

From: Lisa Wilkinson [REDACTED]
Sent: Thu, 28 Jan 2021 13:48:13 +1100 (AEDT)
To: Craig Campbell - Project [REDACTED]; Sarah Thornton
[REDACTED]; Peter Meakin [REDACTED]; Laura
Binnie [REDACTED]
Cc: Angus Llewellyn [REDACTED]
Subject: The Liberal party's women problem

This news story dates from 2019.

Michaelia Cash says here that these women who were assaulted by fellow liberal party staffers should report the assaults to the "appropriate authorities".

Turns out, if you're a woman whose been raped in Parliament House, there is no "appropriate authority".

In fact, in the experience of Brittany, the way the policing and internal "security" works there, Parliament House may well be the safest place in Australia to commit sexual assault and get away with it.

<https://youtu.be/X0Rv4qGVMg4>

Cheers,
Lisa.

Sent from my iPhone