraordinary Council Agenda — 26 October 2023

NOTICE OF MOTION
CM/4.2/23.10E

WAVERLEY

| | |
|---|---|
| Subject: | Appointment of Councillors to Committees |
| TRIM No: | SF23/196 |
| Submitted by: | Councillor GoltsmanCouncillor BettsCouncillor Kay |

MOTION:

That Council:

1. Removes Crs Fabiano and Wy Kanak from the following committees:
   (a) Traffic Committee
   (b) Access and Inclusion Advisory Panel.
   (c) Audit, Risk and Improvement Committee.
   (d) Multicultural Advisory Committee.
   (e) Reconciliation Action Plan Advisory Committee.
   (f) Sustainability Expert Advisory Panel.
2. Removes Crs Fabiano and Wy Kanak as delegates to the following organisations:
   (a) Southern Sydney Regional Organisation of Councils
   (b) Sydney Coastal Council Group.

Background

This notice of motion was signed by Crs Goltsman, Betts and Kay in accordance with clause 17.7 of the Code of Meeting Practice.

8 34 72 4.9K

156

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 26

Our members' meeting of the Sydney Uni @NTEUnion today didn't quite reach quorum, but overwhelmingly endorsed the union solidarity with Palestine statement, which is now over 2100-strong. If you belong to an Australian union and haven't yet signed, do so:
forms.gle/v9d3pJZtpA6N7y...

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

This petition was the initiative of NSW members of the National Tertiary Education Union.

38 51 124 9.6K

157

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Oct 26

During the Holocaust, as millions of Jews were sent to slaughter, the USA sanitised & diminished Nazi atrocities & Jewish testimonies.

When we say our struggle is shared, this is what we mean. Jews stand in solidarity with Palestine!

Nobody's free until everybody's free.

> Kaitlan Collins @kaitlancollins · Oct 26
>
> Biden doesn't have confidence in the Gaza death toll: "I have no notion if Palestinians are telling the truth...I'm sure innocents have been killed & it is the price of waging war..Israel should be incredibly careful to ensure they're going after the folks propagating this war."

12 220 553 25K

158

Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Oct 26

the @NTEUUniMelb branch committee has passed a statement in solidarity with Palestine.

read the whole thing here: nteu.informz.net/nteu/data/imag...

2 51 154 7K

159

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 27

Reposting an article from the last time Gaza was being bombed about why Palestine solidarity is union business. @NTEUnion should be proud of the stand it and its members are taking.

11 31 77 2.7K

160

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Oct 27

The Israeli government will approve on Sunday shooting live ammunition at protestors.

כאן חדשות @kann_news · Oct 27

חשיפת כאן חדשות: הממשלה תאשר ירי חי במפגינים חוסמי צירים בזמן חירום

@SuleimanMas1 @moyshis #חדשותהערב

12 365 360 59K

161

Nick Riemer reposted

alana lentin @alanalentin · Oct 27

Outside @AlboMP office to say you're a turn coat! Free Palestine

2 31 153 4.4K

162

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 27

Excellent and badly needed initiative from @asu4palestine. Other unions should follow suit.

ASU members for Palestine @asu4palestine · Oct 27

This week, a meeting of ASU rank and file members from across the country supported the following points and called upon the ASU, nationally and its constituent branches, including NSW, to act upon this:

1. ASU flags at all upcoming Palestine rallies.
2. Leveraging ASU communications channels to mobilise members to turn out at rallies:
   - Text out
   - Email out
   - Calls out
3. ASU makes a firmer public statement than the ACTU statement for an urgent ceasefire.
4. ASU leverage its status as a Labor-affiliated union to call on the Albanese Government to sever military and diplomatic ties with Israel.

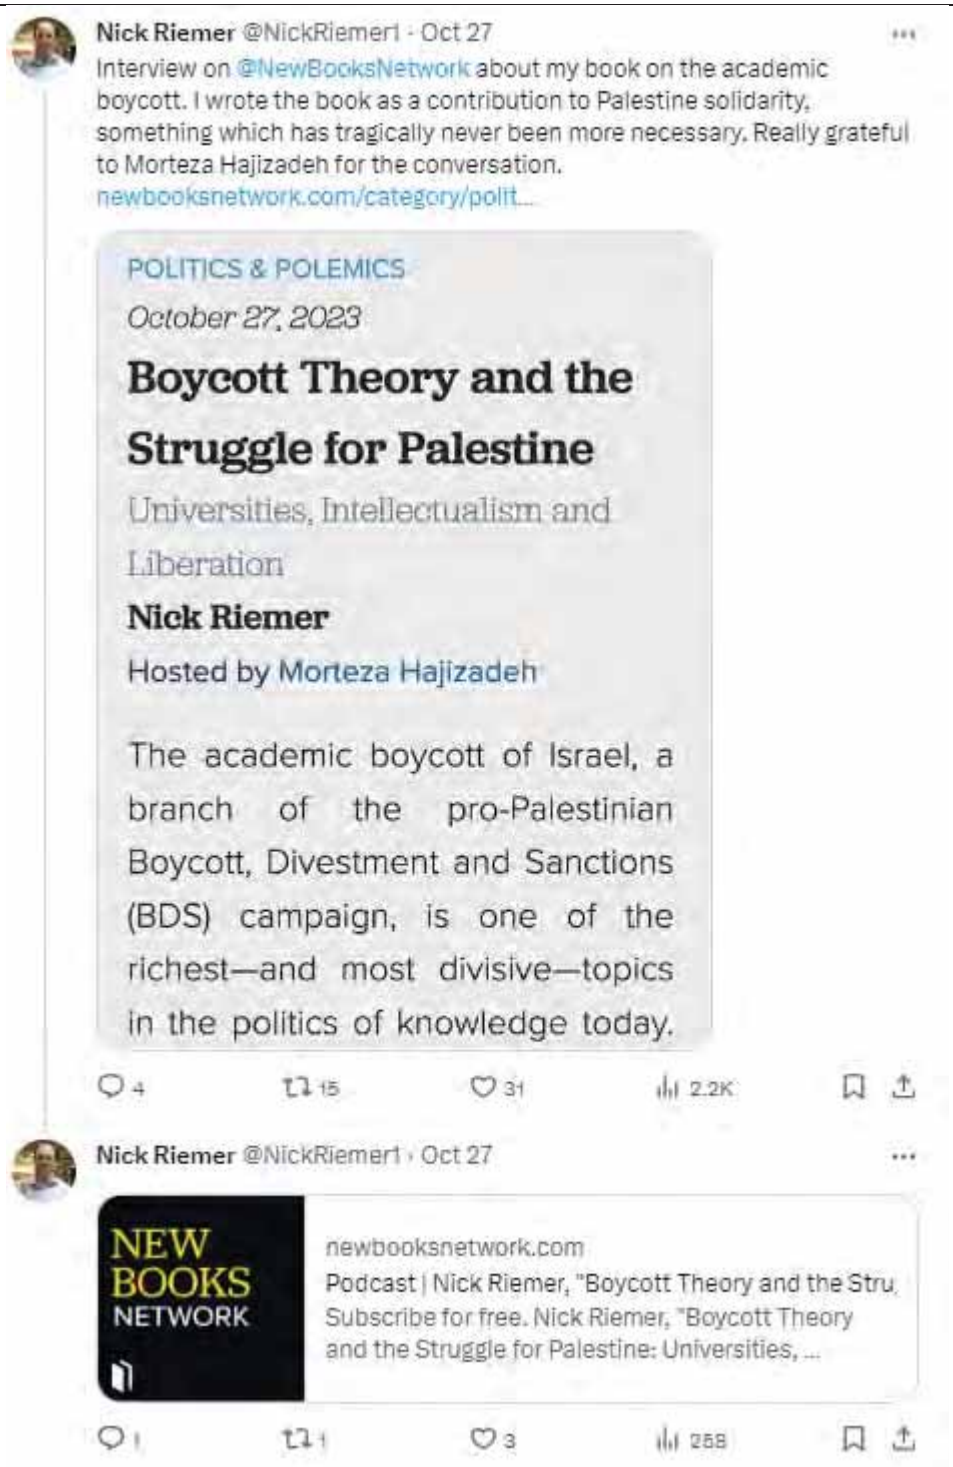
3 9 30 1.8K

163



Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 27
Interview on @NewBooksNetwork about my book on the academic boycott. I wrote the book as a contribution to Palestine solidarity, something which has tragically never been more necessary. Really grateful to Morteza Hajizadeh for the conversation.
newbooksnetwork.com/category/polit...
POLITICS & POLEMICS
October 27, 2023
Boycott Theory and the Struggle for Palestine
Universities, Intellectualism and Liberation
Nick Riemer
Hosted by Morteza Hajizadeh
The academic boycott of Israel, a branch of the pro-Palestinian Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) campaign, is one of the richest—and most divisive—topics in the politics of knowledge today.
4
15
31
2.2K
Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 27
NEW BOOKS NETWORK
newbooksnetwork.com
Podcast | Nick Riemer, "Boycott Theory and the Stru
Subscribe for free. Nick Riemer, "Boycott Theory and the Struggle for Palestine: Universities, ...
1
1
3
268

164

| | |
|---|---|
| | Nick Riemer repostedDavid Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 28Australia just sat on its hands and refused to support the #UNGA motion (which got up) for a "humanitarian truce leading to a cessation of hostilities." Our government wants the violence to continue. 2 20 38 12K |
| 165 | Nick Riemer repostedDavid Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Oct 28With a Labor government supporting this massacre, Australian unions have work to do to convince the world we're not complicit too. The @NTEUnion needs to be calling its members out to rallies this weekend. @DamienCahill8 @AlisonBarnes253 13 42 2K |
| 166 | Nick Riemer repostedAmy McQuire @amymcquire · Oct 27Australian journalists who have gone on propaganda tours of Israel: Daily Tele editor Ben English, ABC David Lipson, Channel 7 Alex Hart, SMH Bevan Shields, SBS Managing Director James Taylor, Sky News Sharri Markson, The Oz Greg Sheridan, AFR Aaron Patrick,34 296 720 37K |

167

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Oct 28

.@SenatorWong @AlboMP Australia abstained. Your position is clear. I will not appeal to you on moral terms. You have none. We will do what it takes to swing the Muslim & Arab vote from Labor bc YOUR vote is for our genocide.

> UN News @UN_News_Centre · Oct 28
>
> BREAKING: UN General Assembly ADOPTS resolution on "protection of civilians and upholding legal and humanitarian obligations" on the ongoing Gaza crisis
>
> FOR: 120...
> Show more

204 703 2K 117K

168

Nick Riemer reposted

L'Anticapitaliste @Lanticapitalis1 · Oct 28

Sur la place de la République à #Paris, rassemblement spontané en soutien aux populations de Gaza, bombardées sans relâche depuis le début de la soirée après que toute communication ait été coupée avec la bande de Gaza par l'armée israélienne.
#Gaza

23 131 348 21K

169

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Oct 28

We know that the Saturday Paper is owned by Zionists but I think it's important to keep on the public record who was silent in the face of genocide. History will remember. This is there top stories for the week.

105 284 878 102K

170

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Oct 28
Stand with Palestinians tomorrow in Sydney.
Let's deliver a massive public rebuke to the support for genocide from @AlboMP, @SenatorWong and the near entirety of the sickening parties of government in this country.
PROTEST
STOP THE GENOCIDE IN GAZA
NEW START TIME
PLEASE SHARE
FREE PALESTINE
ORGANISED BY
PALESTINE ACTION GROUP SYDNEY
SUNDAY 29 OCTOBER
2PM HYDE PARK NORTH
48
222
375
16K

171

Nick Riemer reposted
APAN @APAN4Palestine · Oct 28
We call on @elonmusk to provide satellite connection for the besieged people in the Gaza strip, just as it was provided for Ukrainians during Russia's invasions. The cutting off of internet by Israel has provided a blanket and enabled Israel's genocide of Gazans. #StarLinkForGaza 12
147
246
18K

172

Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Oct 28

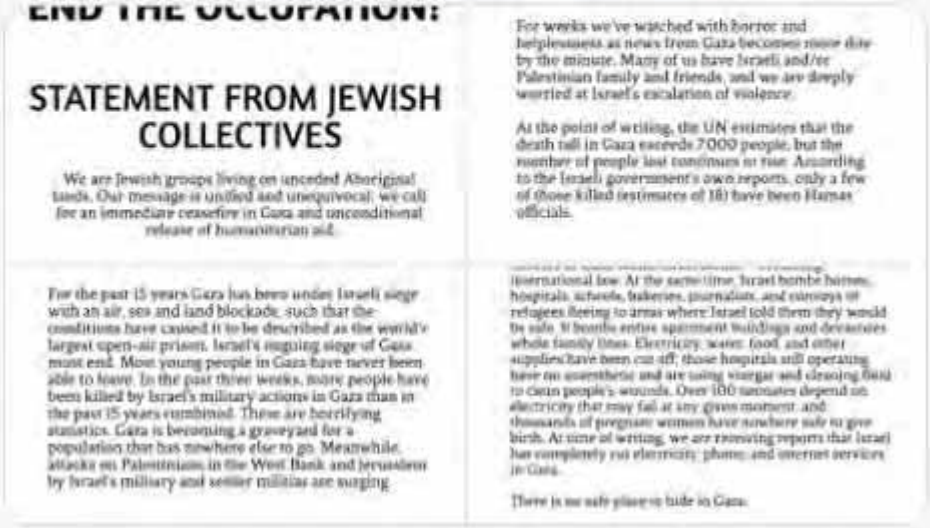
Statement from Tzedek, Loud Jew Collective, Jews Against the Occupation, Jews Against Fascism.

Ceasefire now! End the Occupation!

Full statement at tzedekcollective.com/statements/cea...



END THE OCCUPATION!

STATEMENT FROM JEWISH COLLECTIVES

We are Jewish groups living on unceded Aboriginal lands. Our message is unified and unequivocal: we call for an immediate ceasefire in Gaza and unconditional release of humanitarian aid.

For the past 15 years Gaza has been under Israeli siege with an air, sea and land blockade, such that the conditions have caused it to be described as the world's largest open-air prison. Israel's ongoing siege of Gaza must end. Most young people in Gaza have never been able to leave. In the past three weeks, more people have been killed by Israel's military actions in Gaza than in the past 15 years combined. These are horrifying statistics. Gaza is becoming a graveyard for a population that has nowhere else to go. Meanwhile, attacks on Palestinians in the West Bank and Jerusalem by Israel's military and settler militias are surging.

For weeks we've watched with horror and helplessness as news from Gaza becomes more dire by the minute. Many of us have Israeli and/or Palestinian family and friends, and we are deeply worried at Israel's escalation of violence.

At the point of writing, the UN estimates that the death toll in Gaza exceeds 7000 people, but the number of people just continues to rise. According to the Israeli government's own reports, only a few of those killed (estimates of 18) have been Hamas officials.

[illegible] international law. At the same time, Israel bombs homes, hospitals, schools, bakeries, journalists, and convoys of refugees fleeing to areas where Israel told them they would be safe. It bombs entire apartment buildings and demolishes whole family lines. Electricity, water, food, and other supplies have been cut off; those hospitals still operating have no anaesthetic and are using vinegar and cleaning fluid to clean people's wounds. Over 100 neonates depend on electricity that may fail at any given moment, and thousands of pregnant women have nowhere safe to give birth. At time of writing, we are receiving reports that Israel has completely cut electricity, phone, and internet services in Gaza.

There is no safe place to hide in Gaza.

1 · 156 · 301 · 16K

173

Nick Riemer reposted

Progressive International @ProgIntl · Oct 29

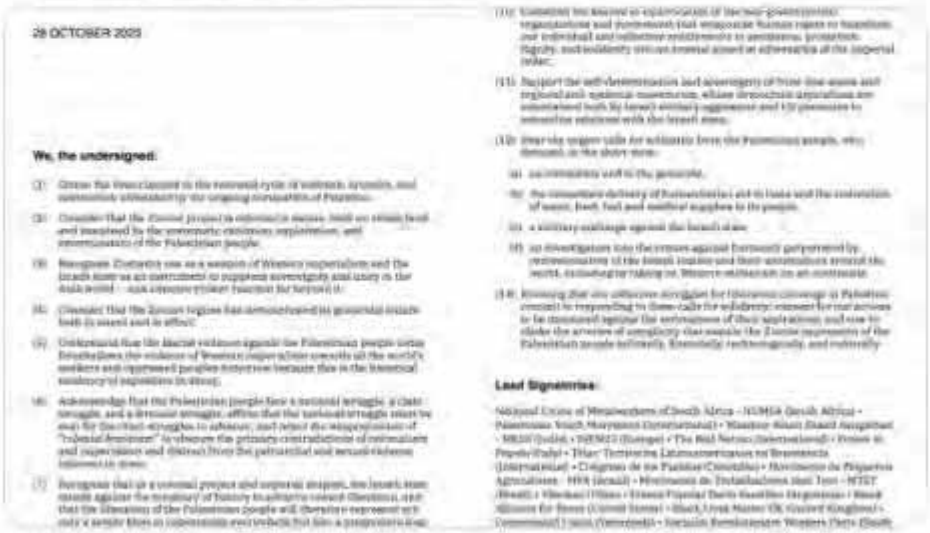
BREAKING "The Gaza Resolution"

Amid the unfolding genocide in Gaza, movements, parties, and unions across the world issue a pledge to stand for Palestinian liberation and sever ties of complicity with the State of Israel.



28 OCTOBER 2023

We, the undersigned:

Lead Signatories:

Palestinian Youth Movement and 9 others

83 · 4.1K · 7.7K · 633K

174

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Oct 29

Never again will I wonder how Jews - including some of my family - were massacred, while the world stood by and did nothing.

We will not forgive. We will not forget. Free Palestine.

11 466 1.7K 34K

175

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 29

Replying to @NickReimer1

Staff from the Sydney Uni BDS group out in numbers too.

1 2 36 1K

176

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 29
UNIONS, WORKERS, OUT IN PRIDE - WE SAY NO TO GENOCIDE!
New chant for the union contingent at the Sydney Palestine demonstration. War, siege, apartheid, genocide: poison to workers everywhere. Union business if anything is.
8
18
64
2.3K

177

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Oct 29

So happy to see our beautiful comrade @jordana_s_ and other Jewish mob showing their solidarity for Palestine today 🟤🖤

22 137 560 21K

178

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 30

'The level of deprivation and human need is nothing like I've ever seen before. No one had expected or prepared for this level of devastation in Gaza.'

20 20 51 2.9K

179-180

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 29
Unions out in force for Palestine in Sydney today: NTEU, RAFFWU, MUA, ASU, Teachers, Nurses...
Rank and file union members know their responsibility in a genocide. Free Palestine.
UNIONISTS FOR PALESTINE
0:10
42
338
904
32K
Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 30
@WorkersinPales1
2
1
433

181

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Oct 31

Support to @iamthenas and @APAN4Palestine in the face of the usual sorry and baseless accusations. The cause of Palestine is the cause of antiracism.

Protest organiser threatened with legal action

RALLIES

EXCLUSIVE

RACHEL BAXENDALE
VICTORIAN POLITICAL REPORTER

Jewish human rights campaigner Myuchem Vorchheimer is threatening to sue Australia Palestine Advocacy Network president Nasser Mashni, accusing the organiser of recent pro-Palestinian rallies in Melbourne of breaching Victoria's Racial and Religious Tolerance Act.

The action has prompted leading barrister Robert Richter KC, who once defended Mr Vorchheimer after he was the victim of a violent anti-Semitic attack, to state that while he supports the right of Palestinian supporters to demonstrate, those who conflate "all Jews" with Israel "may well be guilty" of the criminal offence of incitement to hatred.

In letters to Mr Mashni this week, Mr Vorchheimer accuses the property developer and Greens donor of a "serious act of incitement" in leading protesters at a Melbourne rally to join him in chanting "From the river to the sea, Palestine will be free". Mr Vorchheimer says the chant – which refers to the Jordan River and Mediterranean Sea on Israel's eastern and western borders – is "a call used by Hamas terrorists for the annihilation of Israel and Jews".

Robert Richter KC

"You will appreciate that this is a serious act of incitement and a breach of the Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001," he writes in a letter to Mr Mashni.

The accountant, who is completing a Juris Doctor of Law, also argues that Mr Mashni is responsible for breaching the Racial and Religious Tolerance Act as one of the organisers of pro-Palestine protests at which the crowd has called for an "intifada" against Jews, and chanted "Khaybar, Khaybar ya yahud, jaish Muhammad sawfa ya'ud" outside state parliament.

The Arabic phrase, which is often used by extremist groups such as Islamic State, al-Qa'ida and the Muslim Brotherhood, translates as "Remember Khaybar, oh Jews. The army of Muhammad will return."

It refers to the massacre of Jews at Khaybar, in present-day Saudi Arabia, in 628 CE.

The Australian is not suggesting Mr Mashni chanted the phrase, only that he was one of the organisers of a rally at which Mr Vorchheimer alleges the phrase was prominently chanted.

"This conduct caused significant harm to both myself and members of the Jewish community," Mr Vorchheimer writes of the chanting of all three phrases in his letter to Mr Mashni.

"Before commencing proceedings, I invite you to engage and advise what steps you propose taking to remedy these breaches and undertakings not to engage in such activity in the future."

Mr Vorchheimer reached a settlement with Victoria Police after using the Racial and Religious Tolerance Act to take legal action over a notorious 2006 incident in which he was racially abused, punched in the face and had his kippah (religious skullcap) taken.

The three men who attacked him as he walked to a synagogue with his children were members of the Ocean Grove Football Club, who had been in a bus driven by an off-duty police officer.

Mr Richter, who represented Mr Vorchheimer over the 2006 incident, said: "As a critic of the actions of (Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin) Netanyahu and the Israeli government, I support the right of Palestinian supporters to demonstrate. People are entitled to demonstrate and express their political views.

"However, anyone demonstrating against 'all Jews', including Israelis who protest the actions of the Israeli government, and anyone who conflates all diaspora Jews as a whole with 'Israel' may well be guilty of incitement to hatred, which is criminalised by the Racial and Religious Tolerance Act of 2001."

Mr Richter is a Jewish atheist whose Polish and Ukrainian parents survived the Holocaust.

Mr Mashni did not respond to multiple requests for comment.

32 · 55 · 142 · 16K

182

Nick Riemer reposted
Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Oct 31
i am so angry at this article in the australian, and this legal threat against Nasser Mashni. firstly, the chant is not antisemitic, and the fact that some ppl can't understand that freedom for all doesn't mean 'death to the Jews' is on them only. secondly, Nasser is amazing.
Protest organiser threatened with legal action
Menachem Vorchheimer argues that in leading a common pro-Palestinian chant at protests, Nasser Mashni is 'inciting hatred' against all Jews.
2
117
367
21K

183

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Oct 31

The bombings of the Israeli occupation have targeted the academic institutions in the ravaged Gaza strip, along with thousands of children and Academic cadres. All part of the onslaught against our people in Gaza that still continue to reek havoc upon it for 24 consecutive days.

4 287 271 55K

184

Nick Riemer reposted

Ho Ho Ho Chi Minh 🎄🇻🇳 @JonPiccini · Oct 31

A wonderful piece by @gabrielwinant on the lopsided nature of mourning in Palestine: 'One side has an enormous grief machine, the best in the world, up and running, feeding on bodies and tears and turning them into bombs. The other is starved for grief.'

2 25 62 6.5K

185

Nick Riemer reposted

'Australian' Unions: Stop Arming Israel @dontarmgenocide · Oct 31

Replying to @dontarmgenocide

Sign the open letter here, then act from where you are to stop the flow of arms to Israel!

docs.google.com
Unions: Stop Arming Israel
Palestinian unions have issued an urgent global call to action, calling on workers everywhere to halt th...

2 28 32 16K

186

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Deep Dive @PDeepdive · Nov 1

MUST READ: "The US president's support for the genocide of the Palestinians is hardly surprising given his country's settler-colonial past."

Article by @haidareid in @AJEnglish

1 21 22 1.4K

187

Nick Riemer reposted

WACA @akaWACA · Nov 1

BREAKING: Anti-Zionist Jewish activists & supporters occupying @richardmarlesMP's office in solidarity w/ #FreePalestine #StopArmingIsrael

Shame on @AustralianLabor siding with war criminals in genocide.

9 79 187 5.2K

188

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 1

A student meeting on Palestine at @Sydney_Uni has been banned on the false grounds that it 'may be linked to support for terrorist activities', without a shred of evidence. I've written to VC @mscott in protest: the university must be a place for critical & independent thought.

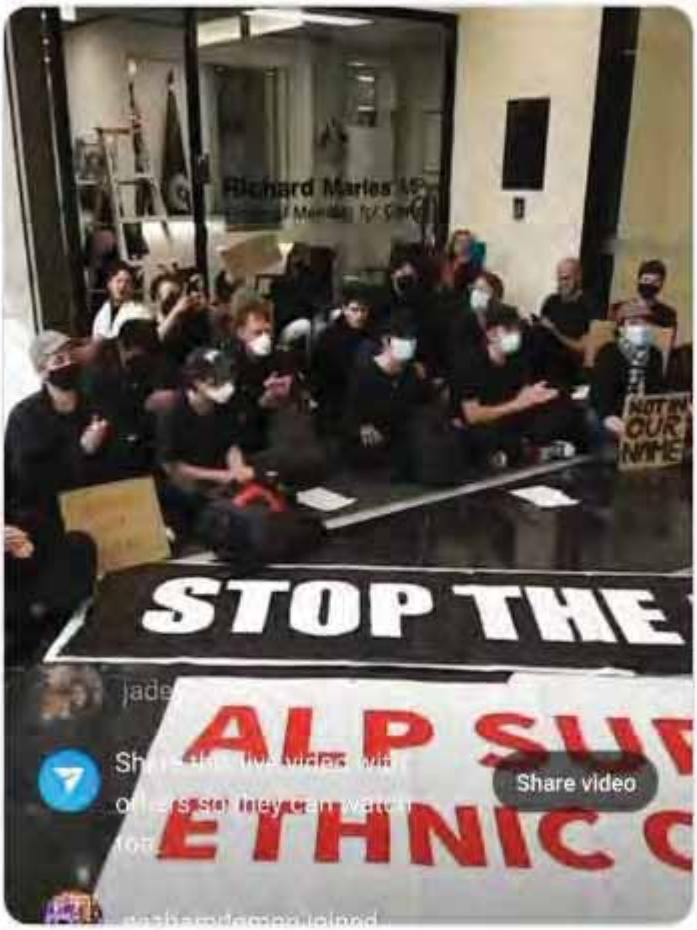
154 362 721 123K

189

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Nov 1

Happening in 'Australia' RIGHT NOW!
Unwavering, principled solidarity from anti-Zionist Jewish activists inside the office of Defence Minister Richard Marles. They have secured themselves by their necks using bicycle locks & are refusing to leave, singing/chanting for freedom!



36 617 1.4K 76K

190

Nick Riemer reposted
Jake Lynch @ProfJakeLynch · Nov 1
A student meeting @Sydney_Uni calling for "global intifada" has been banned on grounds that it "may be linked to support for terrorist activities". Appalling. My message to VC @mscott below and thanks @NickReimer1 for leadership on this.
12
40
111
7.6K

191

Nick Riemer reposted
Antony Loewenstein @antloewenstein · Nov 1
Just signed this important petition:
Australian Jews Call for Ceasefire in Gaza
docs.google.com
Australian Jews Call for Ceasefire in Gaza
As of 17 December, this letter has been signed by over 900 people. It has been sent to relevant ...
31
168
480
16K

192

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 1

Israel is killing its own hostages. Seven civilian hostages were killed in Israeli bombardment of Jabalia.

قناة الجزيرة @AJArabic · Nov 1

#عاجل | كتائب القسام: مقتل 7 من المحتجزين المدنيين لدينا في مجزرة #جباليا أمس من ضمنهم 3 من حملة الجوازات الأجنبية
#حرب_غزة

8 133 173 19K

193

Nick Riemer reposted

PRCS @PalestineRCS · Nov 1

✋🚑Humanitarian workers risk their lives to save people in #Gaza strip. This video shows a glimpse of the terror that paramedics have been experiencing for over three weeks due to the continuous aggression on Gaza.

43 1.3K 1.3K 75K

194

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 2

Get down there on Saturday and show our abject political leaders what side we're on.

94 194 373 23K

195

Nick Riemer reposted

Padraic Gibson @paddygibson · Nov 2

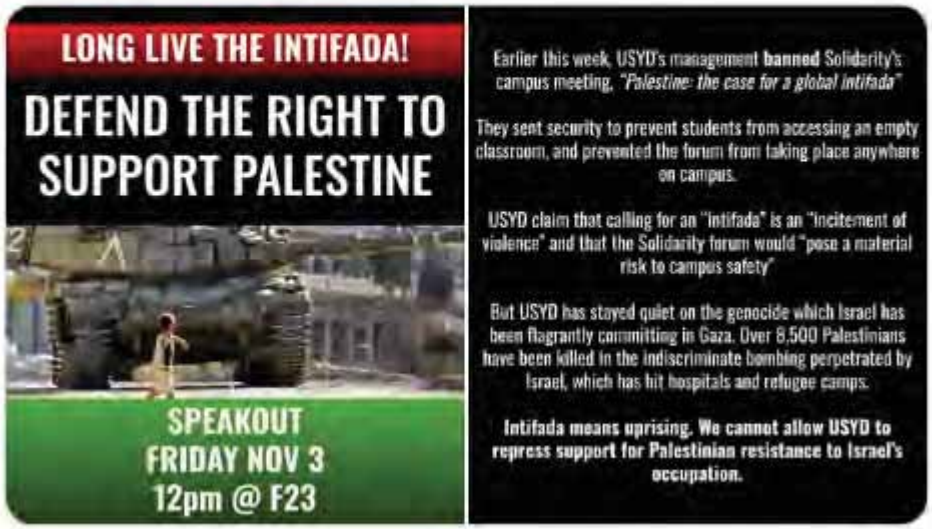
Our @soli_aus student group was banned by Sydney Uni from holding a forum on the need for a global Intifada to defeat Israel's genocide. Security were mobilised to close rooms and stop the discussion. Students will rally on campus tomorrow to defy the ban.



9 63 118 5.2K

196

Nick Riemer reposted

Brendan Ciarán Browne @brendancbrowne · Nov 3

Fantastic to see this solidarity, despite a few knobs on here not understanding the nuances of engaging in impactful boycott.

Shame they're such careerists.

Encourage those in D4 to read a wonderful text by @NickRiemer1 called 'Boycott Theory'.

You might learn something, lads.

> Academics for Palestine @AcaforPalestine · Nov 3
> Over 600 signatories by the deadline today! Thanks to all for their solidarity in signing. We are in process of sending out for publication and will post links when it is out officially. twitter.com/AcaforPalestin...

8 38 3.9K

197

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 3

Let's cover campuses with Palestinian flags.

> David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 3
>
> Put a flag up outside my office window this morning. I hope - genuinely - that my institution won't mind a small gesture of support for people currently getting carpet bombed. Do the same if you can.

54 47 222 11K

198

Nick Riemer reposted

Mehreen Faruqi @MehreenFaruqi · Nov 2

This attempt from @Sydney_Uni management to stop those expressing solidarity with Palestine is appalling.

Staff and students across campuses have a long and proud history of solidarity with Palestine and this will continue despite efforts to silence them.

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 1
>
> A student meeting on Palestine at @Sydney_Uni has been banned on the false grounds that it 'may be linked to support for terrorist activities', without a shred of evidence. I've written to VC @mscott in protest: the university must be a place for critical & independent thought.

16 250 580 56K

199

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 3

Sizeable crowd building outside @AlboMP's Marrickville office calling out his shameful backing of genocide.

95 254 641 19K

200

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 3

Full house at the @MUASydneyBranch for the Trade Unionists for Palestine meeting.

64 95 394 17K

201

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4
Replying to @NickRiemer1
There was a time when Albanese professed support for Palestinians.

More recently he's denounced BDS, which has been called for by the entirety of Palestinian civil society, who he brushes off with the back of his hand as though they don't even exist.

2 4 29 820

202-213

Nick Riemer
@NickRiemer1

Spoke at a demonstration yesterday outside @AlboMP's electoral office. We always hear about Albo the underdog, Albo the child of a single mum, now Albo the PM.

What we'll remember is Albo the genocide supporter.

8:51 AM · Nov 4, 2023 · 51K Views

72 182 465 9

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

The man in this office can't even bring himself to call for a ceasefire, not even when 9000 people have been murdered, more than 3000 of them children.

Never again can he claim to speak with any moral authority over basic matters of people's wellbeing.

9 5 50 1.1K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Every time he reminds us about his working class heritage, we'll remember: he didn't support a ceasefire in a genocide against the working class of Gaza.

3 9 51 1.2K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Every time he says he cares about Indigenous justice, we'll remember: he didn't support a ceasefire in a genocide against the Indigenous people of Palestine.

5 8 44 1K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Every time he says he cares about respect at work, aged care, child care, health care, we'll remember: he didn't support a ceasefire in Israel's genocide against ordinary Palestinians, in which thousands of people have been gratuitously killed.

3 5 37 940

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Every time he says he wants to address cost of living, we'll remember: he didn't support a ceasefire in a genocide against ordinary Palestinians. He did nothing to end the bombing of Gaza while people were lining up for bread.

3 4 36 859

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Instead of a ceasefire, he's calling for a 'humanitarian pause'. What does that mean, exactly?

It means he doesn't want the carnage to end, he just wants it to 'pause' so that it's Israeli bombs that kill Gazans, not hunger, thirst or disease.

2 12 38 1.1K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

His position manifests a sickness and an indifference to human life that's simply monstrous. It reveals the depravity of the political establishment he's a mouthpiece for.

3 3 32 799

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

Albanese might be wearing a suit and surrounded by all the trappings of political authority, but his position is depraved. And it's supported by the most backward, reactionary and anti-worker forces in politics.

3 · 5 · 29 · 787

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

There was a time when Albanese professed support for Palestinians.

More recently he's denounced BDS, which has been called for by the entirety of Palestinian civil society, who he brushes off with the back of his hand as though they don't even exist.

2 · 4 · 29 · 821

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

He's swung his full support behind efforts to treat criticism of Israel as antisemitic, and he's denied what every authority says: Israel is an apartheid state.

While he does all that, and while he rejects a ceasefire, he also claims to care about the Palestinian community.

2 · 4 · 35 · 1K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4

He can't have it both ways.

Personally, I finished with the ALP many decades ago. But Albanese shows us exactly where this kind of unprincipled, hypocritical, try-to-please-both-sides politics leads you: straight into support for genocide.

3 · 12 · 52 · 1.2K

214

Nick Riemer reposted

AROC #FreePalestine @AROCBayArea · Nov 4

BREAKING: The military ship has left the port of Oakland and is heading to Tacoma, WA where organizers are preparing to Block the Boat. Organizers in Oakland protested until the last moment to demand an end to US military aid to Israel. #ceasefireNow #blocktheboat #FreePalestine

103 2.7K 4.9K 682K

215-219

Nick Riemer
@NickReimer1

More and more unions here at the Sydney demonstration. Thread. NTEU. @NTEUnion

1:51 PM · Nov 4, 2023 · 11.7K Views

63 86 344 3

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4

RAFFWU @raffwu

2 3 36 826

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4

Teachers' Fed @TeachersFed

5 5 30 709

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4
RAFFWU @raffwu

2 3 36 826

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 4
Teachers' Fed @TeachersFed

5 5 30 709

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4
ASU @ASUnion

3 7 38 1.3K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4
MUA @MUASydneyBranch

6 7 41 1.3K

| | |
|---|---|
| 220 |  Nick Riemer repostedMaha Hussaini @MahaGaza · Nov 4Genocide Day 29Displacement Day 233rd day without water. We get two sips of water a day, we don't know when we'll get to refill the tanker again. With Israel cutting off water supply, this doesn't seem to happen in the near futureWe miss drinking water as much as we want.832.4K3K119K |
| 221 | Nick Riemer repostedDavid Landy @dlandy100 · Nov 3I'm very proud that over 600 academics in Ireland have signed our @AcaforPalestine call for Irish universities to cut ties with Israeli institutions.'Academics call for ties with Israeli institutions to be cut'irishexaminer.com5932492224K |

222

Nick Riemer reposted

Academics for Palestine @AcaforPalestine · Nov 4

Our letter is now in published in the Irish Times.

'War in the Gaza Strip
Academics call on Irish universities to suspend ties with Israeli institutions'

The full list of over 600 signatories can be viewed in the IT's online version:
irishtimes.com/opinion/letter...

the Editor

War in the Gaza Strip

Sir, – We write as academics and scholars in or from Ireland. The scale and severity of Israel's current war on the Gaza Strip has exceeded all previous levels of violence in the prolonged and brutal Israeli occupation of Palestine.

It is a campaign of ethnic cleansing and, according to many experts, genocidal violence.

The incursion by Palestinian armed groups on October 7th included criminal attacks against civilians.

But under no circumstances does international law permit the systematic bombardment and collective punishment of civilians in a besieged occupied territory.

The dehumanising language and tropes widely used by Israeli leaders in reference to Palestinians echo those typically associated with genocidal incitement and intent.

In the past three weeks, Israel's military acts have matched those words, killing more than 9,000 Palestinians inside Gaza, including some 3,760 children (more than the annual number of children killed in the rest of the world's armed conflicts combined).

Many more Palestinians are dying from the lack of fuel, water, electricity and medical supplies due to the deliberate blockade. Gaza's hospitals are barely able to function – no power for ventilators, using vinegar as an antiseptic, performing surgeries without anaesthetic – and continue to be hit by Israeli air-cide studies have called this "a textbook case of genocide". Bosnian genocide experts have likewise stated that "what is happening in Gaza is genocide".

After the first week of Israel's onslaught, a group of more than 800 international lawyers and genocide scholars were "compelled to sound the alarm about the possibility of genocide being perpetrated by Israeli forces", while UN human rights special rapporteurs warned of "the risk of genocide against the Palestinian people", calling on all states and international organisations to fulfil their duties to prevent genocide.

The killing and destruction has only escalated since then. More than 60 UN member states have now used the language of genocide to describe Israel's attacks on Gaza's population. This week, the South African foreign minister referenced the Rwandan genocide and "reminded the international community not to stand idle while another genocide is unfolding".

With the atrocities in Gaza now added to Israel's 75 years of colonisation and occupation of Palestinian lands, there should be nothing remotely approximate to "business as usual" continuing.

Many Irish universities and EU-funded research projects have active collaborations with Israeli universities. Israeli universities are, in the words of the Palestinian Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott

Meanwhile, several Palestinian universities in Gaza have been destroyed by the Israeli airstrikes, with some 70 academics and 2,000 students among the civilians killed.

We call on all universities in Ireland to immediately sever any existing institutional partnerships or affiliations with Israeli institutions. Those ties should be suspended until the occupation of Palestinian territory is ended, the Palestinian right to equality and self-determination are vindicated, and the right of Palestinian refugees to return is facilitated.

Anything less at this point amounts to tacit support for crimes against humanity. – Yours, etc,

PROF KATHLEEN LYNCH, University College Dublin.
PROF SIOBHAN WILLS, Ulster University.
PROF EUGENIA SIAPERA, University College Dublin.
PROF EMER NOLAN, Maynooth University.
PROF LAURA McATACKNEY, University College Cork.
PROF NICHOLAS DALY, University College Dublin.
PROF AOIFE O'DONOGHUE, Queen's University Belfast.
PROF DEREK JOHERTY, Trinity College Dublin.
PROF GAVAN TITLEY, Maynooth University.
PROF LIONEL PILKINGTON, University of Galway.
PROF MICHELLE FARRELL,

1 · 583 · 879 · 243K

-

223

Nick Riemer reposted
Brendan Ciarán Browne @brendancbrowne · Nov 4
There are no universities left in Gaza.
Muhammad Smiry @MuhammadSmiry · Nov 4
No universities left in Gaza
0:21
1
177
229
27K

224

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Nov 4

The Israeli occupation bombs and destroys Al-Azhar University in Al-Mughraqa in Gaza, continuing its war crimes against humanity.
The Israeli occupation's hatred targets everything in Gaza; school, universities, hospitals, churches, mosques, and organizations all being bombed.

39 1.1K 1.4K 1M

225

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 4

From the country that demands the "right to self defence"! This is not self defence, the pictures tell the real story, a racist ideology emboldened by allies to unleash the very worst of human attributes - when unadulterated power & unchecked hate are mixed together.

Michael Galant @michael_galant · Nov 4

"Palestinian workers, stranded since the October 7 attacks... show bracelets on which are written the numbers assigned to them while they were detained by Israel." This should look all too familiar. Source: AFP

6 49 119 8.2K

226

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 5

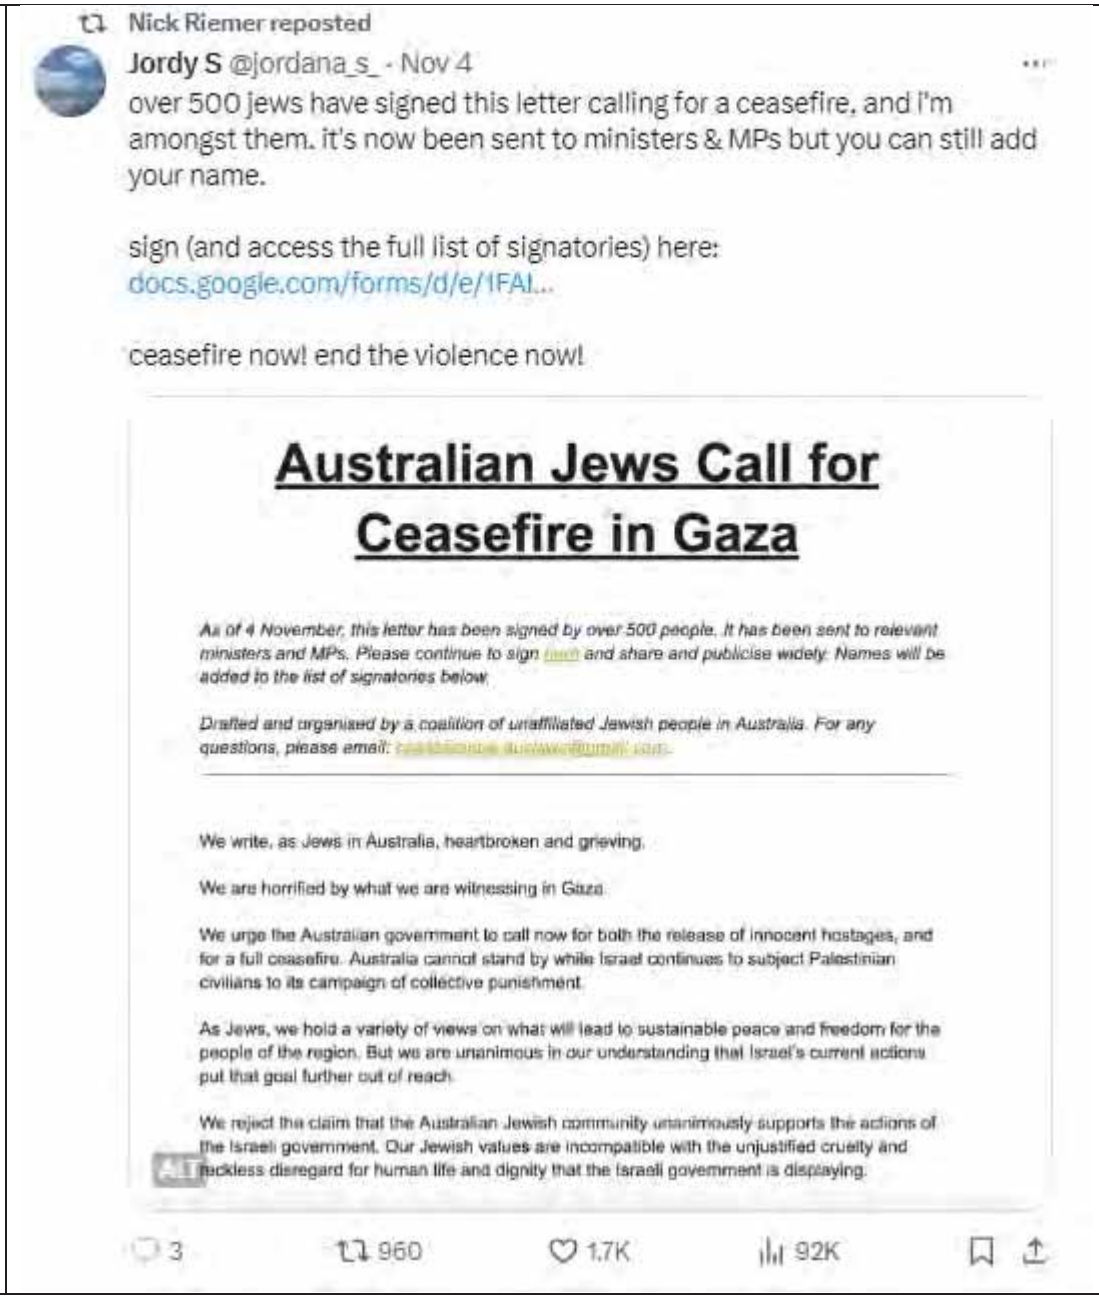
Call for a ceasefire now.
Follow @APAN4Palestine and take immediate action.

Please share...

9 175 230 14K

227



Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Nov 4

over 500 jews have signed this letter calling for a ceasefire, and i'm amongst them. it's now been sent to ministers & MPs but you can still add your name.

sign (and access the full list of signatories) here:
docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAI...

ceasefire now! end the violence now!

Australian Jews Call for Ceasefire in Gaza

As of 4 November, this letter has been signed by over 500 people. It has been sent to relevant ministers and MPs. Please continue to sign and share and publicise widely. Names will be added to the list of signatories below.

Drafted and organised by a coalition of unaffiliated Jewish people in Australia. For any questions, please email:

We write, as Jews in Australia, heartbroken and grieving.

We are horrified by what we are witnessing in Gaza.

We urge the Australian government to call now for both the release of innocent hostages, and for a full ceasefire. Australia cannot stand by while Israel continues to subject Palestinian civilians to its campaign of collective punishment.

As Jews, we hold a variety of views on what will lead to sustainable peace and freedom for the people of the region. But we are unanimous in our understanding that Israel's current actions put that goal further out of reach.

We reject the claim that the Australian Jewish community unanimously supports the actions of the Israeli government. Our Jewish values are incompatible with the unjustified cruelty and reckless disregard for human life and dignity that the Israeli government is displaying.

3 960 1.7K 92K

228

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 5

Important action this coming Saturday in Sydney . Start planning your transport now. Details in the thread.

> Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 4
>
> Stop the genocide in Gaza! Protest 12pm next Saturday at Port Botany. The ZIM shipping line is a major transporter of armaments. It isn't welcome in Port Botany, or anywhere people stand against genocide and war crimes

64 226 389 22K

229

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 4

Israel has put the nail in the coffin of its fascist savage regime. The depravity & butchery that has defined it for 75 yrs which we have been pleading for the world to stop can no longer be denied. Israel is finished. It's frenzy of barbarity proves that it knows it.

29 224 629 25K

230

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 5

We need more than protests. The protests against the Iraq war showed us that. We need strikes, we need civil disobedience, we need to make politicians unable to continue with any other business by making this demand so overwhelming they must give in.

> الكسندرا ميراي @LexiAlex · Nov 5
> What if millions of people went to the streets to yell "ceasefire" and nobody in power cares.

18 10K 22K 776K

231

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 5

#MELBOURNE out in force for #palestine not too late to join us at the State Library

6 194 548 16K

232

Nick Riemer reposted

evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 3

Do you work for an Australian organisation that has advised staff and affiliates not to speak about Palestine, or has placed restrictions on any expression of support for Palestine? We are gathering anonymous data on Aus orgs censoring their staff.

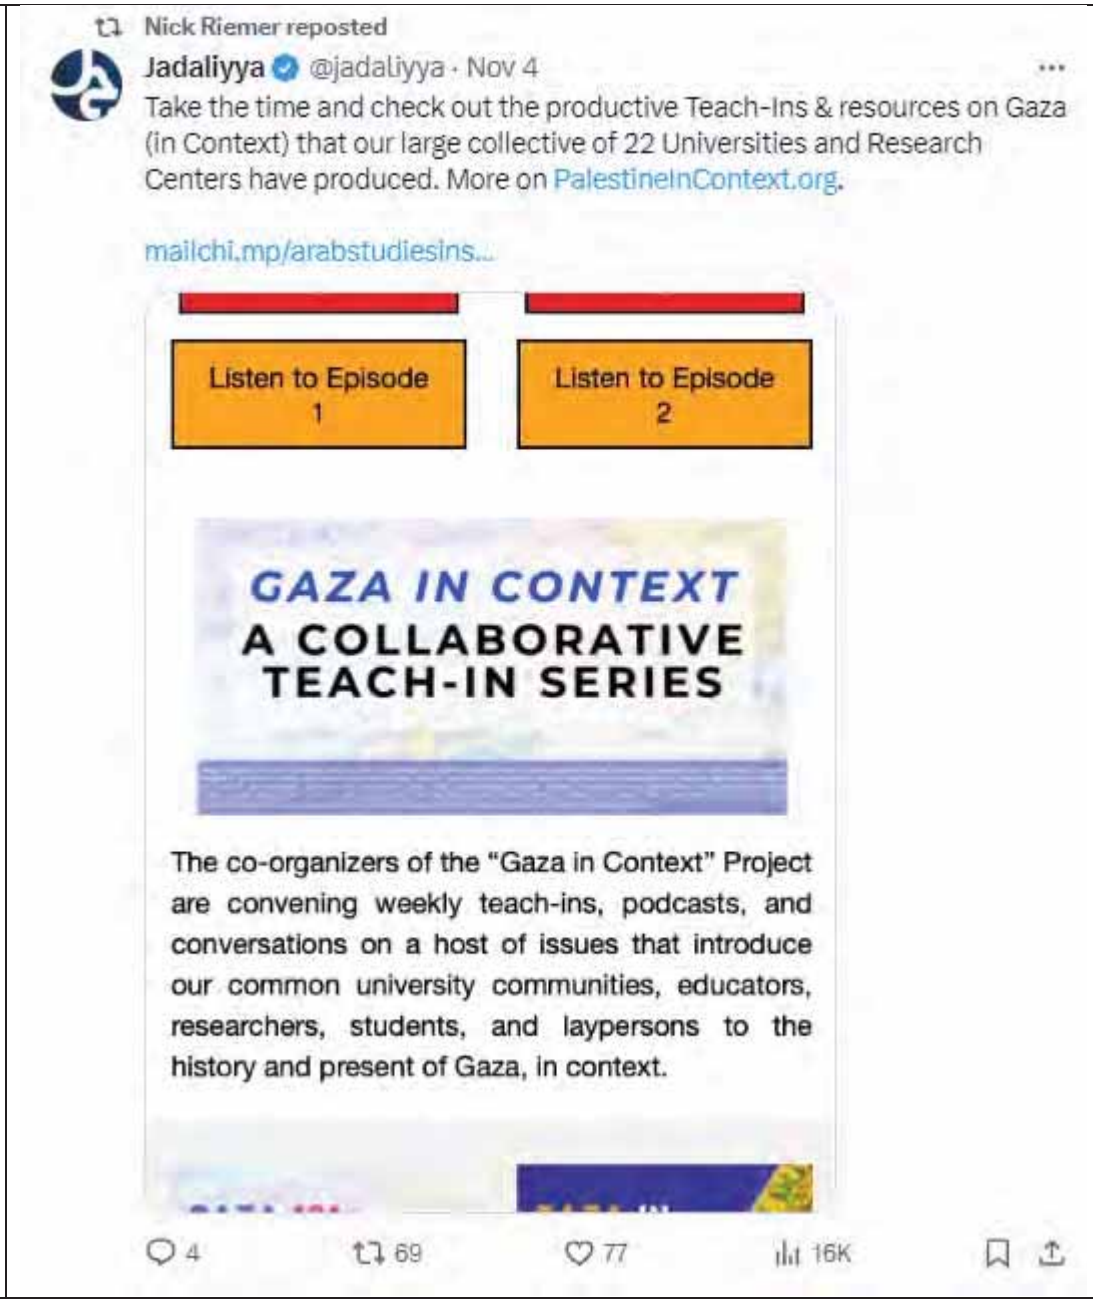
docs.google.com
Exposing censorship in Australian organisations
Since well before October 7, major Australian news publishers have conspicuously avoided supposedl...

27 900 1K 148K

233

Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 4
The level of sheer cruelty is beyond comprehension. First they deny water & electricity, & now they are bombing water tanks & solar panels. The Israeli regime is a criminal genocidal regime. They have broken every red line & the West is giving them the green light to do so.
LIVE UPDATES
'Last nail in the coffin': Israel bombs water tanks, solar panels in Gaza
Dozens of Palestinians in besieged enclave killed in attacks targeting ambulances, hospital areas and shelters.
By Mersiha Gadzo, Virginia Pietromarchi
44
3.6K
4.7K
191K

234



Nick Riemer reposted
Jadaliyya @jadaliyya · Nov 4
Take the time and check out the productive Teach-Ins & resources on Gaza (in Context) that our large collective of 22 Universities and Research Centers have produced. More on PalestineInContext.org.
mailchi.mp/arabstudiesins...
Listen to Episode 1
Listen to Episode 2
GAZA IN CONTEXT
A COLLABORATIVE TEACH-IN SERIES
The co-organizers of the "Gaza in Context" Project are convening weekly teach-ins, podcasts, and conversations on a host of issues that introduce our common university communities, educators, researchers, students, and laypersons to the history and present of Gaza, in context.
4
69
77
16K

235

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 5

Last year @Sydney_Uni rang its bells for Ukraine. Can we ring them for #Gaza now? How about it @mscott? @arjagose?

> Sydney Uni Media @SydneyUni_Media · Mar 4, 2022
>
> UKRAINE: Ring the bells for peace
>
> University of Sydney carillon will ring for peace in Ukraine on Saturday, joining bells around the world.
>
> ...
>
> Show more

5 28 88 8.3K

236

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 6

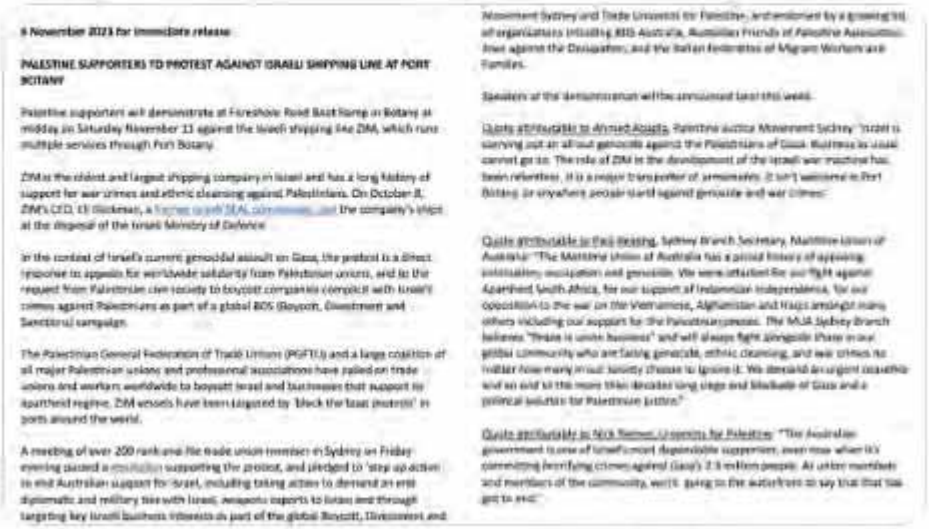
MEDIA RELEASE - Palestine supporters to protest against Israeli shipping line at Port Botany.



6 November 2023 for immediate release

PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST ISRAELI SHIPPING LINE AT PORT BOTANY

Palestine supporters will demonstrate at Foreshore Road Boat Ramp in Botany at midday on Saturday November 11 against the Israeli shipping line ZIM, which runs multiple services through Port Botany.

ZIM is the oldest and largest shipping company in Israel and has a long history of support for war crimes and ethnic cleansing against Palestinians. On October 8, ZIM's CEO, Eli Glickman, a former Israeli SEAL commander, said the company's ships at the disposal of the Israeli Ministry of Defence.

In the context of Israel's current genocidal assault on Gaza, the protest is a direct response to appeals for worldwide solidarity from Palestinian unions, and to the request from Palestinian civil society to boycott companies complicit with Israel's crimes against Palestinians as part of a global BDS (Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions) campaign.

The Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions (PGFTU) and a large coalition of all major Palestinian unions and professional associations have called on trade unions and workers worldwide to boycott Israel and businesses that support its apartheid regime. ZIM vessels have been targeted by 'block the boat protests' in ports around the world.

A meeting of over 200 rank-and-file trade union members in Sydney on Friday evening passed a resolution supporting the protest, and pledged to 'step up action to end Australian support for Israel, including taking action to demand an end diplomatic and military ties with Israel, weapons exports to Israel and through targeting key Israeli business interests as part of the global Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions campaign.

Maritime Union of Australia, Transport Workers Union of Australia, Australian Manufacturing Workers Union, Australian Nursing and Midwifery Federation, Australian Education Union, National Tertiary Education Union, Sydney Trades and Labour Council, Maritime Union of Australia Sydney Branch, Transport Workers Union Sydney Branch, Australian Manufacturing Workers Union Sydney Branch, Australian Nursing and Midwifery Federation Sydney Branch, Australian Education Union Sydney Branch, National Tertiary Education Union Sydney Branch

237

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 6

"I had been waiting for and just begun an important course at IUG. Now it was gone in the blink of an eye."

> Electronic Intifada @intifada · Nov 6
> I had just graduated from the Islamic University of Gaza, then Israel bombed it. bit.ly/3MvVAyO

7 16 40 4.3K

238

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 6

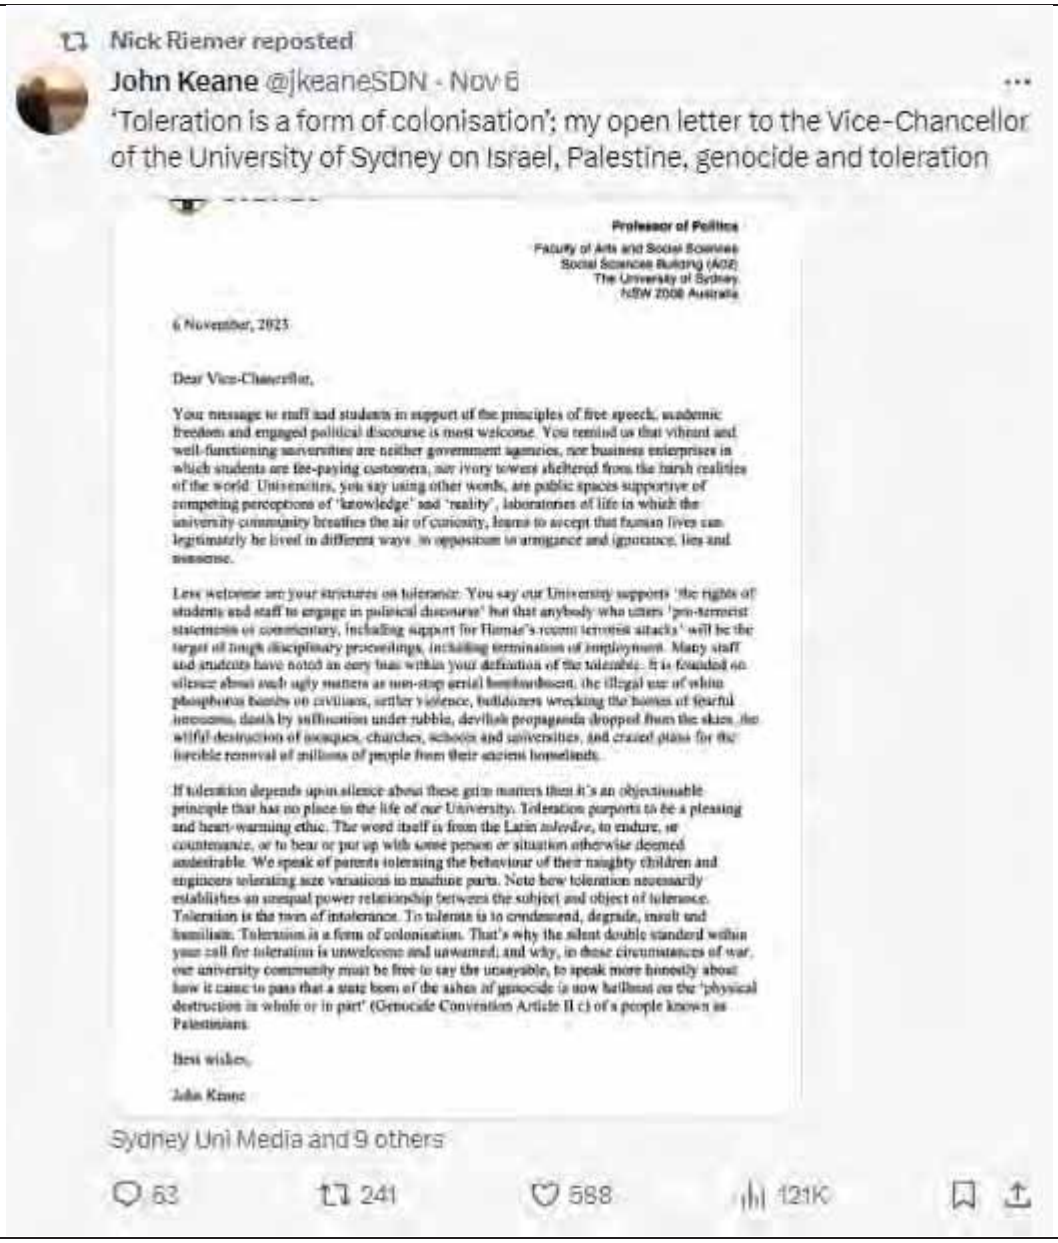
This Wednesday 5.30pm

78 Webb Dock Drive, Port Melbourne

264 403 23K

239



Nick Riemer reposted

John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Nov 6

'Toleration is a form of colonisation': my open letter to the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sydney on Israel, Palestine, genocide and toleration

Professor of Politics
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
Social Sciences Building (A02)
The University of Sydney
NSW 2006 Australia

6 November, 2023

Dear Vice-Chancellor,

Your message to staff and students in support of the principles of free speech, academic freedom and engaged political discourse is most welcome. You remind us that vibrant and well-functioning universities are neither government agencies, nor business enterprises in which students are fee-paying customers, nor ivory towers sheltered from the harsh realities of the world. Universities, you say using other words, are public spaces supportive of competing perceptions of 'knowledge' and 'reality', laboratories of life in which the university community breathes the air of curiosity, learns to accept that human lives can legitimately be lived in different ways, in opposition to arrogance and ignorance, lies and nonsense.

Less welcome are your strictures on tolerance. You say our University supports 'the rights of students and staff to engage in political discourse' but that anybody who utters 'pro-terrorist statements or commentary, including support for Hamas's recent terrorist attacks' will be the target of tough disciplinary proceedings, including termination of employment. Many staff and students have noted an easy bias within your definition of the tolerable. It is founded on silence about such ugly matters as non-stop aerial bombardment, the illegal use of white phosphorus bombs on civilians, settler violence, bulldozers wrecking the homes of fearful innocents, death by suffocation under rubble, devilish propaganda dropped from the skies, the wilful destruction of mosques, churches, schools and universities, and cruel plans for the forcible removal of millions of people from their ancient homelands.

If toleration depends upon silence about these grim matters then it's an objectionable principle that has no place in the life of our University. Toleration purports to be a pleasing and heart-warming ethic. The word itself is from the Latin tolerāre, to endure, to countenance, or to bear or put up with some person or situation otherwise deemed undesirable. We speak of parents tolerating the behaviour of their naughty children and engineers tolerating size variations in machine parts. Note how toleration necessarily establishes an unequal power relationship between the subject and object of tolerance. Toleration is the twin of intolerance. To tolerate is to condescend, degrade, insult and humiliate. Toleration is a form of colonisation. That's why the silent double standard within your call for toleration is unwelcome and unwanted; and why, in these circumstances of war, our university community must be free to say the unsayable, to speak more honestly about how it came to pass that a state born of the ashes of genocide is now brilliant on the 'physical destruction in whole or in part' (Genocide Convention Article II c) of a people known as Palestinians.

Best wishes,

John Keane

Sydney Uni Media and 9 others

63 241 588 121K

240

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 6

Statement of solidarity with Palestine from Australian university staff: 'We stand in unwavering solidarity with the Palestinian people. We join millions around the world in the call for an immediate stop to this genocidal war and justice for Palestine'.

150 293 704 25K

241

Nick Riemer reposted

Lowkey @Lowkey0nline · Nov 7

Dockworkers in Barcelona are refusing to load ships with military hardware to be sent to Israel.

257 6.8K 23K 458K

242

Nick Riemer reposted

Mariam Barghouti مريم البرغوثي @MariamBarghouti · Nov 7

There are mass trials and torture that's beyond description happening in the West Bank.

Prisons are overflowing and we're reaching record highs of arrests with no trial or charge.

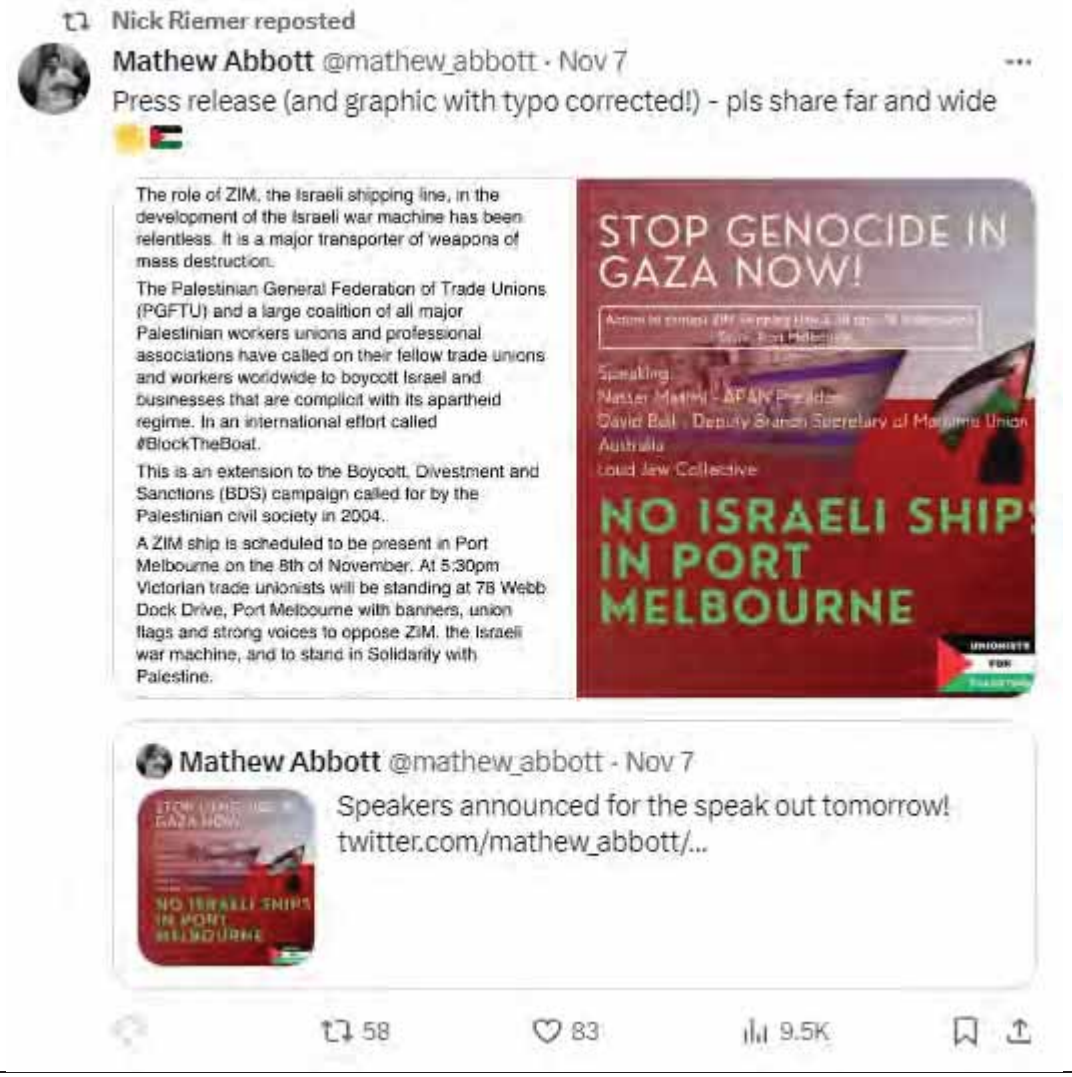
Stop this madness.

59 1.8K 2.4K 75K

243

Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 7
Not too late to add your signature. Don't be silent on genocide.
docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAI...
Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 6
Statement of solidarity with Palestine from Australian university staff: 'We stand in unwavering solidarity with the Palestinian people. We join millions around the world in the call for an immediate stop to this genocidal war and justice for Palestine'.
overland.org.au/2023/11/statem...

244



Nick Riemer reposted
Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 7
Press release (and graphic with typo corrected!) - pls share far and wide
The role of ZIM, the Israeli shipping line, in the development of the Israeli war machine has been relentless. It is a major transporter of weapons of mass destruction.
The Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions (PGFTU) and a large coalition of all major Palestinian workers unions and professional associations have called on their fellow trade unions and workers worldwide to boycott Israel and businesses that are complicit with its apartheid regime. In an international effort called #BlockTheBoat.
This is an extension to the Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) campaign called for by the Palestinian civil society in 2004.
A ZIM ship is scheduled to be present in Port Melbourne on the 8th of November. At 5:30pm Victorian trade unionists will be standing at 78 Webb Dock Drive, Port Melbourne with banners, union flags and strong voices to oppose ZIM, the Israeli war machine, and to stand in Solidarity with Palestine.
STOP GENOCIDE IN GAZA NOW!
Speaking:
Loud Jew Collective
NO ISRAELI SHIP
IN PORT
MELBOURNE
Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 7
Speakers announced for the speak out tomorrow!
twitter.com/mathew_abbott/...
58
83
9.5K

245

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 7

'It is time for the entirety of the academic world to take urgent action to stop Israel's genocide in Gaza and its ongoing scholasticide against all Palestinians. If not now, when?'

30 31 81 4.2K

246

Nick Riemer reposted

evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 7

Respectfully, Phillip, you don't subscribe to Overland, or if you do I can't find record of you in our system. We have supported Palestine and Palestinian writers for many years, so when the authors of this letter approached us we chose to continue our support.

> Phillip Adams @PhillipAdams_1 · Nov 7
> I've a lifelong association with the left wing Overland magazine- and agree with Barry Jones in deploying its line on Hamas

15 57 506 41K

247

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 8

Black-Palestinian solidarity - yesterday,today and tomorrow!

273 409 1.3K 79K

248

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Nov 6

138000 students were suspended from face-to-face education in 34 higher academic institutions in the West Bank due to the difficulties of transports for the staff and students, caused by the occupation's roadblocks and the settler terrorism.
#Gaza_Attack #STOP_THE_GENOCIDE

2 160 135 32K

249

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
Important BDS victory in Australia. Congratulations to the activists involved. More universities should follow suit.
BDS_Australia @BDS_Australia · Nov 7
Amidst the horror of Israel's assault on Gaza, we are able to bring news of a #BDS victory in Australia as one of the big universities confirms it's no longer partnering with #Elbit @BDSmovement #EndMilitaryTiesWithIsrael @RMIT @RMITSU #StopTheGenocide bdsaustralia.net.au/bds-victory-rm...
BDS VICTORY
RMIT DITCHES ELBIT !
22
178
472
19K

250

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

The union members' petition on Palestine keeps growing. It now has 2650+ signatures, including from some official union bodies. Congratulations to all unionists who've exercised their right to take a stand. Justice & solidarity: the essence of unionism.
forms.gle/xw2ogn4k1FVV7t...

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

20 91 223 8.5K

251

Nick Riemer reposted

Warwick Gow @warwickgowphoto · Nov 8

Proud to be supporting @asu4palestine as a member of @servicesunion and be a signatory of this!

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

The union members' petition on Palestine keeps growing. It now has 2650+ signatures, including from some official union bodies. Congratulations to all unionists who've exercised their right to take a stand. Justice & solidarity: the essence of unionism. forms.gle/xw2ogn4k1FVV7t...

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

1 6 12 873

252

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
Why won't @Sydney_Uni pay casual staff for all the work they do? No one can give students proper feedback when they're paid 13 minutes per 1000-word essay. Great to be at @NTEUnion members' teach-in as they make this basic, basic point.
4
18
104
3.6K

253

Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 8
Join us this coming Monday for a conversation on carcerality and Palestinian children with UN Special Rapporteur @FranceskAlbs and children's rights expert @NoamPeleg at @unswcclj. Join in person (UNSW Law) or via zoom. Register via this link: cclj.unsw.edu.au/event/multilay...
59
62
6.5K

| | |
|---|---|
| 254 | |

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
Thanks to @daniellamariewh for covering this story and for highlighting that Sydney University has gone further than other Australian institutions in penalizing pro-Palestinian speech.
smh.com.au
The Sydney Morning Herald
25
91
176
10K

255

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 8

MARK-IN / SCOTT-OUT

A group of casual staff brought our essay marking to USYD management today to show what it looks like when we're given just 13 minutes to mark a paper

@mscott is prioritising $$$$ over education

Casual staff should be listened to, not ignored

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
> Why won't @Sydney_Uni pay casual staff for all the work they do? No one can give students proper feedback when they're paid 13 minutes per 1000-word essay. Great to be at @NTEUnion members' teach-in as they make this basic, basic point.

2 14 842

256

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

Pro-Palestine protesters block Israeli shipping line in Melbourne. Great, quick work from Naarm activists.

canberratimes.com.au
Pro-Palestine protesters block Israeli shipping line
A Melbourne shipyard has ground to a halt after hundreds of pro-Palestine protesters blocked entr...

8 26 89 2K

257

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 8

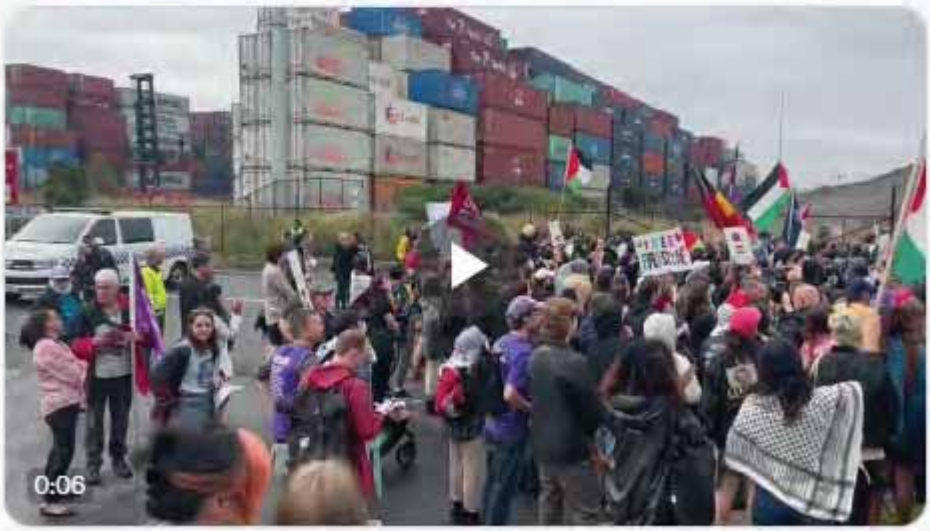
The #BlockTheBoat action worked! The boat has bypassed Melbourne. WIN!

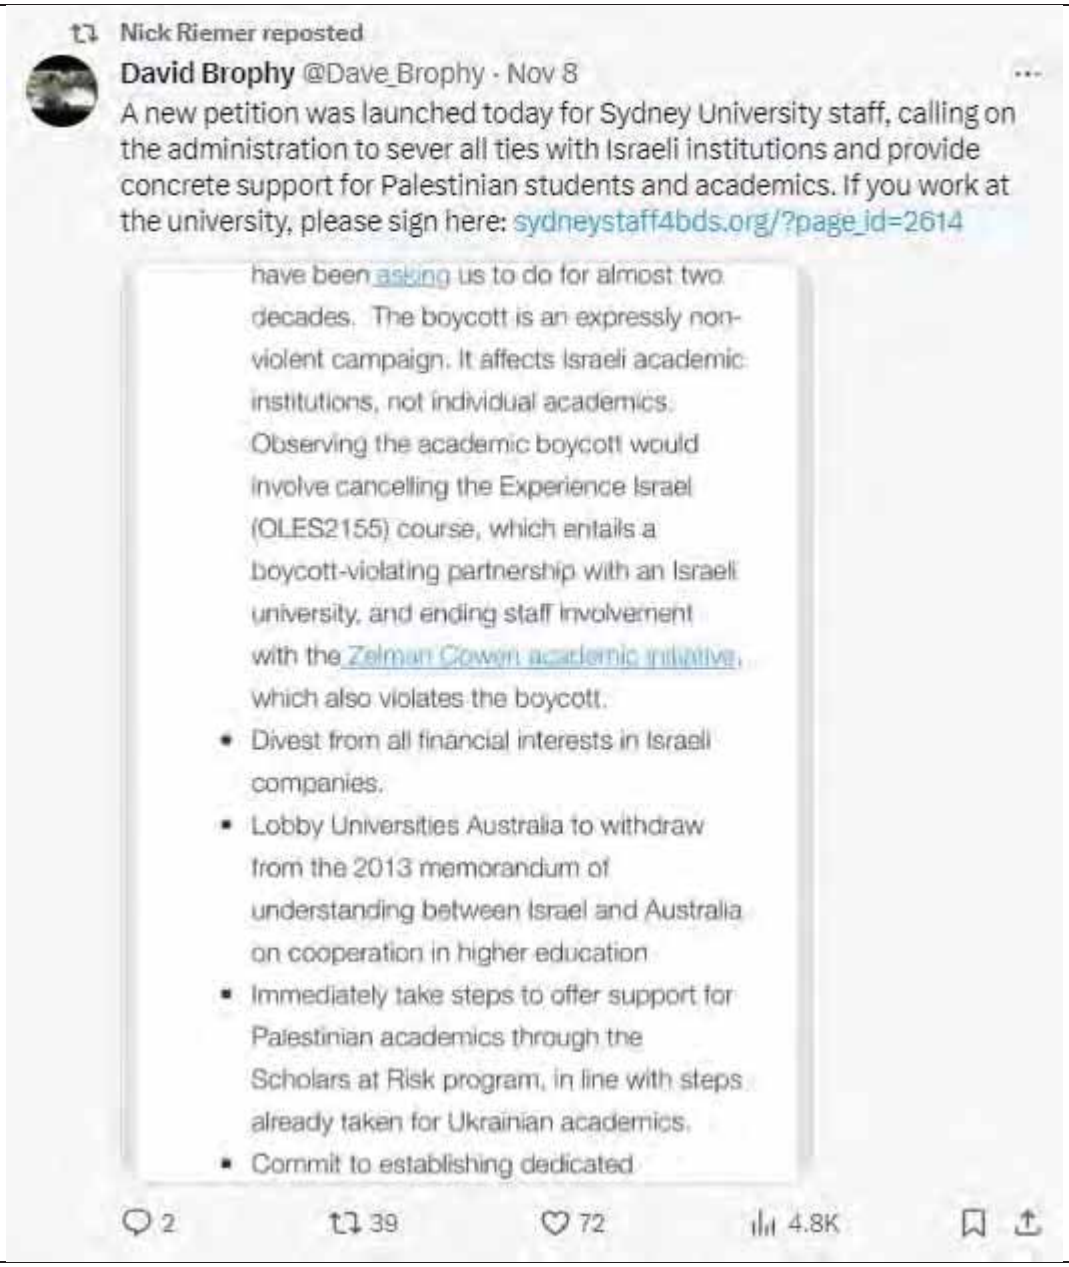
Solidarity activists now taking direct action against at @ZimShipping

#StopGenocideInGaza #CeasefireForGazaNOW #CeasefireForGaza #CeaseFire



26 440 901 75K

258



Nick Riemer reposted
David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 8
A new petition was launched today for Sydney University staff, calling on the administration to sever all ties with Israeli institutions and provide concrete support for Palestinian students and academics. If you work at the university, please sign here: sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614 have been asking us to do for almost two decades. The boycott is an expressly non-violent campaign. It affects Israeli academic institutions, not individual academics. Observing the academic boycott would involve cancelling the Experience Israel (OLES2155) course, which entails a boycott-violating partnership with an Israeli university, and ending staff involvement with the Zelman Cowen academic initiative, which also violates the boycott.
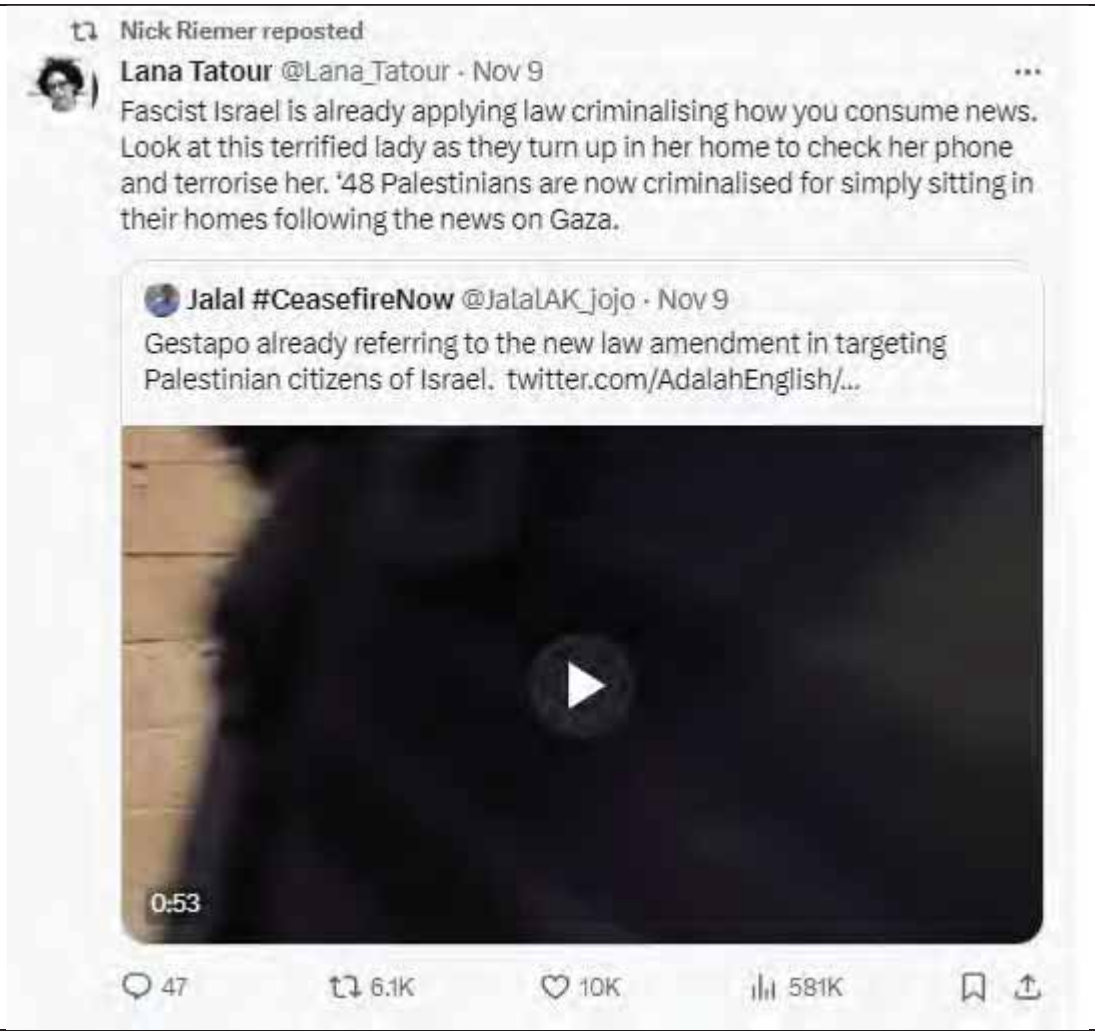
Divest from all financial interests in Israeli companies.
Lobby Universities Australia to withdraw from the 2013 memorandum of understanding between Israel and Australia on cooperation in higher education
Immediately take steps to offer support for Palestinian academics through the Scholars at Risk program, in line with steps already taken for Ukrainian academics.
Commit to establishing dedicated
2
39
72
4.8K

259



Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 9
Fascist Israel is already applying law criminalising how you consume news. Look at this terrified lady as they turn up in her home to check her phone and terrorise her. '48 Palestinians are now criminalised for simply sitting in their homes following the news on Gaza.
Jalal #CeasefireNow @JalalAK_jojo · Nov 9
Gestapo already referring to the new law amendment in targeting Palestinian citizens of Israel. twitter.com/AdalahEnglish/...
0:53
47
6.1K
10K
581K

260

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 9

IMPORTANT UPDATE ON SATURDAY

ZIM has changed its schedule and their boat may not be in port on Saturday. Nevertheless, our protest against ZIM at 12pm is still ON.

We'll also come back whenever we know a ZIM boat is there. We won't have much notice, so register for updates!

6 56 68 6.2K

261

Nick Riemer reposted

Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Nov 9

Yesterday we launched a petition calling on Sydney University management to endorse the institutional academic boycott of Israel, and support Palestinian scholars and students. If you work at the uni, add your name at the link. sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614

- Commit the university to the institutional academic boycott of Israel, as Palestinians have been asking us to do for almost two decades. The boycott is an expressly non-violent campaign. It affects Israeli academic institutions, not individual academics. Observing the academic boycott would involve cancelling the Experience Israel (OLES2155) course, which entails a boycott-violating partnership with an Israeli university, and ending staff involvement with the Zelman Cowen academic initiative, which also violates the boycott.
- Divest from all financial interests in Israeli companies.
- Lobby Universities Australia to withdraw from the 2013 memorandum of understanding between Israel and Australia on cooperation in higher education
- Immediately take steps to offer support for Palestinian academics through the Scholars at Risk program, in line with steps already taken for Ukrainian academics.
- Commit to establishing dedicated international scholarships for Palestinian students.

4 8 15 928

262

Nick Riemer reposted

Daniel Lopez @NoLuckLopez · Nov 9

"Australian households have suffered the largest fall in living standards of any advanced economy over the past year"

All under a Labor government.

It's quite stark — we won't turn things around unless the unions and the left are willing to fight Labor.

11 54 183 24K

263

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Nov 9

'To let suffering speak' | Overland's co-editor @jonathandunk responds to some of the criticism we have received for our solidarity with Palestine.

4 125 239 47K

264

Nick Riemer reposted

Samah Sabawi @gazaheart · Nov 8

A reminder of what we mean when we say from the river to the sea Palestine will be free. My liberation anthem poem. We will all be free. #Gazagenocide #Israel #Palestine

> The Canada Files @TheCanadaFiles · Nov 8
>
> A Canadian-Australian-Palestinian professor, Dr. Samah Sabawi, presented her Liberation Anthem after facing an audience attendee who asked her why Jews don't have a right to a homeland, asking in defence of the Israeli occupation's 'right to exist'.

5 102 199 17K

265

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 9

UPDATE ON SATURDAY

ZIM has changed its schedule and their boat may not be in port on Saturday. Nevertheless, our protest against ZIM at 12pm is still ON.

We'll also come back when we know for sure that a ZIM boat is there. We won't have much notice, so register for updates!

4 52 75 5.1K

266

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 9

YouGov polling shows that a clear majority of Australians want a ceasefire and that a small minority of Australians believe that Israel's blockade and attacks on Gaza are reasonable acts of self defence.

Find the link to the full report here: apan.org.au/2023-opinion-p...

12 115 180 16K

267

Nick Riemer reposted

evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 9

It's a very strange thing to be running a subscriberthon during a genocide, so please don't take our annual campaign as opportunistic in any regard - we're proud to serve our community of readers and writers and the support has been deeply humbling ♥

> Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Nov 9
> On the second-last day of our '23 Subscriberthon, our co-chief editor @evelynaraluen speaks truth to power. overland.org.au/2023/11/on-the...

5 14 94 5K

268

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 9

Tune in on Monday at 9:30pm AEDT to watch APAN president Nasser Mashni on QandA ! twitter.com/abcnews/status...

> This post is unavailable.

6 36 2.1K

269

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 9

On the 24th of November (10am UK time) the @EdinburghPIR Middle East Research group and @CRITIQUE_CENTRE will host @NickReimer1 for a timely conversation on academic boycotts, justice and liberation in Palestine. The event will be online. Register here eventbrite.co.uk/e/boycott-theo...

School of Social & Political Science Edinburgh

23 38 3.3K

270

Nick Riemer reposted

Hind Khoudary @Hind_Gaza · Nov 9

I had a couple of chocolate wafers for breakfast today.

I miss feeling full.

I never felt this hungry in my life.

444 11K 45K 1.4M

271

Nick Riemer reposted

hiero badge | انقذوا فلسطين @hierobadge · Nov 9

Last night Merribek Council became the first govt body to condemn Israeli war crimes and demand a ceasefire! They also called for:

- An end to the occupation
- Severing diplomatic ties w/ Israel
- The release of hostages (inc Palestinians)

All Councils should do this!

calling on the Australian government to:

2. Strongly condemn the war crimes being carried out by Israel against the Palestinians in Gaza.
3. Call for an immediate ceasefire and end to Israel's indiscriminate bombing.
4. Call for the immediate lifting of the siege on Gaza to allow Palestinians in Gaza to have unlimited access to food, water, fuel, electricity, medical supplies and construction materials to repair damaged homes and civilian infrastructure.
5. Advocate for all Palestinian and Israeli hostages to be released.
6. Advocate for a political resolution to the decades-long conflict which includes an end to Israel's illegal Occupation of Palestine in order for there to be a just legitimate, non-violent tactics used by individuals and organisations to pressure foreign governments over human rights abuses and war crimes, including Israel's brutal and illegal colonisation of Palestine.

9. Receives a report to explore options for council to cancel contracts with companies that support Israel's illegal occupation of Palestine or profit from it, especially companies which supply equipment to the Israeli Defence Force.
10. Amends the Community Flag Schedule outlined in Council's Flags Policy by raising the Palestinian flag on the fourth flag pole at Council's Coburg Civic Centre for six months in recognition of the specific situation of a genocide being carried out against the Palestinians in Gaza. That this decision be communicated to the communities who were expecting their flags to be on other dates after six months the decision will be reviewed by Council.

1 · 444 · 1.1K · 35K

272

Nick Riemer reposted

Rohan Talbot @rohantalbot · Nov 9

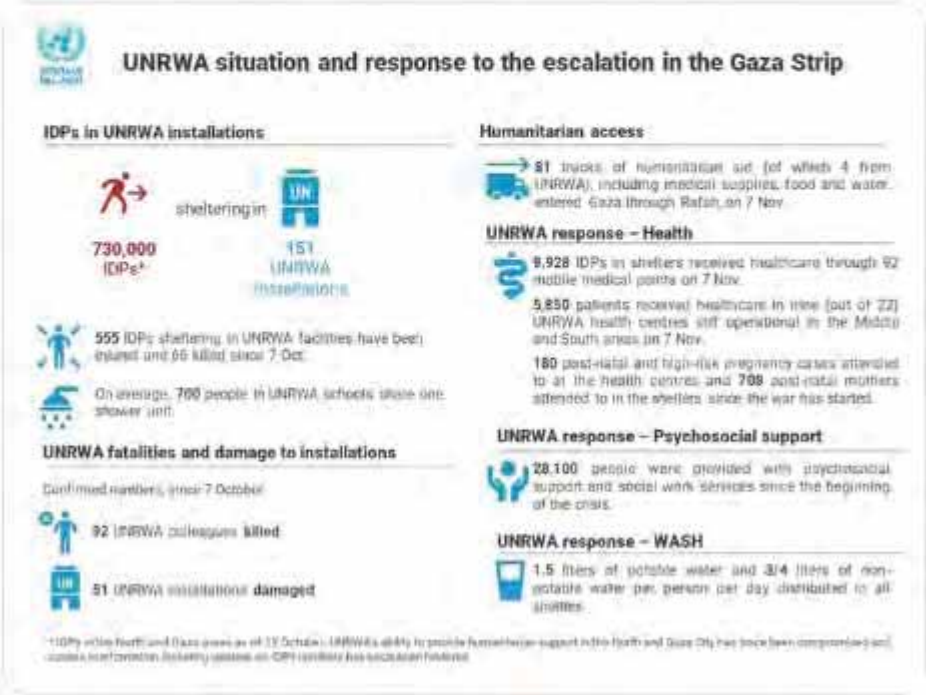
Awful stats on the humanitarian situation in #Gaza from @UNRWA:
- An average of 4,834 people per shelter, with on average 700 people sharing a single shower unit.
- 92 UN workers killed
- 555 people have been injured and 66 killed while sheltering at UNRWA installations



5 · 89 · 82 · 6.8K

273

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 9

Even now with 10000+ dead and the bombs still raining down, the lectures never end on how 'simplistic' and 'unnuanced' it is to support Palestine, what a 'complex' situation Gaza faces us with, and how the thing we most need is 'serious debate'.

21 · 38 · 131 · 5.3K

274

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Nov 9

Haaretz reports: increase in number of israeli soldiers who film themselves torturing Palestinians.

Note that the increase isn't in the torture per se, but in the brazenness of recording & sharing it online.

> Haaretz הארץ @Haaretz · Nov 9
>
> מכות, קללות ו"יאללה בית"ר": עלייה במספר החיילים שמתעדים את עצמם מתעללים בפלסטינים dlvr.it/Syb565

15 696 1.2K 63K

275

Nick Riemer reposted

Younis Tirawi | يونس @ytirawi · Nov 10

Israeli military soldiers hoisting names of ex Israeli settlements in Gaza. First picture, raising the name of ex- outpost Neveh Dekalim. Other picture, displaying a placard indicating the former Nova Beach on the ex-outpost of Gush Katif with Israeli flags.

There's a new version of this post

16 124 157

276

Nick Riemer reposted
Jehad Abusalim جهاد أبو سليم @JehadAbusalim · Nov 10
Intense shelling near the Indonesian hospital tonight.
0:31
2
71
73
6.2K

277

Nick Riemer reposted

Nour Naim| نور نعيم @NourNaim88 · Nov 10

A horrific crime !!
The outpatient clinic at Al-Shifa Hospital has been targeted. A place crowded with displaced individuals from Gaza and its northern areas. Reports suggest dozens of martyrs !

From Yasser

7 161 127 5.9K

278

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 10

We still have some places on buses to tomorrow's protest, leaving from Liverpool, Bankstown and Central stations at 11. Register at the links!

2 20 31 4.5K

279

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Nov 10

literally what is the purpose of every international humanitarian law mechanism, of the Geneva Convention, of the Convention on the Prevention & Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, of the International Criminal Court, what is the point, act now! NOW!

17 139 420 8.5K

280

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 10

A big coalition of staff networks/groups asks @EdinburghUni to: protect Palestine free speech; suspend the application of IHRA antisemitism def; acknowledge historical (Balfour Declaration, Balfour was Edinburgh Chancellor) and present colonial complicity; support solidarity

UCU Edinburgh and 5 others

38 76 4K

281

Nick Riemer reposted

Hind Khoudary @Hind_Gaza · Nov 10

Another one of my dear friends was killed by an Israeli airstrike south of Gaza.
Mohammed Saleh, evacuated from the north to the south weeks ago - was killed by Israel today.
Mohammed is @AbdallahBaghda7 best friend.
They were both killed by Israel.

271 7K 13K 454K

282

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 11

Jetskis out for Palestine at Port Botany!

7 66 236 7.6K

283

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestinian Youth Movement @palyouthmvmt · Nov 11

‼ THREAD: Israel is at war with Gaza's hospitals ‼

9 322 458 27K

284

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 11

Powerful protest today to launch the campaign to #blocktheboat. We're proud to work with @unions4palestin to say ZIM out of Botany. Follow us for updates and action alerts!

9 170 331 22K

285

Nick Riemer reposted

Andy Fleming @slackbastard · Nov 11

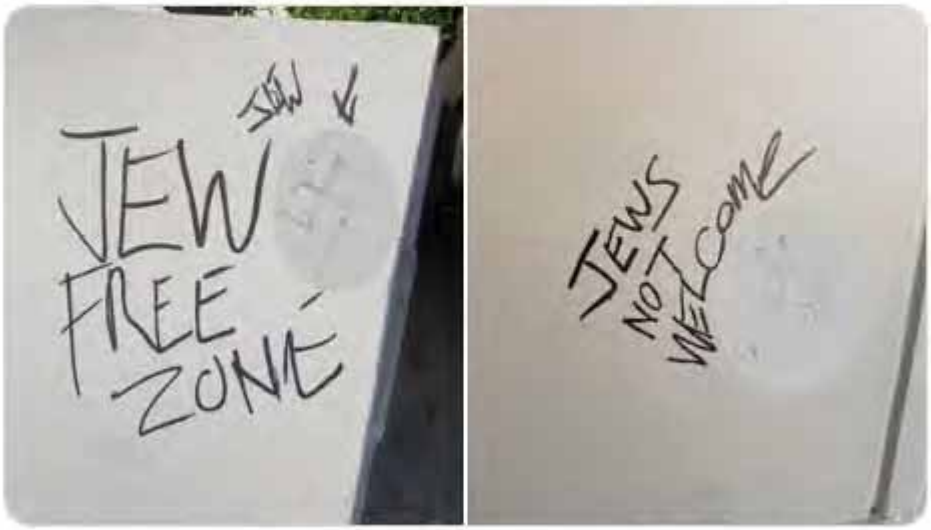
1/ PSA:

Recent events means inter alia an uptick in antisemitism along w Islamophobia, & creeps gonna creep. Eg, this graf appeared near Barkly Square in Brunswick in the last few days.



8 68 205 45K

286

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 11

The jet-skis came out for Palestine!

> 9News Sydney @9NewsSyd · Nov 11
>
> Port Botany was today swarmed by pro-Palestinian protesters, with demonstrators taking to the water on jet skis as they attempted to block the arrival of an Israeli vessel. @eeRamsay #9News

4 40 103 7.1K

287

Nick Riemer reposted

matthew abbott @mattabbottphoto · Nov 11

@NickReimer1 "the water front is where those struggles have been played out in the past, and the waterfront is where they are going to be played out again today" at todays #FreePalestine - Stop the Zim boat, Port Botany Sydney. #MUA

3 31 56 2.8K

288

Nick Riemer reposted
Medical Aid for Palestinians @MedicalAidPal · Nov 11
"No one can get out from the Shifa hospital. No one can come in. The people who tried to evacuate this morning were being shot in the streets." Dr Marwan Abu Sada, Head of Surgery at Al Shifa Hospital, describes horrifying scenes as Israel attacks the Gaza hospital this morning.
MESSAGE FROM GAZA
MAP
MEDICAL AID FOR PALESTINIANS
DR MARWAN ABU SADA, HEAD OF SURGERY, AL SHIFA HOSPITAL
1:05
112
3.2K
2.6K
319K

289

Nick Riemer reposted

Areeb Ullah @are_eb · Nov 11

Replying to @are_eb and @MahaGaza

.@MahaGaza has filed her latest dispatch from Gaza. She speaks to journalists and patients trapped inside the Al Shifah hospital in Gaza.

The situation remains is desperate as doctors run out of medical supplies and electricity to treat the wounded.

1 48 58 5K

290

Nick Riemer reposted

Lina Mounzer @warghetti · Nov 11

What we are watching is no less than an entire people experiencing the end of the world. The end of the world

> The Fact Finder @FactualNarrator · Nov 11
> A Palestinian doctor stuck in the North, sharing a message of despair, peace, and faith.

5 386 865 51K

291

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
Today - see you there.
STOP THE GENOCIDE
IN GAZA
FREE
PALESTINE
PROTEST
SUN 12 NOV
1PM HYDE PARK NTH
PALESTINE ACTION GROUP SYDNEY
12
22
101
8.1K

292

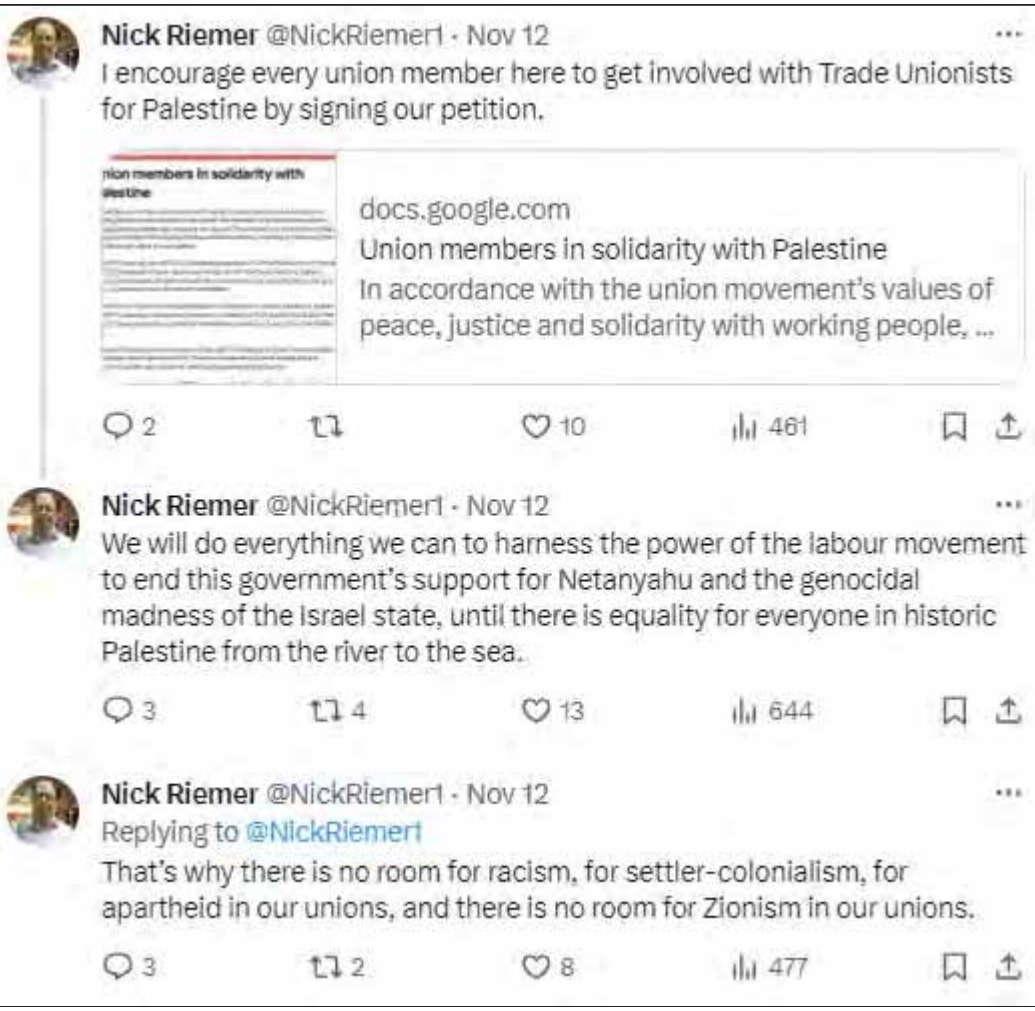
Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 12

London was beautiful today. Upwards of 800,000 people out on the streets for the Palestinian people demanding a ceasefire & an end to the Israeli occupation of Palestinian lands.

25 352 1.1K 28K

293-295



Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
I encourage every union member here to get involved with Trade Unionists for Palestine by signing our petition.
docs.google.com
Union members in solidarity with Palestine
In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, ...
2
10
461
Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
We will do everything we can to harness the power of the labour movement to end this government's support for Netanyahu and the genocidal madness of the Israel state, until there is equality for everyone in historic Palestine from the river to the sea.
3
4
13
644
Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Replying to @NickRiemer1
That's why there is no room for racism, for settler-colonialism, for apartheid in our unions, and there is no room for Zionism in our unions.
3
2
8
477

296-315

Nick Riemer
@NickRiemer1

There were some hugely powerful & moving speeches from Palestinians at yesterday's Botany protest which I hope we captured on video. I spoke on why there's no room for racism, settler-colonialism, apartheid or Zionism in our unions.

11:08 AM · Nov 12, 2023 · 6,629 Views

47 43 174 3

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12

Unions are about justice and solidarity with working people. We don't switch those principles off beyond Australia's borders. We're internationalists, which means that we're serious when we say that no one is free till everyone is free.

4 · 1 · 15 · 328

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12

That justice has no meaning if it isn't justice for everybody, wherever in the world they are, regardless of their background or their beliefs.

2 · 13 · 255

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12

The rank-and-file union members who've signed our petition know what side they're on. The working people of Gaza are the objects of a genocidal attack on a sickening and indescribable scale.

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies. Its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

2 · 13 · 256

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12

We all have an obligation to respond, since that violence is enabled by Western governments, including ours.

There will never be justice for working people in this country from a government that cannot even bring itself to call for a ceasefire in a genocide.

1 · 1 · 13 · 201

1 1 13 201

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
That's where their opportunism and lack of principle has led them: straight into support for a genocide. Shame on Penny Wong, and shame on Anthony Albanese. They are truly the hollow woman and the hollow man.
2 14 232

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
We always hear about Albo the underdog, Albo the child of a single mum. What we'll remember is Albanese the genocide supporter.
2 12 195

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
In particular, we're here today to tell Albanese and the whole of the political establishment that Israeli shipping lines are not welcome in Port Botany. The waterfront has always been a key site where political conflict gets played out in Australia, and it is again today.
1 11 199

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Here at the port we're subject to the totalitarian anti-protest laws that Albo and Wong's party in NSW put in place earlier in the year precisely to stop people like us from standing up for what is right, whether it's protecting the environment or protesting against a genocide.
1 9 189

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Those laws are supposed to protect the Australian economy – that's the same economy that is increasing its arms manufacturing component, including to Israel, that has seen the largest fall in living standards of any advanced economy over the past year.
1 9 179

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Our government is giving its green light to Israel to unleash a reign of terror over Gaza:
1 10 174

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
the bombing of hospitals and bakeries and generators and solar panels and refugee camps, the destruction of half of Gaza's housing, the sudden employment of 390 000 Palestinians since the start of the war, the murder of almost 11000 Palestinians in a sickening genocidal spree.
4 1 10 527

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
That same government is busy tightening the screws on ordinary people here, and wants to prevent us from asserting that genocide is wrong.

4 1 10 527

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That same government is busy tightening the screws on ordinary people here, and wants to prevent us from asserting that genocide is wrong.

2 1 9 165

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
The water just out there goes all the way to Gaza and it links ordinary people here to ordinary people there.

But there's another more important link between us and Gazans: our determination for justice, which joins us in a bond of solidarity with Palestinians.

1 8 167

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
As union members, we're here to say that we stand alongside the Palestinians of Gaza, of the West Bank and the diaspora. Touch one, touch all.

1 9 168

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That's why there's no room for genocide apologia in our unions.

That's why there is no room for warmongering in our unions.

1 8 158

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That's why there is no room for racism, for settler-colonialism, for apartheid in our unions, and there is no room for Zionism in our unions.

3 2 8 478

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
I encourage every union member here to get involved with Trade Unionists for Palestine by signing our petition.

docs.google.com
Union members in solidarity with Palestine
In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, ...

2 10 461

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
We will do everything we can to harness the power of the labour movement to end this government's support for Netanyahu and the genocidal madness of the Israel state, until there is equality for everyone in historic Palestine from the river to the sea.

3 4 13 645

316

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
Sydney out again for the fifth week in a row. United with Palestine.
Ceasefire now.
0:14
61
390
1.7K
38K

317

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12

Not really clear from the photo, but central Sydney is choked with the protest march calling for a ceasefire and a free Palestine. There are literally too many of us for the streets to hold.

219 239 984 39K

318

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 13

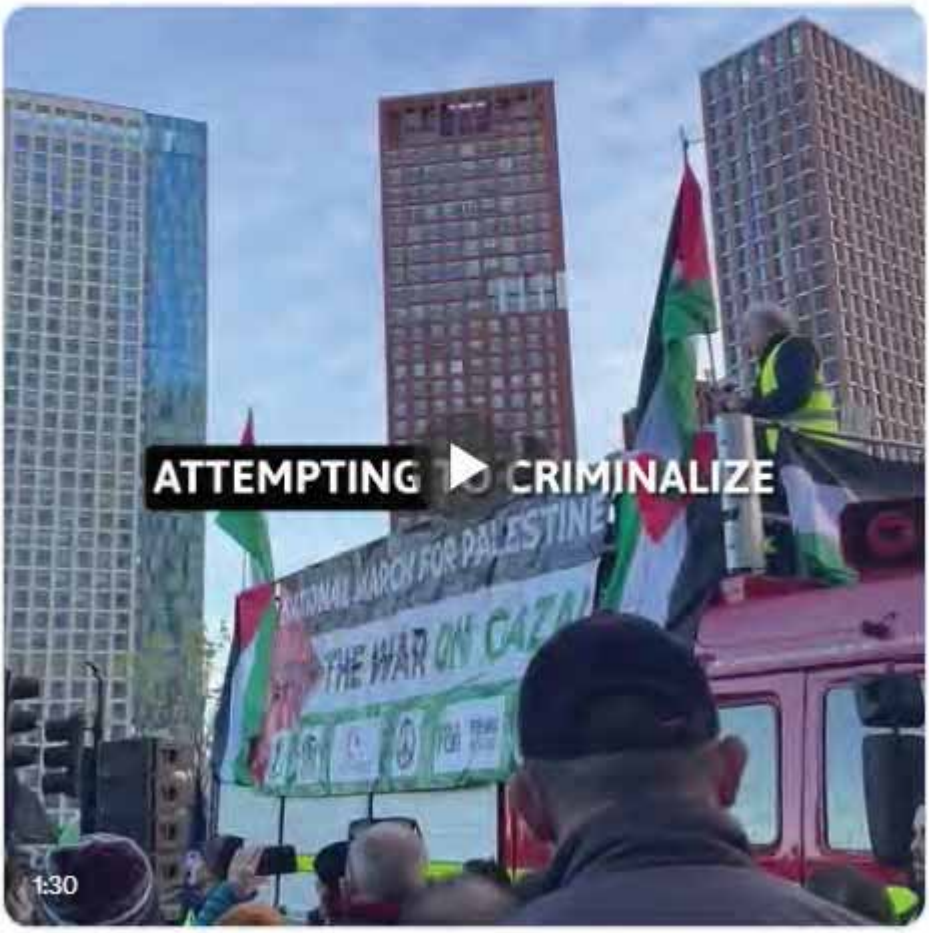
I had the immense honour to speak at the national march for Palestine in London on 11/11.

800,000 people marched in joint struggle & solidarity with the Palestinian people & called for an end to the genocide in Gaza.

It was a historic moment. The struggle continues ✊



62 479 1.1K 47K

319

Nick Riemer reposted

anthroboycott @anthroboycott · Nov 13

In July, our association took a clear stand in support of the academic boycott of complicit Israeli institutions and voted to endorse BDS. 1/9

6 51 136 24K

320

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 13

Just spotted in Glebe. Well done whoever's responsible for this.

75 116 366 13K

321

Nick Riemer reposted

Faten Sourani فاتن الصوراني @FatenSourani · Nov 13

The Israelis killed my 5-year-old niece the most beautiful Rahaf Alsaqqa and my very kind and one in a million brother-in-law Mohammed Alsaqqa today. A tank targeted them while they were trying to escape south through "the safe corridor."

Keep my sister Hala in your prayers.

310 14K 30K 744K

322

Nick Riemer reposted

Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Nov 13

Students for palestine are going on a convoy to Canberra on Wednesday to protest the governments support of the genocide in Gaza. We have an overwhelming response and need some crowdfunding to partially fund our busses. Please support us ( link below)

44 213 372 22K

323

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 13

I can't believe that 11,000 +Palestinians have been carpet bombed, massacred, subject to genocide and @PatsKarvelas has made @iamthenas the bad guy. @abcqanda did you get the talking points from the lobby?

86 192 638 22K

324

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 14

Solidarity and congratulations to @iamthenas for his advocacy on QandA last night in the face of the intense onslaught he was subject to. Chilling to see the support for vicious war crimes and ongoing colonialism platformed by the national broadcaster.

58 70 265 10K

325

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 14

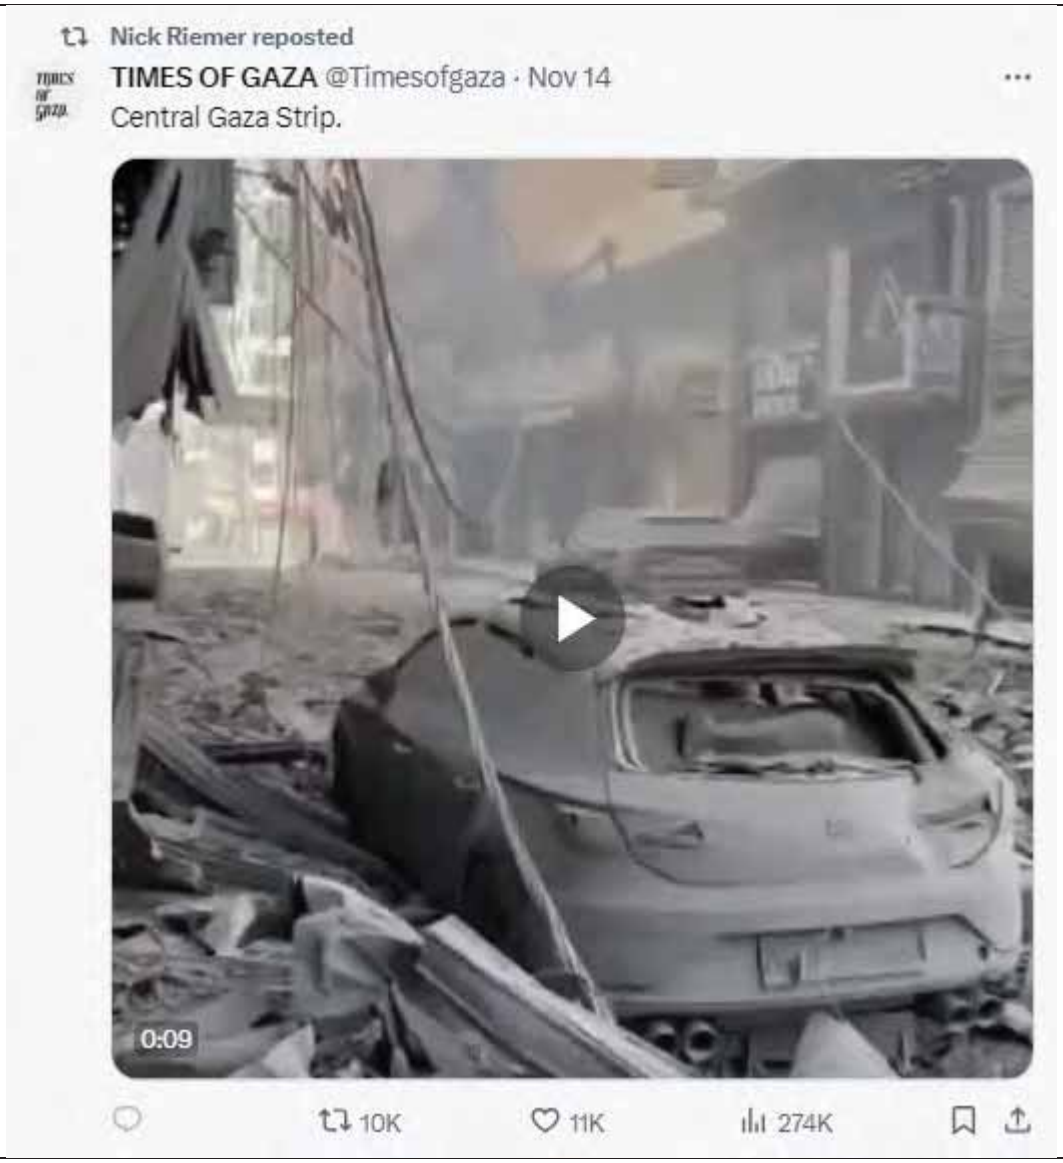
Last night's QandA: guilt by association, muck-raking, absurd charges about what slogans might (but do not) mean are Zionists' only arguments. They support actual genocidal violence and colonisation, yet we're meant to condemn the Palestinian calling for peace and equality.

18 19 83 2.7K

326



Nick Riemer reposted
TIMES OF GAZA @Timesofgaza · Nov 14
Central Gaza Strip.
0:09
10K
11K
274K

327

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 15
Sharing my response to some very ugly attacks on Palestine solidarity and some shocking apologia for genocide from colleagues on internal Sydney University email and social media. Clearly indicates the character of the two sides in this 'debate'.
35
56
156
14K

328

Nick Riemer reposted
Maha Hussaini @MahaGaza · Nov 15
Bodies pile up in the open as al-Shifa Hospital in #Gaza becomes a no-go zone for patients
My reporting on the ground for @MiddleEastEye middleeasteye.net
6
108
107
6.2K

329

Nick Riemer reposted

IndigenousX @IndigenousX · Nov 15

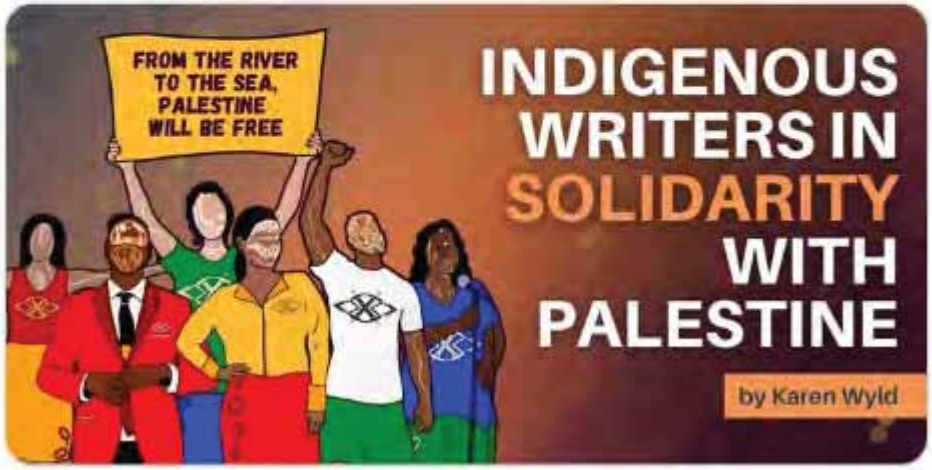
Blak solidarity with Palestinian people is powerful, writes Karen Wyld. In this latest IX piece, @1KarenWyld reflects on friendships and solidarity between Blak and Palestinian writers, and mutual support for Indigenous sovereignty and self-determination.
com.pulse.ly/mzne8rwlye



5 87 129 10K

330

Nick Riemer reposted

Laboratoire Histoire des théories linguistiqu @LaboratoireHT · Nov 15

Les 22 et 23 novembre se tiendront les Assises de la Recherche de la Sorbonne Nouvelle.
Alejandro Diaz Villalba, Pierre-Yves Testenoire et Julie Marsault y participent. N'hésitez pas à venir les écouter ! univ-paris3.fr/les-assises-de...

2 3 476

331

Nick Riemer reposted
Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 15
12 hours of invasion and no signs of any of Hamas's tunnels or headquarters.
Unless Israel is creating the scene that might be released later.
Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 15
Breaking: Israel is planning an invasion of the Shifa hospital.
-No media coverage
-No other party attendance
-No UN or Red Cross presence
...
Show more
8
423
574
33K

332

Nick Riemer reposted
Samah Sabawi @gazaheart · Nov 14
Kareem is still denied the dignity of burial. It is almost three days now since he was killed. Let's at least give him the dignity of sharing his story. Thanks @NabilAlNashar and @ahmedyussuf10 for writing this heartbreaking story. #Gaza abc.net.au
14
205
263
27K

333

Nick Riemer reposted

Caitlin Cassidy @caitecassidy · Nov 15

Australia's research sector chases rankings over quality and is 'not fit for purpose', chief scientist says

3 28 43 9.5K

334

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 14

I will remember this for a long time from Marcia Langton!!! Horrific genocide apologist — Israel is bombing hospitals and committing genocide and Langton regurgitates Zionist talking points

94 167 623 34K

335

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 16

Excellent and very much needed initiative.

> Lia @lia_perkinss · Nov 16
>
> Replying to @RandaAFattah @NickRiemer1 and 3 others
>
> Students are taking action against the ABC's complicity in genocide of Palestinians, tomorrow, outside the ABC offices in sydney. All welcome and please share widely

47 119 353 20K

336

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 16

It's past time for a register of anti-Palestinian racism.

This is entirely unacceptable.

Australian Palestinian belong on this continent and have every right to have political agency.

We're not going anywhere!

@AlboMP ...
Show more

> Declassified Australia @DeclassifiedAus · Nov 16
>
> It's inconceivable that any mainstream journalist in Australia would write this kind of diatribe against a Jewish leader.
> This fits into a long history of Palestinians being smeared across the western world:

36 165 551 26K

337

Nick Riemer reposted
Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 16
Congrats to the MEAA members making this powerful statement on the ABC's appalling coverage of Palestine & "the racist treatment of Nasser Mashni, President of the Australia Palestine Advocacy Network, on ABC's Q+A episode on Monday 13 November by host Patricia Karvelas"
MEAA Members for Palestine @meaa4palestine · Nov 16
Today, we submitted a statement to @ABCTV regarding editorial integrity and Palestine coverage, co-signed by @unions4palestin.
We stand with media comrades in their efforts to change and improve editorial policy and reporting.
Read the full statement via link in bio.
MEAA Members in solidarity with Palestine
suggesting that the massacre of more than 11,000 Palestinians is debatable and that it may be possible to justify the direct attack of 16 hospitals, the killing of 192 health workers, 102 UN workers and 42 journalists (Committee to Protecting Journalists), as well as cutting off food, fuel and water to millions of people.
We cannot allow our colleagues to compromise their professional ethics by becoming stenographers to any state violence
1
8
25
1.9K

338

Nick Riemer reposted

Lia @lia_perkinss · Nov 16

Replying to @RandaAFattah @NickReimer1 and 3 others

Students are taking action against the ABC's complicity in genocide of Palestinians, tomorrow, outside the ABC offices in sydney. All welcome and please share widely

31 71 132 20K

339

Nick Riemer reposted

Hebh Jamal @hebh_jamal · Nov 17

Israel bombed my favourite place in Gaza today. The ancient Great Mosque of Gaza, Mesjid Omar built in 1344.

This photo taken last yr. I can't imagine the ruins that exist there now. How many murdered here because of the air strikes. Will we ever find out for sure?

523 16K 34K 5.1M

340

Nick Riemer reposted
Marcus Banks @MarcusANBanks · Nov 17
Replying to @NickRiemer1
Over 500 Australian journalists in the Media, Entertainment and Arts Alliance union stand in solidarity with Palestine.
docs.google.com
MEAA members in solidarity with Palestine
We, the undersigned Media, Entertainment and Arts Alliance members, condemn the Australian ...
8
6
14
970

341

Nick Riemer reposted
Dr Kathryn Daley @Kat_Daley · Nov 14
Attn: Australian academics!: Our super fund @UniSuperNews holds shares in Elbit, whose main business is to supply artillery to the Israeli defence force.
If you would like to make a complaint and demand divestment, here is the link:
unisuper.com.au
Complaints
9
194
244
49K

342

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 17

MEDIA RELEASE: PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST NEXT ZIM VESSEL AT PORT BOTANY. Share!

A RELEASE: PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST NE
ESSEL AT PORT BOTANY
23
mediate release

ine supporters are preparing to demonstrate against the Israeli ng line ZIM on its next call at Port Botany. The protest will be the d at the port, in a series of actions targeting ZIM in Sydney and urne. The Melbourne protest on November 9 forced trucks carryi ntainers to turn around.

the oldest and largest shipping company in Israel and has a long y of support for war crimes and ethnic cleansing against Palestinia ctober 8, ZIM's CEO, Eli Glickman, a former Israeli SEAL command
e company's ships at the disposal of the Israeli Ministry of Defenc

Israel's current genocidal assault on Gaza now near the end of its the protest is a direct response to appeals for worldwide solidarit Palestinian unions, and to the request from Palestinian Civil Societ ut companies complicit with Israel's crimes against Palestinians as lobal BDS (Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions) campaign.

alestinian General Federation of Trade Unions (PGFTU) and a largo on of all major Palestinian unions and professional associations ha ) on trade unions and workers worldwide to boycott Israel and esses that support its apartheid regime. ZIM vessels have been ed by 'block the boat protests' in many ports around the world.

Port Botany protest is organised by Palestine Justice Movement Sydn supported by the Sydney Branch of the Maritime Union of Australia. It orsed by Trade Unionists for Palestine, as well as by United Australian ralian Workers, and BDS Australia. Further endorsing organisations w announced shortly.

ment attributable to Ahmed Abadla, Palestine Justice Movement
key: 'Our previous protests in Sydney and Melbourne have already forc to alter its schedules. We intend to continue protesting for as long as as visit Sydney. ZIM has Palestinian blood on its hands, just as much as ry government official who refuses to support a complete ceasefire do gracefully, both the Albanese government and the Minns government in NSW are supporting Israel's genocidal war, and refusing to back a a ceasefire. There's no place for ZIM in Port Botany, or for any other botany that supports Apartheid Israel's war-crimes. Israel must be ctioned for its crimes. If our elected representatives won't act – we will continuing our actions that aim at driving ZIM out of Port Botany.'

ment attributable to Paul Keating, Secretary, Maritime Union of Austra key Branch: 'We will always defend the community's right to stand up fight for what is right. These community-led actions have for decades sted movements fighting for justice including an end to Apartheid Sou ca, against unjust wars in Vietnam, Afghanistan and Iraq and innumeral rs, against nuclear war, for First Nations rights, women's rights, worke ts amongst others and act as bulwarks against discrimination, war and ronmental destruction.'

tact: info.pjms@gmail.com

4 72 126 7.7K

343

Nick Riemer reposted

ASU members for Palestine @asu4palestine · Nov 17

Happening now at Central Station in Sydney. Join us!

53 148 537 18K

344

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 18

Replying to @omarsakrpoet

Sobbing. Every day. If you can't bring yourself to oppose this evil, you are my enemy. It is as simple as that. The very very least you can do is show up to protest this heartless monstrosity. Boycott and divest from any company supporting it. Inundate your reps! Please

1 5 20 1.1K

345

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 17

Advocacy, lobbying and campaigning led by Palestinians in Australia towards self-determination and autonomy is urgent now more than ever. Please help us fund critical advocacy work. @nazeem_hussain @SaraSalehTweets apan.org.au/help-apan-grow/

24 127 225 19K

346

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 18

Tomorrow in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Perth: protest. If you're able to—go be heard, I beg you. If I hadn't fractured my spine this week, I would be there. Raise your voices!

33 387 704 36K

347

Nick Riemer reposted

Scheherazade Bloul @scherrybloul · Nov 20

Activists have occupied the Thales Australia office in Naarm/Melbourne this morning. At about 10.30am, activists stormed the building to call for an end to Australian complicity in Israel's genocidal assault on Gaza.

58 531 1.1K 54K

348

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 20

As is reported here, we're considering all our options to pursue a just outcome for Niko. @Sydney_Uni has made a mockery of its claims to be committed to staff with disabilities.

2 7 29 1.4K

349

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 20

Lots of traffic honking in support of a free Palestine outside Sydney University

> Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Nov 20
>
> Ceasefire Now, Stop the Genocide, Free Palestine and BDS banner drop over Parramatta Rd happening now!

58 47 297 9.4K

350-351

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

Three police just turned up at our banner drop to tell us they'd 'received complaints' about our 'Ceasefire Now' and other banners, and that they had to come down. The @nswpolice are obstructing political expression and abetting a genocide.

353 483 1.2K 103K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

Their justification was about as flimsy as they come: the banner 'might' cause offence and 'might incite violence', so, of course, they were intervening 'for our own protection'.

25 14 105 4.4K

352

Nick Riemer reposted

Charandev Singh @CharandevSingh · Nov 20

"With the support of the Aboriginal community in Victoria, Western Australia and across the country, we will fight for justice for our Jeffrey."

Mr Winmar became the third Aboriginal death in custody in the last month in Australia.

5 55 70 4.4K

353

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 21

ACTION ALERT – Our protest against ZIM shipping in Botany is 6pm TONIGHT (Tuesday Nov 21).

The ZIM vessel Calandra is in port. Join us at the Foreshore Rd boat ramp to say ZIM out of Port Botany, stop the genocide in Gaza and free Palestine. for Media release, map & details.

8 150 147 29K

354

Nick Riemer reposted
Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 20
This is a disgrace and absolute overreach by the NSW Police - who have been empowered by the shameful actions of the NSW Premier who from his first act of lighting up the opera house in blue and white has failed to respect human rights
Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 20
Three police just turned up at our banner drop to tell us they'd 'received complaints' about our 'Ceasefire Now' and other banners, and that they had to come down. The @nswpolice are obstructing political expression and abetting a genocide.
CEASEFIRE NOW
216
203
610
34K

355

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 21
This evening. ZIM not welcome in Port Botany. Hoping to see many hundreds of people there to stand against genocide and its enablers.
STOP THE GENOCIDE IN GAZA NOW!
BOYCOTT APARTHEID ISRAEL
PROTEST TO BLOCK THE BOAT
ZIM SHIPPING OUT OF PORT BOTANY
6PM TUESDAY 21 NOV
FORESHORE RD BOAT RAMP, PORT BOTANY
29
45
95
4.3K

356

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 21
The police are blocking the port entrance, so we're having a little sit-in.
Free Palestine.
115
146
550
18K

357

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 21
Police line blocking the port entrance. The police are doing our job for us.
11
34
95
3.8K

| | |
|---|---|
| 358 | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22People arrested at the Block the Boat Palestine protest at the port last night have been charged under the ALP's harsh new anti-protest laws. Everyone who claims to stand on the side of progess but still supports that bankrupt party needs to take a long, hard look at themselves.130 459 1K 62K |
| 359-360 | Nick Riemer repostedPalestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22Replying to @PalestineRisingOur peaceful, non-violent boycott campaigns and protests will continue against all companies complicit with apartheid Israel in Australia. Join us!4 10 39 997Nick Riemer repostedPalestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22PJMS condemns the arrests and shocking police violence last night. In charging protesters under the new antiprotest laws, the ALP, aided by a complicit media, is colluding with genocide and accelerating the dangerous repressive turn in politics. We will not be intimidated.7 55 128 12K |

361

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22

That @ClareONeilMP finds protesters 'despicable' for fictional 'violence' against police, but is silent on the police violence itself and the genocide we were protesting against, says all we need to know about her and her party: reactionary, opportunistic, unprincipled, complicit

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 22

I was speaking to 2 young guys after the protest last night who said, just wait till the footage gets out, this is going to look so bad for the police.

But of course @ClareONeilMP is out saying that the cops who ...
Show more

Home Affairs Minister Clare O'Neil told Channel Nine's Today that the protest activity "was utterly despicable" and she hated to see violence against the police.

"We've got law enforcement officials around the country who put on a uniform every day to try to keep your family safe and my family safe and to subject them to any form of violence is just utterly inexcusable," she said.

"We've got a bunch of people in our country who are feeling incredibly deeply about what's going on in the Middle East ... let's respect each other, understand the strong views and feelings in the community, but just calm down a bit."

20 101 176 9.2K

362

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22
Last night, Minns' police used totalitarian new laws against Palestine protesters and Inner West ALP councillors scotched a ceasefire motion. Meanwhile, ALP party faithful congratulated themselves on their progressivism at the Bowen dinner. A dangerous and sickening fantasy land.
The prime minister laid out the government's agenda, its legislation of climate targets, support of renewable energy projects and electric vehicles.
He said the biggest economic transformation since the industrial revolution was underway.
"That's why Australia needs Labor – the one party that has never feared the future, but looked to it with optimism and clear eyes," he said.
Taking aim at Opposition Leader Peter Dutton, Mr Albanese slammed the Queensland MP for claiming to be a conservative, while trying to "trash our institutions".
15
35
93
3.5K

363

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22
Joint Statement: Civil Rights Groups Condemn Police Repression of Port Botany Rally nswccl.org.au/joint_statemen... via @NSWCCL
nswccl.org.au
Joint Statement: Civil Rights Groups Condemn Police Repression of Port Botany Rally
2
31
38
3.6K

364

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22
Brief media statement on last night's protest at Port Botany.
atement on yesterday's Port Botany protest against aeli shipping line ZIM e following comments can be attributed to Ahmed Abadi MS spokesperson:
/e congratulate the 500 justice-supporters who came at nost no notice to our peaceful protest and sit-in at the ichison terminal last night to say no to ZIM – a known nsporter of deadly armaments.
lestine Justice Movement Sydney has taken a strong an wavering stance against the Israeli war machine, which s undertaken relentless carpet bombing on Gaza over th t 47 days, resulting in the massacre of over 13,000 zans, including over 5,500 children. We caused hours of lays to port operations, after a previous major delay to th M vessel Calandra.
Ve condemn the arrests and police violence to which rotesters were subject. In charging protesters under the new nti-protest laws, the ALP, aided by a complicit media, is olluding with genocide and accelerating the dangerous epressive turn in politics. We will not be intimidated.
Our peaceful, non-violent boycott campaigns and protests wil ontinue against all companies complicit with apartheid Israel Australia.
The media play an integral role, as does social media, in forming the public. As well as calling on the federal overnment to end its support for Israeli crimes and the state overnment to end its repression of protest, we call on ournalists not to be selective or complicit in their coverage of e issues in Gaza and Palestine more generally.
We will not stop until justice is achieved for the Palestinians, om the Jordan River to the Mediterranean sea."
11
45
64
4.2K

365

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22
Not interested in hearing any more from ALP members who voted against the cease-fire motion at Inner West Council last night about how strongly they actually support a cease-fire.
Pip Hinman @PipHinman · Nov 22
My short piece for @greenleftonline on Labor councillors' failure to support a ceasefire at last night's @IWCouncil Given today's news about a 'pause', it is even more damning of a party that once stood up for Palestine greenleft.org.au/content/inner-...
5
10
55
2.5K

366

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22

Excellent statement from @jennyleong and @SueHigginson_ on the disgraceful response to yesterday's protest from Minns's political police. Thank you Jenny and Sue. No ambiguity what side The Greens are on.

> Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 22
>
> Joint statement with Greens NSW Justice spokesperson @SueHigginson_ on the shameful police crackdown on peaceful pro-Palestinian protestors at Port Botany.
>
> Solidarity with all who took peaceful action last night: thank you for ...
> Show more
>
> PRO-PALESTINIAN PROTESTORS IN PORT BOTANY
>
> Last night hundreds of pro-Palestinian trade unionists, activists and community members gathered in Port Botany to protest the unloading of a vessel owned by the Israeli shipping line ZIM. The peaceful sit-in was the latest in seven weeks of community actions in support of Palestine, where more than 13,000 people have been killed and thousands more injured or missing as a result of unfettered, genocidal military aggression by the Israeli Defence Force.
>
> Shamefully, this peaceful act of protest was met with unprovoked and unbridled aggression at the hands of the NSW Police Force. Mounted Police were deployed into the crowd - which included children and elderly Palestinian community members - to forcibly disperse those exercising their rights to free assembly and speech. What ensued was a crowd crush and panic that saw multiple protestors injured and others left scrambling for their immediate safety. Footage and images of the action show police violently handling people and pulling them from the crowd.
>
> Violence against peaceful protestors can never be justified - and must never be tolerated. Yet rather than condemn this aggression the Minister for Police has this morning shamefully lauded it, saying: "The NSW Police set parameters and they did a great job keeping our streets safe last night."
>
> The right to assemble and peacefully protest is a core tenet of any functional democracy that must be cherished and protected. The draconian anti-protest laws that were supported by the NSW Labor and Liberal parties threaten this right and impose harsh penalties including up to two years' imprisonment for peaceful protest. We understand that twenty-three people at last night's action have been arrested and charged under these laws.
>
> The Greens stand in solidarity with all those who took peaceful action at Port Botany last night and thank them for their courage and moral clarity in the face of genocide and Israel's violent occupation in Palestine. We stand with the millions rising up across the globe in solidarity with Palestine and declare that business as usual cannot continue while the situation in Gaza deteriorates, aided and abetted by Western governments including our own. Free Palestine. Ceasefire now.

3 16 50 2.1K

| | |
|---|---|
| | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22Noticeably higher number of cars honking for a free Palestine at our banner drop today. 105 133 650 17K |
| 367 | Nick Riemer repostedShona (@pommedeguerre.bsky.social) @pomelodeguerre · Nov 22Replying to @NickRiemer1Thanks to all of you. I have a child studying at USyd, and you make me glad. I know this isn't an easy stand to take, and I appreciate you making it clear that it should be.10 2 23 995 |
| 368 | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22Some good reporting here by @jenniferluu_ on the unacceptable crack-down on pro-Palestinian speech at @Sydney_Uni. Excellent work by Maeve Larkins and other students defending the university as a place of critique. protect-au.mimecast.com/s/0ATUC81V0PTX...3 7 12 916 |

369

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 23

Much as I'd have preferred my book on the academic boycott never to have been necessary, I'm looking forward to discussing it and to hearing ideas about Palestine solidarity in universities on Friday. 10am GMT, 9pm Sydney/Melbourne/Canberra.

> Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 20
>
> This Friday 24th of November at 10am GMT the @EdinburghPIR Middle East Research group and @CRITIQUE_CENTRE will host @NickRiemer1 for a timely conversation on academic boycotts, justice and liberation in Palestine. The event will be online. Register here ...
>
> Show more

6 6 26 2.1K

370

Nick Riemer reposted

Michael Karadjis @mkaradjis · Nov 23

Was quite a show, watching that robotic row of Labour (and one allied Liberal) apparacheks vote down the simple call for a ceasefire (ie, just stop the slaughter, which says nothing of Israel's ongoing occupation), against the overwhelming will of the local community.

> Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22
>
> Not interested in hearing any more from ALP members who voted against the cease-fire motion at Inner West Council last night about how strongly they actually support a cease-fire.
> twitter.com/PipHinman/stat...

2 5 461

371

Nick Riemer reposted

Nabil Iqbal @nblqbl · Nov 2

I can't stop thinking, so I'm writing something.

This is about the physics students of Gaza. 1/N

86 8.4K 20K 1.7M

372

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24

It's a time of reckoning for the Australian media. This is so deeply unethical. Even by their own standards of journalistic ethics - they continually fail. Protecting sources should be paramount always!!!

Ben Pennings @BenPennings · Nov 24

Three more climate protectors have been arrested on conspiracy charges due to the footage provided by the ABC to 4 Corners.

"It is a betrayal of their sources, it is a betrayal of their story, and it is a betrayal of journalism."

ABC footage 'betrayal' leads to activist arrests

Disrupt Burrup Hub media adviser Jesse Noakes said the ABC's decision was a 'massive violation'. Picture: Paul Garvey

14 219 501 23K

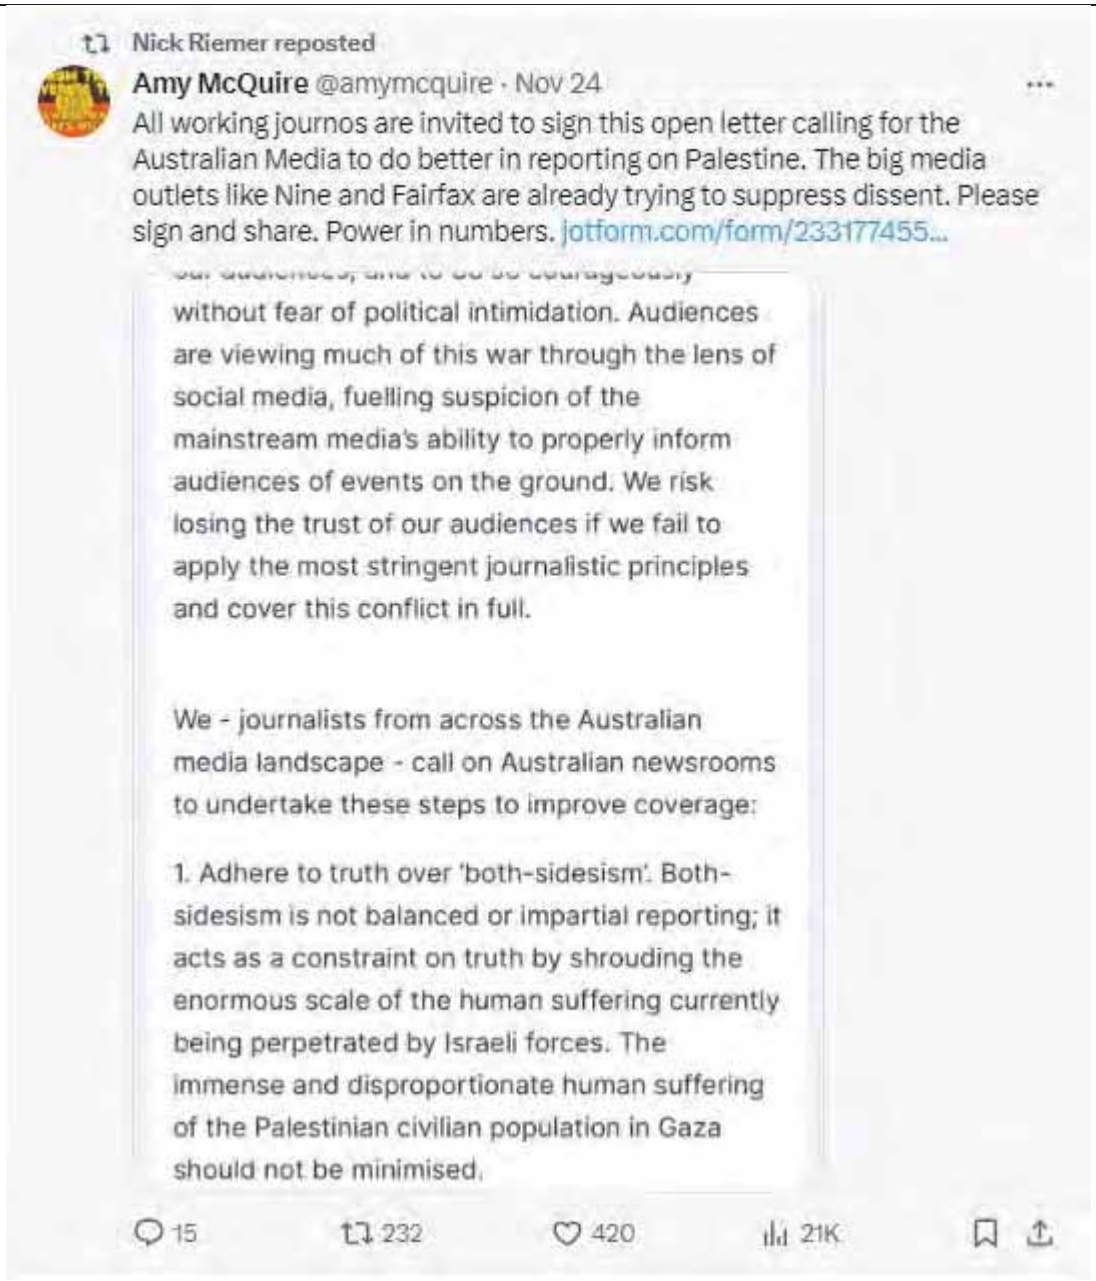
373

Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 24
They plan to literally leave nothing standing in Gaza, making it uninhabitable. This is about taking over the majority of land in Gaza, its natural resources, forcibly expelling the majority, and concentrating the remaining on as little land as possible.
Jason Hickel @jasonhickel · Nov 24
BREAKING: Israeli officials have said that following the 4-day pause they will continue the bombardment of Gaza for "at least another two months".
It is critical to ramp up pressure on public officials everywhere to ...
Show more
2
139
208
12K

374

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 24
Next Friday evening: End Australia's complicity with Israel – Free Gaza – Free Palestine. Called by Trade Unionists for Palestine.
JOIN A FORTNIGHT OF UNION ACTION FOR PALESTINE
RALLY OUTSIDE NSW PARLIAMENT
FRIDAY 1 DEC 5:30PM
TELL CHRIS MINNS AND ALBANESE:
END AUSTRALIA'S COMPLICITY - FREE GAZA - FREE PALESTINE
• Drop the charges on Zim protestors
• Scrap the anti protest laws
• Stop the bombing
• End the seige on Gaza
11
32
55
3.4K

375



Nick Riemer reposted
Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24
All working journos are invited to sign this open letter calling for the Australian Media to do better in reporting on Palestine. The big media outlets like Nine and Fairfax are already trying to suppress dissent. Please sign and share. Power in numbers. jotform.com/form/233177455... without fear of political intimidation. Audiences are viewing much of this war through the lens of social media, fuelling suspicion of the mainstream media's ability to properly inform audiences of events on the ground. We risk losing the trust of our audiences if we fail to apply the most stringent journalistic principles and cover this conflict in full.
We - journalists from across the Australian media landscape - call on Australian newsrooms to undertake these steps to improve coverage:
1. Adhere to truth over 'both-sidesism'. Both-sidesism is not balanced or impartial reporting; it acts as a constraint on truth by shrouding the enormous scale of the human suffering currently being perpetrated by Israeli forces. The immense and disproportionate human suffering of the Palestinian civilian population in Gaza should not be minimised.
15
232
420
21K

376

Nick Riemer reposted

Padraic Gibson @paddygibson · Nov 24

Sydney Town Hall, school strike for Palestine:

"I stand here today as the grandson of a holocaust survivor to say that I stand against all genocides, and I will not let the state of Israel speak for all Jews"

442 5.7K 14K 356K

377

Nick Riemer reposted

Green Left @GreenLeftOnline · Nov 24

Hundreds of students rally at Town Hall in Gadi/Sydney for the #SchoolStrikeForPalestine

#CeasefireNow

13 95 148 4.7K

378

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 24

Unions shouldn't gratify supporters of genocide and apartheid. Solidarity means genuine action for Palestine, not placating Zionist members who threaten to leave if we do anything. During a genocide, there's no room for both-sideism or bare-minimum action. It should be simple.

14 48 155 4.6K

379

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 24

My article in The Age.

"This did not begin on October 7 – it is the latest chapter in a 75-year-long violent and bloody conflict tied to a settler-colonial process."

9 157 402 15K

380

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 24

In 1948, Israel expelled the majority of Palestinians from their homeland and shot them when they tried to return to their homes. It's now doing it again.

> PALESTINE ONLINE @OnlinePalEng · Nov 24
>
> BREAKING| Israeli occupation forces opened gunfire at displaced Palestinians on their way back home in northern Gaza.

60 2K 3.1K 149K

381

Nick Riemer reposted

MEAA @withMEAA · Nov 24

#MEAAmedia fully supports the rights of our members to stand up for the Code of Ethics. Any pressure or intimidation from managers to prevent workers from doing this is an overreach and an attack on both journalists' rights and the public's right to know.

40 384 1.1K 77K

382

Nick Riemer reposted

Tahlia Stolarski @tahliastolarski · Nov 24

On Wednesday I was told to go to freo police station to be arrested under suspicion of conspiracy. 2 detectives from the counter terror unit were awaiting my arrival. They put me in handcuffs and I asked what changed as the incident I was being arrested for occurred months ago 1/

> Sophie McNeill @Sophiemcneill · Nov 24
> This is just shocking @abcnews
>
> ABC footage 'betrayal' leads to arrests of three more climate activists
>
> "One of the people arrested on Thursday, Tahlia Stolarski, said police ...
> Show more

71 835 2.3K 440K

383

Nick Riemer reposted
Yumna @yumna_patel · Nov 25
These are the Palestinian "prisoners" being exchanged for Israeli hostages. They are also children. Children who were stolen from their homes. Children who just want to hug their mothers. These are the boys who the media won't even afford the dignity of being called children.
✨Mina✨ @lionne998 · Nov 25
My heart
0:36
1.6K
61K
134K
5.7M

384

Nick Riemer reposted
Jacob @murmurations24 · Nov 24
Thank-you for all your messages of support 🟨 I'm feeling refreshed and revitalised. I've got a lawyer, I've talked to representatives, I've coordinated my next steps, and I am not backing down. Long live Palestine!!
Jacob @murmurations24 · Nov 22
Last night I was punched in the face, kicked between the legs and thrown to the ground by cops at a peaceful pro-Palestine rally at Port Botany. I spent nine hours in an overcrowded cell, forced to curl up into a ball on the concrete floor due to the lack of space.
16
11
174
9.5K

385

Nick Riemer reposted

Rawan Arraf @rawanarraf · Nov 25

10 year old Mohammad was shot and killed in the chest by Israeli occupation forces yesterday. To the chest. Stop the murder of Palestinian children.

> Defense for Children @DCIPalestine · Nov 25
>
> Israeli forces shot and killed 10-year-old Mohammad Ibrahim Fahed Bahloul around 6:30 p.m. yesterday in Beita, south of Nablus in the northern occupied West Bank. ow.ly/URg450Qb8uH

258 387 15K

386

Nick Riemer reposted

BDS movement @BDSmovement · Nov 25

Barcelona cuts relations with Israel over its war crimes against Palestinians in Gaza becoming the first European city to do so.

Palestinians salute Barcelona and all the solidarity activists behind this brave decision.

#GazaGenocide

> ProuComplicitat #AturemElGenocidi @proucomplicitat · Nov 24
> Comunicat | La coalició Prou Complicitat amb Israel celebrem que @bcn_ajuntament es converteix en un dels primers ajuntaments d'Europa a trencar relacions amb Israel i emplaça a tots els municipis i institucions catalanes a que empreguin mesures similars.
> palestina.cat/comunicat-el-t...

30 1.5K 2.7K 93K

387

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 25

And those who have been charged were charged in a military court with a conviction rate of over 99%. Free them all.

> Noura Erakat @4noura · Nov 25
> Apartheid Israel holds 7,000 Palestinians captive, 2,070 without charge or trial, 200 children, & 62 women. And is holding over 80 Palestinian corpses hostage.
>
> addameer.org...
> Show more

3 44 62 5.2K

388

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestinian Feminist Collective @PalFeminist · Nov 26
On the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, the Palestinian Feminist Collective invites you to #shutdowncolonialfeminism and say NO to genocide. Read our full statement palestinianfeministcollective.org/shut-down-colo...
SAT. NOVEMBER 25
THE PALESTINIAN FEMNIST COLLECTIVE IS SHUTTING DOWN
COLONIAL
"FEMINISM"
7
462
931
74K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 26
Out for Palestine again today in Sydney
90
193
670
17K

389

Nick Riemer reposted
Green Left @GreenLeftOnline · Nov 26
More than 21 hours into the 30 hour blockade of the Newcastle coal port, last night's night flotilla was unprecedented.
Here are photos from the launch, on the water and support from the shore.
#RisingTideAus #PeoplesBlockade #NoNewCoal #RisingTide
1
14
19
971

390

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 27
Australian education in long-term decline due to poor curriculum, report says theguardian.com
The Guardian
3
3
4
986

391

Nick Riemer reposted
Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 27
The largest university in Gaza seized by Israeli forces, transformed into a military base and site of soldier celebrations. #GazaGenocide
0:45
328
3.7K
4K
2.3M

392

Nick Riemer reposted

WACA @akaWACA · Nov 27

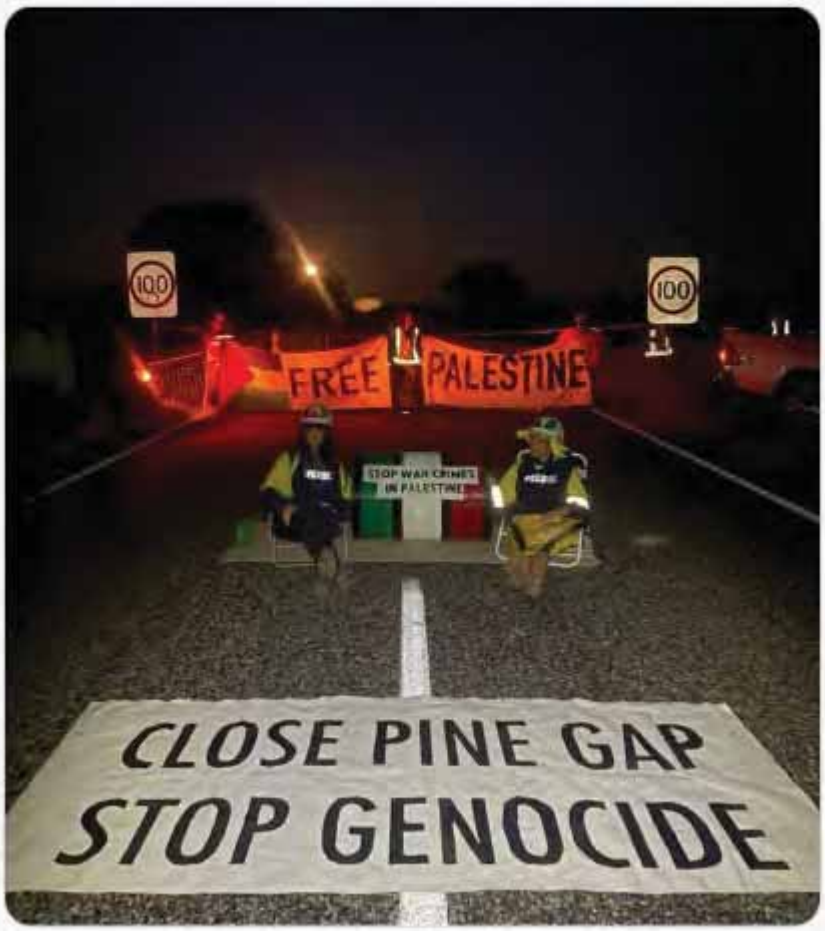
Free Palestine protesters block the road to #PineGap joint US AU satellite base in Mparntwe/ Alice Springs.
AU & US aid & abet Israeli crimes against Palestinian people using data relayed through Pine Gap.
Pine Gap must be closed. #ClosePineGap #StopArmingIsrael



34 444 799 56K

393

Nick Riemer reposted

Rachel Withers @rachelrwithers · Nov 24

Replying to @rachelrwithers

Oh would you look at that.

Current Age editor Pat Elligett has been on a trip to Israel too - as recently as June this year.

Yet to make Crikey's list @daanysaeed

crikey.com.au/2023/11/03/aus...

18 347 834 36K

394

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24

SMH/The Age executive editor Tory Maguire pictured in a group photo for the Australian Jewish News after her Zionist funded propaganda tour to Israel

Israel 'captured my heart and my mind'

EIGHT senior journalists, editors and producers shared their thoughts on Monday night on an intensive week-long study mission they'd recently been on to Israel and the West Bank.

By EVAN ZLATKIS

12 October 2017, 11:05 am |

65 263 539 32K

395

Nick Riemer reposted
Sydney Review of Books @SydReviewBooks · Nov 24
A letter from the SRB team: 'There will be times [...] when the need for journalism can outstrip the need for the slower deliberative rhythms of critical practice. As commentators in the public sphere, critics are necessary, but by no means sufficient.'
A Letter to Our Readers
sydneyreviewofbooks.com
5
23
2.7K

396

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 28
One reason for the proliferation of new managerial roles in universities is the considerable insecurity staff feel in strongly hierarchical and authoritarian systems. People feel very vulnerable to the arbitrary exercise of power, so they want insurance. Democratise the uni now.
3
5
22
999

397

Nick Riemer reposted
Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 28
Since the start of this 4 day truce the Israeli regime has released 117 Palestinians from their jails & in that same time they've incarcerated 116 new Palestinian prisoners from areas across the occupied West Bank.
126
6.8K
10K
435K

398

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 28

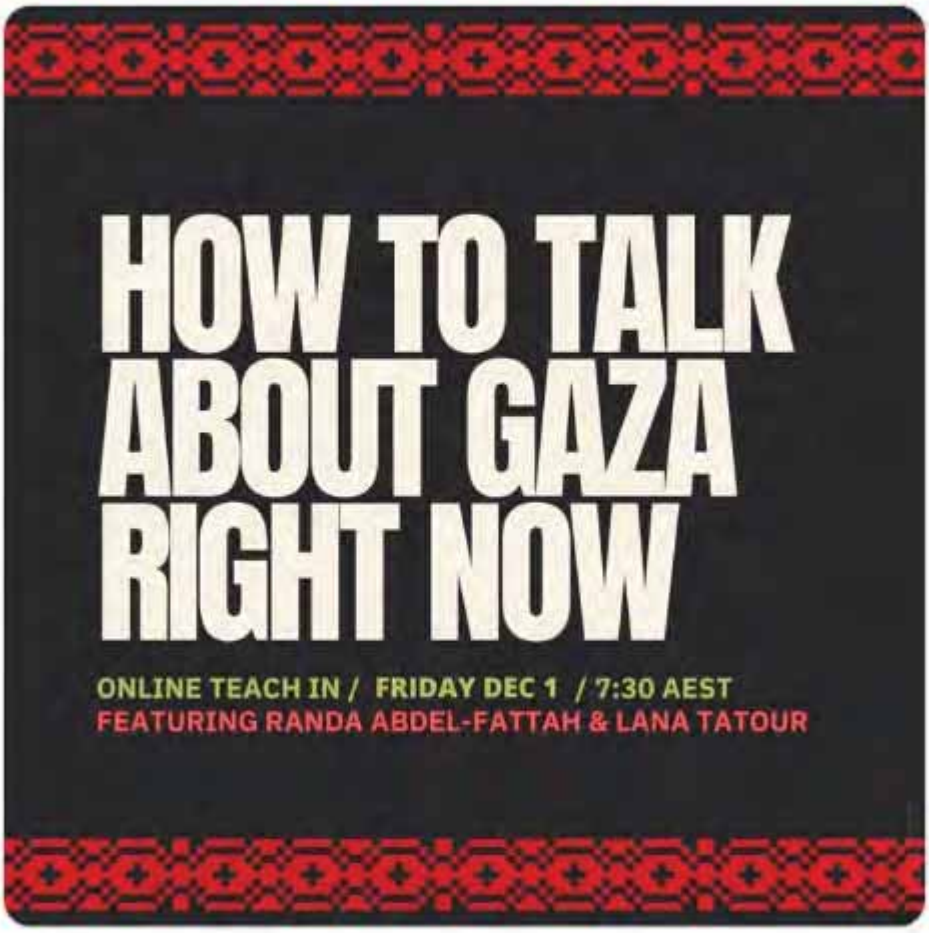
Register for this important teach-in "How To Talk About Gaza Right Now" this Friday evening featuring Dr @RandaAFattah and Dr @Lana_Tatour us06web.zoom.us/meeting/regist...



7 81 109 19K

399

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 28

Over 200 staff at USYD say Sydney Uni should cut its ties with Israel, full statement printed here.
sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614

38 30 93 7.6K

400

Nick Riemer reposted

Jessica Whyte @j_e_s_s_whyte · Nov 28

"the targeted destruction of Gaza's primary public library is a stark reminder that genocide is about more than just the premeditated mass extinguishing of human life; it's also about the calculated, and often vindictive, destruction of a people's culture, language, history"

> Literary Hub @lithub · Nov 28
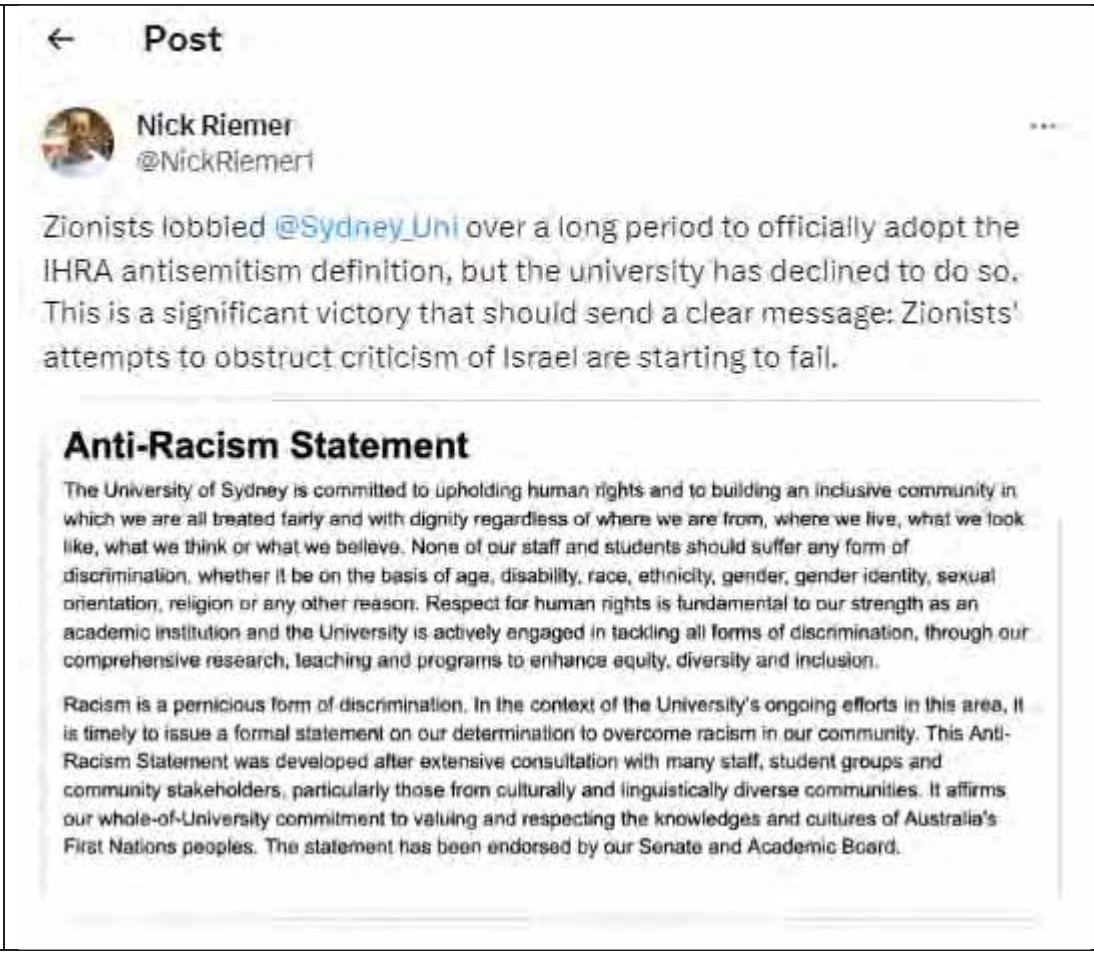
> Gaza's main public library has been destroyed. lithub.com/gazas-main-pub...

1 35 89 4.6K

401-405



Post
Nick Riemer
@NickRiemer1
Zionists lobbied @Sydney_Uni over a long period to officially adopt the IHRA antisemitism definition, but the university has declined to do so. This is a significant victory that should send a clear message: Zionists' attempts to obstruct criticism of Israel are starting to fail.
Anti-Racism Statement
The University of Sydney is committed to upholding human rights and to building an inclusive community in which we are all treated fairly and with dignity regardless of where we are from, where we live, what we look like, what we think or what we believe. None of our staff and students should suffer any form of discrimination, whether it be on the basis of age, disability, race, ethnicity, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, religion or any other reason. Respect for human rights is fundamental to our strength as an academic institution and the University is actively engaged in tackling all forms of discrimination, through our comprehensive research, teaching and programs to enhance equity, diversity and inclusion.
Racism is a pernicious form of discrimination. In the context of the University's ongoing efforts in this area, it is timely to issue a formal statement on our determination to overcome racism in our community. This Anti-Racism Statement was developed after extensive consultation with many staff, student groups and community stakeholders, particularly those from culturally and linguistically diverse communities. It affirms our whole-of-University commitment to valuing and respecting the knowledges and cultures of Australia's First Nations peoples. The statement has been endorsed by our Senate and Academic Board.

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

IHRA is not in the university's new antiracism statement, but is just one of several definitions of antisemitism referenced in the 'additional material' supplied for 'educative' (that is, not binding) purposes.

Additional resources

The Anti-Racism Statement supplements ongoing efforts by the University to promote a deeper understanding of racism and its harmful impacts

The statement has been developed in collaboration with many students and staff, including the National Centre for Cultural Competence and representatives from the Mosaic Staff Network, the Sydney Law School, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff, Diversity and Inclusion, the Student Representative Council, the Sydney University Chinese Students' Association, the Australasian Union of Jewish Students, the Sydney University Muslim Association among many others.

The Statement was unanimously endorsed by the Academic Board, a decision affirmed by the University Senate on 28 July.

The Statement speaks to the University's aspiration to stand against racist ideas and practices within the University, but also our obligation to uphold the principle of freedom of speech and academic freedom.

As an academic institution, we have a responsibility to be open to diverse views and opinions and to foster a greater understanding of these issues in the community. The Statement offers a list of supplementary resources informed by the University community.

These additional materials serve as educative guides to understanding manifestations of racism and discrimination.

1 · 3 · 27 · 1.3K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

Congratulations to everyone involved in this win: the university's @NTEUnion branch, Palestinian and anti-Zionist Jewish staff and students, and others. Sydney joins the ANU, Aberdeen, Toronto and other institutions in refusing Zionist censorship through the IHRA.

5 · 14 · 70 · 2.1K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

It's now time for the university to honour its stated commitment to respecting and upholding human rights by cutting ties with Israeli apartheid through officially endorsing the institutional academic boycott of Israel.

8 · 7 · 51 · 1.3K

406

Nick Riemer reposted

NTEU UniMelb Branch @NTEUUniMelb · Nov 28

We (@NTEUUniMelb) along with more @NTEUVictoria chapters & Trade Unionists for #Palestine, are organising some events to mark the International Day of Solidarity for Palestine. More details on the events in the thread.

#FreePalestine #Solidarity #UnionPower #FromTheRiverToTheSea

APAN and 3 others

3 28 52 3K

407

Nick Riemer reposted

UnionistsforPalestine @unions4palestin · Nov 28

Some action from @NTEUNSW members today 28th Nov for the week of action for Palestine.

1. NTEU members across NSW met to discuss plans for action
2. Over 200 signatures call for Uni of Sydney to cut ties with Israel
3. Teachers take a photo to express solidarity with Palestinians

1 7 13 641

408

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 29

Rain, hail or shine, standing up for Palestine. Great to be joined by new Sydney Uni faces, and a second NTEU branch president this afternoon.

179 79 317 15K

409

Nick Riemer reposted
Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 29
Good to join my @NTEUnion comrades at USyd for a banner drop today after a fantastic @AusSocContiPhil conference! This was part of the national week of action called by @unions4palestin and also coincided with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People
Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 29
Rain, hail or shine, standing up for Palestine. Great to be joined by new Sydney Uni faces, and a second NTEU branch president this afternoon.
1
3
46
2.7K

410

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 29

Institutions like @WZB_Berlin need to appreciate just how much discredit the intellectual irresponsibility and lack of political principle on display here bring on them.

> John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Nov 29
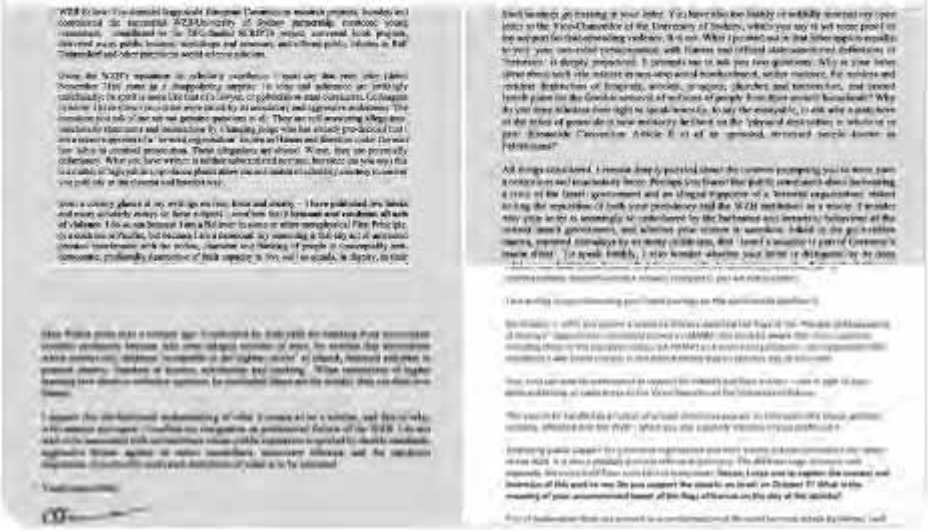
>
> today - after 25 years - I resigned from the WZB Berlin following absurd allegations of support for a 'terrorist organisation' and suggestions of my criminal liability; here's my open letter on guilt, terrorism, Israel and scholarship...



1 · 5 · 20 · 1.6K

411

Nick Riemer reposted

NTEU UniMelb Branch @NTEUUniMelb · Nov 29

Photo of our speakers, organisers & attendees together at the end of today's public forum for #International_Day_of_solidarity_with_Palestine_people! Huge thanks to Lachlan Batchelor (@apheda), @iamthenas (@APAN4Palestine) & Dana Alshaer (@Unimelb for Palestine) for your voices.

APAN and 4 others

5 16 30 4.1K

412

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30

Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

615 425 1.2K 100K

413

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 30

I shall show my Palestinian father, an alumnus of Sydney University.

Beautiful and courageous.

Thank you

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30
>
> Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

88 96 526 24K

414

Nick Riemer reposted

Tzedek Collective @tzedekcollectiv · Nov 30

Jews are making their voices clearer and clearer. Zionism is not Judaism, and supporting 🍉 is not antisemitism.

13 147 342 13K

415

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 30

Well done 🙌

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30
>
> Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

202 51 244 16K

416

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 1

Disgusting attack on a long-term Jewish supporter of Palestinian rights.

Tzedek Collective @tzedekcollectiv · Dec 1

You probably didn't hear about this.

A Jewish professor was coward punched in the back of his head in a blatantly antisemitic hate crime.

...

Show more

Prominent anti-Zionist campaigner Peter Slezak allegedly struck in Double Bay

Prominent anti-Zionist campaigner Peter Slezak says he was assaulted in Sydney's Double Bay by a stranger

EXCLUSIVE

By JOANNA PANAGOPOULOS

6:58PM NOVEMBER 28, 2023

A prominent anti-Zionist campaigner claims he was struck in Sydney's Double Bay by a stranger who called him a "self-hating f..king Jew".

18 20 100 4.8K

417

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 1

Union members out to say stop the bombs, drop the anti-protest laws and the charges on the Block the Boat protesters, ZIM out of Botany and Free Palestine! ASU, NTEU, MUA, CFMEU, Nurses & Midwives, CPSU.

195 153 392 16K

418

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 2

CNN report claiming sexual violence on October 7 relied on non-credible witnesses, some with undisclosed ties to Israeli govt. A must read on why we should question any allegations coming from Israel and demand that evidence be credible.

36 378 663 25K

419

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 3
Out again for Palestine and against Albanese, Minns, Wong, Clare and all the other genocide-enablers.
UNIONISTS
FOR 251
338
981
32K

420

Nick Riemer reposted
Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 4
NSW Police forcibly remove a woman holding a baby from the opening of an inner west park because she's holding a sign saying 'Shame Albo 🍉"
This is NOT normal. This is NOT ok.
#ShameAlbo #CeasefireNow #FreePalestine
Dylan Griffiths @DylanInnerWest · Dec 4
Just went to the opening of the new Lewis Hermann Reserve. @AlboMP spoke and a woman, holding a baby, showed up with a protest sign about Palestine 🍉
Police tried to forcibly remove her. A shameful response, real failure for politicians in attendance to be an ethical bystander 0:05
200
368
885
45K

421

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 5
Listen to @jennyleong on fire at Friday's demonstration outside State Parliament: powerful words for Palestine and against the repression of protest by police and politicians.
youtube.com
Jenny Leong MP speaks at Trade Unionists for Palest
Authorised by D. Hayden for The Greens NSW. 19a/1 Hordern Place Camperdown NSW 2050 14
19
52
3.7K

422

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Dec 4

Wednesday December 13, 6.30pm, Bankstown Arts Centre – join us for a forum on the struggle against apartheid Israel through boycott and direct action.

6 21 39 2K

423

Nick Riemer reposted

Eli Meyerhoff @EliMeye · Dec 6

Israel denies and destroys the conditions for Palestinian education. Another reason for the #AcademicBoycott of Israel.

> Stop The Wall @stopthewall · Dec 4
>
> The liberated prisoner Ahmed Al-Salaymeh was not allowed to return to school by a decision from the Israeli Ministry of Education not to return the Palestinian captive children to any school in Jerusalem.
>
> .
>
> ....
>
> Show more

2 10 11 1.8K

424

Nick Riemer reposted

Serkan Öztürk ❤️🇵🇸❤️ @SerkanTheWriter · Dec 4

What would Albo's single mum think of him getting loser cops to physically harass a mother and her baby just for holding a sign simply stating "Shame Albo"?

Albo is a fascist cosplaying as a working class good bloke. Biggest fraud and loser going ❤️

Palestine will be free 🇵🇸

> Dylan Griffiths @DylanInnerWest · Dec 4
> Just went to the opening of the new Lewis Hermann Reserve. @AlboMP spoke and a woman, holding a baby, showed up with a protest sign about Palestine 🍉
> Police tried to forcibly remove her. A shameful response, real failure for politicians in attendance to be an ethical bystander

14 51 137 5K

425

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 8

heartbreaking. We will never forget. We are eternally grateful for who you are and your dedication. Rest in power.

> Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Dec 8
>
> The assassins targeted, went after and killed the voice of Gaza, one of its best academics, a human, my dear and precious friend dr. Refaat al-Ar'eer @itranslate123 @GazaWritesBack

5 52 172 6.6K

426

Nick Riemer reposted

Mohammed Sulaiman @GazaSubaltern · Dec 8

In my first class at university, Intro to English Literature, Refaat mentioned the word 'ideology' and asked in passing if we knew what it meant. I put my hand up and said hesitatingly, 'a way of thinking', he stood next to me, gave me a pat on the shoulder and said, 'Brilliant!'

30 954 3K 140K

427

Nick Riemer reposted

NTEU @NTEUnion · Dec 5

Our latest report uncovers the ongoing injustice of wage theft in our universities.

Stand up for transparency & accountability now!

Read the report here: bit.ly/wagereport

Sign the petition today: bit.ly/accordpetition

2 67 80 46K

428

Nick Riemer reposted
Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Dec 8
The Israeli military blowing up the Faculty of Medicine at the Islamic University of Gaza
0:34
From Dr Fadel Naim
1
1.9K
1.9K
459K

429

Nick Riemer reposted
Charlotte Epstein #CanALoudWomanMakeI @Prof_ch_epst · Dec 8
New Petition
Circulate as widely as possible:
protect-au.mimecast.com/s/-aEyC1WLPxc6...
2
7
1.1K

430

Nick Riemer reposted
Esmat Elhalaby @thaqafatalhind · Dec 8
Refaat Alareer's course on English poetry at the Islamic University of Gaza from 2019. 28 sessions on form and content, text and context, meter, metaphor, rhyme, caesura, and parody. Our teacher. youtube.com/watch?v=gRDwGM...
96
3.7K
9K
2.1M

431

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 9
Tonight - public meeting on the next steps in the campaign against ZIM and Israeli apartheid.
PUBLIC MEETING
AFTER THE ZIM SHIPPING BLOCKADE:
PROTEST, BOYCOTTS & BUILDING THE FIGHT AGAINST APARTHEID ISRAEL
Join our public meeting to get organised and discuss how we can take action to break the Australian government's support for Israeli apartheid, make Israel a pariah state and free Palestine. Come along if you came to the Zim blockade or are interested in future actions and want to help build the movement.
6PM SAT DECEMBER 9
BANKSTOWN ARTS CENTRE
Hosted by the newly formed group Stop Israeli Apartheid Sydney
64
38
102
5.1K

| | |
|---|---|
| 432 | |

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 9
Full house at Bankstown for the Action Against Apartheid Coalition public meeting on the next steps against ZIM and Australia's support for apartheid Israel.
200
111
378
20K

433

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 10

Workers, unions out in pride. We say no to genocide!

130 93 384 12K

434

Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Dec 12

from Al Jazeera: aljazeera.com/news/liveblog/...

1h ago (02:55 GMT)

Israel attacking Gaza's 'past, present and future': Australian historians

More than 100 Australian historians have signed an open letter decrying Israel's attacks on Gaza, saying they aim "to destroy Palestinian lives and render it impossible for Palestinians to live in Gaza".

"As historians we know this as an attack on a people's past, present and future," the signatories added, citing Israel's destruction of universities, schools, cultural institutions, libraries, archives, mosques and churches.

Gaza's Ministry of Culture last week reported (PDF) that 28 cultural workers have been killed in the enclave since the war began, including musicians, publishers and folk dancers.

1 123 246 11K

435

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 13

My piece on @PHRIsrael & @hrw recent reports. I scrutinise each report & show how they fail to meet human rights research & reporting standards. This unethical conduct is made possible by anti-Palestinian racism in the service of Israel.

9 209 323 26K

436

Nick Riemer reposted

Antoinette Lattouf @antoinette_news · Dec 13

EXCLUSIVE:The original source of videos appearing to show protesters chanting "gas the Jews" has refused to provide unedited footage. One verification expert concluded "there's an audiovisual mismatch" & "audio has been repeated" & police dont have answers

328 2.5K 5.8K 550K

437

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Dec 13
We kept saying that the chant story was fabricated. We were accused of anti-semitism for rejecting Zionist lies. Lies that spread like wildfire because it's easier to lean into anti-Palestinian racist assumptions than interrogate those who defame a liberation movement.
Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Dec 13
From almost the day afterwards, I had journalists from mainstream publications who said they were suss bc they had their own reporters on the ground that didn't hear this chant. I know what I heard and I intervened when I heard it. This wasn't it.
twitter.com/cameronwilson/...
7
132
337
15K

438

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 6

We are inviting all current & former Australian elected representatives from local councils, and state, territory and federal parliaments, to sign on to the following statement.

Tag your current and former MPs, councillors and elected reps to encourage them to sign on:

1. All states have an obligation to contribute to upholding international law, including human rights, international humanitarian law and the other universally accepted norms of the international legal system.

2. For too long the human rights of the Palestinian people have been grossly violated, in the context of broader circumstances that also breach international law and pose a grave threat to international peace and security.

3. These violations began in 1948 with the violent displacement of some 700,000 Palestinian people from their homeland. These people, and hundreds of thousands more displaced since, have all been denied a right of return.

4. The occupation by Israel of the West Bank and Gaza, ongoing since 1967, continues to involve military occupation, illegal settlement expansion, land theft, violence, discrimination, restrictions on movement and the subjugation of the Palestinian people. The situation is intolerable and to the shame of the international community.

5. While Gaza was cleared of illegal Israeli settlements in 2005, the ongoing blockade clearly constitutes an occupation under applicable international law standards.

6. It is beyond dispute that Israel is committed to policies designed to entrench the domination of one people over another in the territories of Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Attempts to deny this, or smear those who allege it, are an attempt to defy truth and reality.

7. These events and policies have involved the destruction of Palestinian society and the denial of the legitimate national aspirations of the Palestinian people.

8. On 3 March 2021 the International Criminal Court announced it had opened an investigation into Israel and certain Palestinian armed groups. The Chief Prosecutor of the Court has announced it "encompasses conduct that may amount to Rome Statute crimes committed since 13 June 2014 in Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem".

9. We note Australia is a state party to the International Criminal Court and bound by its statute which makes criminal the gravest international crimes.

10. The acts of Hamas on 7 October 2023 and the Israeli response will form part of this investigation.

11. We call on the Australian Government to publicly advocate for an immediate permanent ceasefire, to continue to call for the release of all hostages and urge that all parties fully comply with international standards.

12. We call on the Australian Government to recognise Palestine as a state that is entitled to be free of occupation.

13. We call on the Australian Government to examine its relationship with Israel, with a focus on positively contributing to the resolution of this intolerable and dangerous situation that threatens the people of Israel and Palestine and the entire international community.

Anthony D'Adam

311 222 495 38K

439

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 14

The headline is factually wrong, but otherwise this is a pretty thorough assessment of the Block the Boat actions in Australia so far.

5 7 25 1.8K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 15

The headline's now been fixed.

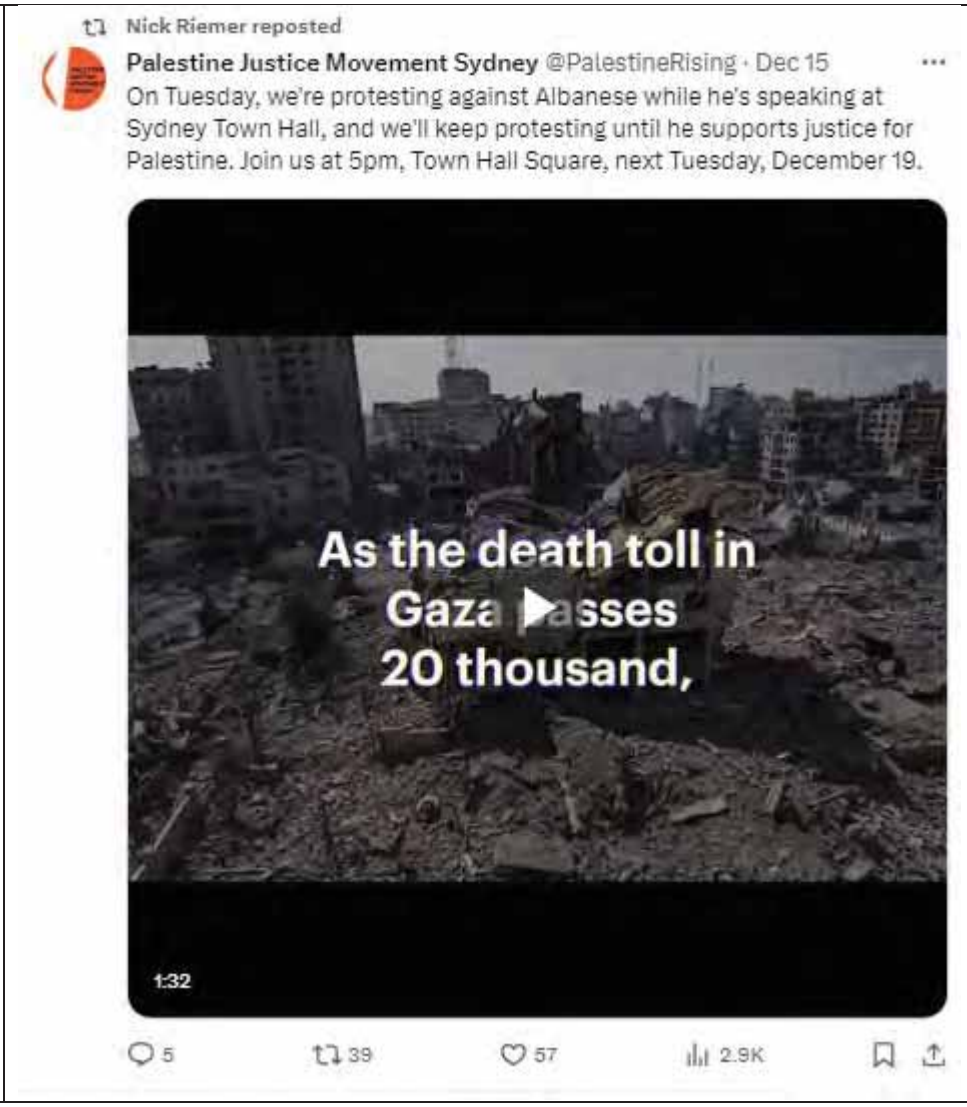
In Australia, Palestine Solidarity Activists Are Blockading ZIM Ships Owned by Israel

BY
ZACHARIAS SZUMER

At ports in Melbourne, Sydney, and Fremantle, blockades have delayed Israeli-owned ships. In the face of crippling fines and the threat of jail, protesters are determined to disrupt Israel's offensive in Gaza.

1 4 255

440



Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Dec 15
On Tuesday, we're protesting against Albanese while he's speaking at Sydney Town Hall, and we'll keep protesting until he supports justice for Palestine. Join us at 5pm, Town Hall Square, next Tuesday, December 19.
As the death toll in Gaza passes
20 thousand,
1:32
5
39
57
2.9K

441

Nick Riemer reposted
AJ+ @ajplus · Dec 15
Israel is continuing to strike areas where it ordered Palestinians to flee.
In a recent round of attacks, Israeli airstrikes hit four houses in Rafah, in the south of occupied Gaza, killing at least 23 Palestinians, including children.
bombing of Rafah in occupied Gaza.
Rafah is where Israel told Palestinians to flee for "safety."
1:47
32
1.4K
1.2K
52K

442

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 16

Deeply shocking indictment of the culture of repression in German higher education.

> John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Dec 16
>
> for the first time in my career, police began arresting students peacefully gathered @FU_Berlin to hear my lecture 'Universities in Troubled Times'; the students regathered in local cafes and the webinar - soon on @YouTube - went ahead...

Universities in Troubled Times

14 45 114 6.4K

443

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Legal @pal_legal · Dec 16

THREAD: As the US-backed Israeli bombardment of Gaza reaches unfathomable proportions, so has the war of repression here: since Oct. 7th we've received 1000+ reports from people targeted for Palestine advocacy in all arenas—but it's not stopping the upsurge in solidarity. 1/14

19 1.2K 2.3K 200K

444

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 17

They bulldozed civilians sheltering in a hospital and buried them alive. All with the silence, complicity, enabling of the West. They bulldozed civilians sheltering in a hospital and buried them alive. I'm beyond word. Ceasefire now. It is already too late.

30 1.6K 2.6K 82K

445

Nick Riemer reposted

Steven Salaita @stevesalaita · Dec 11

New essay: "Scrolling Through Genocide"

42 1.8K 2.9K 616K

446

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 17

The obscene slaughter continues, enabled by politicians' warmongering and hypocrisy, justified by their cowardly and cynical apologists in the elites. Against this contemptible decadence, ordinary people go on reminding us what morality, principle and rationality actually mean.

102 123 403 13K

447

Nick Riemer reposted

Middle East Eye @MiddleEastEye · Dec 18

RECAP #Israel #Palestine (as of 11:30 GMT, 17 December)

1. A WHO team visited Gaza's al-Shifa hospital and described it as a "bloodbath," where trauma patients were being treated on the floor due to the lack of space, and pain management options were limited

2. Israeli...

Show more

2 67 61 7.4K

448

Nick Riemer reposted

Unimelb for Palestine @Umelb4Palestine · Dec 17

Students at the University of Melbourne have been continually silenced. Despite national cultural symbols being accepted this student was kicked out of his own graduation simply for displaying a Palestinian flag.

#NoBloodOnOurDegrees #StopArmingIsrael #FreePalestine

178 1.2K 2.1K 132K

449

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 18

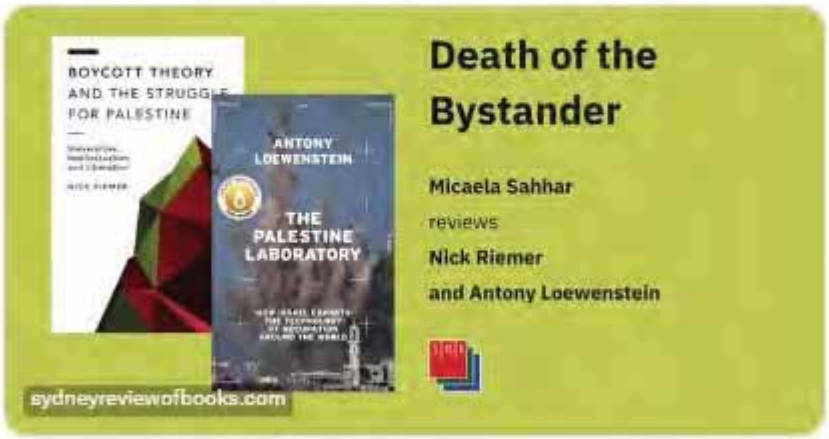
Comprehensive and generous review of my and @antloewenstein's books by Micaela Sahhar.



3 9 41 2.6K

450

Nick Riemer reposted
Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 19
Over 200 current & former Australian elected reps from across political spectrum have signed statement in support of immediate, permanent ceasefire, recognition of Palestine as a state, the end of the Israeli occupation and a reassessment of Australia's relationship with Israel
Over 200 current and former Australian members of parliament and councillors have signed onto a statement calling for an immediate, permanent ceasefire, the recognition of Palestine as a state, the end of the Israeli occupation and a reassessment of Australia's relationship with Israel.
361
979
1.3K
76K

451

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Dec 19

It's the last publishing day of 2023 for our online magazine and we can't think of a better way to leave you than with this breathtaking new comic by @wallmansam | Why Palestine is union business.

Sam wishes to thank Michael Hiscox for his contribution.

2 92 132 13K

452

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

Hundreds of people outside Sydney Town Hall to protest against genocide-enabler @AlboMP as he dares to speaks on international affairs at the Lowy Institute.

93 101 289 9.8K

453-454

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

Deafening sustained uproar from the protest against @AlboMP - whistles, boos, thumping of the hoarding, drums, pots and pans.

94 184 529 15K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

And again!

7 15 54 1.9K

455

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 19
Albanese -- blood on your hands!
0:26
82
164
406
8.5K

456

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 19
Three hours into the protest and we're still going. The sheer anger and energy against @AlboMP is like nothing I've seen against a politician.
0:21
252
540
1.4K
83K

457

Nick Riemer reposted
Sydney Review of Books @SydReviewBooks · Dec 19
#NEWonSRB: In her review of two recent books on Palestine, Micaela Sahhar draws on her family history and experience as a scholar to examine the case for academic boycott and the limitations of the Western liberal mindset for Palestinian allyship.
BOYCOTT THEORY AND THE STRUGGLE FOR PALESTINE
ANTONY LOEWENSTEIN
THE PALESTINE LABORATORY
Death of the Bystander
Micaela Sahhar reviews
Nick Riemer
and Antony Loewenstein
sydneyreviewofbooks.com
5
7
2.2K

458

Nick Riemer reposted
sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 20
That @antoinette_news just produced some of the most critical pieces of journalism then got punished reveals everything about the hostility of this media landscape. It doesn't want ethical reporting & truth telling, it's concerned with preserving the interests of those in power.
33
250
659
21K

459

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 20
Shame on @ItaButtrose & @abcsydney on the dangerous and disgraceful sacking of @antoinette_news. The Zionists and reactionaries high-fiving the ABC's unbridled McCarthyism are a greater threat to the public sphere than they ever have been before. Reinstate her now.
ABC presenter Antoinette Lattouf sacked after anti-Israel social media posts
'None of us are surprised': Triple J presenter sacked over anti-Israel comments 216
405
1K
24K

460

Nick Riemer reposted
Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Dec 20
Anyone at @abcnews want to explain why one of your journalists, @GeraldineDoogue, can host an event for a pro-Israel organisation without fear of consequences, whereas you'll fire @antoinette_news for doing her job?
NIF
SOCIAL COHESION AMIDST RISING TENSION
A Conversation with Josh Burns MP & Allegra Spender MP
Hosted by Geraldine Doogue
Sunday December 17 7pm Online
51
735
1.7K
67K

461

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 20

Not one single person who has taken an Israeli govt propaganda tour has been slapped on the wrist, let alone sacked—yet Antoinette Lattouf is let go for reposting a global human rights organisation?

73 555 1.5K 33K

462

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Dec 19

Great turnout and an awesome @unions4palestin rally tonight! Speakers welcomed the news that the ZIM vessel we planned to picket turned around & dropped anchor outside Port Kembla instead. Workers and ordinary people are uniting worldwide against the Israeli war machine.

27 83 2.4K

463

Nick Riemer reposted
Antoinette Lattouf @antoinette_news · Dec 20
I am very disappointed by the ABC's decision today.
I am very disappointed by the ABC's decision today.
I believe I was terminated unlawfully.
This is not a win for journalism or critical, fair thinking.
I'm currently considering my legal options.
2.6K
9.7K
899K

464

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 21
cityhub.com.au
5
2
8
448

465

Nick Riemer reposted

Forensic Architecture @ForensicArchi · Dec 21

Our aggregation of news reports since 7 Oct suggests that hospitals in Gaza are subjected to a repeated pattern of intimidation, direct targeting, siege, and occupation by the Israeli military: ...a-hospitals.forensic-architecture.org

59 2.6K 3.2K 702K

466

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 21

If you haven't yet, please sign and share this petition demanding @abcnews reverse @antoinette_news's unfair dismissal!

#WeStandwithAntoinette

89 263 472 20K

467

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · 21h

We must know if any Australian citizens are serving in the Israeli army.

Investigations will take place and prosecutions must ensue.

The Aus Gov needs to be able to identify these individuals and be ready to hand them over to an International Court when the time comes!

> Australian Centre for International Justice @theACIJ · 21h
> RELEASE: @theACIJ wrote to the AusGov following reports of Australians joining the #IDF. Australia should investigate individuals who may be involved in the commission of international crimes. Read our letter:
> #Gaza #Palestine #EndImpunity 1/3...
> Show more

11 113 304 8.9K

468

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · 21h

We stand with Antoinette: ABC Reverse Her Unfair dismissal #WESTANDWITHANTOINETTE - Sign the Petition! chng.it/NY9VzKPt via @ChangeAUS

119 110 289 8.3K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4

ASU @ASUnion

3 7 38 1.3K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 4

MUA @MUASydneyBranch

6 7 41 1.3K

| | |
|---|---|
| 220 |  Nick Riemer repostedMaha Hussaini @MahaGaza · Nov 4Genocide Day 29Displacement Day 233rd day without water. We get two sips of water a day, we don't know when we'll get to refill the tanker again. With Israel cutting off water supply, this doesn't seem to happen in the near futureWe miss drinking water as much as we want.832.4K3K119K |
| 221 | Nick Riemer repostedDavid Landy @dlandy100 · Nov 3I'm very proud that over 600 academics in Ireland have signed our @AcaforPalestine call for Irish universities to cut ties with Israeli institutions.'Academics call for ties with Israeli institutions to be cut'irishexaminer.com5932492224K |

222

Nick Riemer reposted

Academics for Palestine @AcaforPalestine · Nov 4

Our letter is now in published in the Irish Times.

'War in the Gaza Strip
Academics call on Irish universities to suspend ties with Israeli institutions'

The full list of over 600 signatories can be viewed in the IT's online version:
irishtimes.com/opinion/letter...

the Editor

War in the Gaza Strip

Sir, – We write as academics and scholars in or from Ireland. The scale and severity of Israel's current war on the Gaza Strip has exceeded all previous levels of violence in the prolonged and brutal Israeli occupation of Palestine.

It is a campaign of ethnic cleansing and, according to many experts, genocidal violence.

The incursion by Palestinian armed groups on October 7th included criminal attacks against civilians.

But under no circumstances does international law permit the systematic bombardment and collective punishment of civilians in a besieged occupied territory.

The dehumanising language and tropes widely used by Israeli leaders in reference to Palestinians echo those typically associated with genocidal incitement and intent.

In the past three weeks, Israel's military acts have matched those words, killing more than 9,000 Palestinians inside Gaza, including some 3,760 children (more than the annual number of children killed in the rest of the world's armed conflicts combined).

Many more Palestinians are dying from the lack of fuel, water, electricity and medical supplies due to the deliberate blockade. Gaza's hospitals are barely able to function – no power for ventilators, using vinegar as an antiseptic, performing surgeries without anaesthetic – and continue to be hit by Israeli air cide studies have called this "a textbook case of genocide". Bosnian genocide experts have likewise stated that "what is happening in Gaza is genocide".

After the first week of Israel's onslaught, a group of more than 600 international lawyers and genocide scholars were "compelled to sound the alarm about the possibility of genocide being perpetrated by Israeli forces", while UN human rights special rapporteurs warned of "the risk of genocide against the Palestinian people", calling on all states and international organisations to fulfil their duties to prevent genocide.

The killing and destruction has only escalated since then. More than 60 UN member states have now used the language of genocide to describe Israel's attacks on Gaza's population. This week, the South African foreign minister referenced the Rwandan genocide and "reminded the international community not to stand idle while another genocide is unfolding".

With the atrocities in Gaza now added to Israel's 75 years of colonisation and occupation of Palestinian lands, there should be nothing remotely approximate to "business as usual" continuing.

Many Irish universities and EU-funded research projects have active collaborations with Israeli universities. Israeli universities are, in the words of the Palestinian Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott

Meanwhile, several Palestinian universities in Gaza have been destroyed by the Israeli airstrikes, with some 70 academics and 2,000 students among the civilians killed.

We call on all universities in Ireland to immediately sever any existing institutional partnerships or affiliations with Israeli institutions. Those ties should be suspended until the occupation of Palestinian territory is ended, the Palestinian rights to equality and self-determination are vindicated, and the right of Palestinian refugees to return is facilitated.

Anything less at this point amounts to tacit support for crimes against humanity.

Yours, etc,

PROF KATHLEEN LYNCH, University College Dublin.
PROF SIOBHÁN WILLS, Ulster University.
PROF EUGENIA SIAPERA, University College Dublin.
PROF EMER NOLAN, Maynooth University.
PROF LAURA McATACKNEY, University College Cork.
PROF NICHOLAS DALY, University College Dublin.
PROF AOIFE O'DONOGHUE, Queen's University Belfast.
PROF DEREK DOHERTY, Trinity College Dublin.
PROF GAVAN TITLEY, Maynooth University.
PROF LIONEL PILKINGTON, University of Galway.
PROF MICHELLE FARRELL,

1 · 583 · 879 · 243K

223

Nick Riemer reposted
Brendan Ciarán Browne @brendancbrowne · Nov 4
There are no universities left in Gaza.
Muhammad Smiry @MuhammadSmiry · Nov 4
No universities left in Gaza
0:21
1
177
229
27K

224

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Nov 4

The Israeli occupation bombs and destroys Al-Azhar University in Al-Mughraqa in Gaza, continuing its war crimes against humanity.
The Israeli occupation's hatred targets everything in Gaza; school, universities, hospitals, churches, mosques, and organizations all being bombed.

39 1.1K 1.4K 1M

225

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 4

From the country that demands the "right to self defence"! This is not self defence, the pictures tell the real story, a racist ideology emboldened by allies to unleash the very worst of human attributes - when unadulterated power & unchecked hate are mixed together.

Michael Galant @michael_galant · Nov 4

"Palestinian workers, stranded since the October 7 attacks... show bracelets on which are written the numbers assigned to them while they were detained by Israel." This should look all too familiar. Source: AFP

6 49 119 8.2K

226

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 5

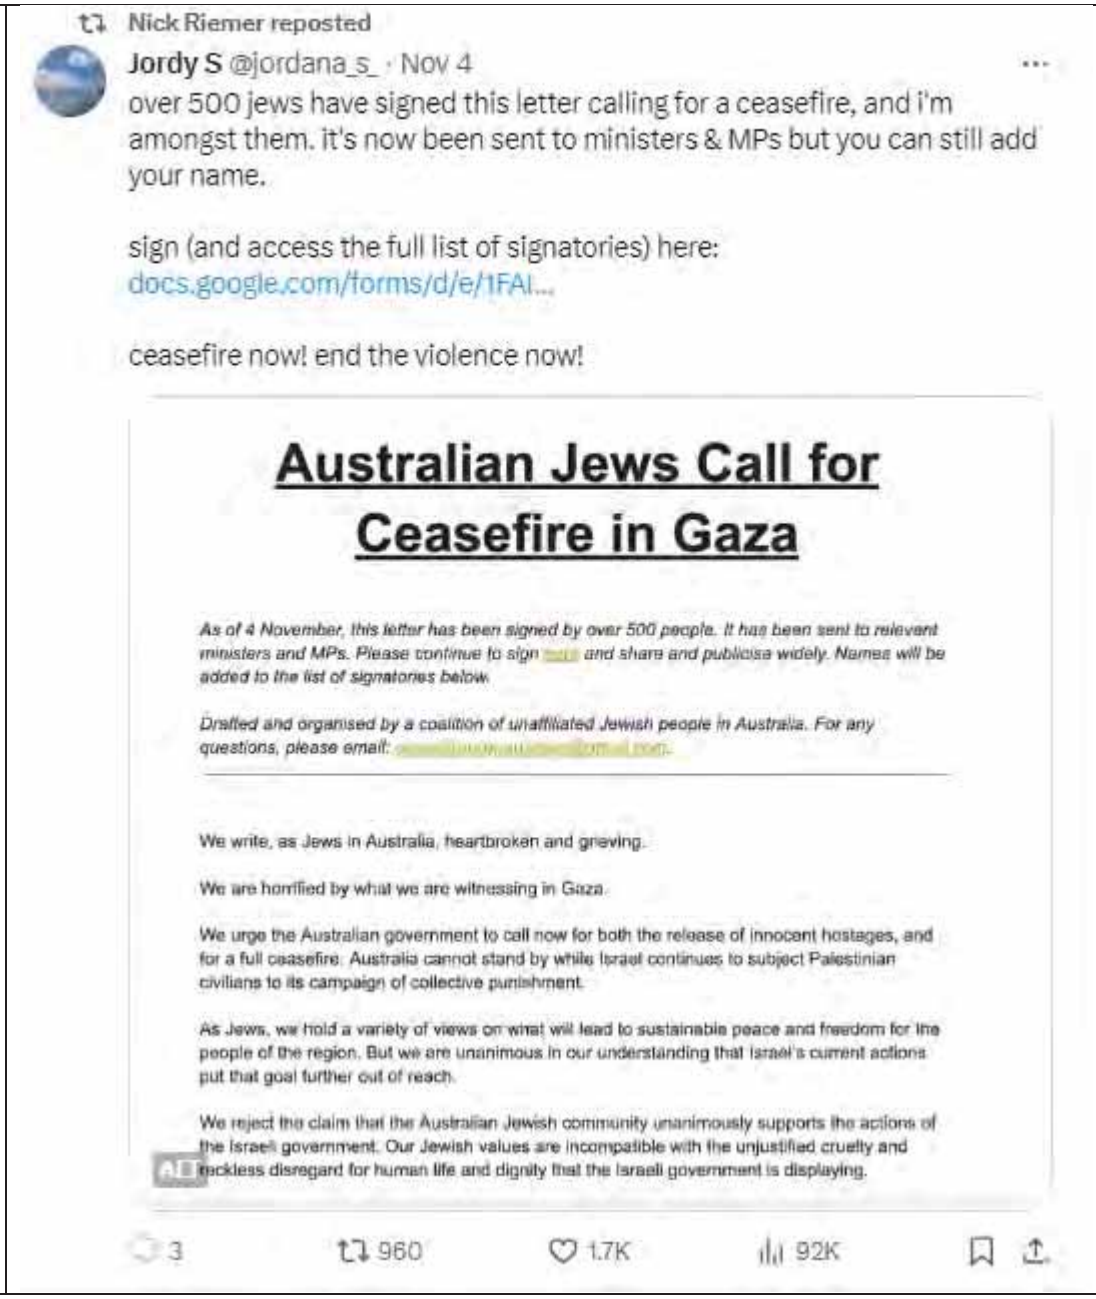
Call for a ceasefire now.
Follow @APAN4Palestine and take immediate action.

Please share...

9 175 230 14K

227



Nick Riemer reposted
Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Nov 4
over 500 jews have signed this letter calling for a ceasefire, and i'm amongst them. it's now been sent to ministers & MPs but you can still add your name.
sign (and access the full list of signatories) here:
docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAI...
ceasefire now! end the violence now!
Australian Jews Call for Ceasefire in Gaza
As of 4 November, this letter has been signed by over 500 people. It has been sent to relevant ministers and MPs. Please continue to sign and share and publicise widely. Names will be added to the list of signatories below.
Drafted and organised by a coalition of unaffiliated Jewish people in Australia. For any questions, please email:
We write, as Jews in Australia, heartbroken and grieving.
We are horrified by what we are witnessing in Gaza.
We urge the Australian government to call now for both the release of innocent hostages, and for a full ceasefire. Australia cannot stand by while Israel continues to subject Palestinian civilians to its campaign of collective punishment.
As Jews, we hold a variety of views on what will lead to sustainable peace and freedom for the people of the region. But we are unanimous in our understanding that Israel's current actions put that goal further out of reach.
We reject the claim that the Australian Jewish community unanimously supports the actions of the Israeli government. Our Jewish values are incompatible with the unjustified cruelty and reckless disregard for human life and dignity that the Israeli government is displaying.
3
960
1.7K
92K

228

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 5

Important action this coming Saturday in Sydney . Start planning your transport now. Details in the thread.

> Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 4
>
> Stop the genocide in Gaza! Protest 12pm next Saturday at Port Botany. The ZIM shipping line is a major transporter of armaments. It isn't welcome in Port Botany, or anywhere people stand against genocide and war crimes

64 226 389 22K

229

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 4

Israel has put the nail in the coffin of its fascist savage regime. The depravity & butchery that has defined it for 75 yrs which we have been pleading for the world to stop can no longer be denied. Israel is finished. It's frenzy of barbarity proves that it knows it.

29 224 629 25K

230

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 5

We need more than protests. The protests against the Iraq war showed us that. We need strikes, we need civil disobedience, we need to make politicians unable to continue with any other business by making this demand so overwhelming they must give in.

> الكسندرا ميراي @LexiAlex · Nov 5
> What if millions of people went to the streets to yell "ceasefire" and nobody in power cares.

18 10K 22K 776K

231

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 5

#MELBOURNE out in force for #palestine not too late to join us at the State Library

6 194 548 16K

232

Nick Riemer reposted

evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 3

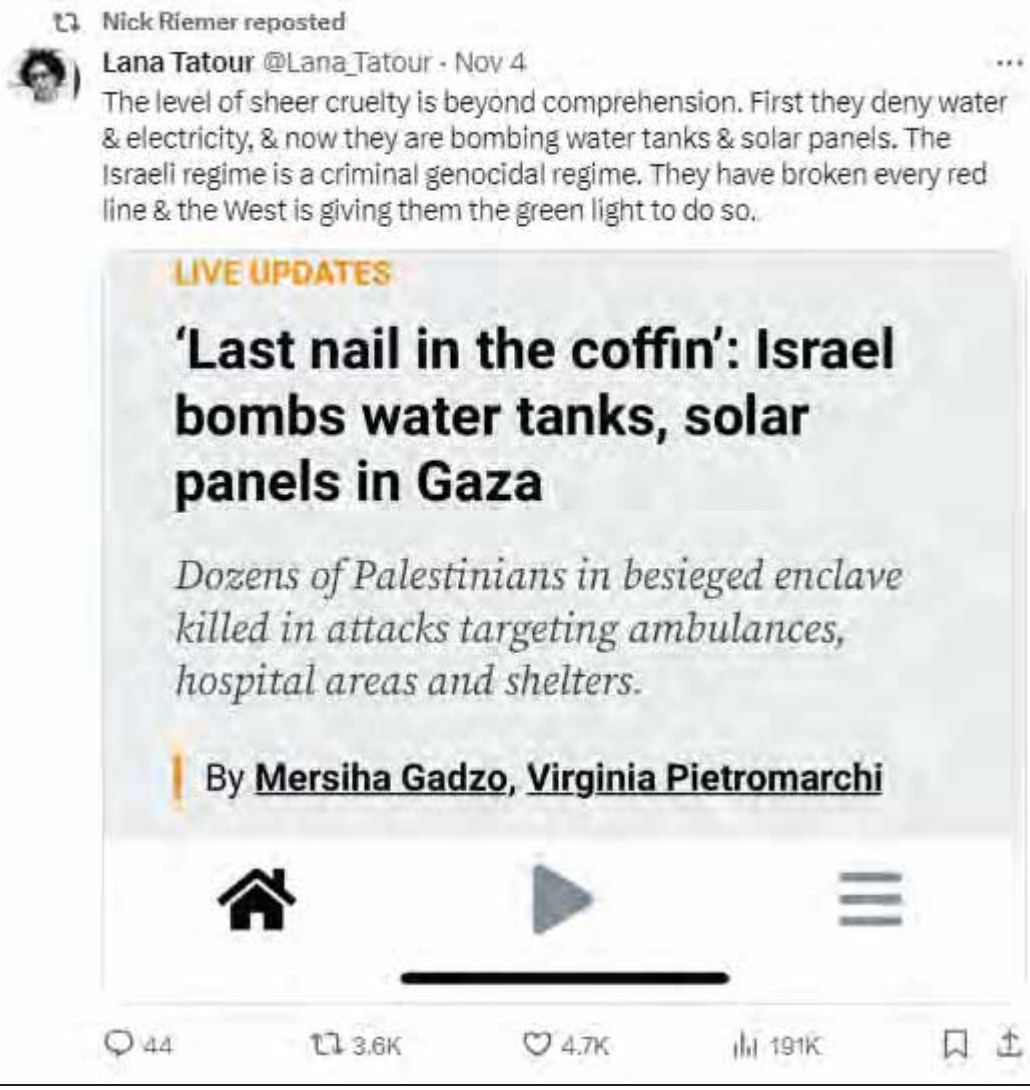
Do you work for an Australian organisation that has advised staff and affiliates not to speak about Palestine, or has placed restrictions on any expression of support for Palestine? We are gathering anonymous data on Aus orgs censoring their staff.

docs.google.com
Exposing censorship in Australian organisations
Since well before October 7, major Australian news publishers have conspicuously avoided supposedl...

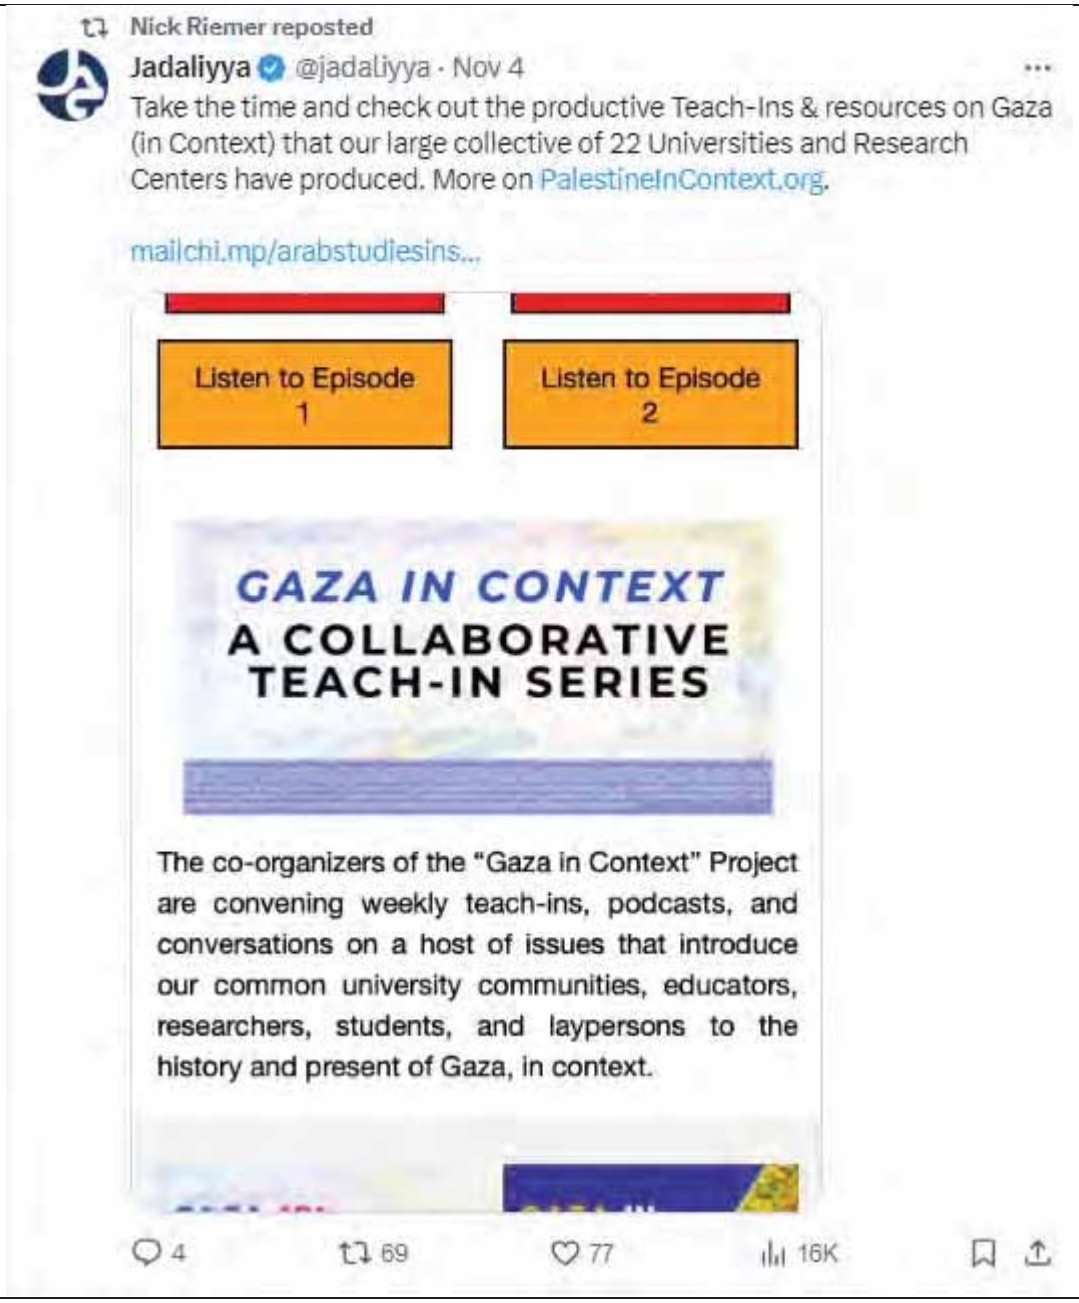
27 900 1K 148K

233



Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 4
The level of sheer cruelty is beyond comprehension. First they deny water & electricity, & now they are bombing water tanks & solar panels. The Israeli regime is a criminal genocidal regime. They have broken every red line & the West is giving them the green light to do so.
LIVE UPDATES
'Last nail in the coffin': Israel bombs water tanks, solar panels in Gaza
Dozens of Palestinians in besieged enclave killed in attacks targeting ambulances, hospital areas and shelters.
By Mersiha Gadzo, Virginia Pietromarchi
44
3.6K
4.7K
191K

234



Nick Riemer reposted
Jadaliyya @jadaliyya · Nov 4
Take the time and check out the productive Teach-Ins & resources on Gaza (in Context) that our large collective of 22 Universities and Research Centers have produced. More on PalestineInContext.org.
mailchi.mp/arabstudiesins...
Listen to Episode 1
Listen to Episode 2
GAZA IN CONTEXT
A COLLABORATIVE TEACH-IN SERIES
The co-organizers of the "Gaza in Context" Project are convening weekly teach-ins, podcasts, and conversations on a host of issues that introduce our common university communities, educators, researchers, students, and laypersons to the history and present of Gaza, in context.
4
69
77
16K

235

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 5

Last year @Sydney_Uni rang its bells for Ukraine. Can we ring them for #Gaza now? How about it @mscott? @arjagose?

> Sydney Uni Media @SydneyUni_Media · Mar 4, 2022
>
> UKRAINE: Ring the bells for peace
>
> University of Sydney carillon will ring for peace in Ukraine on Saturday, joining bells around the world.
>
> ...
>
> Show more

5 28 88 8.3K

236

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 6

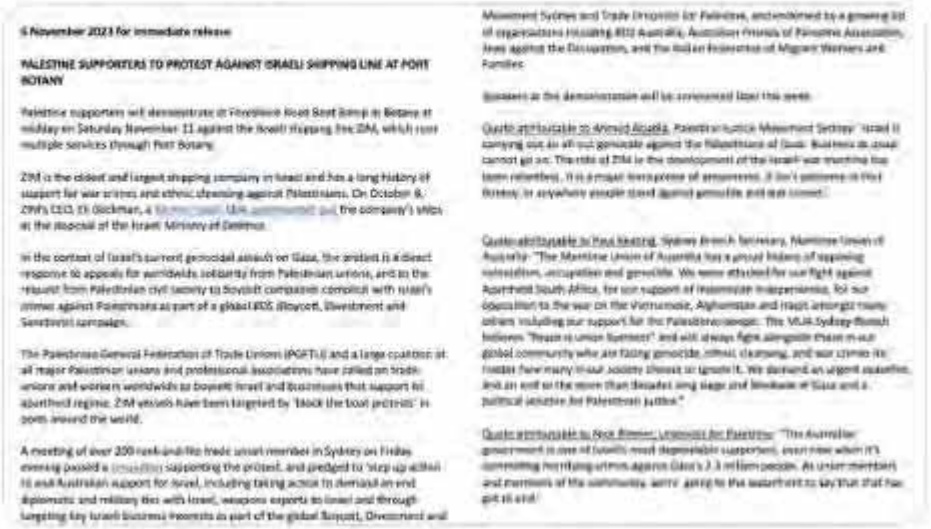
MEDIA RELEASE - Palestine supporters to protest against Israeli shipping line at Port Botany.



6 November 2023 for immediate release

PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST ISRAELI SHIPPING LINE AT PORT BOTANY

2 88 134 7K

237

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 6

"I had been waiting for and just begun an important course at IUG. Now it was gone in the blink of an eye."

> Electronic Intifada @intifada · Nov 6
> I had just graduated from the Islamic University of Gaza, then Israel bombed it. bit.ly/3MvVAyO

7 16 40 4.3K

238

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 6

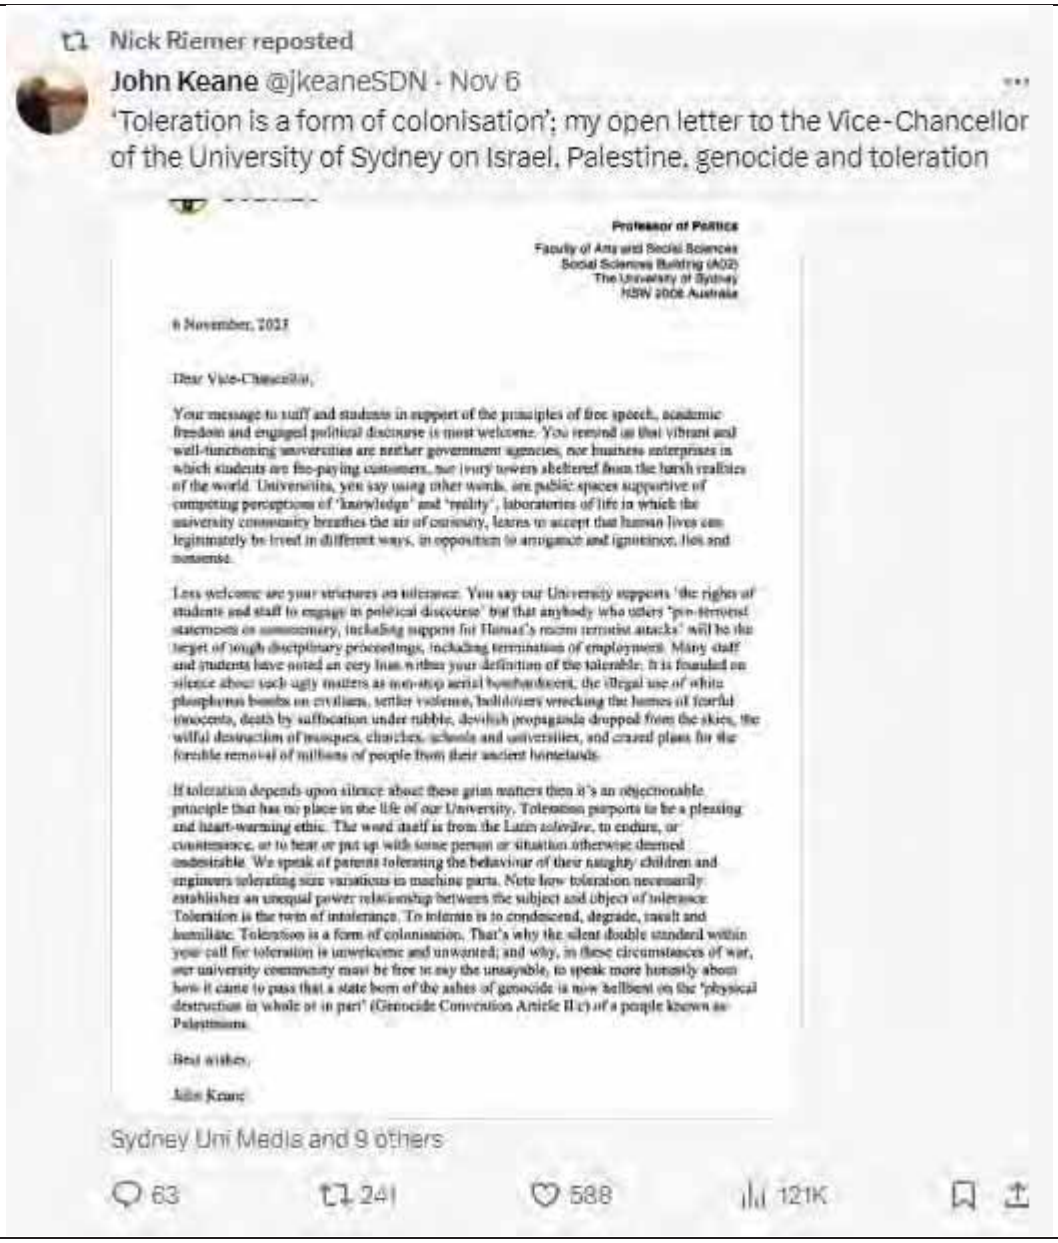
This Wednesday 5.30pm

78 Webb Dock Drive, Port Melbourne

264 403 23K

239



Nick Riemer reposted

John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Nov 6

'Toleration is a form of colonisation': my open letter to the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sydney on Israel, Palestine, genocide and toleration

Professor of Politics
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
Social Sciences Building (A02)
The University of Sydney
NSW 2006 Australia

6 November, 2023

Dear Vice-Chancellor,

Your message to staff and students in support of the principles of free speech, academic freedom and engaged political discourse is most welcome. You remind us that vibrant and well-functioning universities are neither government agencies, nor business enterprises in which students are fee-paying customers, nor ivory towers sheltered from the harsh realities of the world. Universities, you say using other words, are public spaces supportive of competing perceptions of 'knowledge' and 'reality', laboratories of life in which the university community breathes the air of curiosity, learns to accept that human lives can legitimately be lived in different ways, in opposition to arrogance and ignorance, lies and nonsense.

Less welcome are your strictures on tolerance. You say our University supports 'the rights of students and staff to engage in political discourse' but that anybody who utters 'pro-terrorist statements or commentary, including support for Hamas's recent terrorist attacks' will be the target of tough disciplinary proceedings, including termination of employment. Many staff and students have noted an eery line within your definition of the tolerable. It is founded on silence about such ugly matters as non-stop aerial bombardment, the illegal use of white phosphorus bombs on civilians, settler violence, bulldozers wrecking the homes of fearful innocents, death by suffocation under rubble, devilish propaganda dropped from the skies, the wilful destruction of mosques, churches, schools and universities, and crazed plans for the forcible removal of millions of people from their ancient homelands.

If toleration depends upon silence about these grim matters then it's an objectionable principle that has no place in the life of our University. Toleration purports to be a pleasing and heart-warming ethic. The word itself is from the Latin tolerāre, to endure, or countenance, or to bear or put up with some person or situation otherwise deemed undesirable. We speak of parents tolerating the behaviour of their naughty children and engineers tolerating size variations in machine parts. Note how toleration necessarily establishes an unequal power relationship between the subject and object of tolerance. Toleration is the twin of intolerance. To tolerate is to condescend, degrade, insult and humiliate. Toleration is a form of colonisation. That's why the silent double standard within your call for toleration is unwelcome and unwanted; and why, in these circumstances of war, our university community must be free to say the unsayable, to speak more honestly about how it came to pass that a state born of the ashes of genocide is now brilliant on the "physical destruction in whole or in part" (Genocide Convention Article II.c) of a people known as Palestinians.

Best wishes,

John Keane

Sydney Uni Media and 9 others

63 241 588 121K

240

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 6

Statement of solidarity with Palestine from Australian university staff: 'We stand in unwavering solidarity with the Palestinian people. We join millions around the world in the call for an immediate stop to this genocidal war and justice for Palestine'.

150 293 704 25K

241

Nick Riemer reposted

Lowkey @Lowkey0nline · Nov 7

Dockworkers in Barcelona are refusing to load ships with military hardware to be sent to Israel.

257 6.8K 23K 458K

242

Nick Riemer reposted

Mariam Barghouti مريم البرغوثي @MariamBarghouti · Nov 7

There are mass trials and torture that's beyond description happening in the West Bank.

Prisons are overflowing and we're reaching record highs of arrests with no trial or charge.

Stop this madness.

59 1.8K 2.4K 75K

243

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 7

Not too late to add your signature. Don't be silent on genocide.
docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAI...

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 6
>
> Statement of solidarity with Palestine from Australian university staff: 'We stand in unwavering solidarity with the Palestinian people. We join millions around the world in the call for an immediate stop to this genocidal war and justice for Palestine'.
> overland.org.au/2023/11/statem...

244

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 7

Press release (and graphic with typo corrected!) - pls share far and wide

The role of ZIM, the Israeli shipping line, in the development of the Israeli war machine has been relentless. It is a major transporter of weapons of mass destruction.

The Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions (PGFTU) and a large coalition of all major Palestinian workers unions and professional associations have called on their fellow trade unions and workers worldwide to boycott Israel and businesses that are complicit with its apartheid regime. In an international effort called #BlockTheBoat.

This is an extension to the Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) campaign called for by the Palestinian civil society in 2004.

A ZIM ship is scheduled to be present in Port Melbourne on the 8th of November. At 5:30pm Victorian trade unionists will be standing at 78 Webb Dock Drive, Port Melbourne with banners, union flags and strong voices to oppose ZIM, the Israeli war machine, and to stand in Solidarity with Palestine.

> Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 7
>
>
>
>
> Speakers announced for the speak out tomorrow!
> twitter.com/mathew_abbott/...

58 83 9.5K

245

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 7
'It is time for the entirety of the academic world to take urgent action to stop Israel's genocide in Gaza and its ongoing scholasticide against all Palestinians. If not now, when?'
ISRAEL'S #GAZAGENOCIDE TARGETS PALESTINIAN UNIVERSITIES
THE TIME FOR ACADEMICS TO ACT IS NOW.
IF NOT NOW, WHEN?
bdsmovement.net
30
31
81
4.2K

246

Nick Riemer reposted
evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 7
Respectfully, Phillip, you don't subscribe to Overland, or if you do I can't find record of you in our system. We have supported Palestine and Palestinian writers for many years, so when the authors of this letter approached us we chose to continue our support.
Phillip Adams @PhillipAdams_1 · Nov 7
I've a lifelong association with the left wing Overland magazine- and agree with Barry Jones in deploying its line on Hamas
15
57
506
41K

247

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 8

Black-Palestinian solidarity - yesterday,today and tomorrow!

273 409 1.3K 79K

248

Nick Riemer reposted

Birzeit University @BirzeitU · Nov 6

138000 students were suspended from face-to-face education in 34 higher academic institutions in the West Bank due to the difficulties of transports for the staff and students, caused by the occupation's roadblocks and the settler terrorism.
#Gaza_Attack #STOP_THE_GENOCIDE

2 160 135 32K

249

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
Important BDS victory in Australia. Congratulations to the activists involved. More universities should follow suit.
BDS_Australia @BDS_Australia · Nov 7
Amidst the horror of Israel's assault on Gaza, we are able to bring news of a #BDS victory in Australia as one of the big universities confirms it's no longer partnering with #Elbit @BDSmovement #EndMilitaryTiesWithIsrael @RMIT @RMITSU #StopTheGenocide bdsaustralia.net.au/bds-victory-rm...
BDS VICTORY
RMIT DITCHES ELBIT !
22
178
472
19K

250

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

The union members' petition on Palestine keeps growing. It now has 2650+ signatures, including from some official union bodies. Congratulations to all unionists who've exercised their right to take a stand. Justice & solidarity: the essence of unionism.
forms.gle/xw2ogn4k1FVV7t...

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

20 91 223 8.5K

251

Nick Riemer reposted

Warwick Gow @warwickgowphoto · Nov 8

Proud to be supporting @asu4palestine as a member of @servicesunion and be a signatory of this!

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

The union members' petition on Palestine keeps growing. It now has 2650+ signatures, including from some official union bodies. Congratulations to all unionists who've exercised their right to take a stand. Justice & solidarity: the essence of unionism. forms.gle/xw2ogn4k1FVV7t...

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

1 6 12 873

252

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

Why won't @Sydney_Uni pay casual staff for all the work they do? No one can give students proper feedback when they're paid 13 minutes per 1000-word essay. Great to be at @NTEUnion members' teach-in as they make this basic, basic point.

4 18 104 3.6K

253

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 8

Join us this coming Monday for a conversation on carcerality and Palestinian children with UN Special Rapporteur @FranceskAlbs and children's rights expert @NoamPeleg at @unswcclj. Join in person (UNSW Law) or via zoom. Register via this link: cclj.unsw.edu.au/event/multilay...

59 62 6.5K

| | |
|---|---|
| 254 | |

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
Thanks to @daniellamariewh for covering this story and for highlighting that Sydney University has gone further than other Australian institutions in penalizing pro-Palestinian speech.
smh.com.au
The Sydney Morning Herald
25
91
176
10K

255

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 8

MARK-IN / SCOTT-OUT

A group of casual staff brought our essay marking to USYD management today to show what it looks like when we're given just 13 minutes to mark a paper

@mscott is prioritising $$$$ over education

Casual staff should be listened to, not ignored

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8
> Why won't @Sydney_Uni pay casual staff for all the work they do? No one can give students proper feedback when they're paid 13 minutes per 1000-word essay. Great to be at @NTEUnion members' teach-in as they make this basic, basic point.

2 14 842

256

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 8

Pro-Palestine protesters block Israeli shipping line in Melbourne. Great, quick work from Naarm activists.

canberratimes.com.au

Pro-Palestine protesters block Israeli shipping line

A Melbourne shipyard has ground to a halt after hundreds of pro-Palestine protesters blocked entr...

8 26 89 2K

257

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 8

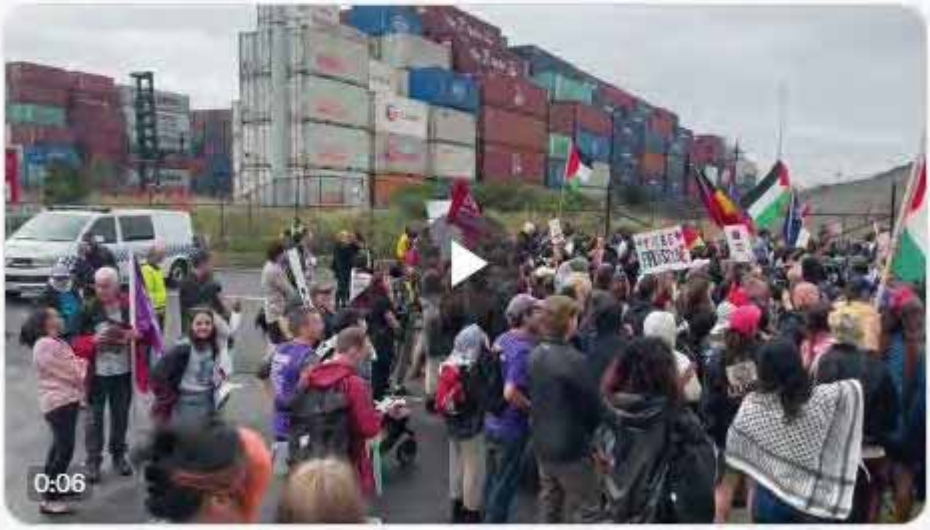
The #BlockTheBoat action worked! The boat has bypassed Melbourne. WIN!

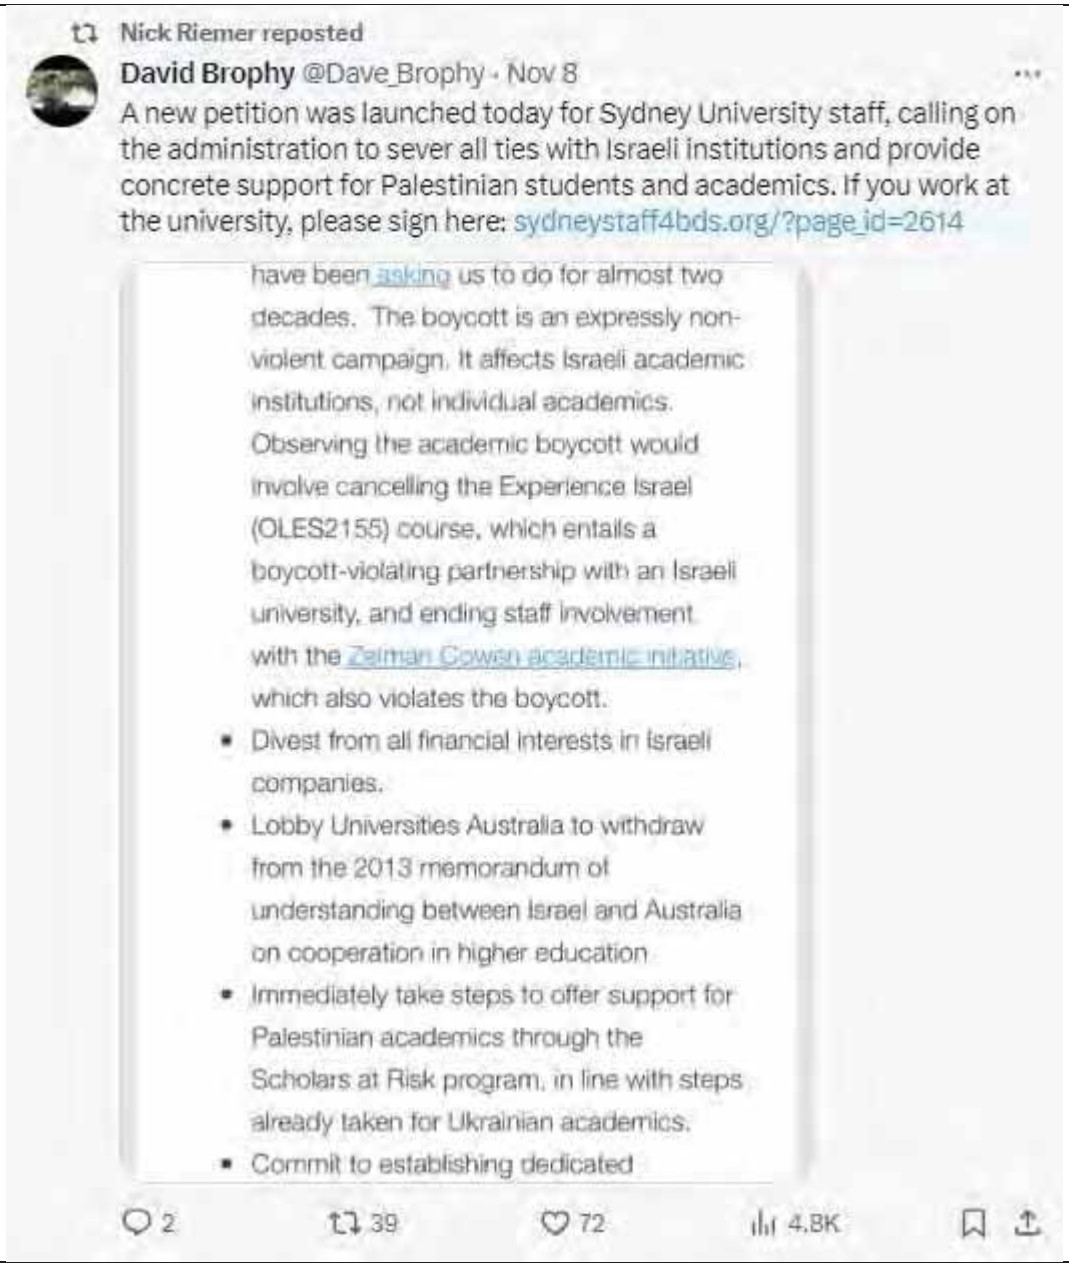
Solidarity activists now taking direct action against at @ZimShipping

#StopGenocideInGaza #CeasefireForGazaNOW #CeasefireForGaza #CeaseFire



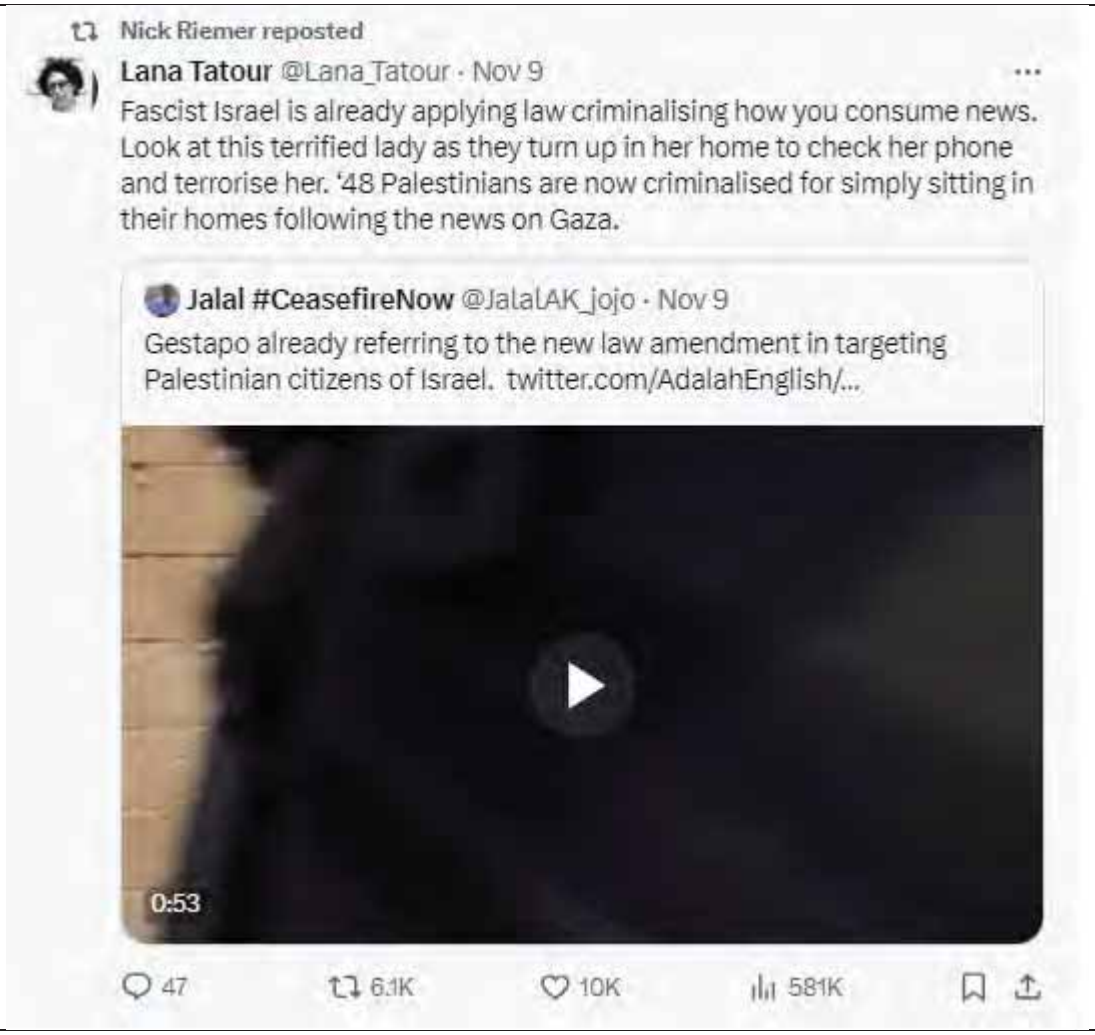
26 440 901 75K

258



Nick Riemer reposted
David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 8
A new petition was launched today for Sydney University staff, calling on the administration to sever all ties with Israeli institutions and provide concrete support for Palestinian students and academics. If you work at the university, please sign here: sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614
have been asking us to do for almost two decades. The boycott is an expressly non-violent campaign. It affects Israeli academic institutions, not individual academics.
Observing the academic boycott would involve cancelling the Experience Israel (OLES2155) course, which entails a boycott-violating partnership with an Israeli university, and ending staff involvement with the Zelman Cowen academic initiative, which also violates the boycott.
• Divest from all financial interests in Israeli companies.
• Lobby Universities Australia to withdraw from the 2013 memorandum of understanding between Israel and Australia on cooperation in higher education
• Immediately take steps to offer support for Palestinian academics through the Scholars at Risk program, in line with steps already taken for Ukrainian academics.
• Commit to establishing dedicated
2
39
72
4.8K

259



Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 9
Fascist Israel is already applying law criminalising how you consume news. Look at this terrified lady as they turn up in her home to check her phone and terrorise her. '48 Palestinians are now criminalised for simply sitting in their homes following the news on Gaza.
Jalal #CeasefireNow @JalalAK_jojo · Nov 9
Gestapo already referring to the new law amendment in targeting Palestinian citizens of Israel. twitter.com/AdalahEnglish/...
0:53
47
6.1K
10K
581K

260

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 9

IMPORTANT UPDATE ON SATURDAY

ZIM has changed its schedule and their boat may not be in port on Saturday. Nevertheless, our protest against ZIM at 12pm is still ON.

We'll also come back whenever we know a ZIM boat is there. We won't have much notice, so register for updates!

6 56 68 6.2K

261

Nick Riemer reposted

Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Nov 9

Yesterday we launched a petition calling on Sydney University management to endorse the institutional academic boycott of Israel, and support Palestinian scholars and students. If you work at the uni, add your name at the link. sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614

- Commit the university to the institutional academic boycott of Israel, as Palestinians have been asking us to do for almost two decades. The boycott is an expressly non-violent campaign. It affects Israeli academic institutions, not individual academics. Observing the academic boycott would involve cancelling the Experience Israel (OLES2155) course, which entails a boycott-violating partnership with an Israeli university, and ending staff involvement with the Zelman Cowen academic initiative, which also violates the boycott.
- Divest from all financial interests in Israeli companies.
- Lobby Universities Australia to withdraw from the 2013 memorandum of understanding between Israel and Australia on cooperation in higher education
- Immediately take steps to offer support for Palestinian academics through the Scholars at Risk program, in line with steps already taken for Ukrainian academics.
- Commit to establishing dedicated international scholarships for Palestinian students.

4 8 15 928

262

Nick Riemer reposted

Daniel Lopez @NoLuckLopez · Nov 9

"Australian households have suffered the largest fall in living standards of any advanced economy over the past year"

All under a Labor government.

It's quite stark — we won't turn things around unless the unions and the left are willing to fight Labor.

11 54 183 24K

263

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Nov 9

'To let suffering speak' | Overland's co-editor @jonathandunk responds to some of the criticism we have received for our solidarity with Palestine.

4 125 239 47K

264

Nick Riemer reposted

Samah Sabawi @gazaheart · Nov 8

A reminder of what we mean when we say from the river to the sea Palestine will be free. My liberation anthem poem. We will all be free. #Gazagenocide #israel #Palestine

> The Canada Files @TheCanadaFiles · Nov 8
>
> A Canadian-Australian-Palestinian professor, Dr. Samah Sabawi, presented her Liberation Anthem after facing an audience attendee who asked her why Jews don't have a right to a homeland, asking in defence of the Israeli occupation's 'right to exist'.

5 102 199 17K

265

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 9

UPDATE ON SATURDAY

ZIM has changed its schedule and their boat may not be in port on Saturday. Nevertheless, our protest against ZIM at 12pm is still ON.

We'll also come back when we know for sure that a ZIM boat is there. We won't have much notice, so register for updates!

4 52 75 5.1K

266

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 9

YouGov polling shows that a clear majority of Australians want a ceasefire and that a small minority of Australians believe that Israel's blockade and attacks on Gaza are reasonable acts of self defence.

Find the link to the full report here: apan.org.au/2023-opinion-p...

12 115 180 16K

267

Nick Riemer reposted

evelyn araluen @evelynaraluen · Nov 9

It's a very strange thing to be running a subscriberthon during a genocide, so please don't take our annual campaign as opportunistic in any regard - we're proud to serve our community of readers and writers and the support has been deeply humbling ♥

> Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Nov 9
> On the second-last day of our '23 Subscriberthon, our co-chief editor @evelynaraluen speaks truth to power. overland.org.au/2023/11/on-the...

5 14 94 5K

268

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 9

Tune in on Monday at 9:30pm AEDT to watch APAN president Nasser Mashni on QandA ! twitter.com/abcnews/status...

> This post is unavailable.

6 36 2.1K

269

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 9

On the 24th of November (10am UK time) the @EdinburghPIR Middle East Research group and @CRITIQUE_CENTRE will host @NickReimer1 for a timely conversation on academic boycotts, justice and liberation in Palestine. The event will be online. Register here eventbrite.co.uk/e/boycott-theo...

School of Social & Political Science Edinburgh

23 38 3.3K

270

Nick Riemer reposted

Hind Khoudary @Hind_Gaza · Nov 9

I had a couple of chocolate wafers for breakfast today.

I miss feeling full.

I never felt this hungry in my life.

444 11K 45K 1.4M

271

Nick Riemer reposted
hiero badge | انقذوا فلسطين @hierobadge · Nov 9
Last night Merribek Council became the first govt body to condemn Israeli war crimes and demand a ceasefire! They also called for:
• An end to the occupation
• Severing diplomatic ties w/ Israel
• The release of hostages (inc Palestinians)
All Councils should do this!
calling on the Australian government to:
7. Strongly condemn the war crimes being carried out by Israel against the Palestinians in Gaza,
8. Call for an immediate ceasefire and end to Israel's indiscriminate bombing,
9. Call for the immediate lifting of the siege on Gaza to allow Palestinians in Gaza to have unlimited access to food, water, fuel, electricity, medical supplies and construction materials to repair damaged homes and civilian infrastructure,
10. Advocate for all Palestinian and Israeli hostages to be released,
11. Advocate for a political resolution to the decades-long conflict which includes an end to Israel's illegal occupation of Palestine in order for there to be a just legitimate, non-violent tactics used by individuals and organisations to pressure foreign governments over human rights abuses and war crimes, including Israel's brutal and illegal colonisation of Palestine.
12. Receives a report to explore options for council to cancel contracts with companies that support Israel's illegal occupation of Palestine or profit from it, especially companies which supply equipment to the Israeli Defence Force.
13. Amends the Community Flag Schedule outlined in Council's Flags Policy by raising the Palestinian flag on the fourth flag pole at Council's Coburg Civic Centre for six months in recognition of the specific situation of a genocide being carried out against the Palestinians in Gaza. That this decision be communicated to the communities who were expecting their flags to be [illegible] on other dates after six months the decision will be reviewed by Council
1
444
1.1K
35K

272

Nick Riemer reposted

Rohan Talbot @rohantalbot · Nov 9

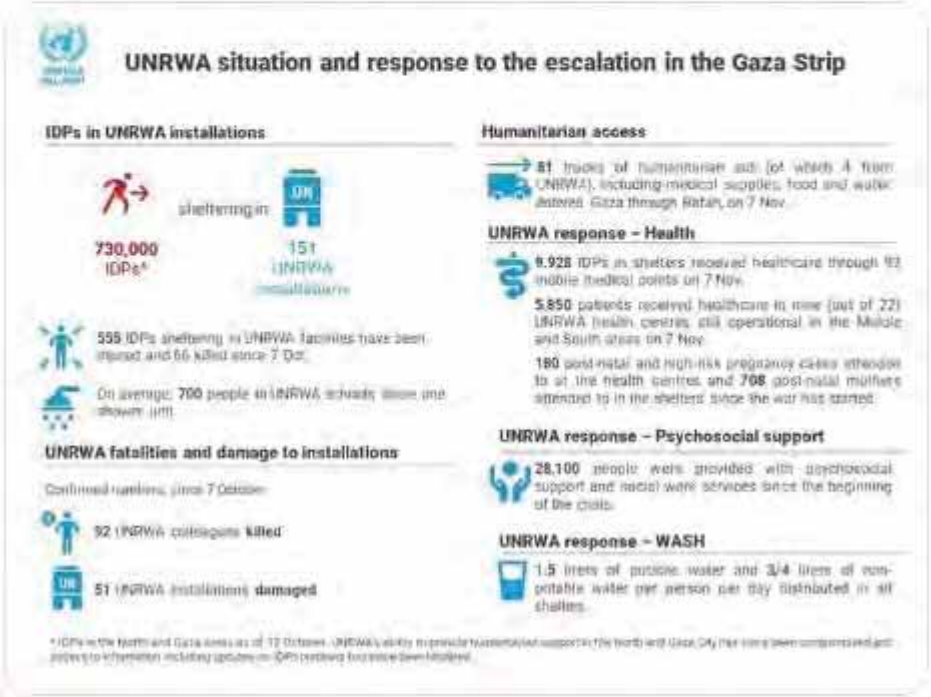
Awful stats on the humanitarian situation in #Gaza from @UNRWA:
- An average of 4,834 people per shelter, with on average 700 people sharing a single shower unit.
- 92 UN workers killed
- 555 people have been injured and 66 killed while sheltering at UNRWA installations



5 · 89 · 82 · 6.8K

273

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 9

Even now with 10000+ dead and the bombs still raining down, the lectures never end on how 'simplistic' and 'unnuanced' it is to support Palestine, what a 'complex' situation Gaza faces us with, and how the thing we most need is 'serious debate'.

21 · 38 · 131 · 5.3K

274

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Nov 9

Haaretz reports: increase in number of israeli soldiers who film themselves torturing Palestinians.

Note that the increase isn't in the torture per se, but in the brazenness of recording & sharing it online.

> Haaretz הארץ @Haaretz · Nov 9
>
> מכות, קללות ו"יאללה בית"ר": עלייה במספר החיילים שמתעדים את עצמם מתעללים בפלסטינים dlvr.it/Syb565

15 696 1.2K 63K

275

Nick Riemer reposted

Younis Tirawi | يونس @ytirawi · Nov 10

Israeli military soldiers hoisting names of ex Israeli settlements in Gaza. First picture, raising the name of ex- outpost Neveh Dekalim. Other picture, displaying a placard indicating the former Nova Beach on the ex-outpost of Gush Katif with Israeli flags.

There's a new version of this post

16 124 157

276

Nick Riemer reposted
Jehad Abusalim جهاد أبو سليم @JehadAbusalim · Nov 10
Intense shelling near the Indonesian hospital tonight.
0:31
2
71
73
6.2K

277

Nick Riemer reposted
Nour Naim| نور نعيم @NourNaim88 · Nov 10
A horrific crime !!
The outpatient clinic at Al-Shifa Hospital has been targeted. A place crowded with displaced individuals from Gaza and its northern areas. Reports suggest dozens of martyrs !
0:44
From Yasser
7
161
127
5.9K

278

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 10

We still have some places on buses to tomorrow's protest, leaving from Liverpool, Bankstown and Central stations at 11. Register at the links!

2 20 31 4.5K

279

Nick Riemer reposted

naama @derridalicious · Nov 10

literally what is the purpose of every international humanitarian law mechanism, of the Geneva Convention, of the Convention on the Prevention & Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, of the International Criminal Court, what is the point, act now! NOW!

17 139 420 8.5K

280

Nick Riemer reposted

Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 10

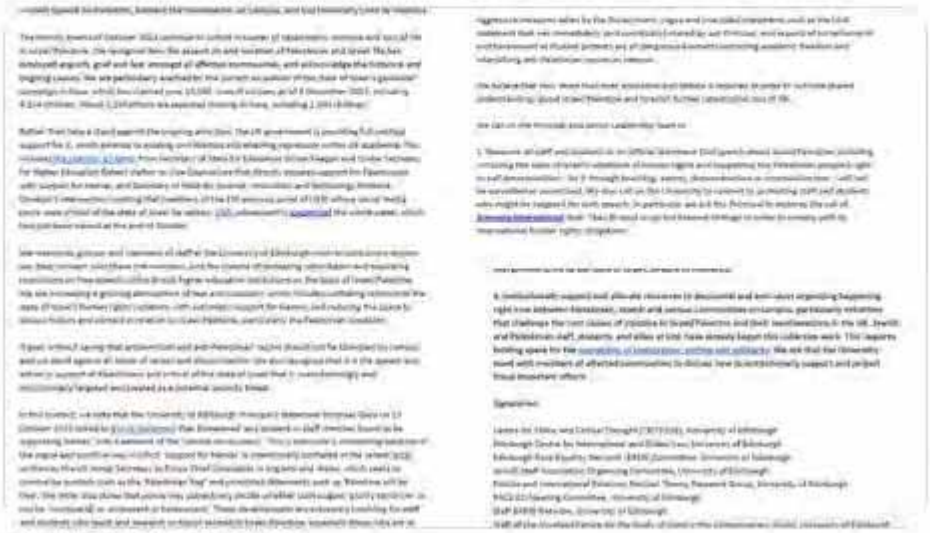
A big coalition of staff networks/groups asks @EdinburghUni to: protect Palestine free speech; suspend the application of IHRA antisemitism def; acknowledge historical (Balfour Declaration, Balfour was Edinburgh Chancellor) and present colonial complicity; support solidarity



UCU Edinburgh and 5 others

38 76 4K

281

Nick Riemer reposted

Hind Khoudary @Hind_Gaza · Nov 10

Another one of my dear friends was killed by an Israeli airstrike south of Gaza.
Mohammed Saleh, evacuated from the north to the south weeks ago - was killed by Israel today.
Mohammed is @AbdallahBaghda7 best friend.
They were both killed by Israel.

271 7K 13K 454K

282

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 11

Jetskis out for Palestine at Port Botany!

7 66 236 7.6K

283

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestinian Youth Movement @palyouthmvmt · Nov 11

‼ THREAD: Israel is at war with Gaza's hospitals ‼

9 322 458 27K

284

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 11

Powerful protest today to launch the campaign to #blocktheboat. We're proud to work with @unions4palestin to say ZIM out of Botany. Follow us for updates and action alerts!

9 170 331 22K

285

Nick Riemer reposted

Andy Fleming @slackbastard · Nov 11

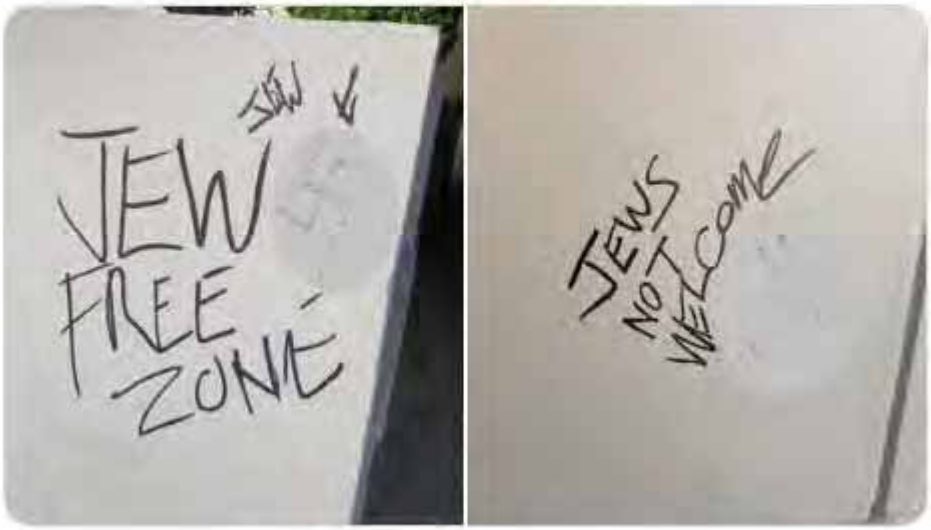
1/ PSA:

Recent events means inter alia an uptick in antisemitism along w Islamophobia, & creeps gonna creep. Eg, this graf appeared near Barkly Square in Brunswick in the last few days.



8 68 205 45K

286

Nick Riemer reposted

David Brophy @Dave_Brophy · Nov 11

The jet-skis came out for Palestine!

> 9News Sydney @9NewsSyd · Nov 11
>
> Port Botany was today swarmed by pro-Palestinian protesters, with demonstrators taking to the water on jet skis as they attempted to block the arrival of an Israeli vessel. @eeRamsay #9News

4 40 103 7.1K

287

Nick Riemer reposted

matthew abbott @mattabbottphoto · Nov 11

@NickReimer1 "the water front is where those struggles have been played out in the past, and the waterfront is where they are going to be played out again today" at todays #FreePalestine - Stop the Zim boat, Port Botany Sydney. #MUA

3 31 56 2.8K

288

Nick Riemer reposted

Medical Aid for Palestinians @MedicalAidPal · Nov 11

"No one can get out from the Shifa hospital. No one can come in. The people who tried to evacuate this morning were being shot in the streets." Dr Marwan Abu Sada, Head of Surgery at Al Shifa Hospital, describes horrifying scenes as Israel attacks the Gaza hospital this morning.

112 3.2K 2.6K 319K

289

Nick Riemer reposted

Areeb Ullah @are_eb · Nov 11

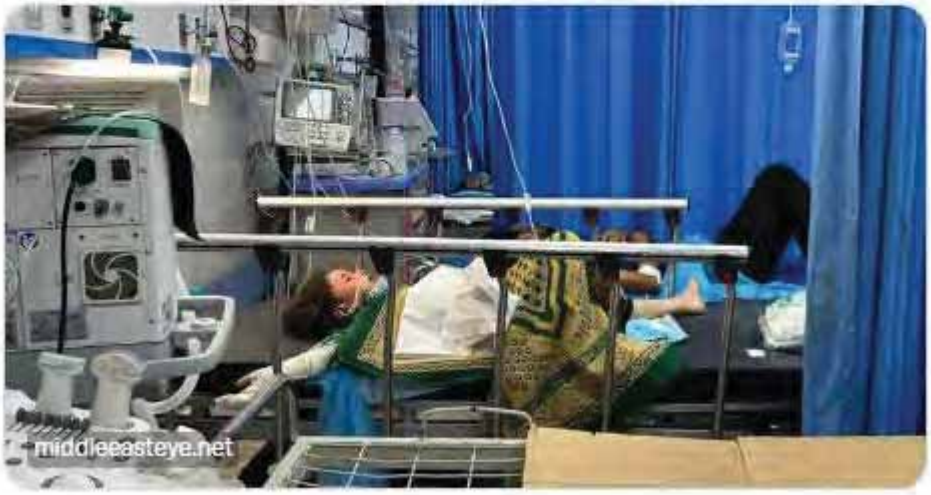
Replying to @are_eb and @MahaGaza

.@MahaGaza has filed her latest dispatch from Gaza. She speaks to journalists and patients trapped inside the Al Shifah hospital in Gaza.

The situation remains is desperate as doctors run out of medical supplies and electricity to treat the wounded.



1 48 58 5K

290

Nick Riemer reposted

Lina Mounzer @warghetti · Nov 11

What we are watching is no less than an entire people experiencing the end of the world. The end of the world

> The Fact Finder @FactualNarrator · Nov 11
> A Palestinian doctor stuck in the North, sharing a message of despair, peace, and faith.

5 386 865 51K

291

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
Today - see you there.
STOP THE GENOCIDE
IN GAZA
FREE
PALESTINE
PROTEST
SUN 12 NOV
1PM HYDE PARK NTH
PALESTINE ACTION GROUP SYDNEY
12
22
101
8.1K

292

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 12

London was beautiful today. Upwards of 800,000 people out on the streets for the Palestinian people demanding a ceasefire & an end to the Israeli occupation of Palestinian lands.

25 352 1.1K 28K

293-295

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
I encourage every union member here to get involved with Trade Unionists for Palestine by signing our petition.
docs.google.com
Union members in solidarity with Palestine
In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, ...
2
10
461
Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
We will do everything we can to harness the power of the labour movement to end this government's support for Netanyahu and the genocidal madness of the Israel state, until there is equality for everyone in historic Palestine from the river to the sea.
3
4
13
644
Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Replying to @NickRiemer1
That's why there is no room for racism, for settler-colonialism, for apartheid in our unions, and there is no room for Zionism in our unions.
3
2
8
477

296-315

Nick Riemer
@NickReimer1

There were some hugely powerful & moving speeches from Palestinians at yesterday's Botany protest which I hope we captured on video. I spoke on why there's no room for racism, settler-colonialism, apartheid or Zionism in our unions. 🟪

11:08 AM · Nov 12, 2023 · 6,629 Views

47 43 174 3

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12

Unions are about justice and solidarity with working people. We don't switch those principles off beyond Australia's borders. We're internationalists, which means that we're serious when we say that no one is free till everyone is free.

4 · 1 · 15 · 328

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12

That justice has no meaning if it isn't justice for everybody, wherever in the world they are, regardless of their background or their beliefs.

2 · 13 · 255

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12

The rank-and-file union members who've signed our petition know what side they're on. The working people of Gaza are the objects of a genocidal attack on a sickening and indescribable scale.

Union members in solidarity with Palestine

In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, we are horrified by the current war between Israel and Hamas and the unspeakable bloodshed and violence it has caused. This tragedy is a direct result of Israel's blockade and siege of Gaza, and of the apartheid and ethnic cleansing it maintains in the West Bank and within its own borders.

In the first instance, we call for an immediate suspension of all hostilities and an immediate end to the blockade of Gaza. Gaza must not be cut off from food, medicine, fuel and humanitarian supplies, its power supply must be resumed, and critical health, water and other infrastructure must be restored immediately.

We also call for an end to the illegal occupation of Palestinian land and an end to apartheid and ethnic cleansing. As unionists, we stand in solidarity with all people who support the cause of peace, equality and justice for Palestinians, Israelis, and everyone in the Middle East.

We support the demonstrations around Australia for Palestine, and call on governments and police authorities to facilitate them. The union movement will never accept political restrictions on the right to protest, which is fundamental to democracy.

2 · 13 · 256

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12

We all have an obligation to respond, since that violence is enabled by Western governments, including ours.

There will never be justice for working people in this country from a government that cannot even bring itself to call for a ceasefire in a genocide.

1 · 1 · 13 · 201

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
That's where their opportunism and lack of principle has led them: straight into support for a genocide. Shame on Penny Wong, and shame on Anthony Albanese. They are truly the hollow woman and the hollow man.
2 · 14 · 232

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
We always hear about Albo the underdog. Albo the child of a single mum. What we'll remember is Albanese the genocide supporter.
2 · 12 · 195

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
In particular, we're here today to tell Albanese and the whole of the political establishment that Israeli shipping lines are not welcome in Port Botany. The waterfront has always been a key site where political conflict gets played out in Australia, and it is again today.
1 · 11 · 199

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Here at the port we're subject to the totalitarian anti-protest laws that Albo and Wong's party in NSW put in place earlier in the year precisely to stop people like us from standing up for what is right, whether it's protecting the environment or protesting against a genocide.
1 · 9 · 189

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Those laws are supposed to protect the Australian economy – that's the same economy that is increasing its arms manufacturing component, including to Israel, that has seen the largest fall in living standards of any advanced economy over the past year.
1 · 9 · 179

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
Our government is giving its green light to Israel to unleash a reign of terror over Gaza:
1 · 10 · 174

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
the bombing of hospitals and bakeries and generators and solar panels and refugee camps, the destruction of half of Gaza's housing, the sudden employment of 390 000 Palestinians since the start of the war, the murder of almost 11000 Palestinians in a sickening genocidal spree.
4 · 1 · 10 · 527

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 12
That same government is busy tightening the screws on ordinary people here, and wants to prevent us from asserting that genocide is wrong.

4 1 10 527

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That same government is busy tightening the screws on ordinary people here, and wants to prevent us from asserting that genocide is wrong.

2 1 9 166

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
The water just out there goes all the way to Gaza and it links ordinary people here to ordinary people there.

But there's another more important link between us and Gazans: our determination for justice, which joins us in a bond of solidarity with Palestinians.

1 8 167

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
As union members, we're here to say that we stand alongside the Palestinians of Gaza, of the West Bank and the diaspora. Touch one, touch all.

1 9 168

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That's why there's no room for genocide apologia in our unions.

That's why there is no room for warmongering in our unions.

1 8 158

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
That's why there is no room for racism, for settler-colonialism, for apartheid in our unions, and there is no room for Zionism in our unions.

3 2 8 478

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
I encourage every union member here to get involved with Trade Unionists for Palestine by signing our petition.

docs.google.com
Union members in solidarity with Palestine
In accordance with the union movement's values of peace, justice and solidarity with working people, ...

2 10 461

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
We will do everything we can to harness the power of the labour movement to end this government's support for Netanyahu and the genocidal madness of the Israel state, until there is equality for everyone in historic Palestine from the river to the sea.

3 4 13 645

316

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12
Sydney out again for the fifth week in a row. United with Palestine.
Ceasefire now.
0:14
61
390
1.7K
38K

317

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 12

Not really clear from the photo, but central Sydney is choked with the protest march calling for a ceasefire and a free Palestine. There are literally too many of us for the streets to hold.

219 239 984 39K

318

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 13

I had the immense honour to speak at the national march for Palestine in London on 11/11.

800,000 people marched in joint struggle & solidarity with the Palestinian people & called for an end to the genocide in Gaza.

It was a historic moment. The struggle continues

62 479 1.1K 47K

319

Nick Riemer reposted

anthroboycott @anthroboycott · Nov 13

In July, our association took a clear stand in support of the academic boycott of complicit Israeli institutions and voted to endorse BDS. 1/9

6 51 136 24K

320

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 13

Just spotted in Glebe. Well done whoever's responsible for this.

75 116 366 13K

321

Nick Riemer reposted

Faten Sourani فاتن الصوراني @FatenSourani · Nov 13

The Israelis killed my 5-year-old niece the most beautiful Rahaf Alsaqqa and my very kind and one in a million brother-in-law Mohammed Alsaqqa today. A tank targeted them while they were trying to escape south through "the safe corridor."

Keep my sister Hala in your prayers.

310 14K 30K 744K

322

Nick Riemer reposted

Amal أمل @amalfalastini · Nov 13

Students for palestine are going on a convoy to Canberra on Wednesday to protest the governments support of the genocide in Gaza. We have an overwhelming response and need some crowdfunding to partially fund our busses. Please support us ( link below)

44 213 372 22K

323

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 13

I can't believe that 11,000 +Palestinians have been carpet bombed, massacred, subject to genocide and @PatsKarvelas has made @iamthenas the bad guy. @abcqanda did you get the talking points from the lobby?

86 192 638 22K

324

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 14

Solidarity and congratulations to @iamthenas for his advocacy on QandA last night in the face of the intense onslaught he was subject to. Chilling to see the support for vicious war crimes and ongoing colonialism platformed by the national broadcaster.

58 70 265 10K

325

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 14

Last night's QandA: guilt by association, muck-raking, absurd charges about what slogans might (but do not) mean are Zionists' only arguments. They support actual genocidal violence and colonisation, yet we're meant to condemn the Palestinian calling for peace and equality.

18 19 83 2.7K

326

Nick Riemer reposted
TIMES OF GAZA @Timesofgaza · Nov 14
Central Gaza Strip.
0:09
10K
11K
274K

327

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 15

Sharing my response to some very ugly attacks on Palestine solidarity and some shocking apologia for genocide from colleagues on internal Sydney University email and social media. Clearly indicates the character of the two sides in this 'debate'.

35 56 156 14K

328

Nick Riemer reposted

Maha Hussaini @MahaGaza · Nov 15

Bodies pile up in the open as al-Shifa Hospital in #Gaza becomes a no-go zone for patients

My reporting on the ground for @MiddleEastEye

6 108 107 6.2K

329

Nick Riemer reposted

IndigenousX @IndigenousX · Nov 15

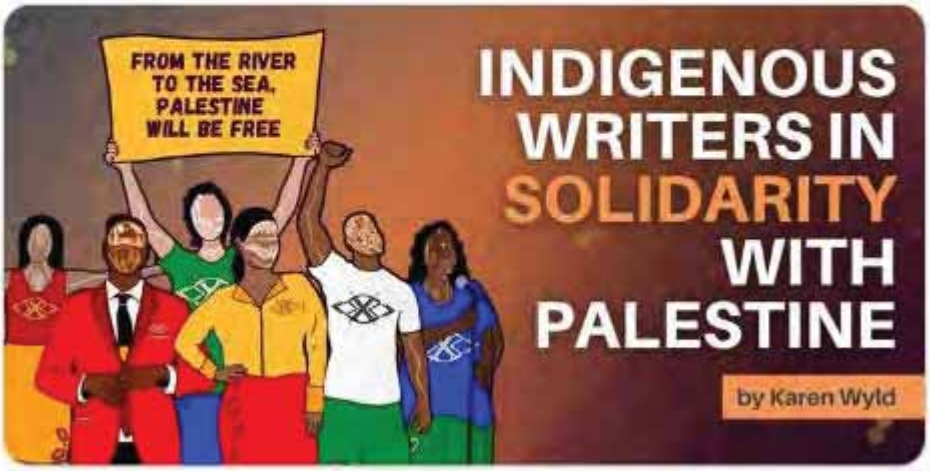
Blak solidarity with Palestinian people is powerful, writes Karen Wyld. In this latest IX piece, @1KarenWyld reflects on friendships and solidarity between Blak and Palestinian writers, and mutual support for Indigenous sovereignty and self-determination.
com.pulse.ly/mzne8rwlye



5 87 129 10K

330

Nick Riemer reposted

Laboratoire Histoire des théories linguistiqu @LaboratoireHT · Nov 15

Les 22 et 23 novembre se tiendront les Assises de la Recherche de la Sorbonne Nouvelle.
Alejandro Diaz Villalba, Pierre-Yves Testenoire et Julie Marsault y participent. N'hésitez pas à venir les écouter ! univ-paris3.fr/les-assises-de...

2 3 476

331

Nick Riemer reposted

Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 15

12 hours of invasion and no signs of any of Hamas's tunnels or headquarters.

Unless Israel is creating the scene that might be released later.

> Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 15
> Breaking: Israel is planning an invasion of the Shifa hospital.
> -No media coverage
> -No other party attendance
> -No UN or Red Cross presence
> ...
> Show more

8 423 574 33K

332

Nick Riemer reposted

Samah Sabawi @gazaheart · Nov 14

Kareem is still denied the dignity of burial. It is almost three days now since he was killed. Let's at least give him the dignity of sharing his story. Thanks @NabilAlNashar and @ahmedyussuf10 for writing this heartbreaking story. #Gaza

14 205 263 27K

333

Nick Riemer reposted

Caitlin Cassidy @caitecassidy · Nov 15

Australia's research sector chases rankings over quality and is 'not fit for purpose', chief scientist says

3 28 43 9.5K

334

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 14

I will remember this for a long time from Marcia Langton!!! Horrific genocide apologist — Israel is bombing hospitals and committing genocide and Langton regurgitates Zionist talking points

94 167 623 34K

335

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 16

Excellent and very much needed initiative.

> Lia @lia_perkinss · Nov 16
>
> Replying to @RandaAFattah @NickReimer1 and 3 others
>
> Students are taking action against the ABC's complicity in genocide of Palestinians, tomorrow, outside the ABC offices in sydney. All welcome and please share widely

47 119 353 20K

336

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 16

It's past time for a register of anti-Palestinian racism.

This is entirely unacceptable.

Australian Palestinian belong on this continent and have every right to have political agency.

We're not going anywhere!

@AlboMP ...
Show more

> Declassified Australia @DeclassifiedAus · Nov 16
>
> It's inconceivable that any mainstream journalist in Australia would write this kind of diatribe against a Jewish leader.
> This fits into a long history of Palestinians being smeared across the western world:

OPINION 13

Andrew Bolt

Palestinian 'voice' fails to condemn Hamas acts

36 165 551 26K

337

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 16

Congrats to the MEAA members making this powerful statement on the ABC's appalling coverage of Palestine & "the racist treatment of Nasser Mashni, President of the Australia Palestine Advocacy Network, on ABC's Q+A episode on Monday 13 November by host Patricia Karvelas"

MEAA Members for Palestine @meaa4palestine · Nov 16

Today, we submitted a statement to @ABCTV regarding editorial integrity and Palestine coverage, co-signed by @unions4palestin.
We stand with media comrades in their efforts to change and improve editorial policy and reporting.
Read the full statement via link in bio.

MEAA Members in solidarity with Palestine

...suggesting that the massacre of more than 11,000 Palestinians is debatable and that it may be possible to justify the direct attack of 16 hospitals, the killing of 192 health workers, 102 UN workers and 42 journalists (Committee to Protecting Journalists), as well as cutting off food, fuel and water to millions of people.

...We condemn the silencing of those opposed to Israel's genocidal practices by forcing them to condemn Hamas instead. Journalism must be able to do more than reflect state policy.

...We cannot allow our colleagues to compromise their professional ethics by becoming stenographers to any state violence.

1 · 8 · 25 · 1.9K

338

Nick Riemer reposted

Lia @lia_perkinss · Nov 16

Replying to @RandaAFattah @NickReimer1 and 3 others

Students are taking action against the ABC's complicity in genocide of Palestinians, tomorrow, outside the ABC offices in sydney. All welcome and please share widely

31 71 132 20K

339

Nick Riemer reposted

Hebh Jamal @hebh_jamal · Nov 17

Israel bombed my favourite place in Gaza today. The ancient Great Mosque of Gaza, Mesjid Omar built in 1344.

This photo taken last yr. I can't imagine the ruins that exist there now. How many murdered here because of the air strikes. Will we ever find out for sure?

523 16K 34K 5.1M

340

Nick Riemer reposted
Marcus Banks @MarcusANBanks · Nov 17
Replying to @NickReimer1
Over 500 Australian journalists in the Media, Entertainment and Arts Alliance union stand in solidarity with Palestine.
docs.google.com
MEAA members in solidarity with Palestine
We, the undersigned Media, Entertainment and Arts Alliance members, condemn the Australian ...
8
6
14
970

341

Nick Riemer reposted
Dr Kathryn Daley @Kat_Daley · Nov 14
Attn: Australian academics!: Our super fund @UniSuperNews holds shares in Elbit, whose main business is to supply artillery to the Israeli defence force.
If you would like to make a complaint and demand divestment, here is the link:
unisuper.com.au
Complaints
9
194
244
49K

342

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 17

MEDIA RELEASE: PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST NEXT ZIM VESSEL AT PORT BOTANY. Share!

4 RELEASE: PALESTINE SUPPORTERS TO PROTEST AGAINST NE
ESSEL AT PORT BOTANY
23
mediate release

ine supporters are preparing to demonstrate against the Israeli ng line ZIM on its next call at Port Botany. The protest will be the st at the port, in a series of actions targeting ZIM in Sydney and urne. The Melbourne protest on November 9 forced trucks carryi ontainers to turn around.

the oldest and largest shipping company in Israel and has a long y of support for war crimes and ethic cleansing against Palestinia tober 8, ZIM's CEO, Eli Glickman, a former Israeli SEAL commandi company's ships at the disposal of the Israeli Ministry of Defenc

Israel's current genocidal assault on Gaza now near the end of its ike protest is a direct response to appeals for worldwide solidarit Palestinian unions, and to the request from Palestinian Civil Socien ch companies complicit with Israel's crimes against Palestinians as abel BDS (Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions) campaign.

alestinian General Federation of Trade Unions (PGFTU) and a larg
on of all major Palestinian unions and professional associations ha l on trade unions and workers worldwide to boycott Israel and sses that support its apartheid regime. ZIM vessels have been ed by 'block the boat protests' in many ports around the world.

Port Botany protest is organised by Palestine Justice Movement Syan supported by the Sydney Branch of the Maritime Union of Australia. It lorsed by Trade Unionists for Palestine, as well as by United Australian ictorian Workers, and BDS Australia. Further endorsing organisations w announced shortly.

ment attributable to Ahmed Abadla, Palestine Justice Movement key: 'Our previous protests in Sydney and Melbourne have already for l to alter its schedules. We intend to continue protesting for as long as s visit Sydney. ZIM has Palestinian blood on its hands, just as much as ry government official who refuses to support a complete ceasefire do peacefully, both the Albanese government and the Minns government s in NSW are supporting Israel's genocidal war, and refusing to back c a ceasefire. There's no place for ZIM in Port Botany, or for any other pany that supports Apartheid Israel's war-crimes. Israel must be ctioned for its crimes. If our elected representatives won't act - we wi continuing our actions that aim at driving ZIM out of Port Botany."

ment attributable to Paul Keating, Secretary: Maritime Union of Austra ney Branch: "We will always defend the community's right to stand up fight for what is right. These community-led actions have for decades isted movements fighting for justice including an end to Apartheid Sou ca, against unjust wars in Vietnam, Afghanistan and Iraq and innumera es, against nuclear war, for First Nations rights, women's rights, worke ts amongst others and act as bulwarks against discrimination, war and ironmental destruction"

ntact: info.pjms@gmail.com

4 · 72 · 126 · 7.7K

343

Nick Riemer reposted

ASU members for Palestine @asu4palestine · Nov 17

Happening now at Central Station in Sydney. Join us!

53 148 537 18K

344

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 18

Replying to @omarsakrpoet

Sobbing. Every day. If you can't bring yourself to oppose this evil, you are my enemy. It is as simple as that. The very very least you can do is show up to protest this heartless monstrosity. Boycott and divest from any company supporting it. Inundate your reps! Please

1 5 20 1.1K

345

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 17
Advocacy, lobbying and campaigning led by Palestinians in Australia towards self-determination and autonomy is urgent now more than ever. Please help us fund critical advocacy work. @nazeem_hussain @SaraSalehTweets apan.org.au/help-apan-grow/www.apan.org.au/help-apan-grow
HELP APAN GROW
24
127
225
19K

346

Nick Riemer reposted

Omar Sakr @omarsakrpoet · Nov 18

Tomorrow in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Perth: protest. If you're able to—go be heard, I beg you. If I hadn't fractured my spine this week, I would be there. Raise your voices!

33 387 704 36K

347

Nick Riemer reposted

Scheherazade Bloul @scherrybloul · Nov 20

Activists have occupied the Thales Australia office in Naarm/Melbourne this morning. At about 10.30am, activists stormed the building to call for an end to Australian complicity in Israel's genocidal assault on Gaza.

58 531 1.1K 54K

348

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

As is reported here, we're considering all our options to pursue a just outcome for Niko. @Sydney_Uni has made a mockery of its claims to be committed to staff with disabilities.

2 7 29 1.4K

349

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

Lots of traffic honking in support of a free Palestine outside Sydney University

> Sydney Staff for BDS @sydneystaff4bds · Nov 20
> Ceasefire Now, Stop the Genocide, Free Palestine and BDS banner drop over Parramatta Rd happening now!

58 47 297 9.4K

350-351

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

Three police just turned up at our banner drop to tell us they'd 'received complaints' about our 'Ceasefire Now' and other banners, and that they had to come down. The @nswpolice are obstructing political expression and abetting a genocide.

353 483 1.2K 103K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 20

Their justification was about as flimsy as they come: the banner 'might' cause offence and 'might incite violence', so, of course, they were intervening 'for our own protection'.

25 14 105 4.4K

352

Nick Riemer reposted

Charandev Singh @CharandevSingh · Nov 20

"With the support of the Aboriginal community in Victoria, Western Australia and across the country, we will fight for justice for our Jeffrey."

Mr Winmar became the third Aboriginal death in custody in the last month in Australia.

5 55 70 4.4K

353

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 21

ACTION ALERT – Our protest against ZIM shipping in Botany is 6pm TONIGHT (Tuesday Nov 21).

The ZIM vessel Calandra is in port. Join us at the Foreshore Rd boat ramp to say ZIM out of Port Botany, stop the genocide in Gaza and free Palestine. for Media release, map & details.

8 150 147 29K

354

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 20

This is a disgrace and absolute overreach by the NSW Police - who have been empowered by the shameful actions of the NSW Premier who from his first act of lighting up the opera house in blue and white has failed to respect human rights

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 20
>
> Three police just turned up at our banner drop to tell us they'd 'received complaints' about our 'Ceasefire Now' and other banners, and that they had to come down. The @nswpolice are obstructing political expression and abetting a genocide.
>
>
>
>
> 216 203 610 34K

355

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 21
This evening. ZIM not welcome in Port Botany. Hoping to see many hundreds of people there to stand against genocide and its enablers.
STOP THE GENOCIDE IN GAZA NOW!
BOYCOTT APARTHEID ISRAEL
PROTEST TO BLOCK THE BOAT
ZIM SHIPPING OUT OF PORT BOTANY
6PM TUESDAY 21 NOV
FORESHORE RD BOAT RAMP, PORT BOTANY
29
45
95
4.3K

356

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 21

The police are blocking the port entrance, so we're having a little sit-in.
Free Palestine.

115 146 550 18K

357

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 21

Police line blocking the port entrance. The police are doing our job for us.

11 34 95 3.8K

| | |
|---|---|
| 358 | Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22People arrested at the Block the Boat Palestine protest at the port last night have been charged under the ALP's harsh new anti-protest laws. Everyone who claims to stand on the side of progess but still supports that bankrupt party needs to take a long, hard look at themselves.130 459 1K 62K |
| 359-360 | Nick Riemer repostedPalestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22Replying to @PalestineRisingOur peaceful, non-violent boycott campaigns and protests will continue against all companies complicit with apartheid Israel in Australia. Join us!4 10 39 997Nick Riemer repostedPalestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22PJMS condemns the arrests and shocking police violence last night. In charging protesters under the new antiprotest laws, the ALP, aided by a complicit media, is colluding with genocide and accelerating the dangerous repressive turn in politics. We will not be intimidated.7 55 128 12K |

361

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22

That @ClareONeilMP finds protesters 'despicable' for fictional 'violence' against police, but is silent on the police violence itself and the genocide we were protesting against, says all we need to know about her and her party: reactionary, opportunistic, unprincipled, complicit

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 22

I was speaking to 2 young guys after the protest last night who said, just wait till the footage gets out, this is going to look so bad for the police.

But of course @ClareONeilMP is out saying that the cops who ...
Show more

Home Affairs Minister Clare O'Neil told Channel Nine's Today that the protest activity "was utterly despicable" and she hated to see violence against the police.

"We've got law enforcement officials around the country who put on a uniform every day to try to keep your family safe and my family safe and to subject them to any form of violence is just utterly inexcusable," she said.

"We've got a bunch of people in our country who are feeling incredibly deeply about what's going on in the Middle East ... let's respect each other, understand the strong views and feelings in the community, but just calm down a bit."

20 101 176 9.2K

362

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22
Last night, Minns' police used totalitarian new laws against Palestine protesters and Inner West ALP councillors scotched a ceasefire motion. Meanwhile, ALP party faithful congratulated themselves on their progressivism at the Bowen dinner. A dangerous and sickening fantasy land.
The prime minister laid out the government's agenda, its legislation of climate targets, support of renewable energy projects and electric vehicles.
He said the biggest economic transformation since the industrial revolution was underway.
"That's why Australia needs Labor – the one party that has never feared the future, but looked to it with optimism and clear eyes," he said.
Taking aim at Opposition Leader Peter Dutton, Mr Albanese slammed the Queensland MP for claiming to be a conservative, while trying to "trash our institutions".
15
35
93
3.5K

363

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22
Joint Statement: Civil Rights Groups Condemn Police Repression of Port Botany Rally nswccl.org.au/joint_statemen... via @NSWCCL
nswccl.org.au
Joint Statement: Civil Rights Groups Condemn Police Repression of Port Botany Rally
2
31
38
3.6K

364

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Nov 22
Brief media statement on last night's protest at Port Botany.
atement on yesterday's Port Botany protest against aeli shipping line ZIM
e following comments can be attributed to Ahmed Abadi
MS spokesperson:
/e congratulate the 500 justice-supporters who came at nost no notice to our peaceful protest and sit-in at the itchison terminal last night to say no to ZIM – a known nsporter of deadly armaments.
lestine Justice Movement Sydney has taken a strong an wavering stance against the Israeli war machine, which s undertaken relentless carpet bombing on Gaza over th
t 47 days, resulting in the massacre of over 13,000 zans, including over 5,500 children. We caused hours of lays to port operations, after a previous major delay to th
M vessel Calandra
/e condemn the arrests and police violence to which rotesters were subject. In charging protesters under the new nti-protest laws, the ALP, aided by a complicit media, is olluding with genocide and accelerating the dangerous epressive turn in politics. We will not be intimidated.
Jur peaceful, non-violent boycott campaigns and protests wil ontinue against all companies complicit with apartheid Israel n Australia.
he media play an integral role, as does social media, in orming the public. As well as calling on the federal overnment to end its support for Israeli crimes and the state overnment to end its repression of protest, we call on ournalists not to be selective or complicit in their coverage of e issues in Gaza and Palestine more generally.
/e will not stop until justice is achieved for the Palestinians om the Jordan River to the Mediterranean sea." 11
45
64
4.2K

365

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22
Not interested in hearing any more from ALP members who voted "against" the cease-fire motion at Inner West Council last night about how strongly they actually support a cease-fire.
Pip Hinman @PipHinman · Nov 22
My short piece for @greenleftonline on Labor councillors' failure to support a ceasefire at last night's @IWCouncil Given today's news about a 'pause', it is even more damning of a party that once stood up for Palestine greenleft.org.au/content/inner-...
5
10
55
2.5K

366

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22

Excellent statement from @jennyleong and @SueHigginson_ on the disgraceful response to yesterday's protest from Minns's political police. Thank you Jenny and Sue. No ambiguity what side The Greens are on.

> Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 22
>
> Joint statement with Greens NSW Justice spokesperson @SueHigginson_ on the shameful police crackdown on peaceful pro-Palestinian protestors at Port Botany.
>
> Solidarity with all who took peaceful action last night: thank you for ...
> Show more
>
> PRO-PALESTINIAN PROTESTORS IN PORT BOTANY
>
> Last night hundreds of pro-Palestinian trade unionists, activists and community members gathered in Port Botany to protest the unloading of a vessel owned by the Israeli shipping line ZIM. The peaceful sit-in was the latest in seven weeks of community actions in support of Palestine, where more than 13,000 people have been killed and thousands more injured or missing as a result of unfettered, genocidal military aggression by the Israeli Defence Force.
>
> Shamefully, this peaceful act of protest was met with unprovoked and unbridled aggression at the hands of the NSW Police Force. Mounted Police were deployed into the crowd - which included children and elderly Palestinian community members - to forcibly disperse those exercising their rights to free assembly and speech. What ensued was a crowd crush and panic that saw multiple protestors injured and others left scrambling for their immediate safety. Footage and images of the action show police violently handling people and pulling them from the crowd.
>
> Violence against peaceful protestors can never be justified - and must never be tolerated. Yet rather than condemn this aggression the Minister for Police has this morning shamefully lauded it, saying: "The NSW Police set parameters and they did a great job keeping our streets safe last night."
>
> The right to assemble and peacefully protest is a core tenet of any functional democracy that must be cherished and protected. The draconian anti-protest laws that were supported by the NSW Labor and Liberal parties threaten this right and impose harsh penalties including up to two years' imprisonment for peaceful protest. We understand that twenty-three people at last night's action have been arrested and charged under these laws.
>
> The Greens stand in solidarity with all those who took peaceful action at Port Botany last night and thank them for their courage and moral clarity in the face of genocide and Israel's violent occupation in Palestine. We stand with the millions rising up across the globe in solidarity with Palestine and declare that business as usual cannot continue while the situation in Gaza deteriorates, aided and abetted by Western governments including our own. Free Palestine. Ceasefire now.

3 16 50 2.1K

| | |
|---|---|
| | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22Noticeably higher number of cars honking for a free Palestine at our banner drop today. 105 133 650 17K |
| 367 | Nick Riemer repostedShona (@pommedeguerre.bsky.social) @pomelodeguerre · Nov 22Replying to @NickRiemer1Thanks to all of you. I have a child studying at USyd, and you make me glad. I know this isn't an easy stand to take, and I appreciate you making it clear that it should be.10 2 23 995 |
| 368 | Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 22Some good reporting here by @jenniferluu_ on the unacceptable crack-down on pro-Palestinian speech at @Sydney_Uni. Excellent work by Maeve Larkins and other students defending the university as a place of critique.protect-au.mimecast.com/s/0ATUC81V0PTX...3 7 12 916 |

369

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 23

Much as I'd have preferred my book on the academic boycott never to have been necessary, I'm looking forward to discussing it and to hearing ideas about Palestine solidarity in universities on Friday. 10am GMT, 9pm Sydney/Melbourne/Canberra.

> Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Nov 20
>
> This Friday 24th of November at 10am GMT the @EdinburghPIR Middle East Research group and @CRITIQUE_CENTRE will host @NickReimer1 for a timely conversation on academic boycotts, justice and liberation in Palestine. The event will be online. Register here ...
>
> Show more

6 · 6 · 26 · 2.1K

370

Nick Riemer reposted

Michael Karadjis @mkaradjis · Nov 23

Was quite a show, watching that robotic row of Labour (and one allied Liberal) apparacheks vote down the simple call for a ceasefire (ie, just stop the slaughter, which says nothing of Israel's ongoing occupation), against the overwhelming will of the local community.

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 22
>
> Not interested in hearing any more from ALP members who voted against the cease-fire motion at Inner West Council last night about how strongly they actually support a cease-fire.
> twitter.com/PipHinman/stat...

2 · 5 · 461

371

Nick Riemer reposted

Nabil Iqbal @nblqbl · Nov 2

I can't stop thinking, so I'm writing something.

This is about the physics students of Gaza. 1/N

86 8.4K 20K 1.7M

372

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24

It's a time of reckoning for the Australian media. This is so deeply unethical. Even by their own standards of journalistic ethics - they continually fail. Protecting sources should be paramount always!!!

> Ben Pennings @BenPennings · Nov 24
>
> Three more climate protectors have been arrested on conspiracy charges due to the footage provided by the ABC to 4 Corners.
>
> "It is a betrayal of their sources, it is a betrayal of their story, and it is a betrayal of journalism."

ABC footage 'betrayal' leads to activist arrests

Disrupt Burrup Hub media adviser Jesse Noakes said the ABC's decision was a 'massive violation'. Picture: Paul Garvey

14 219 501 23K

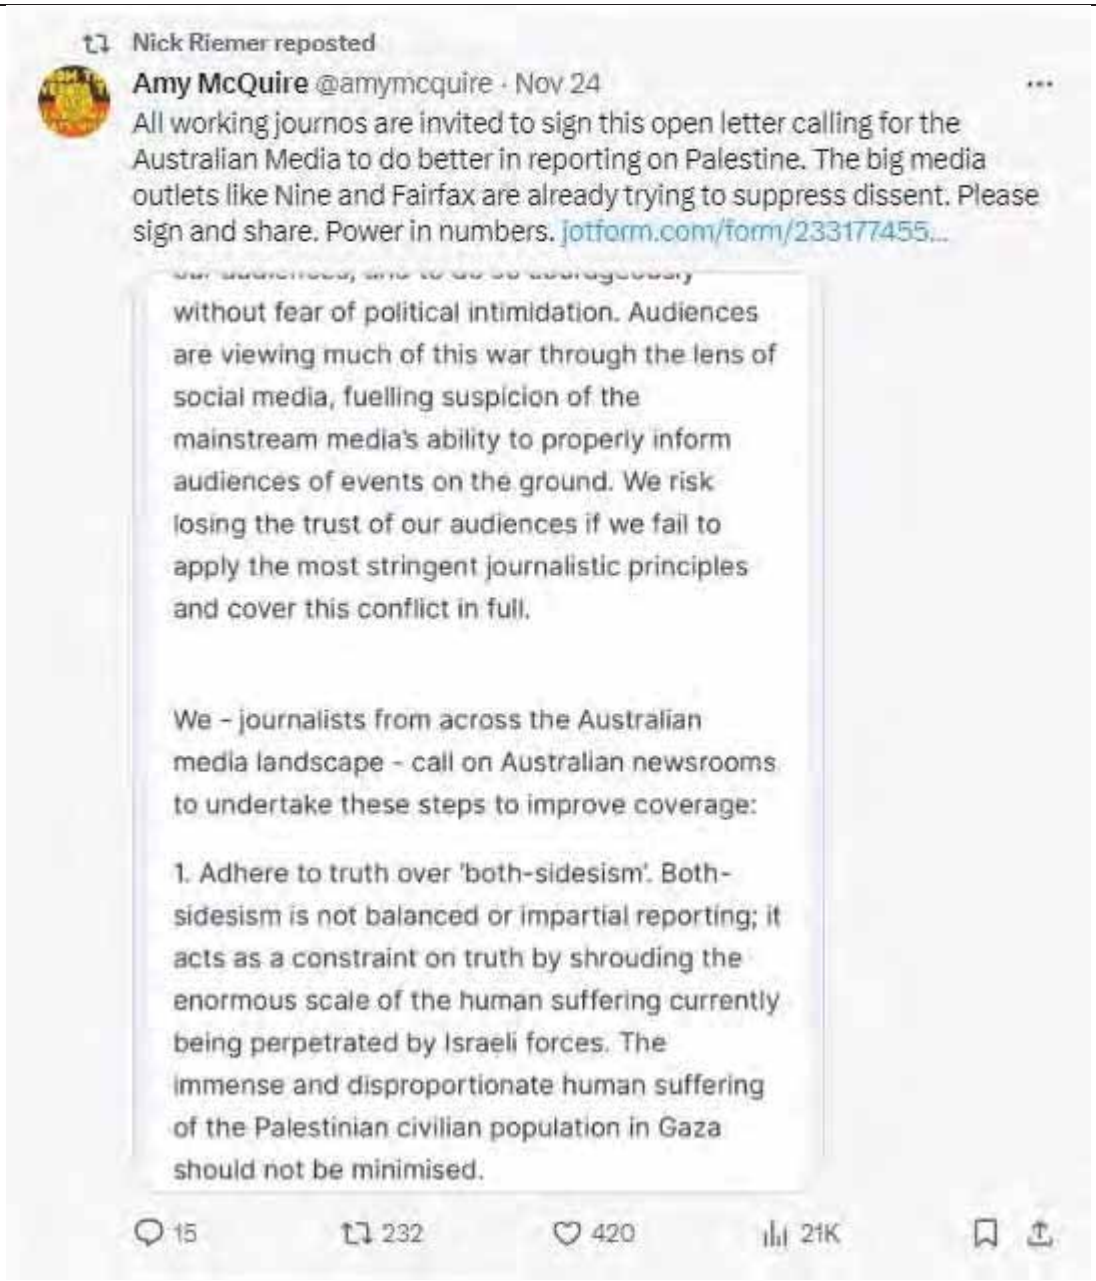
373

Nick Riemer reposted
Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 24
They plan to literally leave nothing standing in Gaza, making it uninhabitable. This is about taking over the majority of land in Gaza, its natural resources, forcibly expelling the majority, and concentrating the remaining on as little land as possible.
Jason Hickel @jasonhickel · Nov 24
BREAKING: Israeli officials have said that following the 4-day pause they will continue the bombardment of Gaza for "at least another two months".
It is critical to ramp up pressure on public officials everywhere to ...
Show more
2
139
208
12K

374

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 24
Next Friday evening: End Australia's complicity with Israel – Free Gaza – Free Palestine. Called by Trade Unionists for Palestine.
JOIN A FORTNIGHT OF UNION ACTION FOR PALESTINE
RALLY OUTSIDE NSW PARLIAMENT
FRIDAY 1 DEC 5:30PM
TELL CHRIS MINNS AND ALBANESE:
END AUSTRALIA'S COMPLICITY - FREE GAZA - FREE PALESTINE
• Drop the charges on Zim protestors
• Scrap the anti protest laws
• Stop the bombing
• End the seige on Gaza
11
32
55
3.4K

375



Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24

All working journos are invited to sign this open letter calling for the Australian Media to do better in reporting on Palestine. The big media outlets like Nine and Fairfax are already trying to suppress dissent. Please sign and share. Power in numbers. jotform.com/form/233177455...

without fear of political intimidation. Audiences are viewing much of this war through the lens of social media, fuelling suspicion of the mainstream media's ability to properly inform audiences of events on the ground. We risk losing the trust of our audiences if we fail to apply the most stringent journalistic principles and cover this conflict in full.

We - journalists from across the Australian media landscape - call on Australian newsrooms to undertake these steps to improve coverage:

1. Adhere to truth over 'both-sidesism'. Both-sidesism is not balanced or impartial reporting; it acts as a constraint on truth by shrouding the enormous scale of the human suffering currently being perpetrated by Israeli forces. The immense and disproportionate human suffering of the Palestinian civilian population in Gaza should not be minimised.

15 232 420 21K

376

Nick Riemer reposted

Padraic Gibson @paddygibson · Nov 24

Sydney Town Hall, school strike for Palestine:

"I stand here today as the grandson of a holocaust survivor to say that I stand against all genocides, and I will not let the state of Israel speak for all Jews"

442 5.7K 14K 356K

377

Nick Riemer reposted

Green Left @GreenLeftOnline · Nov 24

Hundreds of students rally at Town Hall in Gadi/Sydney for the #SchoolStrikeForPalestine

#CeasefireNow

13 95 148 4.7K

378

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 24

Unions shouldn't gratify supporters of genocide and apartheid. Solidarity means genuine action for Palestine, not placating Zionist members who threaten to leave if we do anything. During a genocide, there's no room for both-sideism or bare-minimum action. It should be simple.

14 48 155 4.6K

379

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · Nov 24

My article in The Age.

"This did not begin on October 7 – it is the latest chapter in a 75-year-long violent and bloody conflict tied to a settler-colonial process."

9 157 402 15K

380

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 24

In 1948, Israel expelled the majority of Palestinians from their homeland and shot them when they tried to return to their homes. It's now doing it again.

PALESTINE ONLINE @OnlinePalEng · Nov 24

BREAKING| Israeli occupation forces opened gunfire at displaced Palestinians on their way back home in northern Gaza.

60 2K 3.1K 149K

381

Nick Riemer reposted
MEAA @withMEAA · Nov 24
#MEAAmedia fully supports the rights of our members to stand up for the Code of Ethics. Any pressure or intimidation from managers to prevent workers from doing this is an overreach and an attack on both journalists' rights and the public's right to know.
theage.com.au
THE AGE
40
384
1.1K
77K

382

Nick Riemer reposted
Tahlia Stolarski @tahliastolarski · Nov 24
On Wednesday I was told to go to freo police station to be arrested under suspicion of conspiracy. 2 detectives from the counter terror unit were awaiting my arrival. They put me in handcuffs and I asked what changed as the incident I was being arrested for occurred months ago 1/
Sophie McNeill @Sophiemcneill · Nov 24
This is just shocking @abcnews
ABC footage 'betrayal' leads to arrests of three more climate activists
"One of the people arrested on Thursday, Tahlia Stolarski, said police ...
Show more
71
835
2.3K
440K

383

Nick Riemer reposted
Yumna @yumna_patel · Nov 25
These are the Palestinian "prisoners" being exchanged for Israeli hostages. They are also children. Children who were stolen from their homes. Children who just want to hug their mothers. These are the boys who the media won't even afford the dignity of being called children.
✨Mina✨ @lionne998 · Nov 25
My heart😭😭
0:36
1.6K
61K
134K
5.7M

384

Nick Riemer reposted
Jacob @murmurations24 · Nov 24
Thank-you for all your messages of support 🟡 I'm feeling refreshed and revitalised. I've got a lawyer, I've talked to representatives, I've coordinated my next steps, and I am not backing down. Long live Palestine!!
Jacob @murmurations24 · Nov 22
Last night I was punched in the face, kicked between the legs and thrown to the ground by cops at a peaceful pro-Palestine rally at Port Botany. I spent nine hours in an overcrowded cell, forced to curl up into a ball on the concrete floor due to the lack of space.
16
11
174
9.5K

385

Nick Riemer reposted

Rawan Arraf @rawanarraf · Nov 25

10 year old Mohammad was shot and killed in the chest by Israeli occupation forces yesterday. To the chest. Stop the murder of Palestinian children.

> Defense for Children @DCIPalestine · Nov 25
>
> Israeli forces shot and killed 10-year-old Mohammad Ibrahim Fahed Bahloul around 6:30 p.m. yesterday in Beita, south of Nablus in the northern occupied West Bank. ow.ly/URg450Qb8uH

258 387 15K

386

Nick Riemer reposted

BDS movement @BDSmovement · Nov 25

Barcelona cuts relations with Israel over its war crimes against Palestinians in Gaza becoming the first European city to do so.

Palestinians salute Barcelona and all the solidarity activists behind this brave decision.

#GazaGenocide

> ProuComplicitat #AturemElGenocidi @proucomplicitat · Nov 24
> Comunicat | La coalició Prou Complicitat amb Israel celebrem que @bcn_ajuntament es converteix en un dels primers ajuntaments d'Europa a trencar relacions amb Israel i emplaça a tots els municipis i institucions catalanes a que empreguin mesures similars.
> palestina.cat/comunicat-el-t...

30 1.5K 2.7K 93K

387

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Nov 25

And those who have been charged were charged in a military court with a conviction rate of over 99%. Free them all.

> Noura Erakat @4noura · Nov 25
> Apartheid Israel holds 7,000 Palestinians captive, 2,070 without charge or trial, 200 children, & 62 women. And is holding over 80 Palestinian corpses hostage.
>
> addameer.org...
> Show more

3 44 62 5.2K

388

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestinian Feminist Collective @PalFeminist · Nov 26
On the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, the Palestinian Feminist Collective invites you to #shutdowncolonialfeminism and say NO to genocide. Read our full statement palestinianfeministcollective.org/shut-down-colo...
SAT. NOVEMBER 25
THE PALESTINIAN FEMNIST COLLECTIVE
IS SHUTTING DOWN
COLONIAL
"FEMINISM"
7
462
931
74K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 26

Out for Palestine again today in Sydney

90 193 670 17K

389

Nick Riemer reposted

Green Left @GreenLeftOnline · Nov 26

More than 21 hours into the 30 hour blockade of the Newcastle coal port, last night's night flotilla was unprecedented.

Here are photos from the launch, on the water and support from the shore.

#RisingTideAus #PeoplesBlockade #NoNewCoal #RisingTide

1 14 19 971

390

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 27

Australian education in long-term decline due to poor curriculum, report says

3 3 4 986

391

Nick Riemer reposted
Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Nov 27
The largest university in Gaza seized by Israeli forces, transformed into a military base and site of soldier celebrations. #GazaGenocide
0:45
328
3.7K
4K
2.3M

392

Nick Riemer reposted

WACA @akaWACA · Nov 27

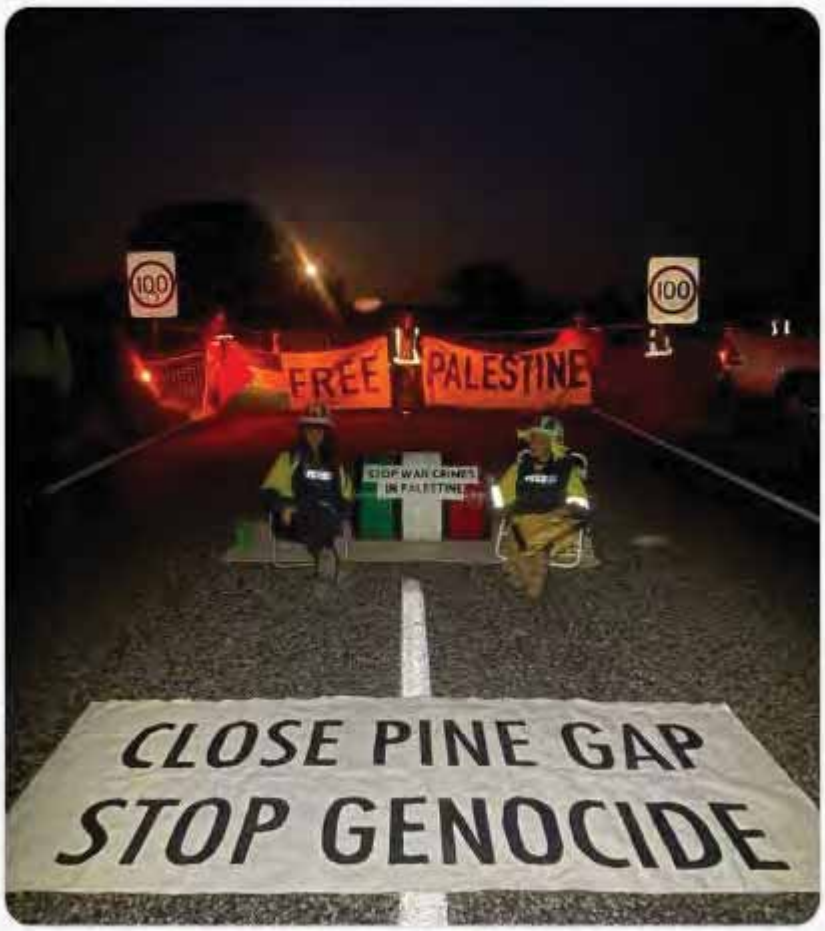
Free Palestine protesters block the road to #PineGap joint US AU satellite base in Mparntwe/ Alice Springs.
AU & US aid & abet Israeli crimes against Palestinian people using data relayed through Pine Gap.
Pine Gap must be closed. #ClosePineGap #StopArmingIsrael



34 444 799 56K

393

Nick Riemer reposted

Rachel Withers @rachelrwithers · Nov 24

Replying to @rachelrwithers

Oh would you look at that.

Current Age editor Pat Elligett has been on a trip to Israel too - as recently as June this year.

Yet to make Crikey's list @daanysaeed

crikey.com.au/2023/11/03/aus...

18 347 834 36K

394

Nick Riemer reposted

Amy McQuire @amymcquire · Nov 24

SMH/The Age executive editor Tory Maguire pictured in a group photo for the Australian Jewish News after her Zionist funded propaganda tour to Israel

Israel 'captured my heart and my mind'

EIGHT senior journalists, editors and producers shared their thoughts on Monday night on an intensive week-long study mission they'd recently been on to Israel and the West Bank.

By EVAN ZLATKIS

12 October 2017, 11:05 am

65 263 539 32K

395

Nick Riemer reposted

Sydney Review of Books @SydReviewBooks · Nov 24

A letter from the SRB team: 'There will be times [...] when the need for journalism can outstrip the need for the slower deliberative rhythms of critical practice. As commentators in the public sphere, critics are necessary, but by no means sufficient.'

5 23 2.7K

396

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 28

One reason for the proliferation of new managerial roles in universities is the considerable insecurity staff feel in strongly hierarchical and authoritarian systems. People feel very vulnerable to the arbitrary exercise of power, so they want insurance. Democratise the uni now.

3 5 22 999

397

Nick Riemer reposted

Dr. Yara Hawari د. يارا هواري @yarahawari · Nov 28

Since the start of this 4 day truce the Israeli regime has released 117 Palestinians from their jails & in that same time they've incarcerated 116 new Palestinian prisoners from areas across the occupied West Bank.

126 6.8K 10K 435K

398

Nick Riemer reposted

APAN @APAN4Palestine · Nov 28

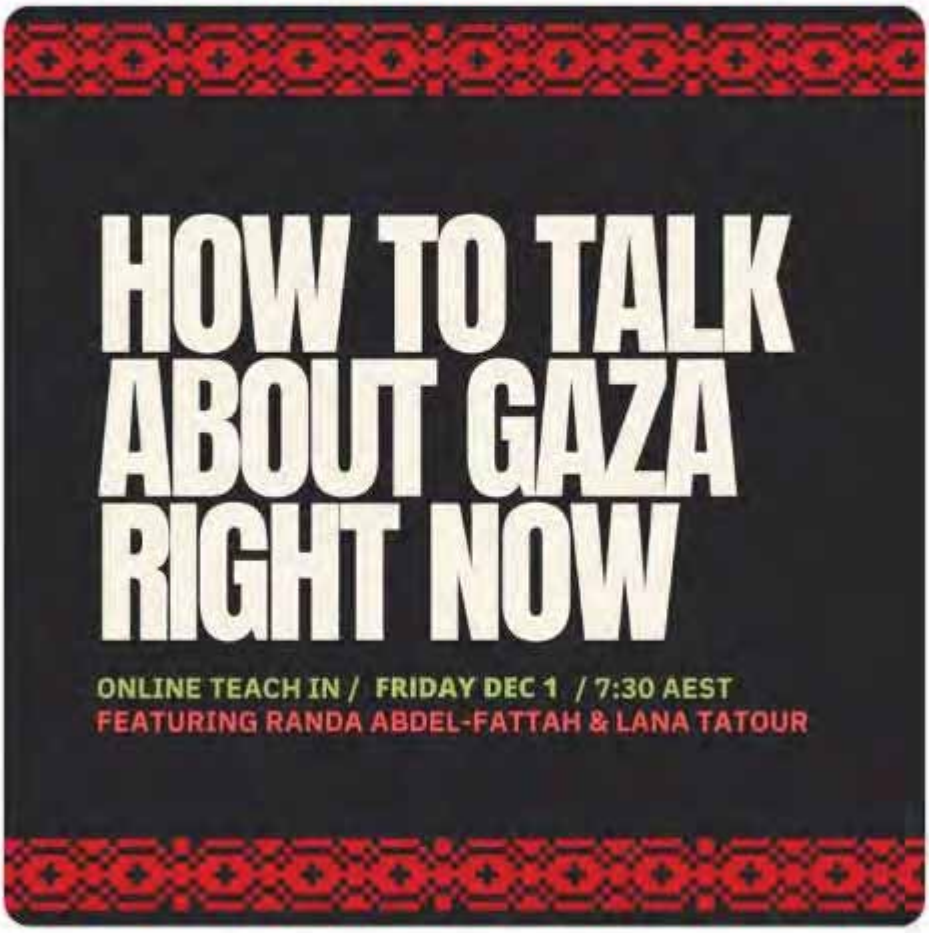
Register for this important teach-in "How To Talk About Gaza Right Now" this Friday evening featuring Dr @RandaAFattah and Dr @Lana_Tatour us06web.zoom.us/meeting/regist...



7 81 109 19K

399

Nick Riemer reposted

Sophie Fyfe @sophfyfe · Nov 28

Over 200 staff at USYD say Sydney Uni should cut its ties with Israel, full statement printed here.
sydneystaff4bds.org/?page_id=2614

38 30 93 7.6K

400

Nick Riemer reposted

Jessica Whyte @j_e_s_s_whyte · Nov 28

"the targeted destruction of Gaza's primary public library is a stark reminder that genocide is about more than just the premeditated mass extinguishing of human life; it's also about the calculated, and often vindictive, destruction of a people's culture, language, history"

> Literary Hub @lithub · Nov 28
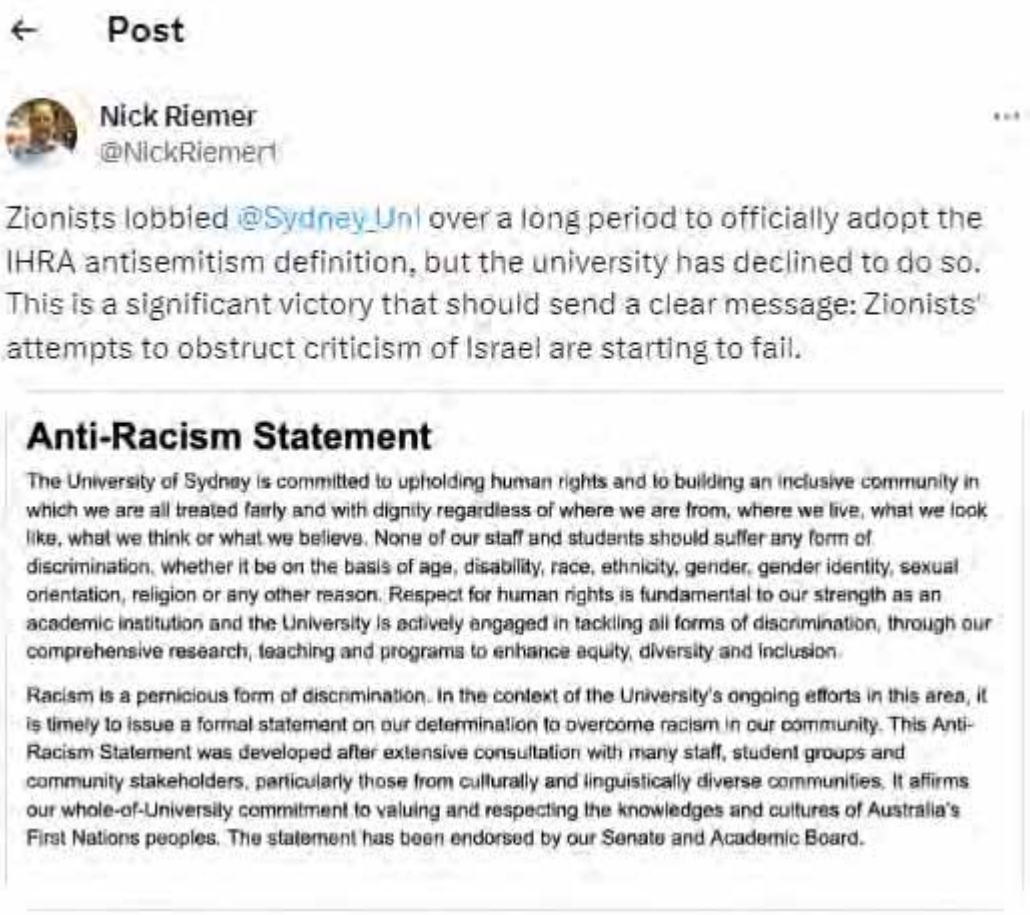
> Gaza's main public library has been destroyed. lithub.com/gazas-main-pub...

1 35 89 4.6K

401-405



← Post

Nick Riemer
@NickReimer1

Zionists lobbied @Sydney_Uni over a long period to officially adopt the IHRA antisemitism definition, but the university has declined to do so. This is a significant victory that should send a clear message: Zionists' attempts to obstruct criticism of Israel are starting to fail.

Anti-Racism Statement

The University of Sydney is committed to upholding human rights and to building an inclusive community in which we are all treated fairly and with dignity regardless of where we are from, where we live, what we look like, what we think or what we believe. None of our staff and students should suffer any form of discrimination, whether it be on the basis of age, disability, race, ethnicity, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, religion or any other reason. Respect for human rights is fundamental to our strength as an academic institution and the University is actively engaged in tackling all forms of discrimination, through our comprehensive research, teaching and programs to enhance equity, diversity and inclusion.

Racism is a pernicious form of discrimination. In the context of the University's ongoing efforts in this area, it is timely to issue a formal statement on our determination to overcome racism in our community. This Anti-Racism Statement was developed after extensive consultation with many staff, student groups and community stakeholders, particularly those from culturally and linguistically diverse communities. It affirms our whole-of-University commitment to valuing and respecting the knowledges and cultures of Australia's First Nations peoples. The statement has been endorsed by our Senate and Academic Board.

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

IHRA is not in the university's new antiracism statement, but is just one of several definitions of antisemitism referenced in the 'additional material' supplied for 'educative' (that is, not binding) purposes.

Additional resources

The Anti-Racism Statement supplements ongoing efforts by the University to promote a deeper understanding of racism and its harmful impacts.

The statement has been developed in collaboration with many students and staff, including the National Centre for Cultural Competence and representatives from the Mosaic Staff Network, the Sydney Law School, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff, Diversity and Inclusion, the Student Representative Council, the Sydney University Chinese Students' Association, the Australasian Union of Jewish Students, the Sydney University Muslim Association among many others.

The Statement was unanimously endorsed by the Academic Board, a decision affirmed by the University Senate on 28 July.

The Statement speaks to the University's aspiration to stand against racist ideas and practices within the University, but also our obligation to uphold the principle of freedom of speech and academic freedom.

As an academic institution, we have a responsibility to be open to diverse views and opinions and to foster a greater understanding of these issues in the community. The Statement offers a list of supplementary resources informed by the University community.

These additional materials serve as educative guides to understanding manifestations of racism and discrimination.

1 · 3 · 27 · 1.3K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

Congratulations to everyone involved in this win: the university's @NTEUnion branch, Palestinian and anti-Zionist Jewish staff and students, and others. Sydney joins the ANU, Aberdeen, Toronto and other institutions in refusing Zionist censorship through the IHRA.

5 · 14 · 70 · 2.1K

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Nov 28

It's now time for the university to honour its stated commitment to respecting and upholding human rights by cutting ties with Israeli apartheid through officially endorsing the institutional academic boycott of Israel.

8 · 7 · 51 · 1.3K

406

Nick Riemer reposted

NTEU UniMelb Branch @NTEUUniMelb · Nov 28

We (@NTEUUniMelb) along with more @NTEUVictoria chapters & Trade Unionists for #Palestine, are organising some events to mark the International Day of Solidarity for Palestine. More details on the events in the thread.

#FreePalestine #Solidarity #UnionPower #FromTheRiverToTheSea

APAN and 3 others

3 28 52 3K

407

Nick Riemer reposted

UnionistsforPalestine @unions4palestin · Nov 28

Some action from @NTEUNSW members today 28th Nov for the week of action for Palestine.

1. NTEU members across NSW met to discuss plans for action
2. Over 200 signatures call for Uni of Sydney to cut ties with Israel
3. Teachers take a photo to express solidarity with Palestinians

1 7 13 641

408

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 29
Rain, hail or shine, standing up for Palestine. Great to be joined by new Sydney Uni faces, and a second NTEU branch president this afternoon.
FREE PALESTINE
179
79
317
15K

409

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Nov 29

Good to join my @NTEUnion comrades at USyd for a banner drop today after a fantastic @AusSocContiPhil conference! This was part of the national week of action called by @unions4palestin and also coincided with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People 🇵🇸💜✊

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 29

Rain, hail or shine, standing up for Palestine. Great to be joined by new Sydney Uni faces, and a second NTEU branch president this afternoon.

1 3 46 2.7K

410

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 29

Institutions like @WZB_Berlin need to appreciate just how much discredit the intellectual irresponsibility and lack of political principle on display here bring on them.

John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Nov 29

today - after 25 years - I resigned from the WZB Berlin following absurd allegations of support for a 'terrorist organisation' and suggestions of my criminal liability; here's my open letter on guilt, terrorism, Israel and scholarship...

1 5 20 1.6K

411

Nick Riemer reposted

NTEU UniMelb Branch @NTEUUniMelb · Nov 29

Photo of our speakers, organisers & attendees together at the end of today's public forum for #International_Day_of_solidarity_with_Palestine_people! Huge thanks to Lachlan Batchelor (@apheda), @iamthenas (@APAN4Palestine) & Dana Alshaer (@Unimelb for Palestine) for your voices.

APAN and 4 others

5 16 30 4.1K

412

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30

Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

615 425 1.2K 100K

413

Nick Riemer reposted

Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Nov 30

I shall show my Palestinian father, an alumnus of Sydney University.

Beautiful and courageous.

Thank you

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30
>
> Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

88 96 526 24K

414

Nick Riemer reposted

Tzedek Collective @tzedekcollectiv · Nov 30

Jews are making their voices clearer and clearer. Zionism is not Judaism, and supporting 🍉 is not antisemitism.

13 147 342 13K

415

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Nov 30

Well done 🙌

> Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Nov 30
>
> Staff and students just raised the Palestinian flag raised on a vacant flagpole at @Sydney_Uni. The university leadership won't take the side of justice, but it's our university so we will. In solidarity with Palestinians for a durable ceasefire and against apartheid & genocide.

202 51 244 16K

416

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 1
Disgusting attack on a long-term Jewish supporter of Palestinian rights.

> Tzedek Collective @tzedekcollectiv · Dec 1
> You probably didn't hear about this.
>
> A Jewish professor was coward punched in the back of his head in a blatantly antisemitic hate crime.
>
> ...
> Show more

Prominent anti-Zionist campaigner Peter Slezak allegedly struck in Double Bay

Prominent anti-Zionist campaigner Peter Slezak says he was assaulted in Sydney's Double Bay by a stranger.

EXCLUSIVE
By JOANNA PANAGOPOULOS
6:58PM NOVEMBER 28, 2023

A prominent anti-Zionist campaigner claims he was struck in Sydney's Double Bay by a stranger who called him a "self-hating f..king Jew".

18 20 100 4.8K

417

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 1

Union members out to say stop the bombs, drop the anti-protest laws and the charges on the Block the Boat protesters, ZIM out of Botany and Free Palestine! ASU, NTEU, MUA, CFMEU, Nurses & Midwives, CPSU.

195 153 392 16K

418

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 2

CNN report claiming sexual violence on October 7 relied on non-credible witnesses, some with undisclosed ties to Israeli govt. A must read on why we should question any allegations coming from Israel and demand that evidence be credible.

36 378 663 25K

419

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 3
Out again for Palestine and against Albanese, Minns, Wong, Clare and all the other genocide-enablers.
UNIONISTS
FOR 251
338
981
32K

420

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 4

NSW Police forcibly remove a woman holding a baby from the opening of an inner west park because she's holding a sign saying 'Shame Albo 🍉"

This is NOT normal. This is NOT ok.

#ShameAlbo #CeasefireNow #FreePalestine

> Dylan Griffiths @DylanInnerWest · Dec 4
>
> Just went to the opening of the new Lewis Hermann Reserve. @AlboMP spoke and a woman, holding a baby, showed up with a protest sign about Palestine 🍉
> Police tried to forcibly remove her. A shameful response, real failure for politicians in attendance to be an ethical bystander

200 368 885 45K

421

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 5

Listen to @jennyleong on fire at Friday's demonstration outside State Parliament: powerful words for Palestine and against the repression of protest by police and politicians.

youtube.com
Jenny Leong MP speaks at Trade Unionists for Palest
Authorised by D. Hayden for The Greens NSW. 19a/1 Hordern Place Camperdown NSW 2050

14 19 52 3.7K

422

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Dec 4
Wednesday December 13, 6.30pm, Bankstown Arts Centre – join us for a forum on the struggle against apartheid Israel through boycott and direct action.
BOYCOTT APARTHEID ISRAEL
PALESTINE JUSTICE MOVEMENT SYDNEY
RESISTANCE THROUGH BOYCOTT -
A FORUM DELVING INTO THE GROWING MOVEMENT OF BOYCOTT IN THE FIGHT FOR THE LIBERATION OF PALESTINE
What role do Boycott & Direct Action, such as the Block the ZIM boat campaign, play in the movement against Apartheid Israel?
DR AHMAD QASEM
PJMS Representative
NICK RIEMER
Academic & Activist
PAUL KEATING
MUA Sydney Branch Secretary
FURTHER SPEAKERS TO BE ANNOUNCED
6
21
39
2K

423

Nick Riemer reposted

Eli Meyerhoff @EliMeye · Dec 6

Israel denies and destroys the conditions for Palestinian education. Another reason for the #AcademicBoycott of Israel.

> Stop The Wall @stopthewall · Dec 4
>
> The liberated prisoner Ahmed Al-Salaymeh was not allowed to return to school by a decision from the Israeli Ministry of Education not to return the Palestinian captive children to any school in Jerusalem.
>
> .
>
> ....
>
> Show more

2 10 11 1.8K

424

Nick Riemer reposted

Serkan Öztürk ❤️🇵🇸❤️ @SerkanTheWriter · Dec 4

What would Albo's single mum think of him getting loser cops to physically harass a mother and her baby just for holding a sign simply stating "Shame Albo"?

Albo is a fascist cosplaying as a working class good bloke. Biggest fraud and loser going ❤️

Palestine will be free 🇵🇸

> Dylan Griffiths @DylanInnerWest · Dec 4
>
> Just went to the opening of the new Lewis Hermann Reserve. @AlboMP spoke and a woman, holding a baby, showed up with a protest sign about Palestine 🍉
> Police tried to forcibly remove her. A shameful response, real failure for politicians in attendance to be an ethical bystander

14 51 137 5K

425

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 8

heartbreaking. We will never forget. We are eternally grateful for who you are and your dedication. Rest in power.

> Ramy Abdu| رامي عبده @RamAbdu · Dec 8
>
> The assassins targeted, went after and killed the voice of Gaza, one of its best academics, a human, my dear and precious friend dr. Refaat al-Ar'eer @itranslate123 @GazaWritesBack

5 52 172 6.6K

426

Nick Riemer reposted

Mohammed Sulaiman @GazaSubaltern · Dec 8

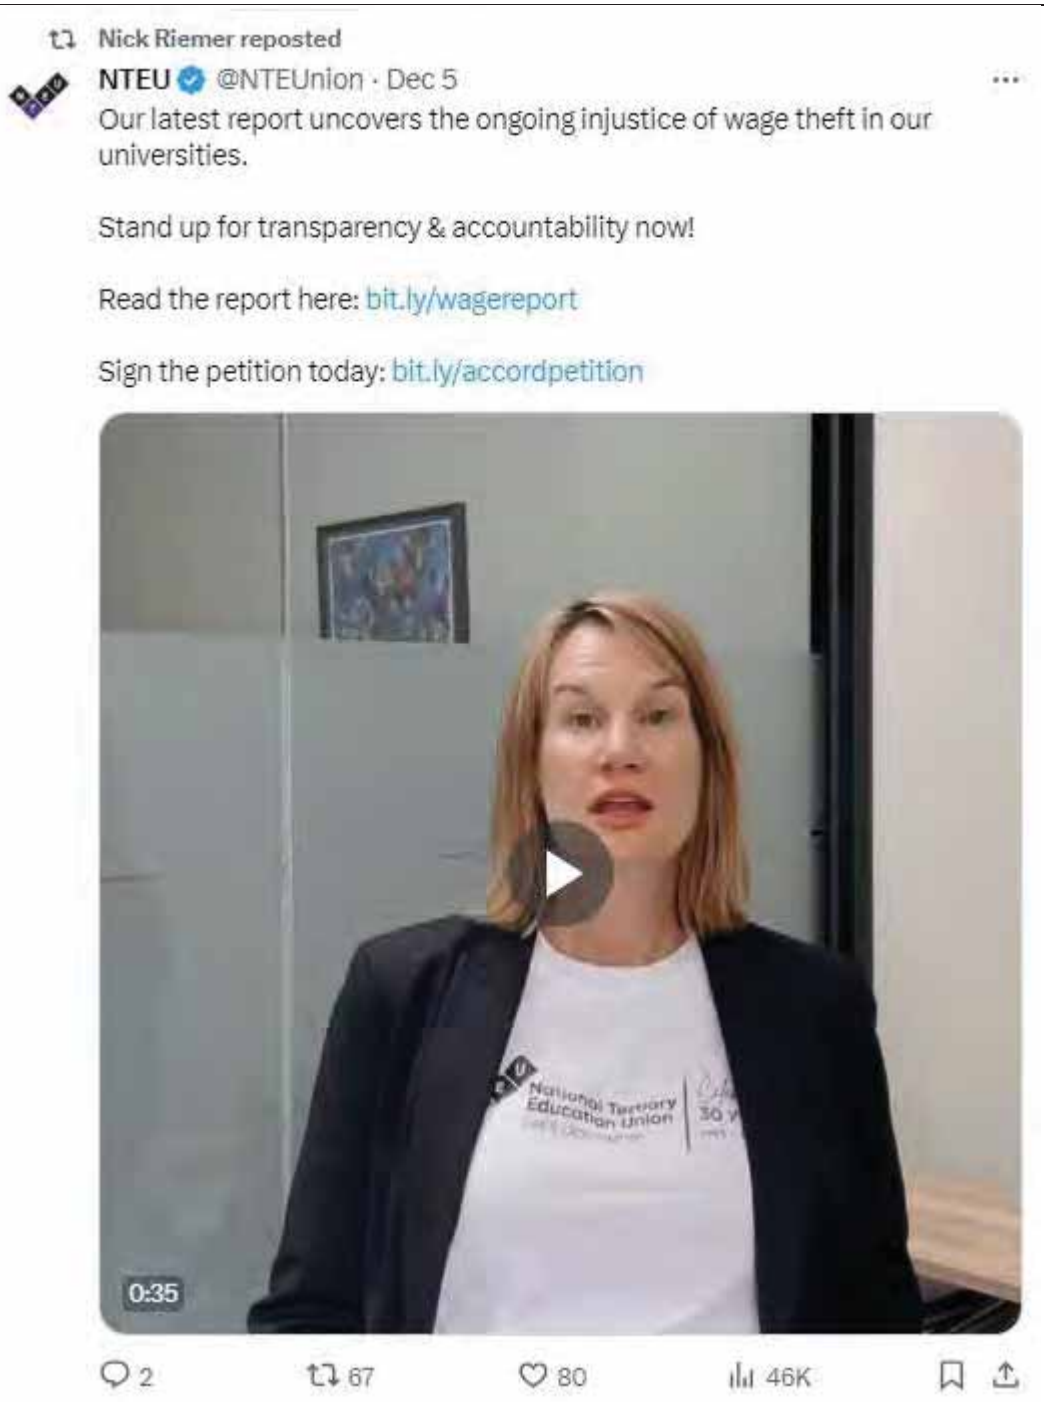
In my first class at university, Intro to English Literature, Refaat mentioned the word 'ideology' and asked in passing if we knew what it meant. I put my hand up and said hesitatingly, 'a way of thinking', he stood next to me, gave me a pat on the shoulder and said, 'Brilliant!'

30 954 3K 140K

427



Nick Riemer reposted
NTEU @NTEUnion · Dec 5
Our latest report uncovers the ongoing injustice of wage theft in our universities.
Stand up for transparency & accountability now!
Read the report here: bit.ly/wagereport
Sign the petition today: bit.ly/accordpetition
National Tertiary Education Union
0:35
2
67
80
46K

428

Nick Riemer reposted
Nicola Perugini @PeruginiNic · Dec 8
The Israeli military blowing up the Faculty of Medicine at the Islamic University of Gaza
0:34
From Dr Fadel Naim
1
1.9K
1.9K
459K

429

Nick Riemer reposted
Charlotte Epstein #CanALoudWomanMakeI @Prof_ch_epst · Dec 8
New Petition
Circulate as widely as possible:
protect-au.mimecast.com/s/-aEyC1WLPxc6...
2
7
1.1K

430

Nick Riemer reposted
Esmat Elhalaby @thaqafatalhind · Dec 8
Refaat Alareer's course on English poetry at the Islamic University of Gaza from 2019. 28 sessions on form and content, text and context, meter, metaphor, rhyme, caesura, and parody. Our teacher. youtube.com/watch?v=gRDwGM...
96
3.7K
9K
2.1M

431

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 9
Tonight - public meeting on the next steps in the campaign against ZIM and Israeli apartheid.
PUBLIC MEETING
AFTER THE ZIM SHIPPING BLOCKADE:
PROTEST, BOYCOTTS & BUILDING THE FIGHT AGAINST APARTHEID ISRAEL
Join our public meeting to get organised and discuss how we can take action to break the Australian government's support for Israeli apartheid, make Israel a pariah state and free Palestine. Come along if you came to the Zim blockade or are interested in future actions and want to help build the movement.
6PM SAT DECEMBER 9
BANKSTOWN ARTS CENTRE
Hosted by the newly formed group Stop Israeli Apartheid Sydney
64
38
102
5.1K

| | |
|---|---|
| 432 | |

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 9
Full house at Bankstown for the Action Against Apartheid Coalition public meeting on the next steps against ZIM and Australia's support for apartheid Israel.
200
111
378
20K

433

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 10

Workers, unions out in pride. We say no to genocide!

130 93 384 12K

434

Nick Riemer reposted

Jordy S @jordana_s_ · Dec 12

from Al Jazeera: aljazeera.com/news/liveblog/...

1h ago (02:55 GMT)

Israel attacking Gaza's 'past, present and future': Australian historians

More than 100 Australian historians have signed an open letter decrying Israel's attacks on Gaza, saying they aim "to destroy Palestinian lives and render it impossible for Palestinians to live in Gaza".

"As historians we know this as an attack on a people's past, present and future," the signatories added, citing Israel's destruction of universities, schools, cultural institutions, libraries, archives, mosques and churches.

Gaza's Ministry of Culture last week reported (PDF) that 28 cultural workers have been killed in the enclave since the war began, including musicians, publishers and folk dancers.

1 123 246 11K

435

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 13

My piece on @PHRIsrael & @hrw recent reports. I scrutinise each report & show how they fail to meet human rights research & reporting standards. This unethical conduct is made possible by anti-Palestinian racism in the service of Israel.

9 209 323 26K

436

Nick Riemer reposted

Antoinette Lattouf @antoinette_news · Dec 13

EXCLUSIVE:The original source of videos appearing to show protesters chanting "gas the Jews" has refused to provide unedited footage. One verification expert concluded "there's an audiovisual mismatch" & "audio has been repeated" & police dont have answers

328 2.5K 5.8K 550K

437

Nick Riemer reposted
Randa Abdel-Fattah @RandaAFattah · Dec 13
We kept saying that the chant story was fabricated. We were accused of anti-semitism for rejecting Zionist lies. Lies that spread like wildfire because it's easier to lean into anti-Palestinian racist assumptions than interrogate those who defame a liberation movement.
Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Dec 13
From almost the day afterwards, I had journalists from mainstream publications who said they were suss bc they had their own reporters on the ground that didn't hear this chant. I know what I heard and I intervened when I heard it. This wasn't it.
twitter.com/cameronwilson/...
7
132
337
15K

438

Nick Riemer reposted

Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 6

We are inviting all current & former Australian elected representatives from local councils, and state, territory and federal parliaments, to sign on to the following statement.

Tag your current and former MPs, councillors and elected reps to encourage them to sign on:

1. All states have an obligation to contribute to upholding international law, including human rights, international humanitarian law and the other universally accepted norms of the international legal system.

2. For too long the human rights of the Palestinian people have been grossly violated, in the context of broader circumstances that also breach international law and pose a grave threat to international peace and security.

3. These violations began in 1948 with the violent displacement of some 700,000 Palestinian people from their homeland. These people, and hundreds of thousands more displaced since, have all been denied a right of return.

4. The occupation by Israel of the West Bank and Gaza, ongoing since 1967, continues to involve military occupation, illegal settlement expansion, land theft, violence, discrimination, restrictions on movement and the subjugation of the Palestinian people. The situation is intolerable and to the shame of the international community.

5. While Gaza was cleared of illegal Israeli settlements in 2005, the ongoing blockade clearly constitutes an occupation under applicable international law standards.

6. It is beyond dispute that Israel is committed to policies designed to entrench the domination of one people over another in the territories of Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Attempts to deny this, or smear those who allege it, are an attempt to defy truth and reality.

7. These events and policies have involved the destruction of Palestinian society and the denial of the legitimate national aspirations of the Palestinian people.

8. On 3 March 2021 the International Criminal Court announced it had opened an investigation into Israel and certain Palestinian armed groups. The Chief Prosecutor of the Court has announced it "encompasses conduct that may amount to Rome Statute crimes committed since 13 June 2014 in Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem".

9. We note Australia is a state party to the International Criminal Court and bound by its statute which makes criminal the gravest international crimes.

10. The acts of Hamas on 7 October 2023 and the Israeli response will form part of this investigation.

11. We call on the Australian Government to publicly advocate for an immediate permanent ceasefire, to continue to call for the release of all hostages and urge that all parties fully comply with international standards.

12. We call on the Australian Government to recognise Palestine as a state that is entitled to be free of occupation.

13. We call on the Australian Government to examine its relationship with Israel, with a focus on positively contributing to the resolution of this intolerable and dangerous situation that threatens the people of Israel and Palestine and the entire international community.

Anthony D'Adam

311 222 495 38K

439

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 14

The headline is factually wrong, but otherwise this is a pretty thorough assessment of the Block the Boat actions in Australia so far.

5 7 26 1.8K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 15

The headline's now been fixed.

In Australia, Palestine Solidarity Activists Are Blockading ZIM Ships Owned by Israel

BY
ZACHARIAS SZUMER

At ports in Melbourne, Sydney, and Fremantle, blockades have delayed Israeli-owned ships. In the face of crippling fines and the threat of jail, protesters are determined to disrupt Israel's offensive in Gaza.

1 4 255

440

Nick Riemer reposted
Palestine Justice Movement Sydney @PalestineRising · Dec 15
On Tuesday, we're protesting against Albanese while he's speaking at Sydney Town Hall, and we'll keep protesting until he supports justice for Palestine. Join us at 5pm, Town Hall Square, next Tuesday, December 19.
As the death toll in 20 thousand,
1:32
5
39
57
2.9K

441

Nick Riemer reposted
AJ+ @ajplus · Dec 15
Israel is continuing to strike areas where it ordered Palestinians to flee.
In a recent round of attacks, Israeli airstrikes hit four houses in Rafah, in the south of occupied Gaza, killing at least 23 Palestinians, including children.
bombing of Rafah in occupied Gaza.
Rafah is where Israel told Palestinians to flee for "safety."
1:47
32
1.4K
1.2K
52K

442

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 16

Deeply shocking indictment of the culture of repression in German higher education.

> John Keane @jkeaneSDN · Dec 16
>
> for the first time in my career, police began arresting students peacefully gathered @FU_Berlin to hear my lecture 'Universities in Troubled Times'; the students regathered in local cafes and the webinar - soon on @YouTube - went ahead...

Universities in Troubled Times

14 46 114 6.4K

443

Nick Riemer reposted

Palestine Legal @pal_legal · Dec 16

THREAD: As the US-backed Israeli bombardment of Gaza reaches unfathomable proportions, so has the war of repression here: since Oct. 7th we've received 1000+ reports from people targeted for Palestine advocacy in all arenas—but it's not stopping the upsurge in solidarity. 1/14

19 1.2K 2.3K 200K

444

Nick Riemer reposted

Lana Tatour @Lana_Tatour · Dec 17

They bulldozed civilians sheltering in a hospital and buried them alive. All with the silence, complicity, enabling of the West. They bulldozed civilians sheltering in a hospital and buried them alive. I'm beyond word. Ceasefire now. It is already too late.

30 1.6K 2.6K 82K

445

Nick Riemer reposted

Steven Salaita @stevesalaita · Dec 11

New essay: "Scrolling Through Genocide"

42 1.8K 2.9K 616K

446

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 17

The obscene slaughter continues, enabled by politicians' warmongering and hypocrisy, justified by their cowardly and cynical apologists in the elites. Against this contemptible decadence, ordinary people go on reminding us what morality, principle and rationality actually mean.

102 123 403 13K

447

Nick Riemer reposted

Middle East Eye @MiddleEastEye · Dec 18

RECAP #Israel #Palestine (as of 11:30 GMT, 17 December)

1. A WHO team visited Gaza's al-Shifa hospital and described it as a "bloodbath," where trauma patients were being treated on the floor due to the lack of space, and pain management options were limited

2. Israeli...

Show more

2 67 61 7.4K

448

Nick Riemer reposted

Unimelb for Palestine @Umelb4Palestine · Dec 17

Students at the University of Melbourne have been continually silenced. Despite national cultural symbols being accepted this student was kicked out of his own graduation simply for displaying a Palestinian flag.

#NoBloodOnOurDegrees #StopArmingIsrael #FreePalestine

178 1.2K 2.1K 132K

449

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 18

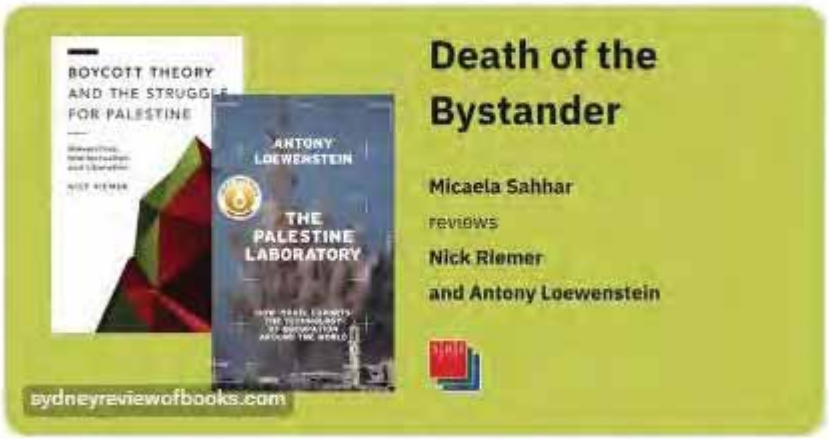
Comprehensive and generous review of my and @antloewenstein's books by Micaela Sahhar.



3 9 41 2.6K

450

Nick Riemer reposted
Jenny Leong MP 梁珍妮 @jennyleong · Dec 19
Over 200 current & former Australian elected reps from across political spectrum have signed statement in support of immediate, permanent ceasefire, recognition of Palestine as a state, the end of the Israeli occupation and a reassessment of Australia's relationship with Israel
Over 200 current and former Australian members of parliament and councillors have signed onto a statement calling for an immediate, permanent ceasefire, the recognition of Palestine as a state, the end of the Israeli occupation and a reassessment of Australia's relationship with Israel.
361
879
1.9K
76K

451

Nick Riemer reposted

Overland Journal @OverlandJournal · Dec 19

It's the last publishing day of 2023 for our online magazine and we can't think of a better way to leave you than with this breathtaking new comic by @wallmansam | Why Palestine is union business.

Sam wishes to thank Michael Hiscox for his contribution.

2 92 132 13K

452

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

Hundreds of people outside Sydney Town Hall to protest against genocide-enabler @AlboMP as he dares to speaks on international affairs at the Lowy Institute.

93 101 289 9.8K

453-454

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

Deafening sustained uproar from the protest against @AlboMP - whistles, boos, thumping of the hoarding, drums, pots and pans.

94 164 529 15K

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 19

And again!

7 15 54 1.9K

455

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 19
Albanese -- blood on your hands!
0:26
82
164
406
8.5K

456

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 19
Three hours into the protest and we're still going. The sheer anger and energy against @AlboMP is like nothing I've seen against a politician.
0:21
252
540
1.4K
83K

457

Nick Riemer reposted

Sydney Review of Books @SydReviewBooks · Dec 19

#NEWonSRB: In her review of two recent books on Palestine, Micaela Sahhar draws on her family history and experience as a scholar to examine the case for academic boycott and the limitations of the Western liberal mindset for Palestinian allyship.

5 7 2.2K

458

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 20

That @antoinette_news just produced some of the most critical pieces of journalism then got punished reveals everything about the hostility of this media landscape. It doesn't want ethical reporting & truth telling, it's concerned with preserving the interests of those in power.

33 250 659 21K

459

Nick Riemer @NickRiemer1 · Dec 20

Shame on @ItaButtrose & @abcsydney on the dangerous and disgraceful sacking of @antoinette_news. The Zionists and reactionaries high-fiving the ABC's unbridled McCarthyism are a greater threat to the public sphere than they ever have been before. Reinstate her now.

ABC presenter Antoinette Lattouf sacked after anti-Israel social media posts

216 405 1K 24K

460

Nick Riemer reposted

Fahad Ali | فهد علي @fahad_s_ali · Dec 20

Anyone at @abcnews want to explain why one of your journalists, @GeraldineDoogue, can host an event for a pro-Israel organisation without fear of consequences, whereas you'll fire @antoinette_news for doing her job?

51 735 1.7K 67K

461

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 20

Not one single person who has taken an Israeli govt propaganda tour has been slapped on the wrist, let alone sacked—yet Antoinette Lattouf is let go for reposting a global human rights organisation?

73 555 1.5K 33K

462

Nick Riemer reposted

Mathew Abbott @mathew_abbott · Dec 19

Great turnout and an awesome @unions4palestin rally tonight! Speakers welcomed the news that the ZIM vessel we planned to picket turned around & dropped anchor outside Port Kembla instead. Workers and ordinary people are uniting worldwide against the Israeli war machine.

27 83 2.4K

463

Nick Riemer reposted
Antoinette Lattouf @antoinette_news · Dec 20
I am very disappointed by the ABC's decision today.
I am very disappointed by the ABC's decision today.
I believe I was terminated unlawfully.
This is not a win for journalism or critical, fair thinking.
I'm currently considering my legal options.
18
2.5K
9.7K
899K

464

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · Dec 21
cityhub.com.au
5
2
8
448

465

Nick Riemer reposted

Forensic Architecture @ForensicArchi · Dec 21

Our aggregation of news reports since 7 Oct suggests that hospitals in Gaza are subjected to a repeated pattern of intimidation, direct targeting, siege, and occupation by the Israeli military: ...a-hospitals.forensic-architecture.org

59 2.6K 3.2K 702K

466

Nick Riemer reposted

sara m. saleh | سارة صالح @SaraSalehTweets · Dec 21

If you haven't yet, please sign and share this petition demanding @abcnews reverse @antoinette_news's unfair dismissal!

#WeStandwithAntoinette

89 263 472 20K

467

Nick Riemer reposted

Nasser Mashni @iamthenas · 21h

We must know if any Australian citizens are serving in the Israeli army.

Investigations will take place and prosecutions must ensue.

The Aus Gov needs to be able to identify these individuals and be ready to hand them over to an International Court when the time comes!

> Australian Centre for International Justice @theACIJ · 21h
> RELEASE: @theACIJ wrote to the AusGov following reports of Australians joining the #IDF. Australia should investigate individuals who may be involved in the commission of international crimes. Read our letter:
> #Gaza #Palestine #EndImpunity 1/3...
> Show more

11 113 304 8.9K

468

Nick Riemer @NickReimer1 · 21h

We stand with Antoinette: ABC Reverse Her Unfair dismissal #WESTANDWITHANTOINETTE - Sign the Petition! chng.it/NY9VzKPt via @ChangeAUS

119 110 289 8.3K

No. NSD950 of 2025

Federal Court of Australia

District Registry: NSW

Division: Human Rights

Joseph Toltz and others

Applicants

Nick Riemer and another

Respondents

| | |
|---|---|
| Affidavit of: | Daniel Patrick McCoach |
| Address: | Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000 |
| Occupation: | Solicitor |
| Date: | 18 September 2025 |

Certificate identifying Exhibit

This is the Certificate identifying Exhibit "DPM-13" annexed to the Affidavit of Daniel Patrick McCoach dated 18 September 2025

Before me:

UPEKHA WEDAGE
of Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000
Australian Legal Practitioner within the meaning of the Legal Profession Uniform Law (Victoria)
A person authorised under section 19(1) of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 to take an affidavit.
Who states that their signature was made to this affidavit by electronic means, the witnessing of the execution of this document was done by audio-visual link and all the requirements of Part 3 of the Oaths and Affirmations Act 2018 (Vic).

Date: 18 September 2025

Filed on behalf of (name & role of party) The Applicants
Prepared by (name of person/lawyer) Daniel McCoach
Law firm (if applicable) Rotstein Commercial Lawyers
Tel (03) 9604 7888 Fax
Email daniel.mccoach@rotsteins.com.au
Address for service (include state and postcode) Suite 409, 488 Bourke Street, Melbourne VIC 3000

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Official Committee Hansard

SENATE

LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS LEGISLATION COMMITTEE

Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2)

Public

FRIDAY, 20 SEPTEMBER 2024

CANBERRA

BY AUTHORITY OF THE SENATE

LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS LEGISLATION COMMITTEE

Friday, 20 September 2024

Members in attendance: Senators Green, Henderson, Reynolds and Scarr

Terms of Reference for the Inquiry:

To inquire into and report on the provisions of the Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2).

WITNESSES

ABEL, Ms Simone, Head of Legal, Executive Council of Australian Jewry [by video link] .....9

BELL, Dr Genevieve, Vice-chancellor and President, Australian National University .....37

BROWN, Dr Matthew, Deputy Chief Executive, Group of Eight.....28

BRUNGS, Professor Attila, Vice-chancellor and President, .....
University of New South Wales [by video link] .....37

CASSUTO, Mr Alon, Chief Executive Officer, .....
The Zionist Federation of Australia [by video link].....9

CHIPPERFIELD, Ms Kate, Assistant Secretary, Access, Equity and Social Inclusion Branch, .....
Department of Education .....68

de KRETSER, Mr Hugh, President, Australian Human Rights Commission [by video link] .....60

EILAM, Associate Professor Efrat, Co-Director, .....
Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism [by video link].....1

FINLAY, Mrs Lorraine, Human Rights Commissioner, .....
Australian Human Rights Commission [by video link] .....60

GOODING, Ms Gabrielle, National Assistant Secretary, .....
National Tertiary Education Union [by video link] .....53

HEDUS, Mr Sa'Jacinto, Ethnocultural Officer, National Union of Students .....53

KRAYEM, Mr Ghaith, National Spokesperson, Muslim Votes Matter [by video link] .....47

LOVEN, Mr Noah, President, Australasian Union of Jewish Students .....1

MARTIN, Professor Iain, Vice-chancellor, Deakin University .....37

MORRIS, Mr Zachary, Vice-President, Australasian Union of Jewish Students .....1

MORTON, Ms Madonna, First Assistant Secretary, Higher Education Division, .....
Department of Education .....68

NAWAZ, Ms Ayesha, Assistant Secretary, Human Rights Branch, .....
Attorney-General's Department .....68

NIEUWENHUIS, Ms Adrienne, Acting Chief Commissioner, .....
Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency.....68

PHILLIPS, Professor Nicola, Provost and Acting Vice-chancellor, University of Melbourne .....37

PICKERING, Professor Sharon, Vice-chancellor and President, Monash University .....37

PRAWER, Professor Steven, Co-Director, Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism ...1

PREST, Mr Peter, Chief Operating Officer, University of Adelaide [by video link] .....37

RUBENSTEIN, Dr Colin, Executive Director, .....
Australia/Israel & Jewish Affairs Council [by audio link].....9

RUSSELL, Dr Mary, Chief Executive Officer, .....
Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency.....68

SCHWARTZ, Ms Sarah, Executive Officer, Jewish Council of Australia [by video link].....18

SCOTT, Professor Mark, Vice-chancellor and President, University of Sydney .....37

SHEEHAN, Ms Anne, First Assistant Secretary, .....
International Law and Human Rights Division, Attorney-General's Department.....68

SHEEHY, Mr Luke, Chief Executive Officer, Universities Australia .....28

SIVARAMAN, Mr Giridharan, Race Discrimination Commissioner, .....
Australian Human Rights Commission [by video link] .....60

SLUCKI, Dr David, Director, Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University .....24

STRAKOSCH, Dr Elizabeth, Advisory Committee, Jewish Council of Australia [by video link] .18

WITNESSES

WERTHEIM, Mr Peter, Co-Chief Executive Officer, Executive Council of Australian Jewry [by video link] ..... 9

WILLIAMS, Professor John, Provost, University of Adelaide [by video link] ..... 37

EILAM, Associate Professor Efrat, Co-Director, Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism [by video link]

LOVEN, Mr Noah, President, Australasian Union of Jewish Students

MORRIS, Mr Zachary, Vice-President, Australasian Union of Jewish Students

PRAWER, Professor Steven, Co-Director, Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism

Committee met at 08:30

CHAIR (Senator Green): I declare open this public hearing of the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Legislation Committee inquiry into the Commission of Inquiry into Antisemitism at Australian Universities Bill 2024 (No. 2). I acknowledge the traditional custodians of the land on which we meet today and pay my respects to their elders past and present. I would also like to acknowledge and welcome other Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people who might be participating in today's public hearing.

The committee's proceedings today will follow the program as circulated. These are public proceedings. They are being broadcast live in Parliament House and via the web. I remind witnesses that, in giving evidence today to the committee, they are protected by parliamentary privilege. It is unlawful for anyone to threaten or disadvantage a witness on account of evidence given to a committee. Such action may be treated by the Senate as a contempt. It is also a contempt to give false or misleading evidence to the committee.

I urge senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure that discussion today is relevant to the bill we're discussing. Witnesses are reminded that if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party, the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond.

The committee prefers evidence to be given in public, but, under the Senate's resolutions, witnesses have the right to request to be heard in confidence, described as being in camera. If you are a witness today and intend to request to give evidence in camera, please bring this to the attention of the secretariat as soon as possible. If a witness objects to answering a question, the witness should state the ground upon which the objection is taken, and the committee will determine whether it will insist on an answer, having regard to the ground which is claimed. If the committee determines to insist on an answer, a witness may request that the answer be given in camera. Such requests may, of course, be made at any other time.

I now welcome representatives for the first panel this morning, the Australasian Union of Jewish Students and the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism. Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is also available from the secretariat. I've just given an explanation of the process that we'll go through. Of course, if you give evidence that reflects adversely on another party, we'll give that party a chance to respond. Before we go to questions from senators, do you have a brief opening statement you would like to make? Mr Loven, over to you.

Mr Loven: I, too, would like to acknowledge the traditional custodians, the Ngunnawal and the Ngambri people. Sovereignty was never ceded, and I would like to acknowledge the longstanding friendship between Indigenous and Jewish communities. Thank you, committee chair Senator Green, deputy committee chair Senator Scarr and the committee for allowing AUJS to contribute to this inquiry.

Today, we are here to amplify the voices of Jewish students and make it very clear that the current situation is untenable. We are in a crisis, and this crisis has gone on for far too long. The failure of many Australian universities to address rising antisemitism has allowed antisemitism to become further entrenched. Jewish students are avoiding campus, fearing for their safety, with many going and removing identifiable Jewish symbols. It is unacceptable and can no longer be ignored. Universities, which should be sanctuaries for learning, have become places for fear and exclusion for Jewish students. Today, you will hear many voices. Zach and I stand here as the elected representatives of Jewish students, chosen through a democratic process by the national executive, campus and regional presidents. AUJS is the only organisation here that represents Jewish students. We know that the committee and trust that the committee will determine adequately the weight you afford to these different perspectives.

Across these past 11 months, we've seen a range of responses to antisemitism by universities. Some have stepped up, but others have allowed this hate to fester, excusing antisemitic chants, deferring responsibility and letting Jewish students fend for themselves. There is no justification for this inconsistency. Jewish students should not have to choose between their education and their safety. We recognise the challenges that universities face, but we refuse to accept the false dichotomy between freedom of speech and protection. We can hold two truths.

Not all criticism of Israel is antisemitic, but some undeniably cross the line. Universities must recognise this tension and disregard extreme views on both sides of the spectrum. Using the right tools, such as the IHRA definition, can help address these issues, but we know it's no silver bullet.

We fully support the right to protest, but when protests glorify violence against Jews, insult or harass them and deface campus with swastikas, it crosses the line. This is not protest; it is intimidation designed to silence Jewish students and exclude them from university life. We now have a choice: to work constructively to improve campus life for all students or to play politics and erode the principle of prosecuting ideas, not people. While there may not be a perfect solution, inaction is the wrong one. We welcome your questions and are ready to expand on our submission.

CHAIR: Do the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism have a brief opening statement?

Prof. Prawer: We do.

Prof. Eilam: Yes. Thank you for the invitation to give evidence at this public hearing. The Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism was formed by Jews and non-Jews in the aftermath of 7 October as a response to the overwhelming rise in antisemitism on campuses. In this part of the hearing, we'll focus on two critical issues: Jewish people are not feeling safe on campuses and the systemic failure of many universities to protect Jewish staff and students.

A recent survey on campus antisemitism found that a substantial percentage of Jewish students and staff do not feel safe. We have countless reports of Jewish students being singled out in classes by lecturers and peers, spat on, and told that they have no right to cultural safety. In many classes, they are forced to listen as captive audiences to inaccurate xenophobic attacks on Jews by their lecturers. Similarly, academic staff are being targeted by students and peers and subjugated to a Jewish cancel culture that has taken over many campuses. Not surprisingly, our survey shows that a high percentage of Jewish students report reduced class attendance and a need to hide their Jewish identity. Is this a tolerable situation?

To put this into perspective, the 2021 National Student Safety Survey into sexual harassment found that 84 per cent of students felt safe at the universities. But the fact that less than six per cent did not feel safe was considered completely unacceptable and prompted universities across Australia to adopt a zero tolerance policy on sexual harassment. Unfortunately, in many universities across Australia, the Jewish minority has not been afforded the same treatment. With more than one-third of Jewish students and staff reporting feeling unsafe on campuses, many universities across Australia refuse to even acknowledge and take action on the problem, often misusing the notion of free speech to obscure their responsibility to maintain a safe and secure environment for all.

Discrimination against Jewish people is so pervasive on some campuses that even the systems designed to ensure justice and ethical conduct are used to discriminate against them. In some universities, the complaint systems are failing to protect Jewish students in need and may even be weaponised to silence Jewish students. Not surprisingly, 50 per cent of Jewish students rank the universities' actions on antisemitism as zero to two out of 10. Most of them express distrust in the complaint systems.

In conclusion, universities are currently undergoing an antisemitic crisis, a crisis which they're failing to deal with. A judicial inquiry is essential to ensure that the true extent of antisemitism and threatening behaviour on campuses is asserted, with students and staff given a full opportunity to recount their experiences and university officials given the opportunity to explain their systems failure to address the crisis.

CHAIR: Thank you very much for both of those opening statements. The deputy chair and I have questions, but Senator Henderson, as you know, is the mover of the bill, so we might give her the call first to ask you some questions. We have pretty limited time with each panel today, but we'll get through it. Senator Henderson, you have the call.

Senator HENDERSON: Good morning. I greatly appreciate you being here this morning. Firstly, Mr Loven and Mr Morris, what difference would a judicial inquiry make, do you believe, given the crisis of antisemitism on Australian university campuses?

Mr Morris: I think it's important that we acknowledge, in the context of all of this, this has been going on for 11 months and is precipitated by a complete lack of trust in the existing university systems, as our cries for help have fallen on deaf ears, effectively. As I'm sure you can appreciate, this has been politicised in a way that has become a contentious issue, such that there is a lot of noise and a lot of interest that are distracting from here. One of the reasons why we would directly request a judicial inquiry is that we are at a point where we need to be doing everything we can. We believe this is something that is going to be trusted. It's going to be independent, and it's going to allow the opportunity for students to give evidence in confidence. As we said, there is such a fear of retaliation and victimisation, which we have seen at universities when students have reported things, that, unless we can have that confidence and that independence guaranteed, we are not going to be able to get to the bottom of this. We need a form of truth-telling here as well so that we have a shared base and understanding, so we can all go off and look at solutions to this. That's why we need a judicial inquiry.

Senator HENDERSON: Mr Loven, I'm alarmed by your opening statement when you say that Jewish students are being forced to choose between their education and their safety. Can you elaborate on that?

Mr Loven: What we've seen, as outlined in the introduction, is that, because of the heightened tension on campus over these past 11 months and because universities not intervening and not protective Jewish students, Jewish students are having to fend for themselves. What that means is, as I said, that they are removing identifiable symbols. It's completely unacceptable. They are reverting from university life. They are not engaging in university life because they are scared to engage with it in the first place. It has come to the point where Jewish students do not feel safe in the university environment, and that is unacceptable. It's unacceptable for any minority group. And so we feel this judicial inquiry is a way to expose the true scale of what is happening on campus and to provide solutions so Jewish students start coming back onto campus and start feeling like they're welcomed again and to contribute adequately to university life and then to broader society.

Senator HENDERSON: On behalf of Jewish students, how do you feel with the news that the expulsion of the student at ANU who outwardly supported Hamas has now been revoked and that particular student is running for ANU Students Association president?

Mr Loven: It is completely unacceptable. What we're talking about here is not an academic infringement such as plagiarism, which is personal. This student went on national radio and declared their unconditional support for Hamas. Between then and now, there has been no attempt to engage by that person with the Jewish community to apologise. We're talking about the deficiencies of universities. This is a deficiency in the reporting process.

When it's something of this scale, the Jewish community needs to understand and needs to know why this situation has gotten to where it is, why specific actions were taken, in terms of her being able to come back onto campus. The situation now for Jewish and Israeli students also is that they know this person is walking around on campus—and not only walking around on campus but running for president of a student political ticket that is labelled 'Globalise the resistance for Palestine'.

This is clear intimidation for Jewish students. For ANU it is particularly more egregious because, unlike other universities where we can go back to our communities and our safe spaces, Jewish students at ANU have to live on campus. They have to live within the environment of the heightened tension. There is no escape for them. It is a testament to the resilience of ANU Jewish leaders and Jewish students that they are still there, they are still being loud and they are still being passionate, because that is a way to fight against what we are seeing on campus.

Coming back to the question, it is unacceptable.

Senator HENDERSON: The University of Sydney's vice-chancellor, Mark Scott, defended his lack of action, in relation to the presence of members of the extremist group Hizb ut-Tahrir on campus, when he said, 'They're not a designated terrorist group.' I find it absolutely appalling that the university did not act for so many weeks.

Can I ask for your response in relation to that issue and other issues, particularly, at the University of Sydney, the children chanting intifada at the protest and the barricading of the two Tel Aviv University academics? There have been some horrendous incidents, with the most lacklustre and appalling response from the university. Could I ask you to comment on that?

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, you will assist the witnesses in being relevant to the bill if you phrase your question with maybe a little statement at the end to make sure that the answers that are being given are relevant to the bill; if you could assist the witnesses in that way. I understand the context—

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much for that, Chair, but I do have the call and these issues are at the very heart of why a judicial inquiry is required. It's because of the lack of action from the University of Sydney and ANU and other universities. So I would ask the students—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, I do have the call and I would—

CHAIR: I am the chair, so when I speak you don't have the call. What I'm asking you to do—

Senator HENDERSON: Point of order, Chair.

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, we are 15 minutes into the inquiry.

Senator HENDERSON: You can't just interrupt my questioning.

CHAIR: I'm not.

Senator HENDERSON: Okay. I would ask you to give me the call. These are very relevant questions, so, please, let me ask my questions.

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, I am asking you as chair to assist the witnesses in being relevant to the inquiry by making sure that we ask relevant questions. I know that your questions are relevant—

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you. Okay—

CHAIR: and I am asking you to help the witnesses to collect their answers.

Senator HENDERSON: I am asking the witnesses. So please let me ask my questions.

CHAIR: I am letting you ask your questions.

Senator HENDERSON: I go back to my question. My question is: given some of the horrific incidents we have seen at the University of Sydney—the barricading of academics from the Tel Aviv University, the encouragement of children to chant intifada, the failure to remove members of the extremist group Hizb ut-Tahrir, which is shocking, appalling conduct by the University of Sydney, as one instance—what do you say to that?

Mr Morris: Senator—and Chair—I would say we have been dealing with a lot of universities in this country. I can say, with confidence, that the University of Sydney is probably one of the worst places to be a Jewish student right now and that Mark Scott has failed his students. We have tried—repeatedly—to engage. After the first meeting with him, his chief of staff had to apologise for his behaviour as soon as he left the office.

What we have been seeing at the University of Sydney has been problematic for a long time, but there has been a dramatic escalation post 7 October. The issue is no longer with what is happening with the students; the issue is how the administration has responded. When it comes to the graffiti tunnel, despite assurances that we've been provided that it would be monitored every day, there were swastikas that were maintained and remained there for two weeks. We have students who have been followed and filmed to the point where they have gotten so many death threats from being doxxed that the police have told them it's no longer safe for them to leave their houses. We are in situations where we have academics who are terrified to leave their offices because of other academics who are making their lives miserable.

The most important thing, when we talk about that kids' excursion, is that the way the USYD administration has responded to this is by buck-passing and trying to find every excuse to avoid responsibility. Apart from feeling from a Jewish student perspective that it's negligent, it's outright offensive. When you are having, 'Min al-nahr ila al-bahr, Filastin sa-takun Arabiyah" chanted—which is not, 'From the river to the sea, Palestine will be free,' but, 'From the river to the sea, Palestine will be Arab,' which is a call for ethnic cleansing—and the vice-chancellor is saying it means different things to different people, that's incredibly offensive. If it were just about flags or just about being offended, though, we wouldn't be here. We are here because there is a marked reduction in student attendance at the University of Sydney because they are made to feel unsafe, they are intimidated and it is a hostile environment.

Senator HENDERSON: I am so sorry to know what you have endured, particularly since 7 October last year. Can I ask about the University of Melbourne—the barricading of the building and the occupation of that building—and also the refusal of universities more generally to act to remove the encampments and the impact of the encampments on Jewish students? Could you please perhaps explain your response when the university said everyone has a right to protest? I do say that some universities, like Monash and Deakin and others, moved quite quickly to shut down the encampments, but for many weeks encampments were allowed to be established at ANU, the University of Melbourne and the University of Sydney.

Mr Loven: After 7 October, AUJS was very proactive in ensuring that we and our students met with the university administrations. From a Jewish student perspective, we know how these things operate: when there's conflict in the Middle East, there are residual effects on our campuses here. So we made that proactive step and we met with administrations. With the University of Melbourne specifically, we clearly stated, 'If there are not red lines when it comes to protest, things will get out of hand.' Unfortunately, that is what happened. The University of Melbourne—while they evidently kept open lines of communication with Jewish students, instituted good reforms such as special considerations and generally had that good, productive relationship—failed to institute clear red lines. In every instance where they could have intervened, they chose the path of least resistance. With those egregious steps over red lines, in terms of events coming from the encampment and chants to globalise the intifada—which, as we said, is egregious and not a moral relativist term; it is very clear what that means to the Jewish community, and it means the glorification of terror against Jews and Israelis—we saw that tension constantly build up to the point where a building had to be rendered unusable for a few days in the lead-up to final assessments and exams. That means students could not attend class in the lead-up to their exams, which reinforces that this is not a Jewish student issue but an all-student issue, to ensure the safety of all students on campus.

Senator HENDERSON: I apologise; we have very limited time, and I want to ask the Australian Academic Alliance Against Antisemitism a couple of questions. But we really appreciate your time here this morning and thank you for all that you have done on behalf of all Australian Jewish university students.

Professor Prawer and Associate Professor Eilam, could you please explain the impact on Jewish staff at universities? Obviously, you had to establish this organisation in the first place to advocate for your rights, but how have universities failed Jewish staff?

Prof. Prawer: If I might, I would like to convey something that happened to me last week. I was escorted from my office by security, who chose to evacuate me from my office because a group of students had identified me personally and were marching on my office in physics. Subsequently, I had a security guard outside my office for the next three days, as we were fearful that students would try to break into my office.

I am not an administrator. I am in charge of the academic lead of the program with the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, a joint PhD, supporting students to do their research with the Hebrew University. The students identified me personally, and the university system kicked in to try to protect my safety. I'm a senior professor at the university—

Senator HENDERSON: Which university?

Prof. Prawer: The University of Melbourne. You can well imagine that if this could happen to me what a chilling effect this has on other members of staff who are more vulnerable, who are less senior and who feel that they can no longer exercise their academic freedom to, for example, collaborate with Israeli colleagues.

Senator HENDERSON: Was there any action taken against the threats imposed by those students?

Prof. Prawer: Yes. Firstly, the university is doing its very best to identify the students. It's a shadowy group called the students against warfare, and they somehow have conflated the activities of the university in collaborating with defence organisations with the Hebrew University—they accuse the Hebrew University of being a source of genocide. I have the flyer here that identified me personally. But to answer your question, Senator, to attack a personal individual who is fulfilling their academic duties to support students doing their PhD was, I think, outrageous—not to mention the students who are actually on campus and are undertaking the PhD. Just imagine them walking past those posters.

Senator HENDERSON: Could we have a copy of that flyer?

Prof. Prawer: Yes.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you. Could you circulate that. Associate Professor Eilam, could you explain from your perspective your experience since 7 October.

Prof. Eilam: Our survey data reveals harrowing experiences. I can read a few quotes taken from our data. These are quotes by academics about their experience. For example: 'Being doxxed on Twitter by a senior professor in my faculty, and the university failing to reprimand him or order him to take down, for six months.' Another academic, my Jewish colleague, had a petition signed against him. Another one said, 'We have academics who do not hesitate to use the staff communication channels to scream this doublespeak and harass and vilify and berate all who object.' A Jewish colleague had an office door trashed. 'I was assaulted by a Deakin student, who I have reported internally, and I provided several witnesses. I was also attacked by a professional protester'—and on it goes. I think those quotes speak for themselves. They speak volumes.

CHAIR: Thank you for your evidence, and I am so sorry to read the accounts from your submission and hear the ones that you have given us today. It is not comparable, but I have had my office protested on this issue many times, so I understand a little bit about what it might be like. Did you see the evidence from the special envoy?

Prof. Prawer: Yes.

Prof. Eilam: Yes.

CHAIR: As part of that discussion, the deputy chair and I lead an enquiry into sexual harassment on campus. So the issue around the way universities deal with complaints of this nature is very alive to us, and I want to ask you some questions about that. Is there any universal approach by universities to complaints handling? You said that some universities are approaching things in better ways. Do we need a universal best-practice policy to make some immediate changes?

Mr Morris: First and foremost, that's a really important starting point because what we're seeing is inconsistency. As we've noted, where the boundary sits in terms of what is considered antisemitic or not can be contested. You've got 36 universities around the country making 36 different decisions each time, and that leads students to feeling pretty abandoned if a decision isn't made in a way that they would like or in one way or another. Having something that's best practice means that we're able to identify what the systemic gaps are. One that we've noticed is, if an incident is significant enough to be reported to the police, then in that case universities will be reluctant to investigate because they don't want to compromise a police investigation. But, if the police don't follow up because they don't perceive it as serious enough, then you almost have this issue where the higher the gravity of the incident, the less likely it is to get reported on or followed up.

CHAIR: It falls in the middle of the two jurisdictions.

Mr Morris: Yes.

Prof. Prawer: Mark Scott said, after the report on sexual harassment, that just one case is too many. He also said that every student has the right to feel safe and supported and to be treated with respect and dignity. The universities then instituted educational programs compulsorily for both staff and students. We wonder, with such a large group of students screaming that they feel unsafe and discriminated against, why that is being tolerated when sexual harassment is not being tolerated. It also points out that, when the universities want to, they can swing into action, and, to be fair, many of the universities have reached out to our alliance and have asked us to participate with them in crafting an appropriate educational program on campus—not all, but some.

Mr Morris: Something that comes to mind on the issue and the reason why we need consistency is that we need some set of minimum standards. I'm going to use the University of Sydney and their complaints process as an example. Recently it was shown that one of the acting case managers holds pretty strong views on the conflict, so much so that she had been publicly posting them. That's completely fine; everyone's entitled to hold a view. But students are also entitled to expect that their complaints will be assessed on their merits and that there will be some impartiality. If a view is held so strongly by someone that they publicly post about it, that very much undermines students' belief in the robustness of that system. What becomes very, very difficult then is when the university points to the number of unsubstantiated reports, when they've all, or a significant number—at least from our end—have been reviewed by the same case manager, who has now been removed. Things like that really undermine the trust in the system. What we're now seeing is that Jewish students, particularly when they come to us, are reluctant to report to the university because they don't believe the university is going to take it seriously. They also aren't assured that they won't be victimised or retaliated against by their lecturers, their peers or even the university itself. So anything we can do to address that problem is crucial.

Prof. Eilam: Our findings suggest a systemic failure across many universities to protect Jewish students and staff. What we found in some of the evidence, the qualitative data, is very concerning. For example, an Israeli student who sought assistance from an international student adviser was sent out of the room once their nationality was revealed. The student reported that, the second they said they were from Israel, 'Her face changed, and she just told me she can't help and practically expelled me from her room. After she closed it, I was stuck in place, pretty shocked, and she screamed something like "Oh my God."'

The discrimination against Jewish people is so pervasive on campuses that even the systems designed to ensure justice and ethical conduct are used to discriminate against them. Recently we have identified a pattern where, when Jewish students respond to aggression, the tables quickly turn around and the aggressors portray themselves as victims and file disciplinary complaints against the Jewish students. Consequently, the disciplinary complaints system becomes weaponised, where the bully becomes the victim, and the victim becomes the bully. When such matters have arisen at student conduct and complaints departments, we have seen a case where the investigation officer failed to treat the Jewish student fairly. Not only was the Jewish student inappropriately found guilty of misconduct; the report also one-sidedly protected the complainant's freedom of expression while denying the Jewish student the same right to respond to the offence. Consequently, we found that in certain cases the disciplinary complaints system is compromised by bias.

CHAIR: Thank you. That's a really helpful case study. I think we have all appreciated that.

We had evidence from the special envoy the other night, which was really helpful for setting the scene. Her evidence—I don't want to put words into her mouth, but essentially—was that she had worked with universities in previous roles but she's been in this role for only two months, so we asked her about her intention to work with universities. What would you like to see from the special envoy and the universities? How can that position be used to start making some inroads into these issues?

Prof. Prawer: I think the special envoy recognised that antisemitism is becoming endemic. Universities are ground zero for the education of our students who will become the leaders of tomorrow. Those students may well be sitting in your seats 20 years from now. So we have a chance to educate properly. What we would like from the special envoy and from the community at large is for them to take this problem seriously and combat it in the same way that we have combated other serious cultural issues such as sexual harassment or child abuse in our community. We think that we can do it collectively, and we stand as an alliance ready to put all of our resources into those educational programs. We have to understand the culture of this, but we are very worried about the normalisation of in the academy. That is the longstanding danger when statements about Jews and about Israel become normalised that are discriminatory. We have to remember that only a hundred years ago Harvard didn't allow Jews or restricted the number of Jews coming onto campus. We have to be aware that some universities are perhaps subtly using anti-Jewishness to limit the number of Jews entering courses like medicine, for example. We have to be aware of the unconscious bias that has crept into the academy.

Mr Morris: On the special envoy's role: at the end of the day, something that was suggested during evidence is the idea of roundtables and being able to convene all the stakeholders and have a central touch point to ensure that all these interests are met. Something really important to note is that, whilst obviously the envoy will have a very important role in being able to bring everyone together, that role, while she is incredibly accomplished, will not be able to solve this problem as a one-size-fits-all solution. We would be reticent from the perspective of students. At the end of the day, right now the buck rests with universities. There is a hesitance to point to that role as a panacea of sorts.

CHAIR: That's a really interesting discussion. When we were talking about best practice and you we were having, professor, about the sexual harassment approach, it occurred to me that, last week, the government introduced legislation to establish a national student ombudsman. That's not confined just to matters of sexual harassment. I was wondering at this early stage whether you had a view about whether you'd like to have some input in the way that that is developed—because there is still a code of practice to be developed—and how that could possibly be used as a vehicle to help build that best practice.

Prof. Prawer: I think it's crucially important that students are able to report their experiences without fear of being identified and fear of being victimised. They should be able to report those cases even if they're not making a formal complaint that needs to be actioned, so to speak, where they're forced to identify themselves and give evidence. In this inquiry, you saw submissions—tens and perhaps hundreds of submissions—from people that did not want to put their names to their submissions. I think that's the crucial thing. We want to know the depth of the problem and we want to know that without fear or favour.

Mr Loven: From our perspective, any solution that helps Jewish students on the ground we will support. From our perspective, for us to help inform what those terms of reference and scope are is also very important. We see AUJS as a tool not only to advocate for Jewish students on campus but for external stakeholders to get an understanding of what life is for Jewish students on the ground. With the ombudsman and potential reporting in the future, that is still not implemented now. As you have seen from the special envoy's hearing today, this is an immediate problem that requires immediate solutions. Jewish students cannot wait any longer. This is not an October 7 issue; antisemitism on campus was increasing prior to October 7. So, while we obviously welcome the reforms in this space, we don't want to wait too long. We are here talking about a judicial inquiry, and that is why we want to start on the judicial inquiry.

Mr Morris: On the ombudsman specifically: whilst it's definitely important to address some gaps and we have been meeting with TEQSA, who have been horrified but don't have the capacity to enforce or to regulate it, the issue with the ombudsman is that, whilst it's certainly welcomed, there are also gaps in terms of where the accountability is. A lot of what we're seeing is, unfortunately, coming from student unions. It's coming from the National Union of Students as well. There is no capacity, as we're seeing with universities, to turn around and address that. From what I've seen with the ombudsman, it's unclear whether they would have the ability to regulate conduct that affects universities but is not within the ambit of the university or education provider itself.

CHAIR: Thank you. Senator Scarr.

Senator SCARR: We've got very limited time, so I want to go through a few topics very quickly. Mr Morris, I was deeply concerned with the statement you made that, when the Union of Jewish Students met with Mr Scott at the University of Sydney, his colleagues had to apologise with respect to his behaviour. What was his behaviour?

Mr Morris: I hope you can respect the position I'm in, Senator.

Senator SCARR: You are under parliamentary privilege.

Senator HENDERSON: Are you a student at the University of Sydney?

Mr Morris: No, I'm not. I was representing the Australasian Union of Students.

Senator SCARR: I don't want to put you in a difficult position. If we had time, we could potentially go in camera. Can I invite you to perhaps make a confidential submission outlining that behaviour? The statement you made really does concern me. I can feel the hesitation. It's palpable. I'm deeply sorry you're in that position; I really am.

CHAIR: Senator Scarr will have a chance to put these things, so maybe we can have a discussion during the break.

Senator SCARR: Yes. It's deeply concerning. The submission of the Australasian Union of Jewish Students singles out two universities in particular in terms of their lack of response. You give incidents at all universities, but the University of Sydney is one of them, as is the University of Melbourne. How do you respond to the University of Sydney saying—this is from Mr Scott 's letter—'Throughout, we have prioritised the safety and wellbeing of all members of our community'? That's what he says on page 1 of his submission. He continues: 'while at the same time upholding free speech and academic freedom as required by the law and registration standards of the university.' What's your response to that statement?

Mr Morris: Statements like that and statements like 'there is no place for antisemitism on campus' clearly do not reflect the reality for Jewish students on campus. Honestly, it feels contemptful at the end of the day, because this hasn't been about academic freedom and free speech, because Jewish students have not been able to exercise those rights, due to the intimidation they have faced on that campus. To suggest that there has been balancing of the wellbeing of all students when the coin has fallen very clearly on one side consistently over the last 11 months is laughable.

Senator SCARR: Is one of the reasons why we need an independent judicial inquiry that academics and students need to have a safe forum to convey their complaints, situations and experiences to someone independent from the university so that they have confidence that they will not be subject to persecution, victimisation or discriminatory behaviour in response to them having made those complaints or giving that testimony? Is that one of the fundamental reasons why we need a judicial inquiry?

Prof. Prawer: Yes.

Mr Morris: Unequivocally.

Senator SCARR: Is another reason that we need a judicial inquiry so that it has the powers to obtain documentation and other evidence under force of law to get to the bottom of this issue, because without a judicial inquiry you simply don't have the powers to delve into what is actually happening within the universities, including when complaints are made?

Prof. Prawer: Yes. I'll just add quickly that we don't have access to, for example, the ANU internal process that turned an expulsion into a reversal of that expulsion. We just are not privy to it and not able to get access to it, and the university claim confidentiality, so their processes are opaque to us.

Mr Morris: A lot of the universities have so far been completely reticent and reluctant to—so unequivocally yes is the answer.

Prof. Eilam: Again, similarly to what has been said, we do not have access to what is happening with our complaints. When we lodge complaints to universities, we never receive a response. We do not know how that's being treated. Also, antisemitism on campus is a unique issue on its own, and therefore the notion that it can be diluted or dispersed under other kinds of investigations is probably not the most effective way to deal with a unique problem with the unique characteristics of antisemitism on campuses.

Senator SCARR: This is my last question. We have another panel we need to get to. Is one of the reasons we need an independent judicial inquiry that there is, as a matter of fact, a lack of confidence in the Jewish community, including amongst Jewish academics and Jewish students, that the Australian Human Rights Commission is the right forum to engage in that inquiry?

Prof. Prawer: Yes.

Mr Morris: Regrettably, but yes.

CHAIR: Thank you to our witnesses for appearing today. My colleagues don't know this, but my first press conference was 20 years ago, in protesting the safety of LGBTI students on campus, so I know it's a really difficult and fraught thing that you are doing. Thank you for appearing. I appreciate it.

ABEL, Ms Simone, Head of Legal, Executive Council of Australian Jewry [by video link]

CASSUTO, Mr Alon, Chief Executive Officer, The Zionist Federation of Australia [by video link]

RUBENSTEIN, Dr Colin, Executive Director, Australia/Israel & Jewish Affairs Council [by audio link]

WERTHEIM, Mr Peter, Co-Chief Executive Officer, Executive Council of Australian Jewry [by video link]

[09:18]

CHAIR: Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. Before we go to questions from the senators, would any of the organisations like to make a brief opening statement? I'll start with the Executive Council of Australian Jewry.

Ms Abel: I'll do that, thank you. We would like to acknowledge the traditional custodians of all the lands we meet on today and pay our respects to all elders past and present and to the children of today who are the elders of our future. This inquiry is a crucial first step for the Australian Jewish community in seeking accountability for the rise in antisemitic incidents and discourse on Australian university campuses and the culture of Jew hatred that is becoming normalised in academic settings.

The Executive Council of Australian Jewry is the peak elected representative body of the Australian Jewish community. For the last 35 years we have produced and published the annual report on antisemitism in Australia, which tracks the number and type of antisemitic incidents occurring in Australia each year and trends in antisemitic discourse.

Antisemitism on university campuses is not a new phenomenon. Jewish student groups and academic staff have, for years, been meeting university leaders to warn them of the increasingly toxic circumstances under which they are being forced to work and study. They have been politely and sympathetically heard, but their warnings have mostly been ignored. Over the last 11 months they have felt betrayed by the university leadership. Universities have tended to insist on complainants proving a legal standard of discrimination or vilification, even when their codes of conduct plainly do not require this. While telling Jewish students and staff they have not been vilified, they have suggested that they drop specific subjects and do their studies or work remotely because it's unsafe for them to be on campus.

The mess these universities are now in is the predictable outcome of their approach, yet these university leaders appear to have learned nothing. The Go8 submission to this inquiry shows that they are still locked into the same old mindset. They still equate menacing, harassing and abusive behaviour by students, staff and off-campus agitators with free speech. They still pretend that calls for the destruction of Israel or the Jewish people or the use of hateful and demonising language towards Jews and Israelis is acceptable political discourse, and they reflexively mention Islamophobia every time they mention antisemitism, creating a false competition between two abhorrent types of hatred when not a single one of the encampments has been accused of engaging in Islamophobia.

We know antisemitism when we see it or experience it. Attempts to negate or minimise our lived experience or to try to define it for us are a form of misappropriation and distortion that would never be tolerated with reference to any other minority group. It is for this reason that, with the exception of a handful of Jewish fringe minigroups, all of the Jewish organisations and individuals who have made submissions to your inquiry, and those who have told us that they have made de-identified submissions, have supported a judicial inquiry.

Universities used to be places where the unbiased pursuit of truth in good faith was considered a virtue. If we want the truth to emerge about the shadow that antisemitism has passed over the physical and online spaces at universities, we cannot leave it to those who have failed their Jewish students and staff so comprehensively over so many years to investigate themselves. Nor can we leave it, sadly, to the Australian Human Rights Commission, a body which has published a self-serving definition of antisemitism that has been manufactured by an anti-Israel group. For those of us who still believe that the truth matters, a judicial inquiry is the only way forward. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. Mr Cassuto.

Mr Cassuto: I'd also like to acknowledge I'm joining from Wurundjeri land of the eastern Kulin nation, and I'd like to acknowledge our First Nations who, just like the Jewish people, have had a continual connection to and presence in their land for thousands of years.

Thank you for this important opportunity. I'm CEO of the Zionist Federation of Australia, an elected representative body of the Australian Jewish community. The ZFA recommends that the Senate committee endorse the bill for a commission of inquiry into antisemitism at Australian universities that can compel witnesses under oath and establish best practice measures for all universities.

It's undeniable that since October 7 there has been an explosion of hostile, violent and antisemitic incidents on campuses across Australia. This is just a very small sample of what Jewish students and staff have had to put up with on campuses recently: Nazi salutes at an ANU meeting; chants of—and I am so sorry to have to use these words—'Fuck the Zionists' and 'Fuck you, Zionist dogs,' at Deakin University—

CHAIR: Mr Cassuto, I know that language is really offensive to you but also to others. Perhaps if there's some evidence like that you can give it to us in writing. I apologise for pulling you up. I know that you really want to stress how awful that language is, but there are parliamentary proceedings I need to manage today. Thank you for understanding.

Mr Cassuto: I won't be using that language again, and I would like to hope others—

CHAIR: Thanks, Mr Cassuto. I appreciate that.

Mr Cassuto: And there have been protesters expressing support for Hamas and calling for Jews to be barred from campus at Melbourne university.

This eruption of antisemitism didn't come out of nowhere and it did not come off a low base. An independent survey that we commissioned of Jewish students in April 2023 found that 64 per cent of Jewish students had experienced antisemitism firsthand—at ANU, it hit a staggering 84 per cent—57 per cent of Jewish students hid their identity to avoid antisemitism; and 85 per cent of the students who had been targeted didn't even bother filing a complaint, because they thought that the university wouldn't take them seriously. We shared these results with university leaders in August 2023, and now the situation is significantly worse.

No other minority would be expected to put up with the sheer scale of hatred that we have witnessed on our campuses. Calling for a judicial inquiry is not about curtailing academic freedom. Jewish students and academics are simply asking for the same protections as every other minority. What distinguishes the universities that have managed the situation effectively from those that haven't is strong leadership. Allowing a UK listed terrorist organisation and extremist group, Hizb ut-Tahrir, on campus to participate in protests at USYD is not strong leadership. Overturning the expulsion of an ANU student who declared on ABC Radio that Hamas, a terrorist organisation, 'deserves our unconditional support' is not strong leadership.

Universities are now responsible for fostering an environment on campuses where students have been given the green light to do or say whatever they want with zero consequences. There's a complete lack of trust by Jewish students and staff that their institutions have their safety as a priority. The only way for us to restore this trust is for a judicial inquiry to ensure that it can't be breached like this again. Some may argue that a judicial inquiry isn't needed; they may claim that universities already have protocols to handle antisemitism, but the lived experiences of Jewish students and staff—some of which we heard just now from AUJS, as well as from the academic alliance—tell a very different, far more troubling story.

Senators, enough is enough. The situation on our campuses is untenable. I'll finish with this: the only way to confront this shameful stain on our academic institutions is through a judicial inquiry with royal-commission-like powers, for the sake of both our universities and their Jewish students and staff.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. Dr Rubenstein, do you have a brief opening statement you would like to make?

Dr Rubenstein: I do. Thank you, Chair. I'll reiterate many of the themes conveyed by my colleagues. AIJAC thanks the committee for reviewing this bill and urges it to recommend its passage. The need to establish a commission of inquiry into antisemitism in Australian universities is urgent, given the spike in antisemitism we've seen since October 7 last year. Jewish students and staff have faced significant threats to their safety and wellbeing and have been obstructed from fully participating in campus life. The incidents are serious and numerous. Students have been harassed, filmed without consent, screamed at, followed and even physically blocked from accessing parts of campuses. Some Jewish staff have required security protection. These alarming acts of antisemitism combined with universities' apparent reluctance to address the issues robustly make it clear that current measures and indeed resolve are totally insufficient.

Suggested proposals such as the Human Rights Commission study into campus racism fail to adequately address the severity and distinct nature of antisemitism. Overseas inquiries have been conducted through investigations and taskforces, for example, at prominent institutions like Columbia University and Stanford University. These efforts have yielded firm recommendations for addressing the untenable circumstances faced by many Jewish individuals and Israelis within the university environment. I would urge the committee to read through a summary of their conclusions and recommendations. In Australia a fully fledged commission of inquiry would be superior to individual universities undertaking their own inquiries, but those inquiries did document instances of faculty misusing their authority to stigmatise and humiliate Jewish students. Many Jewish students, faculty and staff reported that their complaints of misconduct were often dismissed by administrators, with some being directed to seek mental health counselling instead of receiving appropriate redress. The inquiries have revealed troubling findings about faculty members failing to act, and similar patterns I would argue have emerged in Australian universities, where institutional indifference often results in the perception that antisemitism is acceptable; it has been normalised. This can't be allowed to continue.

To conclude, AIJAC believes the commission of inquiry, once established, should have three goals: (1) to provide a comprehensive account of the state of antisemitism on university campuses in our country, (2) to rigorously assess the actions—and inactions, for that matter—of university administrations to determine whether they have fulfilled their duty of care to staff and students and their legal and moral responsibilities in addressing antisemitism and (3) to conduct a thorough review of the regulatory framework governing universities in relation to antisemitism and other forms of intolerance and to determine that immediate reforms are necessary to ensure compliance with the obligations identified in the previous objective. This recognition that the current rules and procedures are inadequate is as true in Australia as it is in the United States and necessitates an immediate and thorough review and overhaul to ensure they effectively address the crisis at hand. The inquiries conducted in the United States have produced vital recommendations that Australian universities must seriously consider adopting.

To conclude, AIJAC urges the committee to recommend that the Senate passes this bill. An appropriately empowered commission of inquiry is crucial to address this escalating antisemitism crisis we witness in our country. It is essential for protecting the safety of Jewish students and staff and ensuring the integrity of Australia's higher education system. Without decisive action this dangerous situation will only worsen, and it threatens to undermine the cohesion of our multicultural democracy.

Senator HENDERSON: Good morning, everyone. I really appreciate your attendance today. I want to just firstly turn to your evidence, Ms Abel. You are particularly critical of the submission of the Group of Eight, and I'm also looking at the submission of Universities Australia, where they say:

I also want to emphasise that universities are deeply committed to fostering safe, respectful and inclusive environments for all students, staff and campus users …

Can you elaborate on your concerns about the submissions of both Universities Australia and the Group of Eight?

Ms Abel: Absolutely. There seems to be a lot of confusion around the application of the French model code on freedom of speech and protection from discrimination and racial vilification, and this has been a constant thread in how the universities have approached the issue of the rise of antisemitism on campuses over many years, asserting that they are doing everything to protect free speech whilst also combating antisemitism. Of course, we all know that there's a point at which free speech crosses a line and becomes unlawful. At that point, invoking free-speech protections damages the access of other people to their rights. I think the universities have shown a very confused approach both in that submission and just generally at the various campuses. This is a recurrent issue, and we've seen it ourselves at the ECAJ in terms of how the universities have handled their complaints with students and staff.

For example, there was an informational session on Hamas hosted at the University of Sydney. The session itself was not informational at all; it was propagandist. We had two students there that we were aware of, and we saw lots of promotional materials around the university about the event. The promotional materials depicted the image of the Israeli tank that was captured by Hamas terrorists when they crossed the border into southern Israel on 7 October; it was a very violent image, which I'm sure you're all familiar with. This is the kind of material that has been protected by free speech. We've had complaints about that particular session. The university has come back to the complainants and defended the propaganda materials around the campus and defended the session, saying it was a free-speech situation and an informational session for people to learn more about what was happening. But, in fact, having a session where we talk about Hamas at the same time as lording it as a national resistance movement is clearly not an instance of free speech; it's quite obviously extremely intimidating and threatening to Jewish students and staff. That's just an example, but that's the kind of thing we've seen all over campuses in Australia since 7 October but beforehand as well. That's the same confused approach that's being taken in both those submissions you referred to.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you, Ms Abel. We've got limited time to get through lots of questions, but we really appreciate your evidence today.

Mr Cassuto, I refer to New York University's change in policy. The university has made a specific policy:

… our non-discrimination and anti-harassment policy cannot be shielded by using 'Zionist' as a substitute or codeword for Jew or Israeli. Excluding Zionists from an open event, calling for the death of Zionists, applying a 'no Zionist' litmus test for participation in any NYU activity, is not allowed.

I'm referring to a statement by the NYU, published on its website on 27 August 2024. Is this not an example where universities have fundamentally failed Jewish students by allowing this sort of language to fuel antisemitism on a number of university campuses?

Mr Cassuto: We're here today having this inquiry and discussion because there is a crisis at universities across Australia, a crisis of antisemitism, that is shown to be something that every Jewish student across different campuses is experiencing—so the systemic failure to understand what it means to be a Jewish student and staff member on campus and the discrimination they are experiencing. There seems to be a real confusion around this point of antisemitism versus anti-Zionism. We would say this is not about freedom of speech; this is about hate speech and racism. A vast majority of Jews in Australia identify as Zionist. They have a close and personal relationship with Israel; you'd be hard-pressed to find Jewish people in Australia who don't have family and friends living there. Zionism, contrary to popular belief, is not some modern movement that started in the 19th century; it's a fundamental Jewish value that's existed for thousands of years, and it is the Jewish people's connection to Israel. It would take a very creative and reckless person, or a very political actor, to tell me that anti-Zionism is completely incapable of being antisemitism. When we see Monash University protesters saying that Zionists are not welcome on campus, the majority of Jews read that as 'Jews are not welcome on campus.' When we hear 'all Zionists are terrorists', we hear that to mean a majority of Australian Jews are terrorists. When the erasure of Israel is called for on campuses, most Jews read that in only one way, which is, 'We are seeking the genocide of your family and your friends and your people in the State of Israel, where a majority of the Jews of the world live.'

ANU students performing Nazi gestures has nothing to do with Zionism. That is pure antisemitism. Similarly, at Deakin University, where students wearing kippahs and other identifiable Jewish symbols are sworn at, cursed at and attacked, that is pure antisemitism. Calling for Jews to be barred at Melbourne university is not anti-Zionism; it's antisemitism. So we see endless examples of where, under the auspices of freedom of speech or political protest, there is vile antisemitism taking root in our universities.

And, fundamentally, if you're endorsing and supporting Hamas, a genocidal terrorist organisation hell-bent on the destruction of the Jewish people and the State of Israel, that is antisemitism. Mike Burgess's comments made that clear, as did the Prime Minister's, and we are absolutely clear in what we're saying. We have no ambitions to curtail any type of freedom of speech. We have ambitions to stop hate speech and antisemitism on campuses across Australia.

Senator HENDERSON: . So what do you say when you hear universities argue that they're doing everything to protect all students and that they have zero tolerance approach to antisemitism on campus?

Mr Cassuto: I would say that the lived experience of Jewish students and staff demonstrates that that's manifestly wrong, or that universities are simply incapable of addressing this systemic, deeply rooted issue, which is why we need to no longer rely on individual leaders and universities to address this. This actually needs to be dealt with at the highest levels of government and to have a real clarity not only about the expectation of university leadership when it comes to antisemitism but also about modes of best practice that can set the standard for how to deal with antisemitism across Australia, because we have seen a difference between universities. Some have dealt with it effectively, and others have been completely absent and unable or unwilling to deal with it, which has resulted in really, quite frankly, a complete failure of their duty of care to university students and staff.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much. Dr Rubenstein, could you please give me, in a nutshell, your concerns about the way universities are currently dealing with antisemitism, and why a judicial inquiry is so important?

Dr Rubenstein: The evidence that's being produced, I think, overwhelmingly demonstrates the proposition that the university response has been lackadaisical, ineffective, a lack in duty of care and almost tantamount to the normalisation of anti-Israel bias and antisemitic behaviour on campus, implicitly acquiescing to the grotesque antisemitic behaviour that we've seen spread across universities in our country.

The notion, as Mr Cassuto pointed out, that it's only Zionists who are being attacked, not Jews, is preposterous. Anti-Zionism is tantamount to antisemitism. I think anybody cognisant of the realities understands that the existence and commitment to the State of Israel is a core aspect of Jewish identity, and anti-Zionism inherently is antisemitism today. 'From the rivers to the sea', a global intifada—this is antisemitism on steroids.

We have to really deplore the failure of the universities, even when they've complied with their own rules and regulations. The head of ASIO has pointed out that Australia is in a situation of escalated terrorism alert, from 'possible' to 'probable'. Any individual or organisations endorsing or supporting organisations like Hamas, which is a genocidal death cult, and illegal and proscribed in Australia, as is Hizballah, are really treading on thin ice. We're seeing the espousal of hatred and vilification and even incitement to violence by various individuals on campus and university administrations simply failing to respond adequately.

That's why I've suggested to the committee having a look at some of the recommendations that come out of the American situation and inquiries at Columbia and Standford. I've certainly witnessed the process at Columbia University, and in a way so much of this goes back to the 1975 shameful 'Zionism is racism' resolution at the United Nations, which was emphatically revoked, of course. And as an Australian I'm proud to say, and Australians should be proud, that it was the Labor government and Prime Minister Hawke who led the revocation of that iniquitous resolution. If only we were in a similar situation today.

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry to cut in. Thank you, but I've got very limited time. I just want to quickly move to the statement by the Zionist Federation of Australia, Mr Cassuto, which was issued on 29 May 2024, calling for the University of Sydney vice-chancellor, Mark Scott, to resign. Could you explain why you've taken that position?

Mr Cassuto: Fundamentally I think we heard from the Jewish students directly that Mark Scott failed in his duty. For weeks anti-Israel protests calling for an intifada—the ethnic cleansing of Jews—were taking place on his campus, and the university, under his leadership, completely failed to ensure a safe environment for Jewish students and staff. When you think about Mark Scott's responsibility as the leader, and the shadow that he casts over that university—which, as we heard from the students directly, was the worst of all the universities—the university capitulated to intimidation tactics of these protestors. Individuals were ignoring university rules. They were threatening and intimidating Jewish students. They were encouraging children to chant about ethnic cleansing of Jews. And they've been rewarded for their actions. A lot of their demands were met. There were encampment members whose objectives were to exclude Jews from Sydney University and who were invited to join a working group.

Part of this is, in a sense, a reflection of the systemic breakdown of the systems of universities that are meant to deal with exactly these issues. That showed us that there was a lack of leadership, a lack of willingness to apply existing rules and standards as well as complete capitulation in the face of intimidation. So, really I think one of the biggest issues is that Mark Scott's engagement with Jewish and Israeli students was extremely substandard, to put it mildly. There was no invitation for them to join a working group. You heard earlier about his attitude towards Jewish students. That provided anti-Israel protesters with a powerful and disturbing lesson that set the tone for universities across Australia—that intimidation works and that hatred gets results. He delivered this message that basically Jewish students' and staff's views, feelings and safety are not a concern to him, and I think that is an absolute travesty and demands a change in leadership in order to re-establish a safe environment for Jewish students and staff.

Senator HENDERSON: I will need to pass the call around. Thanks, Chair.

CHAIR: Thank you very much for your evidence and for your submissions. As you would be aware, it would take some time for a commission of inquiry to be established, and then for investigations or hearings, and then for recommendations to be made and implemented. In terms of some of the steps that might be able to be taken now, there have been recommendations in some of your evidence and also from the Special Envoy to Combat Antisemitism in Australia about some urgent actions that have been recommended, and I want to ask a little bit about that. In terms of best practice policy for universities or to have something set up so that universities are encouraged to or required to put best practice in place, are you seeking to have that done immediately without necessarily going through a commission of inquiry? I'm trying to separate out the things that could be done immediately or urgently to combat what is happening right now on campuses. Everyone might have a view on that. We'll start with Mr Wertheim.

Mr Wertheim: There are some immediate things that can be done, but they are not new. They have been put to universities repeatedly over the years. I have personally attended meetings over many years with students and staff where they've met with the leadership of universities and put these proposals to them. It's important that certain things are done immediately, but it's also equally important that we don't ignore the underlying issues. Very often, even when universities express a preparedness and a willingness to look at this problem seriously and to try to address it, they find themselves hamstrung by a whole array of legal and policy constraints that limit their freedom of action. It may be something in the relevant enterprise bargaining agreement, or it may be something in one of their other policies, or it may be something in the legislation under which the university is constituted or the by-laws. That is why we need a judicial inquiry. A judicial inquiry would be uniquely placed to look at that broad range of legal and policy constraints that go well beyond the legislation that is within the specialist remit of the Australian Human Rights Commission and look at the broad range of legal and policy considerations that are brought to bear when considering these issues and can make recommendations, if necessary, for the relevant reforms that are needed and also for the relevant policy changes and attitudinal and cultural changes that are needed.

I'll point to one example. At the University of Sydney, some years ago, the university actually did the right thing and terminated the employment of an academic who had been engaged in an especially egregious series of behaviours of an antisemitic nature. The academic, with the support of the union, challenged that dismissal, and it ran through four court cases over a number of years before the matter was finally resolved in the university's favour. It shouldn't have to come to that. If we're just looking at some of the remedial measures that you're alluding to, Chair, and ignoring those underlying issues, then we are not going to really address the problem and nothing fundamentally will change, and, in 10 or 20 years time, we'll be looking back at this inquiry as a missed opportunity. We have to have that judicial inquiry to look at that broad range of legal and policy considerations that are constraining universities in their conduct in their freedom of action even when they're willing and able to address these problems.

Mr Cassuto: Regarding your earlier question around what can be done, we believe that one of the insights from the widespread survey that we conducted is that students are simply not confident that, if they make a complaint, anything will be done about it. So we believe there's a need for a thorough examination of the complaints procedure and how to restore confidence in that complaints procedure. There should be a national model to standardise how complaints about discrimination against Jewish students are handled. In some universities, antisemitism is not even one of the options that can ticked when you're putting forward a complaint around discrimination.

We also believe that there should be an oversight body, such as an ombudsman, to whom students who are unsatisfied can make a complaint. We also think that there are a lot of policies that are simply not being enforced. I think the university administrations have the ability to take action but are simply not doing so, and so we need to examine why that's the case. We also think that there's a need for education about modern antisemitism, because clearly a lot of this is borne out of the fact that there is a lack of understanding of what it means to be discriminated against as a Jewish student or staff member at universities, in particular by those who are handling complaints. We know that there are examples of complaints that were dismissed because of a lack of understanding of the Jewish experience on campus.

Finally, we recommend that all universities—as Monash and Melbourne University have already done—should adopt the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance definition of antisemitism. We think that that's a very important low-hanging fruit and quick next step in terms of creating a standardised understanding of antisemitism that's already been embraced on a bipartisan basis by the federal, New South Wales and Victorian governments as well as, as I mentioned, universities that have already adopted it. This definition is widely recognised by governments, as well as Holocaust experts globally. It clearly states what antisemitism is and what it's not, and any criticism of that definition is, I think, generally because of wilful ignorance.

CHAIR: Thank you. That's really helpful. I will hand over the call, but, perhaps on notice, could you give the committee your views around the government's introduced legislation to establish a national student ombudsman. There will be an inquiry into that bill, I believe, by another committee, but if you could maybe give us on notice your views about the capacity of that organisation, when it's set up, to deal with some of the complaints handling you've expressed, that would be helpful. But I will hand over the call to the deputy chair.

Senator SCARR: My first question relates to a point that was raised by the chair, and that is that it would take some time for a judicial inquiry to complete its investigations, to gather the evidence, to assess all the evidence, to hear from relevant witnesses and then to make recommendations. On the face of it, that is obviously correct. However, I was reflecting on that, and I want to put to you the proposition that the announcement, the initiation, of an independent judicial inquiry with the power to take evidence from students and staff, including on a confidential basis, to require witnesses to appear, to access documents and require documents to be produced—the actual initiation of that inquiry itself could really act as a positive recalibration of what is happening on our campuses and put the high levels of management of those campuses on notice that they must look very deeply at how they respond to these issues. I want to put that proposition to you and get your response to it. Could I start with you, Mr Wertheim.

Mr Wertheim: I fully support what you've just put, with respect, Senator. It will absolutely change the atmospherics. It will create the right cultural environment within which these considerations will be undertaken. It will also, I think, act as a spur to putting forward some of the interim measures that we've been talking about, in terms of expanded powers of the ombudsman and improved complaints procedures, and a better understanding of what antisemitism is. I would also add that there should be education programs for university administrators so that they understand not just the need to adopt a definition but what it means and what it doesn't mean and so on.

All of those things are helpful, but, as I said earlier, they will not address the underlying issue of the broader legal and other constraints under which universities operate. That is for an inquiry. Yes, it might take a little longer to do that, but it's equally necessary. So, yes, I agree that the announcement will do everything that you said it will do and more. It will also set the right parameters, I think, for examining the underlying structural and cultural constraints on universities and getting the right outcome in the long run. I think that two-step process is the way to go for the reasons that you have outlined.

Ms Abel: I would also just add to everything that has been said that we shouldn't be under any illusions about how fast moving any alternative would be in any event or how effective it would be. As you've all had experience of the Change the course report, back in 2017 there was this bold idea that we would get to the bottom of this systemic issue of sexual violence on campuses. Here we are, in 2024, and we are yet to see a national student ombudsman introduced.

So this idea that a judicial inquiry would be so much more slow moving than any alternative I think is just not borne out by reality. I agree with everything you've said. In fact, we have already seen, anecdotally, that just the fact of this Senate inquiry has resulted in more responsiveness from universities around some of the issues that have been raised. So there's no question in my mind that having this process and ultimately moving towards a judicial inquiry will be highly effective.

The other thing I would add is there are some serious systemic issues that universities have proven they can't get to on their own—for example, issues like foreign interference, which you would have heard the special envoy talk about the other day, and also the embedded antisemitism in institutions that universities claim that they can't actually control—for example, some of the student publications and the student general meetings that have taken place. You would have no doubt heard about the student general meeting that happened at the University of Sydney where a motion was passed essentially condoning violent resistance by Hamas, and the meeting refused to condemn the acts of October 7. The university's response was that they couldn't really control this.

We know that, actually, there needs to be a greater level of external oversight to get to the bottom of this. I have no doubt that this is the start of a process, but we do ultimately need that judicial inquiry, because that will get at the truth of the situation.

Mr Cassuto: To build on what has been said: this did not start on October 7; it just got much, much worse. We know this because we conducted our survey long before October 7. It was an independent survey that reached hundreds and hundreds of Jewish students. One in 14 Jewish students across the country was surveyed, and a majority of them had experienced antisemitism on their campuses. We know that has gotten a lot worse since 7 October, but after that survey in April 2023 we wrote to nearly all MPs, to senators and to university chancellors. We offered the possibility of meetings. We met with a lot of different universities—Deakin, La Trobe, Macquarie, UNSW, Sydney university, UTS and UQ—and we had many other meetings scheduled that, unfortunately, because of the events on October 7, had to be postponed.

We also met with the education minister and shadow education minister. One of the challenges that we put to them was that there is a systemic breakdown of an ability to protect Jewish students and staff. We know that since October 7 this got worse, but this has existed for years. The only way to really put some accountability in place and to drive systemic change is through judicial inquiry, because we know that in the absence of that it will continue for many more years. So this is really a line in the sand, and I'm glad that we are having this conversation today and that we are able to air this at the highest levels of government, because this systemic failure has been happening for years. In order for it not to continue for many more years, it's time to shine a light on it and demand some very serious systemic change.

Dr Rubenstein: Senator, I endorse your proposition completely and the measures recommended by my colleagues. I would simply add that there are things that need to be done in the interim, and this is where the US experience or recommendations are useful. For example, universities should forbid conduct that disrupts teaching, learning and research. They really shouldn't allow anyone to interfere with their core activities—from classroom disruptions to noisy demonstrations or actions designed to prevent invited speakers from expressing their views. They should resist any efforts to close off campus public spaces for any individuals or groups. They should absolutely enforce the rules that they have because rules mean nothing unless they're enforced, and unfortunately we're seeing too much of this in action—a lackadaisical response.

Moreover, they should be checking student ID cards to make sure no outside aggressors or radical extreme groups are allowed into the protests or on the encampments. Obviously we've seen that in Australia. Consider introducing a system of escalating punishments for serious violations. These are all things that need to be considered and addressed and acted on in the interim. But, to get to the bottom of this and to deal with the systemic failure and problems that we have, there's no alternative to the judicial inquiry which we're discussing today.

Senator SCARR: Following on from that last statement you made, Dr Rubenstein, in relation to 'there's no alternative to the judicial inquiry', I note that some stakeholders have said that the Australian Human Rights Commission's study of racism is perhaps an alternative forum. I've read the Executive Council of Australian Jewry's submission. There seems to be a lack of confidence. Just as a matter of fact, there's a lack of confidence in the Jewish community with respect to the Australian Human Rights Commission being able at this point in time to conduct an appropriate inquiry. I'd just like to give an opportunity for each of the witnesses to comment on why we need to have an independent judicial inquiry as opposed to leaving it to the Australian Human Rights Commission's study of racism. Mr Wertheim?

CHAIR: They will have to keep their answers fairly brief. We're just running a little behind.

Senator SCARR: Feel free to also provide additional information on notice as well.

Mr Wertheim: The Human Rights Commission has a limited remit. Its specialty is the antidiscrimination legislation. As we've been discussing earlier, what's called for is a much broader investigation that might look at EBAs, the Fair Work Act, the acts under which universities are constituted—things that go well beyond the specialty of the Human Rights Commission. That's the first point.

The second point is that, yes, there is a lack of confidence because of an unfortunate history in recent years with the Human Rights Commission being perceived to have downplayed or ignored antisemitism. The Human Rights Commission has a new president; we have some hope that under new leadership that situation will be repaired, but it will take some time. In the interim, we have to get moving on this issue. While things are changing at the Human Rights Commission, we need to get underway with something that the Jewish students, Jewish staff and Jewish community are going to have confidence in. Unfortunately, at the moment that's not the Human Rights Commission. Only a judicial inquiry will satisfy that and will elicit the sort of confidence that will enable Jewish students and staff and other members of the community who have experienced or witnessed antisemitic incidents at universities to come forward.

Senator SCARR: Are there any other quick contributions? Again, feel free to take it on notice.

Mr Cassuto: I'll just say that the Australian Human Rights Commission has been pretty much absent as far as the Jewish community is concerned since 7 October as we've seen an onslaught of antisemitism. Just by way of example, we wrote to the Human Rights Commissioner in May. We heard back from a junior research assistant in June saying that they would reach out to us, and we haven't heard from them since. I'd say that this is indicative of their sense of urgency and capacity to deal with this national systemic eruption in antisemitism, and that is why I think our community has a very low level of confidence that they have the capacity and capability to deal with what is an enormous problem for our nation.

Dr Rubenstein: I will just briefly add that it's got a broadbrush approach without a specific focus on antisemitism, and so it'll fail to address the unique aspects of antisemitism. Finally, it really has no powers to compel vice-chancellors and other administrators to provide evidence, so I certainly think it's inadequate to deal with this problem.

Ms Abel: Senator Scarr—

CHAIR: Very quickly, and then we'll have to wrap up. Sorry.

Senator SCARR: Sorry, last contribution.

Ms Abel: I think the judicial inquiry will also be helpful for the Australian Human Rights Commission, because it will necessarily elicit information that may well inform any report or study that they conduct. It doesn't need to be one over the other. We in the Jewish community believe that a broadbrush, generic approach to racism has proven ineffective, because we wouldn't be here otherwise. The 'Racism. It Stops With Me' campaign of the Australian Human Rights Commission, which has now been running for a few years, is a prime example of that. So we believe that this judicial inquiry is absolutely essential, which isn't in any way to diminish our hope that we can rebuild a relationship and rebuild our confidence in the Human Rights Commission under new leadership. We think there's great potential there, but we think that there is a serious issue here that needs to be properly explored, and that information will be helpful for the commission, for the government and for universities.

CHAIR: Thank you very much, and thanks, all of you, for staying on the line a little bit longer for us. Thank you for taking time to give evidence today. As the deputy chair indicated, if there's further information you'd like to provide on notice then we would welcome that. The committee will now suspend for morning tea.

Senator HENDERSON: Chair, I apologise. Can I just—

CHAIR: No, we're now 10 minutes over, which is going to cut into the time of other witnesses.

Senator HENDERSON: Can I just ask one more—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, you can put it on notice to the witnesses.

Senator HENDERSON: Okay, thanks, Chair.

CHAIR: The committee will now suspend for morning tea.

Proceedings suspended from 10:11 to 10:21

SCHWARTZ, Ms Sarah, Executive Officer, Jewish Council of Australia [by video link]

STRAKOSCH, Dr Elizabeth, Advisory Committee, Jewish Council of Australia [by video link]

CHAIR: I now welcome representatives from the Jewish Council of Australia via videoconference. Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. Just to repeat a couple of comments from my opening statement this morning, I've asked senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure that discussion is relevant to the bill today. Witnesses are reminded that, if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party, the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond. Do you have an opening statement you'd like to make before we go to questions from the senators?

Ms Schwartz: Yes, we do. Thank you very much for having us today. I want to start by acknowledging the Aboriginal people whose lands I'm coming in from today, the Wurundjeri people. I appear with my colleague, Dr Elizabeth Strakosch, and we both also work at the University of Melbourne.

The Jewish Council is a diverse coalition of Jewish academics, lawyers, writers and teachers who work with other racialised groups to tackle racism. Our positions represent a growing number of Jews who support Palestinian human rights, including the many Jewish students who attend the antiwar demonstrations on campus, which are falsely called 'antisemitic' in some submissions to this inquiry. As stated in the French review, universities have a duty to foster the wellbeing of students and staff, but this doesn't extend to a duty to protect any person from feeling offended by the lawful speech of another. In this vein, it is important to distinguish between Jewish identities, which are a rightly protected category under all racial discrimination laws, and the political ideology of Zionism, which is not. However, this bill and this inquiry appear set to do the opposite, and we oppose them for three reasons.

Firstly, an inquiry on these terms risks increasing antisemitism. Antisemitism is real and rising in Australian society. It is linked to a rise in the far right, and it is encouraged by the conflation of Jews and Israel. The data suggests that rises in antisemitism occur at times when Israel's violence against Palestinians increases. Jews in Australia have never been more visible. Our identities and communities are constantly platformed, written about in the media and weaponised by politicians to justify support for a nation-state accused of genocide. We consider that this proposed inquiry will feed into this discourse by framing criticism of Israel as antisemitic and thereby conflating Jewish identities with support for Israel.

Secondly, any inquiry will likely be used to stifle support for Palestinian rights. The IHRA definition of antisemitism proposed by this bill has long been criticised and rejected by scholars of antisemitism, including its own author, because it is used to chill criticism of Israel and Zionism, particularly silencing Palestinian voices. An inquiry which adopts a nebulous definition of antisemitism and conflates it with calls for justice for Palestinians will be used to stoke the kind of culture war about threatening or disloyal intellectuals which has a long antisemitic history.

Finally, such an inquiry risks pitting racialised groups against each other. An inquiry into antisemitism alone place it in a category separate to other forms of racism, thus creating a perception of a hierarchy of racism which we say will only generate division between Jewish and other racialised groups. We urge those here to tackle racism on campus holistically and in partnership with all groups affected. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thanks very much for that opening statement and for your submission and for appearing today. Obviously, we will hear a range of views from a range of organisations today. Thank you for sharing yours. I think some of the evidence that we have received, including from the special envoy, is compelling about the threats that Jewish students are feeling on campus right now. I know in your submission you are talking about antiracism strategies and getting universities to develop some of those strategies or some best-practice policies around dealing with, when a student is feeling that way, how they can seek some support and help and have a complaint dealt with. What are some of those strategies that you would like to see universities implement? Are there things that can be done without a commission of inquiry more urgently?

Dr Strakosch: We do acknowledge that a lot of Jewish students on campus are feeling scared and feeling targeted. We also want to highlight that many, many Palestinian staff and students and many Muslim staff and students are also feeling incredibly silenced and targeted on campuses and elsewhere in society at the moment. So our concern is that, in singling out antisemitism, we are not also identifying those very real challenges to other groups and also not identifying the foundational racism that is experienced by Indigenous people, including in universities, and has been for a long time. So we know that universities need to tackle racism, but this is an interconnected phenomenon. There are moves happening at different universities—and we also support the AHRC inquiry into racism on campus—to develop a holistic approach that includes rigorous reporting mechanisms but doesn't single out any particular group with the risk of ignoring others or pitting groups against one another.

CHAIR: Some of the experiences that students have expressed to us draw comparisons with the way that universities have previously dealt with complaints around sexual harassment or sexual assault on campus. Last week. the government introduced a bill to establish a national ombudsman for students to provide an independent complaints-handling mechanism. How do you see that body assisting with this broader problem of the way that students are able to seek protection and support?

Ms Schwartz: We would really support any independent bodies which are designed to tackle racism holistically and systemically, such as an ombudsman or such as the Australian Human Rights Commission. I think that it is really important for those bodies to understand the background of all forms of racism, including antisemitism, to understand the particular ways in which antisemitism manifests and also to understand the ways in which other forms of racism manifest as well.

It is crucially important—and this is really the fundamental basis of why we oppose this bill in particular—that both Jewish students and other students have a really clear view about what is racial discrimination and what is political speech. Those are the blurred boundaries that we've already heard in evidence this morning about antisemitism. Whilst that may be to the disappointment of some students because their political beliefs are being challenged on campus, the reality is that we need to be really clear about forms of unsafety that are caused by racial discrimination and forms of unsafety that are caused by political disagreement. That latter form of discomfort is a type of discomfort that is allowed to flourish within democratic societies. We should all be capable of having our political views challenged.

CHAIR: You've spoken about the Australian Human Rights Commission inquiry around the prevalence and impact of racism in Australian universities. What are your hopes for that inquiry? In particular, how do you think it should tackle antisemitism, Islamophobia and the tension that you talk about in terms of the difference? The difference between racism and political views is not a black and white issue all the time. What's your hope for how that inquiry will look at that issue?

Dr Strakosch: I suppose our hope would be the inquiry would adopt a quite careful and clear-sighted definition of antisemitism, not the IHRA definition, which, as Sarah mentioned, has been very widely critiqued and, in the places that it's been implemented on campus, has had a significant chilling effect on academic freedom. Those definitions which explicitly conflate Jewish people with Israel and identify criticism of the State of Israel, including criticism of the foundations of the State of Israel, as inherently antisemitic are deeply problematic in a democratic state.

As Sarah said, we heard at the last panel the insistence that anti-Zionism is always antisemitism. In fact, we feel that this kind of conflation is quite dangerous in a context where Israel is acting outside international law, is not responding to international pressure and is committing mass violence. It is very dangerous to continually conflate Jewish people and the State of Israel in that way. While antisemitism is real and rising and we shouldn't excuse it, we need to be very clear that we exclude legitimate criticism of states, including the principles on which they're founded if those principles exclude other people, in the same way that Australia, for example, could be, and often is, subjected to legitimate criticism of its founding principles and origins.

CHAIR: I'll hand over the call in a second. I have one last question. There are many bodies that could conduct an inquiry. The Australian Human Rights Commission inquiry is quite a broad one around racism and this particular issue around universities and antisemitism. This bill proposes a judicial inquiry, which you oppose. What about a broader parliamentary inquiry? Our inquiry here is actually quite defined: we're inquiring into the bill for an inquiry. What about a more broad-ranging parliamentary inquiry? Is that something that you think might fit the balance of what we're seeking to do here?

Ms Schwartz: I think we would support an inquiry into all forms of racism on university campuses. To single out antisemitism really risks those types of issues that I mentioned in my opening statement, where there is a perception of a hierarchy of racism. We're already seeing this play out in the way that Jewish identities are spoken about and the way that antisemitism is spoken about, as opposed to other forms of racism like Islamophobia and anti-First Nations racism. I think it does a disservice to the collective fight against racism if we single out antisemitism in this way.

Could I point briefly to some of the work that we are doing as an organisation, in collaboration with other groups, to fight racism, because I think that it is critically important in the fight against all forms of racism. We are doing joint work with a range of different Christian, Muslim, Palestinian groups, and Hindu groups as well, to combat racism. That's in the form of education, releasing joint statements and speaking to government bodies together. I think what that shows people is that the fights against these forms of racism that we're tackling are linked. One really glaring example of that was after the tragic Bondi incident, when, immediately after the incident, disinformation spread on the internet, first that the perpetrator was Jewish and second that the perpetrator was Muslim. That fed into some deeply racist discourses on the internet which were later found to be disinformation. That really shows the interlinking between these forms of racism and the need to tackle them together, and it shows, from a perception point of view, that this is a joint fight and not just a fight that is faced by Jewish people alone.

CHAIR: Thank you. Senator Scarr?

Senator SCARR: Thank you to the witnesses for appearing today. I note, Ms Schwartz, that in your opening statement you said, 'The Jewish Council of Australia is a diverse coalition of Jewish academics, lawyers, writers and teachers who work with other racialised groups to tackle racism.' I take it from that that the Jewish Council of Australia does not purport to be a body which represents the Jewish community in Australia; is that correct?

Ms Schwartz: Yes, that's correct. We don't represent the entirety of the Jewish community. If I could just clarify, we also don't say that the Jewish community is a monolith. We think it's important to acknowledge that there are multiple Jewish communities, and Jewish people, like any group of people, have a variety of different views. We speak for, and our views represent, the views of a fast-growing number of Jewish people, including the 800 Jewish people in Australia who have signed on to our core statement of principles. That statement of principles says that we believe that all forms of racism need to be tackled together, collectively.

Senator SCARR: If you're not a representative body for the Jewish community across the whole of Australia, why do you call yourselves the Jewish Council of Australia?

Ms Schwartz: Our name is related to an old Jewish organisation that existed and that has been written about by one of our co-executive officers. We are a council made up of academics and lawyers and experts on racism, and we speak to Jewish issues and antisemitism. That's the foundation for our name.

Senator SCARR: I'm comparing your organisation and the name, the Jewish Council of Australia, to, say, the Executive Council of Australian Jewry Inc., which uses the same word, 'council', yet the Executive Council of Australian Jewry has as its constituent bodies the New South Wales Jewish Board of Deputies, the Jewish Community Council of Victoria Inc., the Jewish Community Council of Western Australia Inc., the Queensland Jewish Board of Deputies, the Jewish Community Council of South Australia, the Hobart Hebrew Congregation, the ACT Jewish Community Inc.—I'm sorry, there's quite a number of them—the Australasian Union of Jewish Students, the Australian federation of WIZO, the Union for Progressive Judaism, the federation of Jewish aged care services, Maccabi Australia Inc., the National Council of Jewish Women, B'nai B'rith Australia/New Zealand, the Jewish National Fund of Australia and the Joint Distribution Committee Australia. So that, to me, has all the hallmarks of an umbrella representative council. It refers to itself as the Executive Council of Australia Jewry Inc. I note the history you refer to, but I put it to you again: why does the Jewish Council of Australia call itself a council when it is not a representative body? Isn't that misleading to the Australian people?

Ms Schwartz: I would ask you whether you asked the exact same question to the previous person on this inquiry, Dr Colin Rubenstein, who appeared for the Australia Israel Jewish Affairs Council, which also has 'council' in its name, is an unrepresentative body and has far fewer members on its website than us. I'm not sure that this is entirely relevant to this inquiry, but, if you're asking whether we are a representative group in the same way that ECAJ are, we're not and have never purported to be. We have stated from the very start of our launch that we represent an alternative Jewish perspective and one that is not heard by many mainstream Jewish organisations. It's devastating to us that many of our Jewish organisations in this moment have become for all intents and purposes Israel advocacy groups. That is what we're seeing within many mainstream organisations, and this really sparked the need for an alternative Jewish council.

Dr Strakosch: Could I just add that it's precisely the failure of the existing groups to represent the diversity of opinion. We know that recent evidence in the US has suggested that about a quarter of Jewish people either don't strongly identify with Israel or agree with the statement that Israel is an apartheid state. That segment of the Jewish community is not being heard and not being acknowledged. In speaking up, in seeking to make our voices heard, we are facing a great deal of attempts to—rather than engage with our ideas—undermine our legitimacy to speak in various ways. I'd suggest that this voice is an important voice to take into consideration when you're discussing issues of antisemitism, as you are in this inquiry.

Senator SCARR: You are given an opportunity to speak here, and we welcome your participation. I'll ask a further question. In the 14 pages of your submission, unlike the submissions received from the other Jewish organisations, you don't provide a single example, a single lived experience, of a student or staff member at a university suffering from antisemitism, subject to an antisemitism attack. Why?

Dr Strakosch: I think what we are tackling here is a difficult question of very slippery definitions of antisemitism and the strong feelings that many people have. But there are a range of scholars who are talking about things like the IHRA definition of antisemitism and the constant conflation of Israel and Jewishness and talking about the way that is cultivating an effective resonance or attachment between Jewish individuals and the Jewish state, such that, when they hear criticism of that state, it is experienced as fearsome and experienced as criticism or delegitimisation of their Jewishness and identity.

I can talk to that, to the extent that I didn't hear any criticism of Israel until I was 14. When I first heard political criticism of Israel, I was deeply shocked and affronted and I felt that this was an attack on me personally. We're not saying all experiences of antisemitism are not legitimate. We know antisemitism is rising. The far right is intensely antisemitic—it's in its DNA—and that is not being covered by an inquiry or a bill that is so focused on campuses, because campuses are clearly being used to identify the pro-Palestinian movement as the locus of antisemitism in our society.

What we suggest—and the reason we are not showcasing very emotive personal testimonies—is that there is emotion everywhere. There's emotion on every side. This is such a deeply distressing and vitriolic time that we actually need to be incredibly clear sighted about when racial harm is occurring and when it's not. I will give you an example. This was a chant at a pro-Palestinian rally at the university I work at that was circulated online and that went viral because it was recorded and it was said to have said the words: 'Vice-Chancellor, you can't hide. We want Jewish genocide.' In fact, that chant did not say that. It said, 'Vice-Chancellor, you can't hide. We charge you with genocide.' We acknowledge the people who heard that in the way it was circulated would have experienced it as deeply distressing and as antisemitic. However, the actual statements that were made were different, so we need to be very clear about feelings and facts.

Senator SCARR: On page 13 of your submission you talk about 'the subjective reality of the fears evident in the surveys'. Why do you refer to 'subjective reality' when there is clear and strong evidence—hundreds of submissions received—of Jewish students and staff being spat at, being physically abused, being physically assaulted, being fearful for their personal safety, being filmed et cetera? Why do you use this word 'subjective'? Why can't you admit that the objective reality is that there are absolutely horrific examples of antisemitism occurring on our campuses?

Ms Schwartz: If I could just clarify, Senator: we have stated multiple times throughout our submission and all of our public work that we are highly concerned about rises in antisemitism. And if I can speak from a personal perspective, we at the Jewish Council have been subjected to the types of vile antisemitism that you refer to and so we are, of course, not discounting or in any way discrediting those experiences of antisemitism. Since launching the council, we have received weekly, if not daily, emails and messages from far-right groups, from Neo-Nazi groups but also from some groups that want to blame all Jewish people for Israel's conduct. We experience that antisemitism ourselves. It is disgusting. It has no place on our university campuses.

This is the exact problem with this bill. Those instances of antisemitism which involve physical abuse or violence or targeting of Jewish people because they are Jewish people should absolutely be condemned. Universities should absolutely be equipped to deal with that type of racism, because these types of racism are highly dangerous for us. They are also dangerous for other groups who experience racism. We in no way discount those experiences of antisemitism. But what we say is that there needs to be clear-sighted definitions of antisemitism to ensure that we are adequately capturing those very vile experiences of antisemitism that you refer to, that we have ourselves personally experienced, from the types of political discomfort—the chant, this disinformation that gets circulated about the Palestine Solidarity Movement, which is not antisemitic. Much of that content is not antisemitic, and this is the real problem here.

If we have an inquiry, which for many intents and purposes will be used to air sentiments such as criticisms of Israel, criticisms of the political ideology of Zionism, and if those are termed to be antisemitic, then it means we are far worse off and not able to actually tackle those very real instances of antisemitism that were contained in many submissions to this inquiry. This is exactly the problem we see with this bill—that is, it is engaging in a political exercise rather than an evidence based exercise.

Senator SCARR: Ms Schwartz, you don't refer to a single example in your submission.

CHAIR: Senator Scarr—

Senator SCARR: Not a single one!

CHAIR: Senator Scarr—

Ms Schwartz: We actually do—

CHAIR: Sorry; I'm just going stop you. We have to go to our next witnesses. Senator Henderson was seeking the call. I am going to conduct this inquiry and this hearing in a respectful way. Given that the content we are talking about is ensuring the respect of students on campus, we're going to extend that respect to our witnesses. Senator Henderson, if you have a question then you have the call, and our next witnesses are waiting for us.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much, Chair. Good morning to you both. Dr Strakosch, do you agree that all forms of antisemitism are repugnant?

Dr Strakosch: Yes; absolutely, I do.

Senator HENDERSON: This is an inquiry looking into the coalition's bill to establish a judicial inquiry into campus antisemitism. I want to ask you about the ways in which universities have failed Jewish students and why better policies are required. Do you believe that displays of the swastika or displays of the Star of David with a cross through it at universities are antisemitic?

Dr Strakosch: I believe that a Star of David as a Jewish symbol shouldn't be targeted by hate speech, but we have to acknowledge that the State of Israel's flag also has a Star of David on it and that criticising states, including their flags, is a legitimate form of political speech, even though it's very uncomfortable. This is precisely why—

Senator HENDERSON: And sorry—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm going to go through this quickly—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson.

Senator HENDERSON: No; I'm just going to go through this quickly. What about the display of the swastika at universities?

Dr Strakosch: Personally, no, I do not agree with the use of the swastika to characterise a group of people.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm going to go through this as quickly as I can. Do you support slogans such as 'river to the sea' and 'intifada' being shouted on university campuses at Jewish students. Of course, as we know, 'intifada' is another way of calling for the destruction of Israel, as is 'river to the sea'. Do you support those slogans?

Dr Strakosch: Actually, I'm feeling like some of these questions are not giving us the space to legitimately address our submission to the inquiry and are instead seeking to trap—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, we've got limited time. We're trying to understand your concerns. Do you believe that those slogans are antisemitic?

Ms Schwartz: We've made multiple statements as an organisation, one on distinguishing between the Star of David and the Israeli flag, which we think is a very important thing for people to distinguish between and relates to the distinction between criticism of Israel and Jewish identity. And I'm going to get to the—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, I'm going to draw you back to my question.

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, you are going to let the witness answer the question.

Senator HENDERSON: No; I'm entitled to interrupt if the question's not being answered.

Ms Schwartz: I'm going to get to—

CHAIR: No. The witness is entitled to answer the question and she's doing that. They're not one-word-answer questions. Let's be respectful, shall we?

Senator HENDERSON: I'm entitled to prosecute—

Dr Strakosch: The question is about the slogan 'from the river to the sea'.

Senator HENDERSON: 'The river to the sea' and 'intifada', that's right. Do you believe that the use of those slogans on university campuses is antisemitic?

Dr Strakosch: No. In fact, 'from the river to the sea' has been widely acknowledged, including by the Palestinian movement, to refer to the equal treatment and democratic equality of all peoples, including Jewish people and Palestinian people, in the area covering Israel and Palestine.

Senator HENDERSON: Even the Prime Minister says that he recognises that that is a call for the destruction of Israel.

Senator SCARR: As a Jewish state.

Senator HENDERSON: As a Jewish state.

Ms Schwartz: The Prime Minister has also said that it is a slogan that is used by the Likud party to denote that there should not be equality between all citizens from the river to the sea. It is crucial for us to actually look at what these slogans mean and what these words mean. The word intifada is an Arabic word meaning uprising. Despite the fact that some people may perceive it in a different context, we can't say, as a blanket rule, that a word or a slogan is antisemitic as such when the people who are saying these slogans are specifically saying they are using them as calls for equality and as calls for change.

Senator HENDERSON: So you're not aware of the use of the word intifada in relation to representing the suicide bombing attacks on Jewish people in Israel? You're not aware of that at all?

Ms Schwartz: Of course we are aware of that. That's exactly why my answer specified that just because a word is used in one context doesn't mean that that is the context in which all people use it, and in multiple—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, I'm just going to move on because I've got very limited time.

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, we have to move to our next witnesses. You said you had one question, not a—

Senator HENDERSON: No, I didn't say I had one question. I've got some other questions, which are quick. Just a few more minutes please.

CHAIR: We do need to go to our next witnesses. We are going to be doing that in the next two minutes.

Senator HENDERSON: Do you condemn statements made on university campuses like 'Zionists are terrorists' and 'Zionists are not welcome' and do you believe they are antisemitic?

Dr Strakosch: I think a good place to end is to reiterate our statement that we feel it is very important that Jewishness and Zionism are not conflated, for the safety of Jewish people. Israel is acting in this way. The research tells us that when Israel conducts violence against Palestinian people antisemitism rises, because Jewish people are mistakenly perceived as responsible. Therefore, yes, Zionism is—

Senator HENDERSON: Can I direct you to the question: Do you condemn statements such as 'Zionists are terrorists' being displayed or shouted at Jewish students on university campuses? And do you believe that that type of statement is antisemitic?

Dr Strakosch: If they are shouted at Jewish people for being Jewish. However, strong and emotive criticism of Zionism in the State of Israel constitutes discomforting but legitimate political speech.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much. I think that sums up the sort of organisation you are.

CHAIR: Thank you for giving evidence today and thank you for your submission. If there was additional information, I think you said you would send it through to the committee. We appreciate your time. We need to go to our next witness. Thank you.

SLUCKI, Dr David, Director, Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation, Monash University

[10:55]

CHAIR: I now welcome Dr David Slucki of the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation at Monash University. I'll read out my spiel while you get settled.

Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. As I think you've heard me say to other witnesses, we are asking senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure discussion is relevant to the bill. Witnesses are reminded that if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and the opportunity to respond. Do you have a brief opening statement you'd like to make, before we go to questions?

Dr Slucki: I do, thank you. Thank you for inviting me to speak today. Like my peers before me, I want to acknowledge the traditional owners of the land on which we're gathered, and on the land on which my centre and university operate and work.

The evidence is mounting that antisemitism is rising sharply on university campuses and in Australian society at large. Research undertaken by numerous bodies, including the Australian Centre for Jewish Civilisation at Monash University, has shown a rapidly growing number of Jewish students and staff reporting that they feel marginalised or unsafe. The stories relate to researchers telling of a university system where the social cohesion on campus has broken down, where staff and students are increasingly unable to have difficult conversations and to truly hear and understand one another's pain and anguish.

Jewish students and staff feel that it is not only their peers but their institutions that have not taken their concerns seriously enough and have not been effective in listening to their experiences. University campuses are places where inquiring minds come together to grapple with the challenges of our time, where young people navigate complex ideas and learn to become leaders. The role of universities is to create an environment in which all our students can thrive and grow.

Monash University, one of the few universities in the world named for a Jewish public figure, has been proactive in its response, listening to students, working with staff and taking decisive action to mitigate antisemitism. The key to Monash's response was effective leadership: setting and enforcing clear boundaries through clear communication and through responding to breaches of Monash codes. That doesn't mean that Monash is free of antisemitism, and the number of submissions to this committee hearing from Monash students shows that to be the case. But the Monash experience does also reflect the research that shows the importance of clear leadership and decisive action in responding to antisemitism and working towards greater cohesion.

One Monash response that promises to have a measurable impact on our campuses and to provide frameworks for other universities is the campus cohesion project, a $1 million research program funded by Monash University to investigate the surge in antisemitism, Islamophobia and related prejudices on Monash campuses since October 2023. Our remit is to understand what has been happening on our campuses that has led to the rise of such a tense atmosphere and to identify student-centred solutions that we can design and test over the next two years. Fixing the rise of antisemitism on campuses demands a multipronged approach centred on solutions, recognising the urgency of the problem and drawing on the best expertise we have in the country. The capability is there to respond decisively and quickly, but it requires bold action and adequate support. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. Just before I hand to Senator Henderson, I understand that Monash University is appearing later today.

Dr Slucki: Yes.

CHAIR: I think one of the reasons we asked you to come to give evidence is around the research and the cohesion program that you're doing. Can you just clarify for me: you're appearing on behalf of the centre—

Dr Slucki: Yes, the ACJC—that's correct.

CHAIR: and not on behalf of Monash?

Dr Slucki: Yes.

CHAIR: You'll let the administration take those questions?

Dr Slucki: Yes, gladly!

CHAIR: That might assist you, senators, on where to direct questions today. Senator Henderson, you have the call.

Senator HENDERSON: Dr Slucki, thank you so much for appearing this morning. Can you update the committee on your findings so far in relation to important research that underpins your work and what actions you've taken so far as a result of your work?

Dr Slucki: We're in the design phase of the project at the moment. We're putting together a team from across Monash University that includes experts in public health, media, psychology, law and education. We're hiring at the moment for researchers as well. So we're putting together a comprehensive program that will kick off later this year, and we're going to move very fast once we do. We're going to start the project with focus groups, when students reconvene early next year, and that's going to inform the next stage of the project.

Senator HENDERSON: Dr Slucki, one of the criticisms of many Jewish groups in relation to the response of the government—and I have been critical particularly of the education minister in relation to his response to many serious incidents of antisemitism on university campuses—is that there is this narrative of, 'We oppose or we abhor any form of either antisemitism or Islamophobia.' I've just had a look at your submission and you say:

… Monash University announced a $1,000,000 research program to investigate antisemitism and Islamophobia on campus.

Aren't you making the same error in drawing a false equivalence between antisemitism and Islamophobia, when I would put to you that, clearly, the much bigger issue at Monash right now is antisemitism?

Dr Slucki: I wouldn't say we're making an equivalence. We are responding to what we're seeing from our students. The evidence of Islamophobia as well as antisemitism is mounting, and clearly there's a crisis in social cohesion on campuses. We have a situation where it's difficult for students to talk to one another across cultural, political and religious divides. So we're trying to find solutions that will mitigate the problems that we're seeing around antisemitism and Islamophobia but also create a more welcoming, dynamic university campus, and we think this will have lessons across Australia.

This is part of a bigger research program that the ACJC is undertaking into antisemitism, so, as well as this, we are launching the Monash initiative for rapid research into antisemitism. We're in the fundraising stage at the moment. The aim is to take a much more comprehensive look at antisemitism across Australian society, including universities. The backbone of that is going to be a series of three-month projects that will look at discrete aspects of antisemitism across Australian society, with rapid-fire reports, recommendations and public engagement, and that's going to culminate in the next, hopefully, major survey of Australian Jewry.

Senator HENDERSON: So what is the major cause of a lack of social cohesion on the campus at Monash University—or a number of campuses? Is it antisemitism—

Dr Slucki: That is one part of it—

Senator HENDERSON: or is it a combination of both? You say that there are issues with both antisemitism and Islamophobia. I accept that. I'm not suggesting there is not. But surely the big issue you are dealing with right now—the prevailing issue—is the horrific spike in antisemitism at Monash University along with other university campuses. I'm not suggesting Monash hasn't put in place some important responses. But isn't that the driver of your work?

Dr Slucki: As a scholar of antisemitism, that is absolutely the driver of my work. The spike in antisemitism on campuses and nationally is abhorrent. It's something that we ought to take seriously. When Jewish students and staff members tell us that they're feeling unsafe, that they're feeling discriminated against, that is something we need to take seriously, and I do both as a scholar and as a university lecturer who works with Jewish students and staff every day.

Senator HENDERSON: We've just heard from the Jewish Council of Australia, and we know that there are 800 people who have signed up to their platform. I think there are 100,000 Australian—

Dr Slucki: There are 110,000, roughly.

Senator HENDERSON: 110,000 people who are Australian Jews, so obviously it represents a very small number of Australian Jews. How do you feel when you hear me put questions like, 'Do you believe the yelling of these terrorist slogans is antisemitic,' and you hear responses which justify those sorts of terms and mischaracterise those terms, which are understood to mean very serious things for most Jewish people?

Dr Slucki: I appreciate the question. I am here as a scholar, so I don't want to talk about my feelings so much as I want to talk about the evidence and the research that we do.

Senator HENDERSON: Well, tell me about the evidence. When you hear that sort of evidence before us today, is that—

Dr Slucki: Can you be a little more specific so I can give a clearer answer?

Senator HENDERSON: The committee has heard today justifications for the use of words such as 'intifada', which my understanding is that it is widely understood as very much a call for uprising aimed at Israeli and Jewish people. Can you please describe your views about those sorts of slogans—'the river to the sea', the use of the word 'intifada', particularly when those slogans are screamed at Jewish students on campuses and when children are even encouraged to yell words such as 'intifada' at a protest, as occurred at the University of Sydney?

Dr Slucki: Part of the challenge with some of these terms lies in the ambiguity. These terms have their history and their contexts as well. There can be multiple different meanings, and so one of the challenges you have when hearing it is identifying intent and acting against it. That's not to say those are blanket antisemitic terms or that they are blanket antisemitic terms. What is important here, I think, is how they're received. There's a question of intent and a question of impact, and clearly the impact of these statements and chants is harmful, and so something we need to take seriously is the way in which words are received, to listen to the impacts that they have.

Senator HENDERSON: I note that Monash has taken action in relation to terms like 'Zionists are not welcome' and other chants like 'Zionists are terrorists.' Do you believe those sorts of chants are antisemitic?

Dr Slucki: Yes.

Senator HENDERSON: Yes.

CHAIR: I have some questions about your research and how it might assist the terms of any inquiry or the current work that's underway. I note from your submission that you don't support the establishment of a commission of inquiry but you recognise that there are some really important, existing initiatives that need to be supported to get some lasting outcomes. In your submission or some of the work that you've done, you reference 'conspiratorial thinking about Jews', and I wanted to ask about how that fuels antisemitism. I've been doing some thinking recently about political institutions and the trust that people have in political institutions, in the media and in public institutions. How does that fuel antisemitism?

Dr Slucki: I'm just looking at the time and thinking about how long we have!

CHAIR: If you do have papers, you can send them through to the committee afterwards, if that's helpful.

Dr Slucki: Okay. Thank you. It's a really good question. Conspiratorial thinking lies at the heart of modern antisemitism. The idea that Jews control the levers of power and manipulate those for nefarious ends has underpinned much of antisemitism for the last 150 years. It's really the core feature of antisemitism. It manifests in lots of different ways, sometimes overtly and sometimes covertly as well. So some of the antisemitism we see might not be recognised clearly as antisemitic but fuels thinking about the role that Jews play in society—for example, the notion of Jews as disproportionately wealthy and powerful or stories in the newspaper about Jewish philanthropists moving their philanthropic priorities because of misalignment. These things touch on this conspiracy theory about Jews.

CHAIR: Am I right in saying that it's not just about wealth but also about the role and influence of Jewish people on public institutions?

Dr Slucki: Absolutely, yes. That example about philanthropy, for example, is not only about wealth; it's about how you use wealth to shape public discourse and using it for negative or nefarious ends.

CHAIR: You said that sometimes it's not overt, that there are perhaps antisemitic tropes in some of the conspiracy theories. The ones that come to mind for me are around the World Economic Forum and this idea of smart cities and cashless societies. Have you seen that in the work and research that you've done with some of these bigger, broader conspiracies? A lot of them proliferated around the time of COVID because there was a shift in the way public institutions needed to behave. The point of asking that question is it seems to have begun before 7 October. That's what I'm asking you.

Dr Slucki: Antisemitism is called the oldest hatred. The term itself is relatively new. It's only been about 140 or 150 years since it was coined. When it was coined, it referred specifically to a political party that wanted to remove the rights of Jews in Germany. We've expanded what the definition means. We now look back into history and use that term as a shorthand for a whole range of different ways that Jews were marginalised, hated or discriminated against.

CHAIR: I have one question about the cohesion program that you're running. You reference looking at antisemitism and also Islamophobia. Have you thought about how the work that you're doing will fit with or connect with the work of the Australian Human Rights Commission?

Dr Slucki: Yes. As I said in my submission, there's a lot of work going on in this space. One of the challenges—and this is also one of the challenges for the commission of inquiry—is to avoid duplication and to make sure that we're working together to. We're all asking similar questions, I think. We want a more socially cohesive society where disagreement can take place in respectful ways. So, yes, we do see that there is a relationship between the work we're doing and the Human Rights Commission's work, but we haven't fully nutted that out.

CHAIR: I have one last question. I note we have our next witnesses waiting. I respect the views of people who support this bill and those who don't, people who want a judicial inquiry and those who don't. One particular issue that you raise is the potential for an inquiry like this to actually politicise antisemitism. I was wondering whether you've seen examples of that overseas or in your research, because that would be something that we would seek to avoid.

Dr Slucki: I expect to see it through the day today.

CHAIR: Right. Yes. I haven't been checking my public emails.

Dr Slucki: I think the evidence that antisemitism is on the rise and is a huge problem is irrefutable. To me, as a scholar and as the head of Australia's most important centre of Jewish studies, the key is to get on with it, to get on with the work of finding solutions, and I think that's what we're proposing to do—find solutions quickly.

CHAIR: Thank you.

Senator SCARR: Can I just ask one question?

CHAIR: Yes. I note that our next witnesses are here, and they're probably ones you want a bit of time with, so, if you can—

Senator SCARR: Yes. Dr Slucki, I appreciate your testimony, but you have been here during the course of this morning's proceedings. You've got the Australasian Union of Jewish Students, Jewish academics, three peak bodies representing the vast majority of Jewish people in this country, all calling for an independent judicial inquiry, which would have the benefit of confidentiality for people who are feeling in fear to be able to provide evidence, compelling documentation production—all the reasons you've heard. I note your submission refers to the existing mechanisms and initiatives that investigate antisemitism on campuses that we should be focused on. But doesn't all the testimony we've heard today make you consider that maybe they're just not working and we actually do need an independent judicial inquiry for all of the reasons members of the Jewish community have given in heartfelt testimony this morning?

Dr Slucki: I see the merit of a judicial inquiry. But this will need a multifaceted approach, and I think if we put all our eggs in this basket then it might be counterproductive to the work that we're already doing to come up with, again, rapid solutions. I just want to quickly refer back to Noah, the head of AUJS, who I've worked with over the past year. He's a wonderful young leader. He said earlier on that there's an immediate problem and it needs immediate solutions. My concern is that, by focusing on this, things slow down when we need answers fast.

Senator SCARR: But it's not an either/or, is it? You could actually pursue—

Dr Slucki: Possibly not. As I said in my submission, I stand ready to work with the commission of inquiry if it's established.

Senator SCARR: Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you for your evidence. If you have taken anything on notice or you've got more information on those questions, you can send them through to the committee.

Dr Slucki: I'll send you a bibliography!

CHAIR: Thank you. Some plain reading—that would be great.

BROWN, Dr Matthew, Deputy Chief Executive, Group of Eight

SHEEHY, Mr Luke, Chief Executive Officer, Universities Australia

[11:18]

CHAIR: Welcome. Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. You might not have been here for my opening this morning, but I have asked senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure discussion today is relevant to the bill. I also remind witnesses that if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond. Do you have opening statements you'd like to make?

Mr Sheehy: Yes, thank you. I am the Chief Executive Officer of Universities Australia, the peak body for Australia's 39 comprehensive universities. Can I start by acknowledging the traditional owners of the various lands we are all gathered on today and pay my respects to elders past and present. Thank you to the committee for the opportunity to be here today and contribute to this important discussion.

This bill deals with a very important and sensitive subject, and I fully support the committee in this process. I will say at the outset that Universities Australia does not have in-house legal expertise, so we're not able to provide specific comments on the technical elements of the legislation, but I am, of course, happy to discuss the broader policy aspects. I want to acknowledge the concern at the centre of this bill regarding the rise of antisemitism on campuses following the brutal attacks on Israelis last October and the subsequent conflict.

I want to emphasise that universities are deeply committed to fostering safe, respectful and inclusive environments for all students, staff and campus users, in both physical and digital campuses. Our communities, like many others, have been deeply affected by the conflict in the Middle East, and we share communities' concerns about the rise of antisemitic behaviour in Australia. Sadly, university campuses have not been immune to the materialisation of this behaviour in Australian society. Since the October 7 attacks, Universities Australia has been working closely with our members, parliamentarians and student groups to respond to the incidents of antisemitism as well as instances of Islamophobia. Our members are cooperating with the government, including keeping the Minister for Education and the Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency updated on the steps taken to protect staff and students in the days following the October 7 attacks.

There is no place for racism of any form in our universities or anywhere else. As a sector, we strongly oppose racism, threats to safety, hate speech, intimidation, bullying or harassment. Unfortunately, incidents of these behaviours do play out on campuses just as they do in the wider community. University campuses are places where ideas are openly discussed and debated, no matter how popular or unpopular they may be.

To be recognised as a university under the higher education threshold standards, which are in the Higher Education Support Act, institutions must be committed to freedom, academic freedom and freedom of speech. While these freedoms do not extend to hate speech or any unlawful forms of speech, they do provide substantial protection for the robust expression of differing views. All universities have codes of conduct or student charters to guide students and staff on their responsibilities to act in a lawful and safe manner. Universities have also implemented measures that support diversity, wellbeing, inclusion, equity and access, which are key to promoting good and respectful behaviour. Balancing welcoming and safe environments with supporting the right to freedom of speech and expression is crucial, and our members are committed to maintaining this balance while upholding their responsibilities under the Higher Education Support Act. We ask that the committee recognise these responsibilities in its final report.

Universities Australia supports recent actions taken by the government to help make universities safer for all staff and students, including a study on the prevalence and impact of racism in universities, the appointment of Ms Jillian Segal AO as Special Envoy to Combat Antisemitism in Australia and the anticipated appointment of a special envoy for combating Islamophobia. We also support the continuing monitoring by TEQSA on the responses of universities to complaints of all forms of racism including antisemitism. Given this wide range of measures, a commission of inquiry may disrupt the work currently being undertaken. These existing initiatives are important steps to combating racism at universities, and we look forward to continuing to engage with these efforts to make our community safer. I'm happy to take any questions.

CHAIR: Thank you, Mr Sheehy. Dr Brown.

Dr Brown: Thank you, Chair. The Group of Eight unconditionally rejects all forms of hate and prejudice, which are absolutely unacceptable and put our social cohesion as a nation at risk. We are deeply concerned about the increase in antisemitism since 7 October last year across the community and empathise with the distress and trauma in our Jewish community caused by the events of October 7 and their aftermath. There is no place in our society for antisemitism or any other form of racial or religious intolerance. As stated in our submission, we agree with ASIO's assessment that there are warning signs across society that social cohesion is under threat. Young people are become radicalised well before they get to university, and we need to deal with this at a societal level. We have seen protests in the community, at schools, at Parliament House and on university campuses. Tensions have escalated on campuses and in the community. This is something we're not used to seeing often in this country.

The Group of Eight recognise that universities, as educators of future generations, play a key role in protecting and supporting a tolerant and cohesive society. At the same time, we must upheld a fundamental pillar of a healthy democracy and respect the rights of the Australian people, including students, staff and other members of the university community, to express their views through peaceful protest and lawful freedom of speech.

Universities have both a moral and legislative requirement to protect freedom of speech and academic freedom. As we have stated repeatedly, however, the right to protest comes with a responsibility to act peacefully and within the law and university codes. As a society, we need to learn how to hold conflicting views and engage in debate without breaking legal, civil or behavioural boundaries.

In practice, it is not simple to determine where those boundaries lie. These are very complex issues, and they are global issues. Countries around the world, and their universities, are facing the same challenges to social cohesion we are. Fortunately, Australia avoided the scenes we saw in campuses around the world—in particular, the violence and police action that played out in the US was not replicated here.

Our part Group of Eight members put procedures in place to avoid the escalation of tensions on campus that we have seen overseas. All Group of Eight universities committed to a statement of principles on demonstrations on campus, affirming our commitment to upholding the rights of expression and peaceful assembly, while rejecting any form of hate or prejudice. We co-authored and committed to the Berlin statement, a confirmation from the world's Global Research-Intensive Universities Network that we strive to be places where freedom of speech and academic freedom is upheld, but where antisemitism and racism in all forms is never tolerated.

Universities are a reflection of society. We need to take a genuine look at the causes and drivers endangering our social cohesion both on and off campuses. The Group of Eight is committed to continuously improving how it deals with antisemitism, and we will work closely with the Special Envoy to Combat Antisemitism in doing so. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thanks very much. We'll go to questions. Mr Sheehy, I think there's a low risk of you being asked technical questions on the bill, so don't worry about that! I think we have a range of other issues to discuss.

Senator HENDERSON: Dr Brown, have any of your Group of Eight member universities failed Jewish students and staff?

Dr Brown: Thank you for the question. What I'd say is that Group of Eight members have adopted a very principled approach in dealing with these matters. We have to reflect that what we're seeing in university communities is a large traumatisation of the university community after what happened on 7 October and the aftermath. So the universities are taking a principled sort of whole-of-community approach in dealing with the trauma that we're seeing there. They've been putting in place additional counselling and places to report issues. In terms of managing the encampments, we can perhaps cover that later. They've put lots of processes in place there. They've communicated with all the groups—student groups, staff groups, off-campus groups—in an attempt to manage the trauma—

Senator HENDERSON: Dr Brown, with all due respect, I'm asking: Have any of your universities—in particular, I name the University of Sydney and the University of Melbourne—failed Jewish students and staff in any respect? The evidence we heard this morning was overwhelming on the systemic, embedded antisemitism that has flourished on these campuses. Do you accept that some of your members have fundamentally failed Jewish students and staff?

Dr Brown: Senator, I'll leave it to my members to speak for themselves, but what I would say is that I think—

Senator HENDERSON: Hang on. You're the representative group, so could you please answer the question?

Dr Brown: I'm getting to that. They will certainly speak for themselves, but what I can say is that our members have taken a very engaged approach on this matter. I would not agree with the characterisation that antisemitism is endemic in our universities.

Senator HENDERSON: Dr Brown, with all due respect, that's just not true, because we have heard about so many antisemitic incidents that have caused massive distress, including the failure to shut down encampments; including the barricading of Israeli academics in a room, where no action was taken by the University of Sydney; including the encouragement of children to chant 'intifada'; and including the display of shocking antisemitic symbols. These all occurred at your member universities, and you are saying that there has been no failure in any respect?

Dr Brown: I'm not saying that there haven't been incidents on Group of Eight member campuses. We've all seen incidents, and we can talk about the different types of incidents that we've seen. I'm just not sure I would agree with your characterisation that there's a failure going on there.

Senator HENDERSON: You don't think there's been any failure at all?

Dr Brown: In terms of addressing specific incidents, I would have to refer to the process undertaken with those specific incidents—I don't have knowledge of that. All I can speak to is the commitment of our members to dealing with these incidents when they arise.

Senator HENDERSON: I would put to you, Dr Brown, that some of the universities—particularly Sydney and Melbourne—have fundamentally failed in very, very serious ways. That's why we are here. It is because of this failure, and the fact that you don't see it is deeply concerning. I understand that you are not part of the administration of these universities, but you are here to represent them.

Dr Brown: I'm here to—

Senator HENDERSON: Surely you cannot sit there and not accept that there have been failures?

Dr Brown: I'm here to represent the Group of Eight members and the efforts and the processes they've put in place to deal with these issues.

Senator HENDERSON: The efforts? The efforts?

CHAIR: Senator Henderson. I know you have—

Senator HENDERSON: Chair, I'm sorry. I have the call and I am—

CHAIR: You certainly do have the call, but—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm permitted to ask robust questions.

CHAIR: You are permitted to ask robust questions, and the witness is entitled to answer them—

Senator HENDERSON: That's right, Chair.

CHAIR: To be respectful to the witnesses on a topic where they are seeking to answer you, you should—

Senator HENDERSON: I don't need to be reminded of my responsibilities as a senator in an inquiry.

CHAIR: Well, I am—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm asking difficult questions because I am, frankly, appalled by some of the responses that we have seen on some university campuses and I'm entitled—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, I'm calling you to order—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm entitled to put those questions.

CHAIR: I'm calling you to order, Senator Henderson.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm not out of order.

CHAIR: You are out of order, because you're speaking over me.

Senator HENDERSON: No, I have the call.

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, I'm calling you to order to allow the witness to finish his answer. Thank you. Dr Brown.

Dr Brown: Thank you, Chair. To reiterate what I've said, I'm here to represent the Group of Eight members and their approach, which prioritises social cohesion. They take a principled approach to dealing with difficult matters. In terms of particular incidents and how they're handled, we do need to consider them in the context of the robust processes that were employed at the institution. We can't just characterise incidents without investigating them—without having a proper discussion from those who are involved in them.

Senator HENDERSON: Alright, Dr Brown, let's go to the encampments. The encampments were not shut down for many, many weeks at the University of Sydney and the University of Melbourne, in breach of university rules. I refer to Mark Scott, the vice-chancellor of the University of Sydney, who said back in May:

… as long as it remains peaceful, respectful and not disruptive to university life—

the encampment—

remains a legitimate protest.

Do you agree that the encampments are a legitimate protest, particularly when they are fuelling antisemitic hatred and incitement?

Dr Brown: As I said in my opening statement, universities are required, morally and legislatively, to maintain freedom of speech and academic freedom, so it's a—

Senator HENDERSON: I will draw you back to my question. The question is about whether you believe that the encampments—and we know the terrible damage they did to many students, including Jewish students, and staff—remain a legitimate protest, which is what Mark Scott argued.

Dr Brown: As I've said, we are committed to freedom of speech, and that is the—

Senator HENDERSON: Please can you just respond to the question.

Dr Brown: That's the context in which we need to answer this question.

Senator HENDERSON: So you think those encampments are legitimate freedom of speech?

Dr Brown: That was the determination made by the vice-chancellor and the university, who were deeply involved in those decisions. From the outside, without all of that information, we can't make that determination.

Senator HENDERSON: So you think it's legitimate because, at those encampments, there were vile antisemitic slogans and chants by people who participated in those encampments, including yelling out 'from the river to the sea' and 'intifada'? Do you think that's legitimate protest?

Dr Brown: There are a couple of elements to your question there, so if you'll be patient I'll address both of them. One is on behaviour that occurred in encampments. It's not appropriate to characterise an entire encampment and everyone there by the actions of a few people. Where there were actions that were inappropriate there, that were either illegal or against the codes or statutes for the university, Group of Eight members have taken action on those occasions, on a case by case basis. You also referred—

Senator HENDERSON: Could you provide evidence of that on notice?

Dr Brown: On notice.

Senator HENDERSON: Could we please have the evidence which supports your assertion that action was taken on a case-by-case basis—

Dr Brown: Absolutely.

Senator HENDERSON: in relation to every incident of antisemitism at your member universities?

Dr Brown: I'll take that on notice.

Senator HENDERSON: I would put to you—and there were times when I would check on what action was taken—that very little action was taken against very few students in relation to their conduct. I am staggered that you can sit there and say that the encampment was a legitimate form of protest when in fact those encampments were in breach of university rules, and vice-chancellors took no action to shut them down for a very long time. How can you justify that?

Dr Brown: In rounding up the answer to the first part of your question, I did say that the determination of whether the encampment was a legitimate form of protest was down to the vice-chancellor of the university. If they've said that then I would concur with that. As a general principle our encampments, if they are conducted appropriately as a legitimate form of protest, are not in and of themselves illegal. To return to the second—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, what did you just say? In themselves are—

Dr Brown: Aren't necessarily in and of themselves illegal.

Senator HENDERSON: I didn't say that. I'm not suggesting they're illegal. What I'm suggesting is that those encampments very clearly fuelled and incited terrible antisemitic hate and were allowed to flourish at your member universities, some of them for many, many weeks. Jewish students were told that they couldn't even go to some parts of the university. Jewish students were told to stay home. They were denied the right to attend lectures and to receive their education. How is that acceptable?

Dr Brown: I've answered the question on how the encampments were dealt with generally by the Group of Eight and specifically by the University of Sydney.

Senator HENDERSON: I would put to you that the way your universities dealt with it was absolutely appalling. For you to sit there and somehow justify it—I'm just shocked. Even the universities themselves now, I think, are reflecting on what they've done and realise they've made terrible mistakes. Initially, the University of Sydney said, 'We've got no power to remove outsiders from our campus,' and then they reversed their position. I would put to you that there was gross mismanagement by your member universities, or some of them, and that has caused enormous harm to Jewish students and staff. You're not able to take any responsibility for that, as the representative body?

Dr Brown: What I would say to that is of course we're not saying that the management of the processes was perfect—which is a different question to the legitimacy of the encampments. We've all learnt a lot through the process about how to manage these things and how to, as I indicated in my opening, balance protecting the freedoms of speech with preventing hate speech. We've learnt a lot of lessons through that, and I think, when the vice-chancellors are here, they will confirm that. I think if it happens again we will be in a much better position to protect our student and staff populations.

Senator SCARR: Can I ask a follow-up question?

Senator HENDERSON: I just want to go to Mr Sheehy. Mr Sheehy, what do you say about the encampments? Are they a legitimate form of protest, and do you believe that universities acted appropriately in relation to the horrific threats to the safety of Jewish students and staff?

Mr Sheehy: I've reflected on this a lot in my seven months in this job and, certainly, since October 7—a horrific attack on Israelis and then a subsequent conflict, which has caused enormous stress in the Australian community, particularly in the Jewish community and among Jewish students and Islamic students alike across Australia.

Obviously, universities have been and are places for protest; it's a sign of a robust democracy. What I think has been really important to see is action taken so that where there are sites of protest on campuses, they remain peaceful, and when they haven't been peaceful, appropriate action has been taken. This is an ongoing issue over the last 11 months, since 7 October. Universities have had to work swiftly and appropriately to balance their obligations under the law, both their local laws and of course the laws that uphold freedom of speech under the Higher Education Support Act. Mistakes are always made in these emerging processes, but what I will say is that I'm very pleased that the protests in Australia have remained mostly safe.

There are the protests themselves, but there's also the insidious nature of racism and antisemitism on campus. In some of the examples we've heard—and I've also been talking to Jewish student groups for many months now—I feel the anxiety, pain and difficulty of many of these students. I understand why they've made submissions both to this process and spoken to the special envoy in recent weeks. There's the insidious nature of racism and there's also the encampments. Appropriate action is being taken. Some students have said things that I would describe as idiotic and I've also seen universities take a long, protracted, thought-through view on how they deal with social cohesion on their campuses in a time of global conflict.

Senator HENDERSON: This is much more serious than some students saying things that are idiotic. I'm talking about your universities and the maladministration of this issue, including the failure of the University of Sydney to act when there were members of the extremist group Hizb ut-Tahrir on campus and no action was taken for many weeks. That is a crisis. Would you not agree?

Mr Sheehy: I think it's important to remember that the majority of the encampments have been wrapped up and wrapped up peacefully, and where there were instances of extremism—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm sorry, I'm going to bring you back to the question. The University of Sydney failed to take action for many weeks to remove members of the extremist group Hizb ut-Tahrir, who were terrorising students. I'm emotional about this, but imagine what they went through? It was appalling, Mr Sheehy. Do you defend that decision by the University of Sydney?

Mr Sheehy: The university took the appropriate action to wrap up the encampments and also took appropriate action to remove people who weren't from the university at the time.

Senator HENDERSON: No, they didn't, because we now have evidence that for about five weeks the university did not take any action. It was only when this appeared all over the front pages of the newspapers and on 60 Minutes that things started to move. I would put to you that the University of Sydney fundamentally failed to take the appropriate action, and that has put Jewish students and staff at immense harm.

Mr Sheehy: I won't comment on how Jewish students feel because I'm not part of that cohort, but I reject that the University of Sydney didn't take appropriate action as evidenced by the fact the encampment wrapped up and was concluded. There are ongoing issues—

Senator HENDERSON: You are mischaracterising my question. I'm asking about the failure to remove or take action in relation to the presence of extremist members of the Hizb ut-Tahrir group. This is a group that is a prescribed terrorist organisation in the UK and other countries. I ask you to address my question: Why did the University of Sydney fail to take appropriate and immediate action in relation to the presence of those people?

Mr Sheehy: Obviously that is a matter for the University of Sydney and the processes which they undertake to address issues on their campus. What I am pleased about is that the encampments remained predominantly peaceful on university campuses. They've been wrapped up and we've worked with our local and federal laws to deal with the issue of balancing freedom of speech on our campuses and ensuring that doesn't turn into hate speech. As I've said many times, this is an important part of a robust democracy, but we need to make sure that every visitor, student and staff member is safe, and in an emerging issue like this one, that there are emerging ways to we deal with it. I think universities have taken appropriate action, on balance.

Senator HENDERSON: How do you explain a new decision to revoke the expulsion of a student who called for the unconditional support of Hamas, and is now running for student president at that university?

Mr Sheehy: Look, I don't want to trivialise it or go to that individual student's political ambitions, but what I will say is that student made some idiotic remarks, and they were inappropriate, and the university at the time swiftly sought to undertake a process of disciplinary action, which they did. I'm not aware of what's happened subsequently. All I'm aware of is what I've read in the newspaper in the last couple of days—that for that student there's been an appeals process. But I don't know any more than that. What I will say is that the comments—

Senator HENDERSON: Just as a follow-up question, what I'm putting to you is: how can Jewish students and staff have confidence in the administration of universities when those sorts of decisions are made and they are now facing a situation where that particular student is running to head the ANU Students Association? Can you imagine what that would do on that campus to Jewish students and staff? How can you explain the university's failure to take appropriate action in relation to that and other students?

Mr Sheehy: I will comment on the fact that the student in question had appropriate disciplinary action taken by ANU immediately last year—or early this year; sorry. I'm not sure what's happened subsequently, other than that they've re-emerged in the last couple of weeks. It really is a matter for ANU and their internal processes for disciplinary action against a student.

CHAIR: Thanks, Senator Henderson. I have a range of questions. We'll see how many we can get through in the time that we have. I want to ask about the steps and actions that universities have taken. Obviously, it has been almost 12 months since 7 October, and universities have, in my view, had to change their approach to really confronting behaviour on campuses. What have universities done in that time—or what have your bodies done, rather than speaking for the universities themselves? What have you sought to do in bringing people together and putting better policies in place?

Mr Sheehy: Thank you, Senator. I'll start with that one. As I said earlier, this is an emerging and very intense issue for many people in the Australian community and the global community, and encampments are just one part of the reaction we've seen to the terrible incidents and conflict in the Middle East. In my own part of Melbourne, where I live, which is the centre of the Jewish population of Australia, I've walked down the street and seen stars of David with crosses through them. That is awful for us, and it's awful for the Jewish members of my local community. That's manifesting on campuses, and our universities are looking at what measures they can take in accordance with the law, because we have legal obligations to uphold freedom of speech and academic freedom on our campuses, but we also, for that matter, have local laws and local ordinances at a local government level to ensure that there is peaceful undertaking of protest on campus and that it's done in a respectful way. Universities have taken appropriate action. They've worked through what action they can take and taken action where it's appropriate, and I'm pleased that they've remained peaceful. What we've also done—going to the other part of your question—

CHAIR: My question was about collective action.

Mr Sheehy: is sharing information across the network.

CHAIR: Yes, thank you.

Mr Sheehy: Obviously, in different jurisdictions—different states—there are different obligations. In Victoria, for instance, there's the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities, which does change the nature of the way in which policing can be undertaken on campuses. That's more a question for Victorian based universities. I know that state based vice-chancellors committees have talked about this.

At a Universities Australia level, we've taken opportunities of successful practice and shared that practice amongst our deputy vice-chancellors corporate, in particular, who are the senior executives across our university network who are responsible for managing campuses. We've drawn on some of the excellent work from Monash University in particular. I know that you'll be talking to them later today. We've drawn on the work from their vice-chancellor and their investment in social cohesion.

Campuses come in different contexts. I know that the special envoy, Ms Segal, has said that in relation to how we respond to antisemitism. So we're learning and we're sharing information and good practice, but we're also understanding that universities have different contexts, different procedures and different cohorts.

CHAIR: Have you had a chance to bring members together to talk about what has worked, what isn't working and what can change going forward?

Mr Sheehy: Yes. Earlier this month, the deputy vice-chancellors corporate were talking about this very issue, and they have a continuing dialogue on that. They're the most appropriate forum for us because they actually are responsible for the administration of physical campuses.

CHAIR: Got it. Are you considering bringing that group together again, or is there a regular meeting of that group that allows you to—

Mr Sheehy: They meet regularly, so this is an ongoing agenda item at the moment.

CHAIR: But not in six months? I'm talking in the next—

Mr Sheehy: No—well, they only met earlier this month.

CHAIR: When would they meet again?

Mr Sheehy: I'm not sure. I'll let you know. But it's a regular forum that happens a number of times each year.

CHAIR: I know you've raised the issue around freedom of speech. Obviously, that is an important principle and value that, often argued by many people in this parliament, we need to protect. I'm interested in understanding—because it's perhaps not a familiar concept for people who aren't working within universities and on campuses—how the model code which was developed by Robert French AC as part of the Independent Review of Freedom of Speech in Australian Higher Education Providers, which I think was in 2019, interacts with some of the actions that universities are required to take or are prevented from taking. This is part of the discussion about what an inquiry should be considering or looking at. I don't know a lot about the model code, but I understand it requires universities to have regard for freedom of speech. Is that one of the difficulties in getting the balance of this right?

Dr Brown: Yes. We probably have an instructive case study which might be slightly controversial, but, as part of the compliance with the French model code, we do have to protect freedom of speech, except where it's illegal or constitutes hate speech. That was really central to the vice-chancellors at the Group of Eight in their thinking about how we strike that balance. We can't have it be the case that for universities, where we are required to protect freedom of speech, in fact the speech is less free than it might be if you were to step one foot outside the campus or in the CBD of Sydney or even in parliament.

The particular example that exercised the vice-chancellors the most was the use of the terms 'from the river to the sea' and 'intifada'. So, on that matter, in trying to find that balance and understanding that the use of these terms was at times extremely upsetting, the board of the Group of Eight wrote to the Attorney-General to ask for specific guidance on whether this constituted hate speech that they could do something about as a blanket rule, acknowledging there are lots of, as Luke previously alluded to, federal laws, Commonwealth laws, state laws and university ordinances that intersect with these issues. So we needed clarity on that.

The reply we got from the Attorney-General, the guidance provided, said that essentially there was no blanket rule that we could apply and that we needed to assess it on a case-by-case basis, in particular with reference to section 18C of the Racial Discrimination Act. That's a case study of how difficult this is. We've heard those terms used all around the country, including in the Senate, so the question that we have to wrestle with is about maintaining that freedom of speech on campuses where required to—it can't be less than other parts of the country—but we have to do so according to the law and manage it as best we can. In that particular instance, you must do it on a case-by-case basis. That's one example.

I can provide a couple of other examples of where our Group of Eight members have collaborated on these issues, which I think is important. Clearly, the day-to-day management of these matters is an institution-by-institution matter. The Group of Eight vice-chancellors have caucused quite often, particularly about the big picture and the principled approach you need to take to try and heal the trauma that their university community has experienced since October 7. Many members of the university community have experienced trauma, and that includes antisemitism. So how do we collaborate to solve the range of problems there?

CHAIR: Thank you. That's a helpful explanation to understand this. Perhaps, Mr Sheehy, you'll be able to answer this. There's obviously the regulator, there's the Human Rights Commission study and there's the special envoy. You've spoken about all of those, or most of those, in your opening statement. How is Universities Australia interacting with those mechanisms that are already underway?

Mr Sheehy: We're always in contact with student groups, our regulatory bodies and the departments et cetera, but, on this issue in particular, I've been invited to be a part of an advisory panel to the Human Rights Commission process. And I had an early and productive meeting with Jillian Segal in Sydney a few weeks ago, where we had a wide-ranging discussion about not only the state of antisemitism in the Australian community but also how it relates to university campuses. We've also committed together to work on definitions of 'antisemitism' for the Australian context, and we're endeavouring to do that as part of a collaboration between the special envoy and Universities Australia and our membership, and we'll go about that process in the next couple of months.

We're also, as I said, working with student groups to understand how they are going. One of the things I keep as a principle is ensuring that our universities have robust public debate, because it's a sign of a healthy democracy, and I want to ensure, though, that students—all visitors for that matter—can go to university and have a safe experience. It's important to have an ongoing dialogue with student groups, not only Islamic and pro-Palestinian groups but also Jewish students, particularly, who are doing it tough. I'm not going to mince words: students are finding it tough. It's a complex and intense issue that is being played out in the Australian community and the global community, and it's right that it's amplified on campuses, but it needs to be done in a safe and appropriate way in accordance with the law.

CHAIR: Mr Sheehy, there is obviously that debate, but then there's the issue around not only the physical safety of students but also the intellectual and emotional safety of students as well. This is a totally different experience, but I just hark back to when I was on campus—maybe when you were as well—we had to demand from universities that we would get safe spaces for LGBTI students, because there was a safety issue there. That was 20 years ago now, not to show my age. The question I have, really, is about how universities are handling those situations where there is clearly a difference between robust debate, which is a term thrown around a lot in this place, and the need for robust debate but where students feel unsafe? Is there a best practice in place? Would it be served by a best-practice policy? Is there more that universities could do?

Mr Sheehy: Universities amplify what's often happening in society and amplify societal trends. Yes, we both were at university about 20 years ago, and I remember also asking for a safe space for queer students and other students. I think these things emerge, and they respond—I think universities are often at the forefront of these things, and what I will reflect on, in this current debate, is the need for us as universities and as a broader society to understand how to maintain social cohesion, and this is a threshold question moving forward. My hope—everyone's hope—is that conflict, particularly the conflict in the Middle East between Gaza and Israel now and hopefully no further, is wrapped up, is peaceful and comes to some peaceful resolution as soon as possible. But it still leaves us with a threshold question of how to maintain social cohesion on campus.

As I said earlier, I think Monash University has done a tremendous job to look at the issue and think about the long-term implications of it. We've certainly sought that information from the excellent work that Monash University has been doing and shared it with our membership. There are other examples of that. We are responding, as I said, to a live and continuing issue that is impacting so many people in different ways, and we'll continue to share information at Universities Australia amongst our universities. To reflect again on Ms Segal's remarks this week, there are different contexts, different cohorts and different experiences at different universities. Thirty-nine universities don't look the same. They are very different. They serve different communities. They have different physical and online contexts. We learn from each other regularly, and we make sure that we can apply lessons, knowledge and processes from each other and help to implement them across our network.

CHAIR: Thank you. Senator Scarr has one question, and then our next panel—

Senator SCARR: There might be one follow up, if I could. I'll be very quick.

CHAIR: Try to keep it brief.

Senator SCARR: I have a very quick first question. Mr Sheehy and Dr Brown, have you gone through and read the hundreds of submissions from Jewish students, Jewish academics and their families which have been submitted to this inquiry, with the vast majority or certainly a considerable majority of them having 'name withheld' because of fears around what it would mean for those students and academics to reveal their names? Have you actually gone through and read those?

Mr Sheehy: I got to 400 submissions last week, when I was reading through them, and then my team were reading through them and reflecting on that. So—

Senator SCARR: Sorry—I've got very limited time. Dr Brown, did you?

Dr Brown: Yes.

Senator SCARR: Can I just read from one. To me, this is a searing indictment of the current state of affairs in our universities. Let me read from this. I want your reaction. This is my last question. This is from a 'name withheld' parent of a student at the University of Sydney, dated 20 August 2024—10 months or nearly 11 months after the events of 7 October: 'I am a first-generation Australian Jewish citizen, and I'd been fortunate not to experience much antisemitism during my childhood or university life. My father's family survived the Holocaust. Now my daughter, who attends Sydney university, encounters antisemitism daily. She goes to her lectures'—and here's this word again—'with fear, feeling intimidated and unsure of what each new day will bring. As a parent, I can hardly wait for her time at university'—Sydney university—'to be over. She hides her identity daily, fearing that she might be targeted like some of her friends, who are also facing an alarming rise in antisemitism at other Australian universities. I have another child in her HSC year. Like many Jewish families, we are deciding which university to send her to, based on the level of antisemitism'—not whether or not there is antisemitism, but the level of antisemitism—'present on campus.' Doesn't that indicate that our universities have failed to protect our Jewish students and Jewish academics and that more needs to be done?

Mr Sheehy: That is appalling, and I feel deeply sorry and saddened that an Australian citizen and their family and their family members feel like that in Australia right now. Not to be trivial about it, but I have had similar conversations with members of the Jewish community about how they feel in the general Australian community at the moment, and I think it's really important that we take appropriate measures as a society and ensure that universities remain safe and welcoming places. It's not appropriate, and we cannot tolerate people feeling like that at our university campuses. We will work continually to ensure that there is a safe and respectful place for all people at Australian universities.

Senator SCARR: Dr Brown?

Dr Brown: It's an appalling story, and no-one should feel like that on an Australian university campus. To pick up on part of your question, there is a lot of work to be done, still, by universities in working with their communities, broadly and in these specific instances. Nobody is saying that what's occurring is appropriate or that it's accepted. We are working hard to address these issues. As Luke says, it's a societal issue, and we need to work to make sure that our part of the society, Australian universities, don't have students feeling this way. So it's an ongoing piece of work. It's a priority. We're all looking to engage with the special envoy to combat antisemitism. It is a No. 1 priority for universities to address this issue.

CHAIR: Thanks, Dr Brown. Sorry to cut you off. Thanks, senators. That is all the time that we have with you today. We'll just suspend briefly while we get our next panel to come forward.

BELL, Dr Genevieve, Vice-chancellor and President, Australian National University

BRUNGS, Professor Attila, Vice-chancellor and President, University of New South Wales [by video link]

MARTIN, Professor Iain, Vice-chancellor, Deakin University

PHILLIPS, Professor Nicola, Provost and Acting Vice-chancellor, University of Melbourne

PICKERING, Professor Sharon, Vice-chancellor and President, Monash University

PREST, Mr Peter, Chief Operating Officer, University of Adelaide [by video link]

SCOTT, Professor Mark, Vice-chancellor and President, University of Sydney

WILLIAMS, Professor John, Provost, University of Adelaide [by video link]

[12:05]

CHAIR: Welcome. Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. I repeat my requests earlier to senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure discussion today is relevant to the bill. Witnesses are reminded that if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond. Does anyone have a brief opening statement before we go to questions? We will keep them brief. If it is covering material that you've provided in your submission, I ask that you go over that as quickly as possible, because we will have quite a few questions.

Prof. Martin: This is one of the most challenging and difficult issues that universities, and certainly Deakin, has encountered in its 50 years of history. The significance can't be understated. We've provided a written opening statement tabled with the committee, and I will leave it at that.

Prof. Scott: There can be no doubt that antisemitism is rising across Australian society, and that trend is reflected on university campuses, including the University of Sydney. This has accelerated since the horrific events of October 7 and the ongoing conflict in Gaza. In my long career in education and in the media, I've never encountered an issue that's generated more anguish or grief or anger.

In my many meetings with Jewish staff, students, alumni and the community, I've heard firsthand their experiences of antisemitism. I've read the complaints that have been made to the university and all those shared in submissions to this inquiry and to the special envoy. The testimonials are heartbreaking and unacceptable, and for that I am sorry. No-one should feel at risk, unsafe or unwelcome at any place of learning, and no-one should feel the need to hide their identity or stay away from classrooms or campuses.

The university has the responsibility to take active steps to ensure a safe environment that's free from discrimination, and we take these responsibilities seriously. We've taken many actions that I'm happy to detail, including establishing an independent review of all relevant university policies and processes to be undertaken by Bruce Hodgkinson, a pre-eminent senior counsel with expertise in health and safety. But clearly we have more to do. As the special envoy's submission makes clear, there is no single solution to defeating antisemitism. I have written to the special envoy outlining our genuine commitment to working with her office to combat this scourge across university campuses. If a judicial inquiry is a necessary part of the solution, then we welcome it.

Let me just touch on the encampment. The establishment of the encampment on our campus in late April presented a difficult period for the university and its students and staff. In managing the encampment, we prioritised engagement, nonviolence and peaceful resolution. However, we acknowledge the distress its very presence caused for a great number of people, including Jewish members of our staff and student body. At all times, we were trying to balance our obligations to ensure the health and safety, including the psychosocial safety, of the entire diverse university community with our commitments to academic freedom and free speech. This was a complex, fast-moving environment where we were meeting daily and making multiple decisions based on the best information we had available at the time and taking the advice of experts, particularly the police and security agencies.

Did we get every decision right during this time? There are clearly different views on that, and I recognise we did not always meet the expectations of the Jewish community. For one, I regret we did not communicate the agreement to end the encampment with the Jewish community before it was announced. I realise there is a lot of work to do to win back the trust and confidence of the university's Jewish community, and I'm committed to doing that. We are taking the time to listen deeply and to review and refine our approach. We remain open to making further changes and working with the special envoy as part of our commitment to develop and evolve to ensure the university is safe and welcoming for all and that we do everything we can to combat antisemitism.

CHAIR: Thanks, Professor Scott. Professor Phillips.

Prof. Phillips: The University of Melbourne stands against all forms of racism. We recognise that Jewish members of our community can experience particular forms of prejudice or hate and have observed an increase in antisemitism in parts of the Australian community. Antisemitism is a societal scourge, and the University of Melbourne is working hard to play our part in addressing it and to support our Jewish staff members, students, collaborators and visitors. Our antiracism commitment was released in January 2023. This included adopting the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance's working definition of antisemitism. As part of our antiracism commitment, in August this year we introduced an antiracism action plan designed to prevent and respond effectively to racism, particularly and including antisemitism. This has been informed by the lived experience of our students and staff.

In managing protest activity on our campus this year, our guiding principle has been to de-escalate conflict in the interests of the safety and security of all members of our community, including for our Jewish staff and students. We have drawn on our policies and procedures to guide our approach to managing protest activity, supported by systematic legal advice, advice from the police and dialogue with our staff members and students. Certainly, we have been challenged at times in ensuring a careful balance between three obligations: freedom of speech, including the right to protest, protected by law; the principle of academic freedom, which underpins the purpose and the work of universities; and the right of students and staff to go about their learning and their work in a safe environment. We recognise that we have more to do. We welcome working in collaboration with other institutions across the sector and the Special Envoy to Combat Antisemitism, the Australian Human Rights Commission, the National Student Ombudsman, TEQSA and the judicial inquiry, if the parliament decides to proceed with it.

The university is determined to eradicate antisemitism from our campuses. The responsibility to stand up to antisemitism requires continued vigilance, as does the protection of the right to freedom of speech. While this has been tested during recent protest activity, the university has sought at all times to steer a principled and compassionate path through very complex circumstances.

CHAIR: Thanks, Professor Phillips. Professor Pickering.

Prof. Pickering: Many thanks for the opportunity to speak with you today. Antisemitism is an ancient and abhorrent hatred. It's one that takes many forms, and it has clearly been increasing. Monash University is especially alive to the evil of antisemitism because we are named after one of the greatest Jewish Australians, Sir John Monash. His name is proudly carried as a scholar, soldier, nation builder and patriot, as we've grown to be Australia's most international university.

I begin by sharing that I have never seen anguish written on the faces of my colleagues and my students as I have seen over the past almost 12 months. Over this period we have engaged genuinely with our community and we have sought to deeply listen. We have never engaged, and nor will Monash ever engage, in a zero-sum exercise between recognising and fighting against antisemitism and other forms of hate and our abiding commitment to academic freedom and freedom of speech. In so doing, we see and hold all members of our community equally, including and most especially during times of deep hurt and disagreement. We've sought to do so with moral clarity, clear boundaries and respect for all students and staff. But of course there is much more work still to be done.

University is a time, and we are indeed a place, in which we develop young people to challenge and be challenged in ways that should also be productive and respectful. We assemble and guard rigorous evidence from which truths are tested and on which sustainable solutions are built. As a community we seek to do this in a way whereby we do not allow offence to become harm and by equipping our students and indeed our colleagues to not avoid disagreement but to disagree well.

We explicitly seek to prevent, recognise and respond to antisemitism and other forms of prejudice, and we are committed to further intensifying our efforts to build social cohesion. The university imposes obligations on our colleagues and students that prohibit antisemitism and other forms of hate, and we investigate reports thoroughly and take appropriate action. As you heard earlier today, we've launched a world-first program, investing over $1million, led by Associate Professor David Slucki and Dr Susan Carland to investigate specifically antisemitism, Islamophobia and related prejudice and to develop and test programs that support campus cohesion. This work is designed to include recommendations for university settings and the development of education programs and training programs for staff and students as well as other actions.

The university has also initiated a process of facilitated dialogue between students, collaborating with student associations and teaching staff to co-design methodologies for brave, safe and supportive learning environments. As vice-chancellor and as a criminologist with more than 30 years of experience working on conflict, prejudice and hate, my responsibility and my efforts are focused on eliminating the overt and indeed the casual expressions of antisemitism and other forms of prejudice, including the ones people wonder about reporting or do not report—the ones that affect whether a student or a colleague not only feels safe on campus but also feels valued and belongs. And we don't get there in either education or our research by being unable or unwilling to discuss contested or confronting issues. We as a university can live up to our ideals for all our people so that hate and prejudice, including antisemitism, has absolutely no place. It is the legacy of Sir John Monash that we never take for granted: democratic principles and values, and that the only protection of the nation from ignorance and prejudice is education. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you. Dr Bell? And I do need to reiterate that perhaps we could keep it as brief as possible, because we've got a lot of questions, I imagine.

Dr Bell: The Australian National University student population is small by Australian university standards, but it includes students from more than 100 countries and from every state and territory. This reflects Australia's multicultural values as well as our mission to support engagement with Asia and the Pacific, and it expands to education and opportunities for our domestic and international students alike. Diversity underpins our core values of academic rigour, freedom of expression and service in the national interest. We see this as a strength and an attribute of our university. This strength is born of the innate challenge that comes from freedom and difference.

Freedom of thought and freedom of speech should not necessarily equal freedom from consequences. In times of heightened tension it is incumbent on all of us to take care with our words and our actions and to consider their implications for ourselves and others. This is true for our students, staff, academics and visitors. A high-quality education extends beyond the classroom. We must teach our students to treat each other with respect, humility and compassion, especially those with whom we have differences of opinion, perspective and experience.

The safety and wellbeing of our students and staff is one of our highest priorities and greatest responsibilities. ANU maintains a suite of policies and procedures that prohibit discrimination, vilification, intimidation, violence and other oppressive and disrespectful behaviour by and against all its staff and students, whatever their cultural background, religion or political conviction. This approach is consistent with how parliament has chosen to legislate these issues and our policies protecting academic freedom, freedom of speech and the right to respectfully protest. The university's policies and the way we apply them are designed to support our people and to balance our commitments to freedom of expression with our legal responsibilities to provide a safe environment, including wellbeing and psychosocial safety. This balance is the result of many years of consideration and consultation, and we continually evolve our policies and procedures to reflect changes in context and community expectations. ANU has learnt from our recent experiences. We've updated and reviewed a number of our policies and procedures to ensure that, where individuals behave in ways that are contrary to their responsibilities, they can be held accountable.

The university has spent considerable time exploring the issues covered in this bill. Let me be clear: antisemitism has no place at the Australian National University or in the broader Australian society. Any form of prejudice, discrimination or racism is antithetical to what we stand for and strive for. We welcome the opportunity to continue to work with parliament, the special envoy, the Public Service, the community, student groups and other universities to understand and combat these changes. Again, I'm grateful for the opportunity to make the opening statement and to be here today.

Prof. Williams: I also would like to acknowledge that we are joining from the lands of the Kaurna people, where the university's campuses are. On behalf of the university, we welcome the opportunity to provide feedback to the inquiry and to outline some of the matters that are taking place at the University of Adelaide. Like my colleagues, the university condemns antisemitism and other forms of hate. While we support the Group of Eight submission, we'd also like to provide some of the nuances of the South Australian experience to the community.

To emphasise some of the key points in our submission, the University of Adelaide is deeply concerned by the ongoing conflict and the loss of life that is caused by the Hamas-Israel conflict. Further, the university is deeply troubled by the reported increase in antisemitic conduct in Australia and worldwide. The University of Adelaide is committed to eliminating such conduct on its campuses to the extent that it is reasonably possible. However, the university also recognises that this issue extends well beyond the university campus and requires a whole-of-society response.

On 1 May this year, a group of students established an encampment at the university's Maths Lawns, under the banner 'Gaza solidarity encampment'. The encampment was peacefully disbanded on 29 May 2024 at the direction of the protest organisers. Regarding antisemitism on campus more broadly, the university has recorded a small number of reports of antisemitism as a result of the events of 7 October. Reports of antisemitism related to the activities of the protesters and criticisms of the actions of the Israeli government.

In general, the context of the words and phrases used is instrumental in determining whether a statement can reasonably be deemed harmful. While some speech may be considered antisemitic in certain contexts, we determined that this was not the case when these phrases were being used at the peaceful protest activity on campus. The university supports the lawful freedom of expression and allows peaceful protest by staff and students as long as it does not make people feel threatened or harmed. We look forward to working with our colleague institutions and the special envoy to fight antisemitism on our campuses.

Prof. Brungs: Thank you very much for inviting UNSW to participate in this hearing. We have been deeply concerned at the alarming rise in antisemitism since the terrorist attacks on Israel on 7 October 2023 and the violence and loss of life in the Middle East. My priority, as vice-chancellor, is to ensure that UNSW is a safe place for students and staff to learn, teach, research and work.

Recognising the rising scourge of antisemitism over the past year in Australia, UNSW has taken a range of measures to ensure our community, particularly Jewish students and staff, feel safe, welcome and supported on campus. They include, but are not limited to: an important university-wide consultation to upgrade and extend our antiracism policy to cover religious vilification, as well as updating all our codes of conduct to provide further protections for those experiencing vilification; increasing physical security, such as additional guards and patrols and increased security visibility, monitoring and removing posted material, and increased connection with local external law enforcement; an important increase in the feeling of safety, through measures such as improved risk assessments across UNSW events; revising the UNSW student onboarding training and orientation, with a specific focus on the UNSW code of conduct, to let student knows what they can expect of the university as well as what the university expects of them, with a deeper focus on inclusion and respectful behaviours and with case studies and links to anti-religious-vilification policies; ensuring senior staff meet regularly, both proactively and reactively, with relevant groups—staff, students, alumni and others—to respond to issues and concerns around antisemitism; balancing the right to free speech with student and staff wellbeing by revising what posters are displayed on campus in designated areas; a dramatic increase in the promotion of many pathways to make complaints and raise concerns, as well as a significant increase in the resources of staff to deal with such complaints [inaudible]; and, finally, increasing the direct support for students and staff through the expansion of confidential counselling and other sorts of programs.

Universities have always been places where scientific, geopolitical, ideological, cultural and religious matters are debated, sometimes fiercely, and it's good and necessary for society. However, an important role for us all is to ensure that people are—and fairly—safe on campus, and this is where our code of conduct comes in where a breach of appropriate action is taken. While I believe UNSW has a generally positive culture, we aren't and should never be complacent. We know that there is much more we need to do to make people feel safe. Systemic behavioural change requires time and consistency, especially across a community of 70,000 students and 10,000 staff. We are carefully monitoring the effectiveness of our current and new measures to identify what else is required, including learning from best practices in other places, and we're hoping for best practice out of this Senate inquiry as well. We help staff and students, particularly Jewish staff and students at the moment, feel safe and welcome at UNSW.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. We'll go to questions. I assume senators will direct their questions so that you know who is answering. Senator Henderson, you have the call.

Senator HENDERSON: Good afternoon to you all. Thank you very much for making the time to appear before us today. Professor Scott, you just said that you were sorry for the terrible stories you have heard from Jewish students and staff about their fear and distress. Are you sorry for the way you have managed antisemitism at the University of Sydney?

Prof. Scott: When I spent last weekend reading the submissions to this inquiry, when I watched the evidence of the antisemitism envoy to this inquiry the other day, I did reflect—and I've reflected with our senior team—that, whilst we have done work to manage this complexity, the stories we heard were heartbreaking, and the fact that anyone can feel unsafe in coming to a position of learning is unacceptable. We have put steps and measures in place this year to learn from the experience that has arisen from the encampment, but we reflect that there is much more that is still to be done. That's why we commit ourselves, and I've written to Jillian Segal, committing the university to work with her and her endeavours to reduce antisemitism all across Australia and to commit to working with her and other university leaders, particularly on the challenges that we face at our institution. So it has been very sobering and very saddening to read these testimonies. We are deeply sorry that this has been the experience of some who have been studying and working at the University of Sydney. We know there is work to be done, and we're committed to doing that work. I'm happy to go into detail on the work that we've already started and the work that lies ahead.

Senator HENDERSON: Can I just direct you back to my question, though. Are you sorry for the way that you have managed antisemitism as the vice-chancellor?

Prof. Scott: I believe, as we reflect on our decisions and decisions that we have made over these recent months, there are certainly things that in hindsight we would have done differently.

Senator HENDERSON: Is that a 'sorry'?

Prof. Scott: I apologised in my statement. I said I was sorry for the experience of students. What I've said now, though, is: having been through those experiences at the university, we are putting in place a range of measures to do all we can to manage the tension that I know you've already talked about today, the tension of how you create an environment that is safe and welcoming for all members of the community but also a university that upholds the key principles that are central to a university about being a place for academic freedom and freedom of speech. This is one of the reasons why the university has commissioned a review by Bruce Hodgkinson to advise us. He is an expert on safety and health and wellbeing in the workplace. He is an expert in the area of psychosocial safety, which as you know is a growing legal requirement and responsibility. We are asking him how we manage that tension and whether we've got the policies and practices and protocols in place to be able to do all that we want to do, which is academic freedom and freedom of speech but safety, health and wellbeing for all in our community.

Senator HENDERSON: Professor Scott, thank you. I'm going to ask everyone to keep their responses as brief as possible. We've got a lot to get through. You've just mentioned this review, but isn't this review an admission of failure of your leadership?

Prof. Scott: No. What it is is a commitment of my leadership and the university leadership to acknowledge the demands of the last year, the hurt and the difficult testimony of those who have given evidence to you and those who have spoken to us—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm just going to have to draw you back to the question. The reason I talk about the failure of your leadership—we had a number of private discussions, which I'm not going to detail here—is that there were a whole range of issues where you didn't take appropriate action, not just on the encampment and allowing students to camp overnight, which is a breach of university rules, but in relation to the treatment of those two Tel Aviv university academics, in relation to the children's protest, in relation to the graffiti tunnel and in relation to the university not acting when you knew that there were members of the extremist group Hizb ut-Tahrir on your campus. Nothing was done to remove those people.

Prof. Scott: I know you want me to be brief in my response but you've raised five issues there. I'm happy to detail each of those issues and talk about them—

Senator HENDERSON: What I'm saying is: isn't that a failure of leadership because of the lack of action that was taken in relation to those matters?

Prof. Scott: What I would say is that throughout the encampment action was taken. Your first statement was the encampment was illegal—

Senator HENDERSON: No, I didn't say 'illegal'.

Prof. Scott: What was your phrase, Senator, sorry?

Senator HENDERSON: It was against university rules.

Prof. Scott: Sorry, it was not against the university rules. It is against the university rules now.

Senator HENDERSON: Okay, if we want to play these games, when this was raised with you, you could have easily changed your rules to make it clear that overnight camping is not permitted at the university. What I'm saying to you, Professor Scott—and this is part of why I'm raising concerns about your leadership—is that you didn't act. In fact, in May—I want to table this op-ed—you wrote an op-ed saying:

While the encampment at Sydney has mostly been peaceful, I appreciate its presence is deeply uncomfortable for some of our Jewish students and staff, and others on campus. They would prefer it was not there, and I am very sympathetic to that view.

However, as long as it remains peaceful, respectful and not disruptive to university life, it remains a legitimate protest.

Prof. Scott: Yes.

Senator HENDERSON: My point to you, Professor, is that for many weeks you allowed that encampment, which fuelled terrible antisemitic hate and incitement, to remain at your campus, and you did nothing to shut it down. Why was it the case?

Prof. Scott: Let me explain the decision-making process. Jillian Segal in her testimony to you the other day talked about how important it was to learn from the experiences of universities internationally. In the management of the encampment we were learning from the experiences of universities international. Universities like Columbia and UCLA, who brought riot police onto their campuses and arrested students, triggered violence on that day, increased violence, more destruction in the following days and unleashed further antisemitism on their campuses. That did not look like a process that we wanted to follow here. I was advised by—

Senator HENDERSON: But you—

Prof. Scott: It's a very important question, Senator.

Senator HENDERSON: I would ask you to come back to the question, and that is about why you didn't act earlier in relation to the encampment.

CHAIR: Senator.

Prof. Scott: Let me explain. In discussions with New South Wales police, when we talked with them about the possibility of clearing the encampment, they informed us they would do so with fully equipped riot police on campus. We felt that the risk of the violence that would ensue from that, the destruction of property, the other forces that would be unleashed would be a dramatic escalation, as we were trying to de-escalate the encampment and peaceably resolve it. So that was a decision we made. I know that the encampment caused distress to significant numbers of people in the community—

Senator HENDERSON: But you supported the encampment. That's the point I making.

Prof. Scott: I think there is a difference—

Senator HENDERSON: You never sent out the signal—

Prof. Scott: Let me be clear—

Senator HENDERSON: You never sent out the signal that this was inappropriate.

Prof. Scott: I would have been very happy for the encampment to go on day 1. What I recognise—

Senator HENDERSON: That's not what you said in May. You said it was a legitimate protest.

Prof. Scott: Yes. I would draw distinction. If you look at protests at a university like Sydney university, we have had anti-war protests for 100 years. We have had protests on myriad issues. Life at the university would have been that much easier and, I believe, the campus would have been that much happier without the encampment, but that does not mean that the price of shutting down the encampment in terms of the violence and the destruction that we think would have followed was something that we thought was a wise course of action. I accept that different people will hold different judgements on that, but that was the judgement that we made.

Senator HENDERSON: Going back to my question, do you stand by your view that you expressed in May—that the encampment which fuelled so much antisemitic hate and incitement was a legitimate form of protest?

Prof. Scott: The university has had long-established forms of protest. At the time the encampment was established, we had no rules, policies and guidelines at the university that would have enabled that to be a breach of our code of conduct. So, as a consequence of that, it continued. It was legitimate in that term. We have subsequently reviewed our campus access policy, which changes the rules and guidelines, and we have come to a view that there will be no further encampments.

Senator HENDERSON: I would put to you very clearly that some of the conduct at that encampment was in direct breach of your university code against discrimination, racial vilification and hate speech. You, Professor Scott, did nothing for weeks and weeks to address that conduct.

Prof. Scott: With respect, that's not true. There have been more than 40 complaints that have been upheld as a consequence of behaviour, not specifically on the encampment, arising from that. So it is simply not true to say no action has taken place. It's simply not true.

Senator HENDERSON: Please, don't mischaracterise what I'm saying. No action was taken to shut down the encampment. You openly supported the presence of the encampment despite the fact that Jewish students and staff were telling you that they were in fear and in distress and barred from going to some parts of the campus. You may have had a rethink now, Professor, but the concern I'm raising is that it took you way too long to come to grips with the damage this was doing to Jewish students and staff and not just to Jewish students and staff but to many students right across your university community.

Prof. Scott: This is why we were committed to de-escalation. We were committed to peaceful resolution. That's why we—and I know there are critics of it—engaged with leaders on the encampment. That's why we talked with them. That's why we got to a point where it was peacefully resolved.

Senator HENDERSON: I will move on because I have other questions. Can I ask you why—and this is on the public record—when you knew there were members of Hizb ut-Tahrir on your campus, you didn't take any action for quite a number of weeks until this was exposed in the media? Why didn't you take action in relation to the presence of that extremist group on your university campus which, in the words of Jewish students, were menacing Jewish students with their vile, horrific protests?

Prof. Scott: A safe campus remained our top priority. The encampment and protests that really emerged from 7 October represented a challenge for us. So we did what I think you would agree, I would hope, was the appropriate thing to do. We opened up dialogue with New South Wales Police around the engagement of this whole enterprise.

Senator HENDERSON: Why didn't you act to remove them or raise the alarm bells? The police, I understand—and this has been reported in the Australian—have a different view. They say they weren't contacted. But the point I'm making is: why did you tolerate this?

Prof. Scott: Let me explain how the campus operates. It is public space. There are 28 entry points to the campus. We don't have security checking people as they come in. The university is an open thoroughfare. Instead we said to the police, throughout the encampment, 'Let us know if you believe that there are extremist or violent or radicalised groups or behaviour manifesting among those who are attending the encampment,' as we realised that the encampment had people from the university and also from outside the university. That was a constant, ongoing conversation with the police. It was confirmed to me personally by Counter Terrorism in New South Wales, by staff from the most senior intelligence sources here in Canberra and by the briefing around foreign intelligence to the university's taskforce that at no stage during the encampment was there a belief that we needed to be concerned about extremist violence or radicalised behaviour.

Senator HENDERSON: Professor Scott, I refer to the New South Wales Police's testimony in the New South Wales parliament in July where they made it very clear that there was no information from your university to indicate that Hizb ut-Tahrir members were on campus.

Prof. Scott: But, Senator, I had a briefing—

Senator HENDERSON: What I'm putting to you is that you fundamentally failed to safeguard the safety of Jewish students and staff and all students because you failed to take the appropriate action. That has shockingly tarnished the reputation of the university on your watch.

Prof. Scott: With respect, the advice we followed around this was the advice of the police. We were in regular contact with the police.

Senator HENDERSON: The police say you didn't tell them.

Prof. Scott: We have queries with that answer. That answer was given in July. In June, I had a meeting with the Police Minister and Counter Terrorism to be briefed on Hizb ut-Tahrir.

Senator HENDERSON: Did you ask the police or report this to police?

Prof. Scott: Senator, we were talking with them constantly.

Senator HENDERSON: Did you report the fact that Hizb ut-Tahrir members were on campus to police?

Prof. Scott: Police knew Hizb ut-Tahrir were on campus because—

Senator HENDERSON: Did you report it?

Prof. Scott: I think this is a misrepresentation of what is happening with this group. This group—

Senator HENDERSON: I'm asking you a question.

Prof. Scott: Let me answer it, Senator. Hizb ut-Tahrir were at rallies that turned up at the University of Sydney. Those rallies were accompanied by New South Wales Police. Hizb ut-Tahrir were at rallies in the city that were escorted by the police every weekend. So there was a constant ongoing dialogue around who the groups were and whether there was risk of extremist, violent or radicalised behaviour. This was particularly important for us in May because we had quite big rallies on campus—supporters of the Palestinian group, supporters of the Jewish group—and most of the people at those rallies were from outside the university. We had constant conversation with the police about who were at those rallies and how to keep them safe.

Senator HENDERSON: You talk about the—

CHAIR: Senator Henderson, before you ask that question, I have about 10 minutes worth of questions. We're heading into the period where we've got to have a break for lunch. You've got two or three more questions before we'll have to hand the call over.

Senator HENDERSON: This is one of the problems; we did want to have more time. Professor Scott, do you believe that you have failed Jewish students and staff at the University of Sydney?

Prof. Scott: I have read those testimonies, as I've said. Those testimonies are searing, and if students have felt unsafe or unwelcome, if that has been their lived experience and if that is their testimony, then we have failed them.

Senator SCARR: It is their testimony, Professor.

Prof. Scott: That's exactly right.

Senator HENDERSON: So you have failed them.

Prof. Scott: Yes.

Senator SCARR: There are no ifs or buts.

Prof. Scott: I accept that. That's their testimony.

Senator HENDERSON: And you have failed them?

Prof. Scott: Yes. I have failed them and the university has failed them, and that is why we've made significant changes to our policy settings. That is why we have a further review underway. That's why we're committed to working with the antisemitism envoy and the Human Rights Commission Review and a judicial inquiry, if a judicial inquiry emerges.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm going to quickly go to Professor Bell, because my time is running out. Professor Bell—

CHAIR: You have one more minute, and then I'll take the call.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm very concerned to learn that a student who conveyed her unconditional support for Hamas—you gave me these assurances at Senate estimates that she had been expelled—is now back on campus, back as a student, campaigning to be elected as a new student president. How on earth has that possibly happened?

Dr Bell: You will remember from our exchanges about this at estimates that a couple of things are the case. Because of Australian privacy rules and our own rules, I won't comment on individual disciplinary cases. I can talk to you, as I did in June, about the processes that we have.

Senator HENDERSON: She's been identified, so I'm just going to ask you to cut to the chase, Professor Bell.

Dr Bell: I won't comment on individual disciplinary cases. What I can tell you is what I would have told you in June—that we have a process. That process is run from the identification of an issue, through an investigation, to a hearing, as is true with all good administrative processes.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm just asking you: how is it—

Dr Bell: There is an appeals process. When that appeals process is triggered, we constitute an appeals committee. They investigate and form an opinion about the decision that was made. That decision is then final for the university, as is again fitting in an independent administrative process. So it is the case that we will have disciplinary cases where there is an appeal, and one of the consequences of that appeal could be an overturning of the original decision.

Senator HENDERSON: So how is it acceptable for a student who conveyed unconditional support for Hamas in a radio interview, which brought your university into disrepute, to be permitted to continue as a student and run for the presidency of the ANU Students Association? How is that acceptable?

Dr Bell: I can't and won't comment on individual disciplinary cases. What I can also tell you about our student association—and, like many of my colleagues, we have a long and venerable tradition of having a student association—is that they have an electoral process that sits inside their policy suite and regulations. It is managed appropriately, and many different people choose to run for political office inside that.

Senator HENDERSON: Are you happy about that situation?

Dr Bell: Student politics are a complicated space. But one of the things about being a university is that we create room for our students to engage in creating their own political categories and behaviours, and at the moment—

Senator SCARR: This is not complicated, Professor Bell.

Senator HENDERSON: This has caused so much distress at your university—

Senator SCARR: This isn't complicated, for goodness sake.

Senator HENDERSON: We heard testimony this morning, saying that this has traumatised Jewish students. Professor, surely you can give a better response than that.

Senator SCARR: Procedural error.

Dr Bell: I can't imagine a world in which we think it would be a good idea for vice-chancellors to determine who should run our student associations.

Senator HENDERSON: But I can imagine a world where a vice-chancellor stands up and says that it's not acceptable for our students to be out there unconditionally supporting a terrorist group. I can imagine that world, and I would ask you to respond to that, Professor Bell.

Dr Bell: We have a set of academic freedoms and freedom of speech that sit at our university. We operate inside a legal construct from Australia. We have a disciplinary code of conduct.

Senator HENDERSON: So you're justifying this on academic-freedom-of-speech grounds?

CHAIR: Last question.

Senator HENDERSON: Is that right? Are you justifying the presence of this student running to be the ANU Student Association president as a freedom-of-speech issue?

Dr Bell: As is true with many of my colleagues who run universities, we are places where we have and firmly support the notion of academic freedom.

Senator HENDERSON: Wow.

Dr Bell: We also have a code of conduct and disciplinary rules, and when those rules are violated we pursue them.

Senator SCARR: I hope she doesn't win.

CHAIR: I have a couple of questions for all universities, but I'll direct them if I can. Just picking up on that issue around freedom of speech, we've discussed today the balance that's required to protect student safety, which of course is paramount and really important. The model code, the French code—I think that's what you call it for short—has come up a few times today. I wonder whether you might reflect on how that code interacted with the decision that you made, Professor Scott, around the encampment, particularly around what the universities are required to do to protect freedom of speech. Am I right that the model code was introduced through legislation in 2019, under the former government?

Prof. Scott: Yes.

CHAIR: What was it in response to at that time? Does anyone recall?

Prof. Scott: Well, I think there was debate—it was under the previous government—and there was concern that there was not the full licence of freedom of speech around a range of issues, and there was some criticism that universities weren't safe places for free speech. That isn't what Justice French found. But there was a model code that was spelt out for how universities should follow and put in place freedom of speech. The University of Sydney followed that. We had an independent review of that to see we had implemented the French code well. As I indicated earlier, I think we are now in an interesting place as we try and hold the tension between free speech and academic freedom and psychosocial safety. One of the things that the French code says is that freedom of speech cannot 'protect any person from feeling offended, shocked or insulted by the lawful freedom of speech of others'. I have asked—and been involved in debates with people—how are we going to as a university create an environment where robust free speech is encouraged and flourishes, as has happened at universities for centuries, whilst recognising that at times that will cause offence or people will be insulted or shocked, and then how do you then protect that in an environment of psychosocial safety? It is one of the reasons why we have gone to Bruce Hodgkinson and implemented this review to help us manage that tension.

CHAIR: Professor Bell, I can see you wanting to contribute. Maybe you can comment on, when there is that tension, is it about clarification of what is and is not hate speech in those circumstances?

Dr Bell: Chair, you raise a good and complicated point. Much like I imagine some of my colleagues, we have also found that the limits of legislation, our own rules, how freedom of speech arose as a set of rights and as a set of policy settings—and you're right from the French review—manifests itself is often attributed to an individual's act. But the notion of how someone experiences that can be a collective thing, and the tension at law between a rule and a legislation that adheres to an individual, and notions about harm—which are often collective—don't harmonise well. At our university, we are seeking both external legal advice on how to start harmonising both our existing policies and these new legal requirements, because we are concerned there is a space in between them that is quite complicated.

CHAIR: The other question I had was around the relationship that the universities have with the regulator, the Australian Human Rights Commission study and the special envoy to combat antisemitism. I think you said, Professor, you've met with the special envoy. What work is happening with the current mechanisms that are in place?

Prof. Scott: As she testified the other day, she has really just begun her work, so we've had an informal discussion with her. I think the initial issues that she's raised are valuable and worthwhile. Is there value in a definition of antisemitism that's shared across universities? I think she talked about the possibility of convening vice-chancellors to discuss that, and at Sydney we would certainly be happy to be part of that. Part of it, as well, is learning from each other. We have a civic campus project that we are starting. We're very keen to learn from the experience of Monash and the work they're doing. I think, at a Universities Australia level and at a Go8 level, we are keen to learn best practice from each other. The Human Rights Commission work is, I think, at a very embryonic stage, and there hasn't been much engagement with that yet at all.

CHAIR: On the issue of complaints process and their handling: it's come up in the context of sexual harassment, as you know, and the government has introduced legislation for a national student ombudsman—an independent body. One of the things that the envoy said to us the other night, which I thought was really poignant, was that, perhaps, as leaders of your universities you have faith in the process and the rules that you have in place, but you might not know or might not be aware of how it's being implemented when there is a complaint. How do you approach that criticism that, even if you have a complaints handling process, you can have the best 22 page document in the world, but if it's not implemented properly, then that is where students are finding—you would have read the submissions—that they don't feel like they've got somewhere to go or an independent source to have their complaint dealt with. How have you dealt with that on your campuses in improving complaint handling processes? Anyone can jump in.

Dr Bell: We also learnt from our SASH experiences, as I'm sure you can imagine. For many of us, that has been a multi-year journey of how we create multiple forms of scaffolding for students and multiple places for disclosure as well as determining that we need to have what I would call better assurance and accountability practices. At the Australian National University, in addition to having a suite of policies and procedures, we have online disclosure tools that facilitate disclosures where it isn't as easy to go tell someone something. We also have a student safety and wellbeing committee that is a subcommittee of the university's council. It meets regularly to review our policy settings as well as the way they're being implemented and to get regular student feedback. It is mostly a student-led committee in that sense.

CHAIR: Thank you. Professor Pickering, in your submission, you picked up on a view that's come through in a couple of submissions. I acknowledge completely that not everyone agrees on this point. You picked up on the idea that a potential commission of inquiry could be used as a platform for public debate that could exacerbate antisemitic behaviour and distract from the urgent task of finding solutions. Is that experience based on the cohesion program that you're undertaking in your university, the feedback you're getting from students or even international comparisons?

Prof. Pickering: I think there are always a range of considerations when you think about what the mechanism or most appropriate mechanism is. Our comment in our submission is simply about that. It's about considering the range of options that are going to meet needs where there is a very legitimate desire to truly understand the causes, the depth and the breadth of antisemitism and its rise in Australia, particularly on university campuses. We always have to be alert to any unintended consequences for any decisions that we make in terms of whatever mechanisms that we come to use, but we would work any form of inquiry or any mechanism that is chosen by the parliament.

CHAIR: Thank you. I'm conscious of time. I've got a few questions I'll provide on notice about some of the action you took in relation to the encampments. In particular, how many times did you take action against students or staff who broke the code of conduct? I am interested in what form that action took. I will provide that question on notice so we can get some details and information about that.

That is all the time we have; we've gone quite over into our lunch break. Thank you very much for joining us today. We'll give you a date by which to return questions on notice to us.

Proceedings suspended from 12:57 to 13:31

KRAYEM, Mr Ghaith, National Spokesperson, Muslim Votes Matter [by video link]

CHAIR: I now welcome Mr Ghaith Krayem of Muslim Votes Matter. Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses giving evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat.

Mr Krayem, I made a statement at the beginning of the day about the conduct of the hearing. I'll just repeat some of those things to you so we can have a smooth hearing today. I've urged all senators and witnesses to reflect on the terms of the bill that's before the committee and ensure that discussion today is relevant to the bill. Witnesses are reminded that if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party, the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond.

Do you have a brief opening statement that you'd like to make before we go to questions?

Mr Krayem: I do. Thank you, Chair and members of the committee, for the opportunity to speak today on behalf of Muslim Votes Matter. Muslim Votes Matter is a grassroots organisation dedicated to ensuring that the Australian Muslim community has a voice in public policy. We advocate for justice, human rights and equality for all Australians regardless of their background. As part of our mission, we stand unequivocally against all forms of racism and discrimination, including antisemitism. We believe in protecting the dignity of all communities, including Jewish Australians, and fully support efforts to combat antisemitism where it genuinely exists. However, we must start by questioning the necessity of this specific legislation.

Given the concerns that our submission raises in relation to the IHRA definition of antisemitism, we believe it's a valid starting point for the committee to separate acts aimed at the State of Israel and its application of Zionism from genuine antisemitism. If this is done, the question then becomes: what evidence exists to suggest that antisemitic incidents at Australian universities are significantly more prevalent or severe than other forms of discrimination, such as anti-Muslim or anti-Palestinian racism? We're not saying that it doesn't exist or hasn't increased. We're asking the committee to consider separating out activism against Israel and its application of Zionism from genuine antisemitism.

If the focus of the bill is to tackle antisemitism specifically, we must ask: why does it not address the parallel rise in Islamophobia or anti-Palestinian sentiments, which are also pervasive on university campuses? By introducing legislation that addresses only one form of racism, we risk further marginalising other communities which face daily discrimination. Muslim and Palestinian students have experienced increasing hostility, often correlated with international events such as the ongoing conflict in Gaza. We must question why legislation that targets antisemitism alone is being prioritised, and whether this bill is genuinely needed or proportionate, particularly when broader antidiscrimination frameworks could address all forms of racism comprehensively.

Some of our key concerns include the conflation of political criticism with antisemitism. While we support efforts to combat antisemitism, the bill's reliance on the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance definition raises serious concerns. That definition, by conflating criticism of Israel with antisemitism, risks suppressing legitimate political discourse, especially during this critical time, when advocates are speaking out against the ongoing violence in Gaza. It's essential to distinguish between genuine antisemitism and legitimate criticism of state policies. Advocacy against genocide or human rights violations, such as the atrocities unfolding in Gaza, is not antisemitism but rather an expression of fundamental human rights.

The bill could disproportionally target those who are advocating against genocide in Gaza or criticising Israel's policies. We are concerned that pro-Palestinian and antigenocide students and academics, who are often at the forefront of these discussions, will face increased scrutiny or even accusations of antisemitism for their activism. Movements like BDS, which focuses on peaceful protest and advocacy for Palestinian human rights, could be unfairly labelled as antisemitic. This would have a chilling effect on free speech, making universities less open to political debate, particularly on contentious international issues. The bill's adoption of the IHRA definition poses a threat to academic freedom by blurring the line between antisemitism and valid criticism of Israel. Universities should be places where complex global issues can be freely discussed, yet this bill risks silencing scholars and students who wish to critique Israel's actions, particularly in light of the ongoing violence in Gaza. Political dissent is an essential component of the democratic debate and must not be curtailed by fear of legal repercussions or accusations of hate speech.

If the bill was to proceed, to safeguard free speech while addressing genuine antisemitism, we strongly recommend adopting the Jerusalem Declaration on Antisemitism, instead of the IHRA definition. The JDA provides a clearer distinction between antisemitism and legitimate political critique of Israel, ensuring that the voices of those who oppose the violence in Gaza or who support Palestinian human rights are not silenced. The JDA framework better protects the principles of free expression, academic inquiry and human rights advocacy.

The bill's inclusion of provisions that categorise boycotts and nonviolent protests, such as those in support of the BDS movement, as antisemitic is particularly troubling. Boycotts are internationally recognised as a legitimate form of political expression. Attempts to criminalise the protests undermine fundamental democratic freedoms. It's essential that these forms of political dissent, particularly in the context of the ongoing violence in Gaza, are not targeted by this legislation.

We urge the committee to undertake broader consultation with communities that will be most affected by this legislation, including Muslims, Palestinians, pro-Palestinians and other marginalised groups. These voices are essential to ensuring that the bill is equitable and does not disproportionately impact specific communities. Furthermore, any legislative measures should adopt a comprehensive approach to discrimination, addressing Islamophobia, anti-Palestinian sentiment and all forms of racism, rather than focusing solely on antisemitism. To prevent unintended consequences, we recommend implementing mechanisms for regular review and oversight of the bill's impact on free speech, academic freedom and political activism. These measures would ensure that the bill remains in alignment with democratic values and that any unintended negative consequences, particularly for Muslim and Palestinian students, are identified and addressed.

In conclusion, while we unequivocally support the fight against antisemitism, we believe this bill in its current form risks creating a disproportionate focus on one form of racism at the expense of others. Antigenocide advocacy, particularly in light of the ongoing violence in Gaza, should not be conflated with antisemitism. We urge lawmakers to reject the bill outright or, alternatively, to refine the bill to ensure it balances the protection of Jewish Australians with the fundamental rights of free speech and political inquiry, especially for those advocating for justice and human rights in the face of genocide.

CHAIR: Thank you so much for your contribution. Senator Scarr?

Senator SCARR: Thank you very much, Mr Krayem, for appearing today. It's greatly appreciated. I read your submission in detail. I've got some questions in relation to this definitional issue, in terms of antisemitism. I'll put some questions to you, but we have a process in the Senate where you can take something on notice, so, if you and your advisers reflect and want to provide further information in response to these questions, I'm quite happy. I'd be interested to know your considered response to some of these issues.

Mr Krayem: Definitely.

Senator SCARR: I note the concern with the definition of 'antisemitism' which is proposed, and the particular concern—and I picked up something you said during your opening statement: 'the conflation of political criticism and criticism of Israel with antisemitism'. That's a particular concern you have with the definition that's proposed; is that correct?

Mr Krayem: That is one of them, essentially, yes.

Senator SCARR: To what extent is that addressed? I received your submission and I went and had a look at the particular definition which is proposed—the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance definition. I might just read this into the Hansard so we've got it on the record. It's:

Adopt the following non-legally binding working definition of antisemitism:

"Antisemitism is a certain perception of Jews, which may be expressed as hatred toward Jews. Rhetorical and physical manifestations of antisemitism are directed toward Jewish or non-Jewish individuals and/or their property, toward Jewish community institutions and religious facilities."

That's the definition, and then the statement says, 'To guide IHRA in its work, the following examples may serve as illustrations'—so you've got the definition and then you've got a number of examples. There's this statement in the preamble to the examples:

However, criticism of Israel similar to that leveled against any other country cannot be regarded as antisemitic.

I'll just finish the question and then we'll give you a chance to respond. To what extent does that qualification, if you like, provide some comfort that, if someone is raising concerns about the Israeli government's policies in a particular regard, that isn't going to cross the line into antisemitism?

Mr Krayem: It actually doesn't, because the practical way this definition has been applied in almost every jurisdiction where it's been taken up internationally hasn't stopped at that statement. When you look at the examples that that definition then gives, the criticism of Israel has absolutely been taken as antisemitic—and I'm happy to take that on notice and provide the committee with evidence from international jurisdictions where this has actually happened. So we're not confident, in any sense, that, when that definition is applied, that limitation will have a practical outcome.

Senator SCARR: I'd be very interested to see some examples, so I'm pleased you've taken that on notice. Have you had a chance to read any of the other submissions to the inquiry? I note you may not have had time. I'm just asking that so I've got an indication as to how much preamble to give you on my next question.

Mr Krayem: No, not in detail. I've had a glance at a few of them, just to get a feel of what some of the responses are, but I haven't read them in detail.

Senator SCARR: I just want to quote this to you—and, again, feel free to take this on notice. I'm just exploring this issue of to what extent the definition that's proposed does still enable legitimate criticism of Israeli government actions. This is a quote from the submission of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry. It's on page 4:

> This is not to suggest that it is antisemitic to criticise Israeli government policies or practices or the statements and conduct of Israeli political figures, in the same way that criticisms are levelled against other governments and political figures. Nor is it antisemitic to hold particular views about the borders of Israel, settlements, refugees, the legal status of Jerusalem or the viability of a two State outcome to the Israel-Palestinian conflict. Among Israelis, the Jewish people and others who support Israel there is a wide range of views about these issues. However, the discourse about Israel on many university campuses in recent years, and especially since the Hamas atrocities on 7 October 2023, has gone well beyond discourse of this nature.

So the Executive Council of Australia Jewry lists a number of things where, from their perspective, it's quite legitimate for there to be criticism of Israel and it doesn't cross the line into antisemitism. Again, I'm happy for you to take it on notice, but I'm reading that list—the borders of Israel, settlements, refugees, the legal status of Jerusalem or the viability of a two-state solution—and it seems to me to cover a lot of the field as to what would be legitimate political criticism. I'm interested in knowing what it is outside of that domain that is the particular concern of your organisation.

Mr Krayem: It's pleasing to see that they've put that in their submission. I have two points. I go back to my first point that practical application of this definition internationally has not coincided with what our colleagues have put in that submission. The second point I would raise is: why would there be an objection to taking up the Jerusalem declaration? That's a much clearer definition which takes away the ambiguity around the criticism of Israel. Why are we focusing on this one particular definition when there's another one—in fact, there are two others internationally which are more accepted as definitions of antisemitism. We're proposing another one which takes away this ambiguity that we see exists around the criticism of Israel. We would encourage the committee to have a look at the Jerusalem declaration as another definition that can be used and that we think is much more widely acceptable.

Senator SCARR: I understand the submission that's been made. I've done a little bit of research into the views in relation to the Jerusalem Declaration on Antisemitism. Do you accept the proposition that that definition is also contested? There are people who support the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance definition who believe there are issues with that definition. Do you accept that as a proposition?

Mr Krayem: Of course there are. There's no question that any definition is going to be contentious. The other point that we would raise in relation to the IHRA definition is that it was never intended for the purposes of legislation. That's not what that definition was created for, and we would urge the committee to look at why that definition was created to start with and to look at the comments of the person who drafted that definition about how it's been applied in legislation. The creator of the definition himself is not supportive of that definition being used for legislative purposes.

Senator SCARR: I am very interested to get your views on notice after you've had a chance to reflect. On that statement I drew you to from the Executive Council of Australian Jewry with regard to how they see it: does that provide some comfort that at least there are areas they recognise as legitimate political criticism that doesn't go into antisemitism?

Mr Krayem: It absolutely does. If those words made their way into the bill itself so the bill was very clear that those things are not part of the definition of antisemitism, part of our concerns would certainly be allayed.

Senator SCARR: Okay. Thank you very much.

CHAIR: I read your submission. Obviously, we've had some really heartbreaking evidence from students not just in the hearing today but also in submissions that we've received about some of the fear for their safety that they've held over the last 12 months. You raise the issue that there are also some issues for other students, particularly those who have Palestinian advocacy roles: that there is also behaviour which could be described as anti-Muslim, anti-Palestinian or Islamophobic. We don't have another opportunity from any other witness to get this type of evidence, so have you spoken to students in your community? How are they feeling on campus? I preface that by linking it back to the bill. Your submission supports the idea that a broader-ranging body of work is required to deal with racism in all forms, so I'm wondering about your experience there.

Mr Krayem: I've spoken personally with students and academics. I want to talk about the academics first. I've been approached by anywhere up to 20 academics in the last 12 months, many of them close to tears because of things that have been said and done on university campuses. I've seen screenshots of staff messaging boards on campuses—I'm not at liberty to say which ones—where the things that have been said are absolutely horrific. This is anti-Palestinian, anti-Muslim stuff. These are exchanges on staff messaging boards.

I'm certainly happy to go back and get permission from some of those individuals to share their experiences, and I'm happy to forward that back to the committee, but we're talking about staff who are feeling isolated, feeling that they can't speak out, feeling that when they do say anything that just expresses their concern about what is going on that they are being shut down. There are students who are feeling that just speaking out puts a target on their back, that they are being unfairly treated just because they're supporting or posing what they consider to be horrific things happening overseas. I think there's a submission by the Australian Muslim Advocacy Network. I haven't read it in detail, but I think their submission highlights some issues around Islamophobia and anti-Palestinian sentiment. I'm happy to take that on notice, Chair, and provide you some case studies of those things.

CHAIR: Thanks for that. I acknowledge that we have received submissions from academics in the course of receiving submissions, and receiving responses to the submissions we've received, and that's certainly one of the issues that has been raised. You talk about how one of the risks of an inquiry is that conflation issue—sorry, not the conflation issue but the singling out of antisemitism as opposed to a broader combatting of social cohesion. In relation to the work the Australian Human Rights Commission is doing, have you had an opportunity to engage with that work so far?

Mr Krayem: Not the most recent work, in terms of their inquiry. But, with all due respect, the role that the Human Rights Commission has played in the last 10 months has been disappointing from my community's perspective. I've supported three separate individuals or groups who raised matters with the Human Rights Commission, and every single time the commission has come back and said, 'This is not an issue for us to be involved with.' If this current issue isn't something the Human Rights Commission will take up on behalf of people who feel they've been unfairly discriminated against—you know, pro-Palestinian people—then one question is: what would they take up? We don't have any confidence, at the moment, that the Human Rights Commission is applying a fair assessment of all these sorts of matters.

CHAIR: Does it surprise you to hear that that's the view of the Jewish community as well?

Mr Krayem: I'm not surprised at all. It's not a normal time, unfortunately. It's a terrible time for all parties on this issue, and I guess that's part of the reason why we're saying a broad one that looks at all of these issues is probably better than one which singles out just one particular aspect.

CHAIR: That's right. You don't support the bill in its current form. You've made some recommendations that if there was that broader consultation, that's what you would support—those safeguards for freedom of speech and academic freedom. You also make a recommendation about mechanisms for regular review and oversight, particularly of freedom of speech and academic freedom and discrimination. What would that look like to your community, that regular review and consultation?

Mr Krayem: It's about this issue of whatever definition ultimately makes it into the bill is applied. So the conversation we've just had, in reality. Where individuals who have allegations of antisemitism raised against them, who feel that it's not antisemitic but it's pro- or anti-Israel advocacy, if I can use that expression, there needs to be a process where those incidents can be reviewed and looked at. Where we can see whether or not the intent of the bill is still being adhered to or whether, unfortunately, the spread that has happened in other jurisdictions where this definition is being applied is occurring here and how we make sure that doesn't happen. That's the essence of that part of our recommendation.

CHAIR: There's just one last question from me. We had some evidence from a previous witness about their attempts to work across communities. I'm not sure of your work but I'm wondering whether you've had the opportunity to, or are seeking to, work with communities, whether they're Jewish communities or other communities, and what that work looks like to you—and the importance of it.

Mr Krayem: Specifically in terms of the antisemitism area?

CHAIR: I guess the social cohesion question.

Mr Krayem: It's been challenging, without question, in the last 10 months to work cross-community, given the circumstances. We are absolutely open to that—there's no question about that—but there are some fundamental principles. You can't build social cohesion when one side of the discussion—and this applies to both sides of this; I'm not saying it applies only to us—feel that they don't have an opportunity to voice their concerns. I'm only speaking on the pro-Palestinian and Muslim side of things. We don't feel that in the current environment we are given an opportunity to have our concerns raised. We're being told social cohesion means 'keep quiet'. You can't build social cohesion when you're being told to be quiet, when you don't have a safe space to raise your concerns. I accept that that is probably the same sentiment my Jewish cousins are feeling as well. So there's some groundwork that I think we need to lay to create safe spaces to have some of those conversations.

I have conversations with individual members of the Jewish community who I reach out to and who reach out to me. We talk about what something like that looks like, and it's quite challenging. We're trying to build some principles that can underpin that sort of discussion, but it's not an easy thing to do.

CHAIR: Thank you. They are all the questions I have. Our next witnesses are waiting, so—

Senator HENDERSON: I have just got a couple of questions, thank you, Chair.

CHAIR: Sure. We're due to go to the next witnesses.

Senator HENDERSON: Yes, sure. I'll be superquick. Mr Krayem, thank you so much for your time. The rationale for a judicial inquiry is because of the failure of universities to keep students safe on campus. I just want to reflect, as the shadow minister for education, on one of the most powerful conversations I've had in my time in the portfolio. It was with the leader of an Islamic school network in Sydney. He actually said, 'Thank you for what you're doing on antisemitism, because Muslim parents and families do not want to send their children to a university with division or chaos or disharmony.' For me that was incredibly powerful, because every Australian deserves to go, and every young Australian deserves to go, to a university campus which is fuelled with tolerance and harmony. Can I ask you to respond to that.

Mr Krayem: I agree a hundred per cent, Senator. There is no question about that. The issue that we raise is that an inquiry of this nature should look at all of those issues, not just an issue impacting one part of the community. We agree a hundred per cent with that sentiment.

Senator HENDERSON: You have raised some very important concerns that Muslim families need a safe space to raise their concerns, just as Jewish Australians need a safe space. I note you are, obviously, running a grassroots campaign against, principally, many Labor MPs, including the education minister. Do you have any particular concerns in that respect—that you don't feel that the government has provided you with that safe space?

Mr Krayem: I don't think the grassroots campaign we're running is particularly relevant to this particular conversation, Senator. They're separate issues, from our perspective. We will raise our concerns around education with all the political parties, not just one.

Senator HENDERSON: So what's motivating you? In relation to this—obviously, in relation to this bill—can you describe what sort of safe space you need. Clearly, as I mentioned, Islamic families do not want to send their children to a university full of division, hate and incitement, so how could universities improve the situation for Muslim students and all students?

Mr Krayem: I think it's about providing an environment where all students and staff have the ability to have genuine discussion and conversation about international and complex and critical issues.

If you take the current environment, the fact that students and staff can't wear a particular item of clothing or feel unsafe if they wear a Palestinian solidarity pin—and these are real incidents—that's not a safe environment for anybody, because, ultimately, at some point, those sorts of things get applied to a whole range of different people. Universities should be places where people of all backgrounds, all faiths, all beliefs and all ways of thinking have an opportunity and a space to be able to have conversations around those issues without fear that there will be a backlash over those conversations. Obviously there's that line that we're all talking about: where do you move from genuine debate and conversation into racism? That's absolutely something we've got to look at, but it has to be looked at across the board—not just for one part of that university community, but for all parts of it.

Senator HENDERSON: I take it you abhor all forms of antisemitism? We've heard many incidents before us today of antisemitism—some very extreme and distressing stories. You would share the concerns of Jewish students and staff in relation to those terrible incidents?

Mr Krayem: Absolutely. There's no question that there's been a rise in antisemitism in the last 10 months, no question about that at all. No-one should feel that they have to put up with that sort of environment in a university situation. What we would say is that there's been just as much of an increase in anti-Palestinian, anti-Muslim and Islamophobia sentiment at universities. Our question is: will you need to look at all of those and create a safe space for all students and staff?

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much.

CHAIR: Thank you for joining us today. They are all the questions and all the time that we have today. We appreciate it, if you've taken anything on notice, we'll give you a date to give that back to us.

Mr Krayem: Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you very much.

GOODING, Ms Gabrielle, National Assistant Secretary, National Tertiary Education Union [by video link]

HEDUS, Mr Sa'Jacinto, Ethnocultural Officer, National Union of Students

[14:02]

CHAIR: Thank you for taking the time to speak with the committee today. Information on parliamentary privilege and the protection of witnesses and evidence has been provided to you and is available from the secretariat. You may have heard me give a preamble before witnesses have joined us, and I'll say the same thing to you as witnesses. I ask all witnesses and senators to reflect on the terms of the bill and ensure that discussion today is relevant to it. Witnesses are reminded that, if they give evidence that reflects adversely on another party, the committee is generally required to give that party reasonable access to the evidence and an opportunity to respond. Do you have any comments to make on the capacity in which you appear today?

Mr Hedus: I am currently a student at the University of Queensland.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. Before we go to questions, do either of you want to make an opening statement?

Mr Hedus: I would.

CHAIR: We'll start with you, Mr Hedus.

Mr Hedus: Good afternoon, committee. I would like to first acknowledge the traditional custodians of the land that we meet on and pay my respects to elders past, present and emerging, and acknowledge that sovereignty was never ceded. I would also like to thank you, Committee Chair Senator Green and Deputy Chair Senator Scarr as well as the rest of the committee for inviting the National Union of Students here today to speak.

The NUS has had a long history in promoting the rights of all students in tertiary education. This has had come with a strong variety of views over the years that reflect the immense diversity within the students our universities hold, both domestic and international. In my position, it is my responsibility to supervise the NUS's activities in the area of ethnocultural diversity and anti-racism, including in the realm of antisemitism. It is evident that antisemitism has been rising across our campuses for several years now, alongside racism generally. Even prior to 7 October, issues revolving around and intersecting with antisemitism have been repeatedly politicised or have been exploited for selfish reasons by both political and radical self-interested groups, both on and off our campuses. Since 7 October, these issues have only flourished and have resulted in the tragic situation that we are confronted with today.

In this time, universities have been consistent in demonstrating that they are unable to properly handle antisemitism or even racism in any regard. This is why we support both the inquiry into antisemitism and the Human Rights Commission's study into the prevalence and impact of racism in Australian universities—which has also already expressed antisemitism as one of its core focuses—and also encourage that this include the opportunity for Jewish staff and students to have their voices heard in confidence, without fear of reprisal. Thank you.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. We'll come to questions in a moment. From the NTEU's perspective, Ms Gooding, do you have an opening statement?

Ms Gooding: Yes, I do. I'm the National Assistant Secretary of the NTEU, a position I've held since 2018. Before that I was the WA secretary of the union and, before that, I worked for 25 years at the University of WA, which is just to say that I have had a long association with higher education.

The NTEU has a strong history of opposing discrimination in all its forms, including discrimination on religious grounds. In fact, our antidiscrimination policy is the strongest of all our many policies in that it commits us to active zero tolerance of discrimination in perpetuity. We view with very grave concern the rise of antisemitism, Islamophobia and intolerance in our communities and, indeed, globally.

Universities are microcosms of society, and it's no surprise that global trends and issues such as these are reflected in our higher education institutions. But universities are also places where vigorous debate is the norm, as it should be, as that is absolutely essential to challenging ideas and advancing knowledge. They are places that are built on freedom of speech and academic freedom and places that have a rich history of peaceful protest. We believe that the maintenance of these fundamental characteristics of universities is critical if they are going to play their role in a civil society.

Notwithstanding our deep commitment to eliminating discrimination, we oppose the bill as it's currently formed on a number of grounds, including its potential to undermine those key characteristics that I just described. Any good researcher will tell you that you cannot effectively investigate an event, trend or phenomenon without examination of the context in which it arose. The narrow focus of the bill prevents this and also runs the risk of hindering wider efforts that are already in train. We strongly agree with the submission of the group of eight universities in this regard.

Secondly, the bill cuts across the protections of freedom of speech and academic freedom that are required at universities via the Higher Education Support Act. Thirdly, we have grave concerns that the explanatory memorandum indicates that the proposed inquiry may have the power to interrogate the contents of lawfully negotiated enterprise agreements. This would be a significant and unprecedented overreach.

Finally, we are bemused as to why NTEU has been explicitly named in the explanatory memorandum. We strongly oppose antisemitism, we have a longstanding policy position in support of a two-state solution and we have no control or power over the actions taken on campus. While some of our members have very strongly held and divergent views on the topic, it's very important that we do not seek to control the behaviour of our members outside of the direct sphere of their union endorsed activities. The idea that we would do so is anathema to our commitment to academic freedom and freedom of speech. I'll do my best to answer any questions you have for me today.

CHAIR: Thank you very much. I think we will have plenty of questions.

Senator HENDERSON: Ms Gooding and Mr Hedus, thank you very much for your time today. Ms Gooding, I appreciate and will take up the very last point you made—that you don't have the ability to control the individual actions of members of your union. However, you do have the ability to choose your office bearers. Is that correct?

Ms Gooding: No. Our office bearers are all elected by members. We're a highly democratic union. We have over 800 elected positions.

Senator HENDERSON: What are the consequences when an elected official with the union steps out of line?

Ms Gooding: If an elected official steps out of line in the sense that they breach our code of conduct, then an investigation is held and appropriate action determined, which can involve anything from a temporary halt in their use of union resources all the way up to the expulsion of membership.

Senator HENDERSON: So your code of conduct prohibits any form of discrimination or racial vilification?

Ms Gooding: Yes, it does.

Senator HENDERSON: Are you aware of the controversy surrounding Mr Nick Riemer, who I understand is the president of the NTEU University of Sydney branch?

Ms Gooding: I'm aware of some controversy. I would point out that Mr Riemer is no longer the president of the NTEU Sydney branch.

Senator HENDERSON: Does he have any position with the NTEU now?

Ms Gooding: I would have to check that, but, if he does, it would only be a branch committee member position, not a leadership position.

Senator HENDERSON: For how long was he was the president of the Sydney uni branch of the union?

Ms Gooding: I'd have to take that on notice, Senator. I don't know.

Senator HENDERSON: I wasn't aware that he was no longer the president, but I certainly am aware that he was the president for some time. I have to raise very serious concerns about his conduct because, as a representative of the NTEU, he has said and done some very concerning things. Has he been under investigation at all by your union?

Ms Gooding: No. We've had no complaints made through our code of conduct against Mr Riemer.

Senator HENDERSON: I'll make a complaint right now. I say that a little bit rhetorically because my understanding is that Mr Riemer was involved in protesting outside the room where two Tel Aviv University academics were barricaded for more than an hour, which has caused them enormous fear and distress. Now the president of Tel Aviv University has written to Professor Mark Scott raising serious concerns about the treatment of his visiting staff under the leadership of Professor Scott. Are you aware of that incident at all?

Ms Gooding: No. I'm not.

Senator HENDERSON: You haven't heard anything about that.

Ms Gooding: No.

Senator HENDERSON: Were there any representations or concerns raised that Mr Nick Riemer should not continue as an official of NTEU?

Ms Gooding: Not as far as I'm aware.

Senator HENDERSON: Could you take that question on notice and come back to the committee?

Ms Gooding: Sure.

Senator HENDERSON: I am deeply concerned about some of the conduct of Mr Riemer as a representative of the union. It seems to me that he is not, at the very least, complying with your code of conduct. I think the most egregious conduct that I've seen is in relation to the protests where he actively called for people to protest at the university, barricading those two women into a room. It does concern me that no action was taken. It does concern me that you're not aware of this. Are you able to take on notice and investigate whether any concerns were raised with your union?

Ms Gooding: Yes, I can do that.

Senator HENDERSON: Have there been any complaints regarding any other officer of the union in relation to not complying with your code of conduct concerning racial vilification, discrimination or hate speech?

Ms Gooding: No, there have not.

Senator HENDERSON: And you say that there's never been a complaint?

Ms Gooding: No. I'm saying there haven't been any complaints to my knowledge since 7 October last year.

Senator HENDERSON: Since October 7. I'm not suggesting that this person is an official with your union, but she is a member of the academic staff, Dr Randa Abdel Fattah. She was the academic who encouraged children to chant 'intifada' in a protest at the University of Sydney. I appreciate that she's an academic, but, when you see things like this happening, as the union responsible for academic staff in our universities, what is your response?

Ms Gooding: First of all, we are not responsible for academic staff at universities. We represent academic staff at universities, and there's a considerable difference between being responsible for them and representing them. I do not know whether she's a member or not, but, as I've said, the union has a very, very strong commitment to opposing antisemitism and racism in all its forms and discrimination. And, of course, I might need to distinguish that, as I said in my opening statement, the union only seeks to police the behaviour of our members in union endorsed and associated activities. If they're not union-endorsed activities, then they're not within our sphere of influence.

Senator HENDERSON: So, therefore, the code of conduct does not apply if it's not a union-endorsed activity?

Ms Gooding: That is absolutely correct, yes.

Senator HENDERSON: So, therefore, outside of official union type organised events or campaigns or rallies, or whatever the gathering might be, in relation to any other conduct, your code of conduct does not apply to NTEU officials?

Ms Gooding: That is absolutely correct, because we don't seek to legislate or control the behaviour of people outside of activity within the union's sphere. We don't think that's in any way appropriate.

Senator HENDERSON: Have there been any complaints in relation to any union organised event about discrimination or racial vilification that were not upheld?

Ms Gooding: As I said, we've had no complaints through our code of conduct process, but in preparation for this hearing, I went through our complaints process more broadly, which is mostly collected via a particular email site. Since 7 October last year, we've had 57 resignations of our members, which equates to about 0.2 per cent of our membership, citing concerns around Middle East policy generally. I can break those down for you if you like.

Senator HENDERSON: Are these resignations from Jewish academic staff?

Ms Gooding: We have no way of knowing that. We don't collect information about the religious or political affiliations of our members. We would only know that if they had self-identified, and we certainly don't ask them to.

Senator HENDERSON: Could you break down by category the nature of the resignation and whether it was because of the way they were treated on campus or in the workplace as a result of antisemitism?

Ms Gooding: No. Of those 57, 23 thought our official position was too pro-Palestine; 14 were taking an objection on principle grounds to the union taking political positions; 13 stated they thought that the union's national statement was antisemitic; two objected to a petition to UniSuper, our industry fund, to divest from armament manufacturers who support Israel; two were for supporting the ANU student encampment; one opposed an academic boycott; one for failure to condemn the Australian government for supporting Israel; and one for failure to condemn genocide in Gaza.

Senator HENDERSON: What is the pro-Palestinian platform to which those complaints refer?

Ms Gooding: They would be referring to the two national statements that were part of our submission.

Senator HENDERSON: Could you describe for the committee in summary what those statements are?

Ms Gooding: The union has a policy position that supports a two-state solution. I can dig that out for you in about two seconds and send it to you. We also have statements made by the union in October last year and in April this year. The statement made in October this year—I'll get that out so that I make that I get that absolutely correct.

Senator HENDERSON: I'm having a quick look at these statements. You could take that on notice in terms of the actual statements. In the statements you've made, have you at any time condemned Hamas, their terrorist attack?

Ms Gooding: Yes, in the first statement.

Senator HENDERSON: Could you point me to that statement? What date was that statement made?

Ms Gooding: That was the October statement.

Senator HENDERSON: If you could, on notice, have a look at that statement—

CHAIR: It's in the submission.

Ms Gooding: It's included in the submission.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you. In response to those resignations, what action have you taken? Is there any correspondence that you've had with those members who have resigned?

Ms Gooding: We always acknowledge members who have resigned, depending on the tone of the email, but most of them have been very polite or very short emails. We've responded reasserting our view that we condemn Hamas, but we also call for immediate ceasefire and immediate, unconditional release of hostages.

Senator HENDERSON: Have you at any stage condemned acts of antisemitism on any university campus?

Ms Gooding: Not formally, no.

Senator HENDERSON: Is there any reason why you haven't done that?

Ms Gooding: We wouldn't do that unless we were receiving reports or complaints from our members about acts of antisemitism. As I just said to you, we haven't had any through that complaints system—as far as I checked it yesterday afternoon. I think that possibly reflects the observation that people are aware that the union doesn't control the activities of people on campus.

Senator HENDERSON: Thank you very much, Ms Gooding.

CHAIR: I have a couple of questions about the bill. Firstly, for the NTEU, you note that the current form of the bill, or perhaps the explanatory memorandum—I'll just get the wording in front of me from your submission. The explanatory memorandum specifically references the NTEU as a representative body to be investigated. You touched on this previously with Senator Henderson, but could you clarify for the committee what the role of the union is in relation to your members? You said representation versus responsibility. Could you explain that a little bit more for us, because it is specifically referred to in the explanatory memorandum.

Ms Gooding: As we said in the submission, we don't control the behaviour of individual members of our union, and we don't seek to do so. We're a union that's incredibly democratic and we encourage both free speech and freedom of opinion—and, of course, academic freedom. So we don't seek in any way to control the behaviour of individuals, unless they're part of an official or endorsed union activity. That includes online.

CHAIR: You allude to this in your submission, but are the universities themselves the organisations that would be responsible for the behaviour of those members on campuses?

Ms Gooding: That is correct, yes.

CHAIR: As their employer?

Ms Gooding: That's right—through their various policies and collective agreements.

CHAIR: You also raise other issues with the bill, and there is a topic that's come up multiple times today about the need to balance freedom of speech—and, particularly, academic freedom. That's difficult. It's not always black and white. What do you see as some of the issues with the bill itself and the risk to academic freedom or freedom of speech?

Ms Gooding: The bill and the explanatory memorandum, taken together, seem to be proposing a position where academics in particular—but, in our case, anybody who works on a university campus—will be limited in what they can say, particularly in relation to criticism of the State of Israel, as opposed to antisemitism. That's a very significant threat to freedom of speech. The explanatory memorandum also talks about what could and could not be involved in teaching materials, and that would be a direct threat to academic freedom.

CHAIR: I'm just guessing here, but is that derived from the particular definition that's provided in the bill and explanatory memorandum about antisemitism?

Ms Gooding: Yes, we don't support the IHRA definition of antisemitism. We think it has a chilling effect on free speech and advocacy and it blurs the boundary between criticism of the State of Israel and the actions of the state and criticism of people on the basis of their religion, which we don't support.

CHAIR: I have some questions for the NUS. Thank you for being here today. You mentioned that the students that you represent are diverse geographically but also from various backgrounds, with, I'm assuming, many different political views. How does the NUS balance those views? How do you represent students in an environment where there are very, very diverse and almost extreme views about what's being said on campuses?

Mr Hedus: The NUS represents its members' views through various forms. The primary policy method is decided by a national conference. The member organisations elect their delegates during the student elections, who then represent the member organisations within the various votes throughout that process. Additionally we have various conferences, such as the educational conference or the ethnocultural conference, which I will run later this year. That's usually quite a good place for robust discussion and quite a wide range of views, where we generally try and ensure that we keep to our policy platform of making sure that we are completely stringent on no antisemitic remarks or any racist remarks whatsoever and we generally try to make sure that there is some form of discussion that is productive that comes out of these meetings.

CHAIR: You talked about your members. Not every student, obviously, on campus is a member of the NUS, or you're not responsible for every single student on every single campus, but you have a role to play in advocating for student safety. What sort of immediate action would you like to see from universities in the way that they're handling complaints and consulting with particularly Jewish students but also students of all kinds on how to improve safety on campus for students?

Mr Hedus: I think a big part of it is consulting the various student bodies that exist in this country, both nationally and at the university campuses. Essentially, it's about trying to consult these student bodies as much as they can. I would greatly encourage universities as well as the Human Rights Commissioner to engage the National Union of Students and help a grassroots holistic approach, ensuring it's the unions that represent these students that are engaged rather than the universities that generally don't manage to properly engage these students. In fact it's the unions that run much more effective surveys and reports and things on these kinds of issues.

CHAIR: In your role as the ethnocultural officer of NUS, what work are you doing about racism on campuses at the moment?

Mr Hedus: Currently we are about to run this year's ethnocultural conference, where we generally discuss these issues quite stringently. I'm also pushing and have been emailing the Human Rights Commissioner to encourage our engagement so that we can actually start a conversation on how the NUS can support the study into racism on our campuses, because all these issues have a lot of intersectionality. It is quite important that we deal with all forms of racism so that things like antisemitism can be dealt with. We can't just deal with one form of racism; we have to deal with all of them.

CHAIR: A question that we've been tackling today is around how to protect students and keep them safe but also enable robust debate and political protest. What is the NUS's approach to that balance? You would have members who would be seeking to make their political views known, but then I imagine you also represent students who are feeling incredibly unsafe on campus at the moment. What are you doing to work with those types of students?

Mr Hedus: Within the forum of the National Union of Students, I cannot speak too much on that, as I'm not the president or the general secretary. But I can say, at the very least, that we do hold very strongly that we cannot accept any form of antisemitic or problematic remarks. We believe very strongly that we must respect democratic voices of all types, as long as they're safe and properly conducted and are legal. Otherwise it is not acceptable, and we would generally try and deal with that within our processes.

CHAIR: Thank you. They are all the questions I have. I think Senator Scarr has a follow-up.

Senator SCARR: Mr Hedus, thank you for joining us today. As I understood your opening statement, the NUS supports the judicial inquiry and also supports the Australian Human Rights Commission inquiry. Is that correct?

Mr Hedus: I believe so, yes.

Senator SCARR: Sorry?

Mr Hedus: That is my position as the ethnocultural officer, yes.

Senator SCARR: So you support an independent judicial inquiry?

Mr Hedus: In line with the government, yes.

Senator SCARR: Sorry, this is an important point, so take your time. At the moment we've got the private senator's bill that's being considered here—

Mr Hedus: Yes.

Senator SCARR: and then we've got the Australian Human Rights Commission process.

Mr Hedus: Yes.

Senator SCARR: As I understood your opening statement, you referred to both this inquiry and the Australian Human Rights Commission. So, as I understand the NUS position, you support both an independent judicial inquiry into antisemitism and you support the Australian Human Rights Commission inquiry into racism. Is that correct?

Mr Hedus: I believe so, yes.

Senator SCARR: Okay. Ms Gooding, I have two quick follow-up questions. I understand the point around academic freedom. We had a very good discussion with representatives from Muslim Votes Matter in relation to this topic, and I pointed them to page 4 of the submission from the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, which gave their interpretation of the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance definition. It listed a whole range of matters which they considered were legitimate points of discussion or political criticism that could be made within the ambit of that definition. I'm interested to get, on notice, your views with respect to their interpretation of the definition, given the position you put in relation to the union. Could you take it on notice?

Ms Gooding: Yes.

Senator SCARR: This is my second and last question. I listened very closely to what you said in relation to the code of conduct and the union's position with respect to antisemitism, and I'm trying to reconcile that with the fact that, as I understand it—and please let me know if I'm incorrect—the union actually supported the court appeals which were made by an academic who was terminated by the University of Sydney for superimposing a swastika on the flag of Israel. Did the university provide support to that academic when the academic was appealing against their dismissal by the University of Sydney—ultimately they were unsuccessful—and, if they did support that academic, how do you reconcile that with the code of conduct and the issues we're talking about today?

Ms Gooding: First of all, yes, we did support that academic both on the grounds of academic freedom but also the process by which that dismissal had taken place. My understanding is the dismissal was eventually about breaches of their code. But I am not familiar with the entire details of that case.

Senator SCARR: Could you take that on notice, perhaps, and provide us the view of the union. I want to give you a full opportunity to provide it, but I am trying to reconcile the union's position in that regard and the fact that you'd said the union has such a strong position against antisemitism. Feel free to take it on notice and use that opportunity to provide a more fulsome response.

Ms Gooding: Sure. I think one of the answers is that frequently there are people who engage in conduct involved in teaching and research with ideas and values that may be quite different to other people's ideas and values. But for us it is about the absolute primacy of academic freedom. We defend people whose views we don't agree with, just as we defended an academic from Queensland who was a climate change denier. Again—

Senator HENDERSON: Sorry, Ms Gooding. Just on the freedom to display a swastika on the Star of David, you're saying that that is a legitimate freedom that should be defended?

