Dear Upekha

The First Respondents do not consent to your clients' proposed orders.

As previously advised, the First Respondents will seek orders during Monday's directions hearing that your clients file amended pleadings in accordance with the orders made on 26 May 2026 and the leave already granted. Please find attached a copy of our clients' proposed orders, which we will provide to the Associate this afternoon.

For the avoidance of doubt, our clients will object to any application for costs in respect of Monday's directions hearing particularly given the costs of Monday's hearing will be incurred as a result of your clients' failure to comply with the 26 May 2026 orders.

Kind regards
Luca

Dear Colleagues,

We refer to our below email attaching the proposed minute of orders. Please note that these orders were sent with the intention of achieving a consent position and avoiding any need for a hearing on Monday.

Can the parties please confirm that they consent to the proposed orders by 4pm today.

In the event that these orders are not agreed, we intend to rely on this correspondence to seek the costs of Monday's directions hearing, on the basis that it could have been avoided by the parties agreeing this reasonable consent position as to the timetabling and determination of the applications
